If heauen be shut vp, that there be no rayne, because they haue synned agaynste the: yet yf they praye at thys place, and confesse thy name and turne from theyr synnes at thy sharpe correccyon: then heare thou from heauen, and be mercyfull vnto the synne of thy seruauntes, & of thy people Israel, that thou shewe them a good waye to walke in, and sende rayne vpon thy lande whyche thou haste geuen vnto thy people, for an enheritaunce.

If there chaunce darthe in the lande, pestilence, burnynge or smytynge of corne, grashoppers or caterpyllers, or that theyr enemies besege them in the cytyes of theyr owne land, or what soeuer plage or sycknesse it be. Then all the supplicacyons and prayers that shalbe made of all men amonge all thy people Israell, whiche shall knowe euery mā his owne sore and his owne greffe, yf they stretche oute theyr handes towarde thys house: thou shalte heare from heauen thy dwellyng place and shalte be mercyfull, and geue euery man accordynge vnto all his waye, euen as thou shalte knowe euery mannes herte: for thou onelye knoweste the hertes of the chyldren of Adam: that they maye feare the, and walke in thy wayes as long as they lyue vpō the earth whyche thou gauest to oure fathers.

Ffurthermore a straunger which is not of thy people Israel, yf he come from a farre lande for thy greate names sake, and thy myghtye hande, and stretched oute arme, and therfore come & praye at thys house: thou shalte heare hym from heauē thy dwellyng place, & shalt do accordyng to all that the straunger calleth to the for. That all the nacyons of the earthe maye knowe thy name, and feare the, as doth thy people Israell: and that it maye be knowē how that thys house which I haue buylt, is called after thy name.

When thy people shall go oute to warre, agaynste theyr enemyes the waye that thou shalte sende them. If they praye to the, the waye towarde thys cytye whyche thou haste chosen and house whyche I haue buylt for thy name: then heare from heauen, theyr supplicacyon & prayer, and helpe them in theyr ryghte.

If they shall synne agaynste the (as there is no man but that he shall synne) & thou be angrye wyth them, and delyuer them to their enemyes, and they layde them away captyue vnto a lande farre or neare, yet yf they: hertes come to them agayne in the lande where they be in captyuite, and turne and praye vnto the in the land where they be in captyuite, sayenge: we haue synned & haue done cruell & wickedly & turne agayne to the, wyth all theyr hertes & all theyr soules, in the lande of theyr captyuite where they be kepte in bondage, and so praye towarde theyr lande which thou gauest vnto theyr fathers, and cytye which thou haste chosen, and to thys house whiche I haue built for thy name: Then heare from heauen thy dwellyng place, their supplicacyon & prayers & iudge theyr cause and be mercyfull vnto thy people, though they haue synned agaynst the.

So now my God let thyne eyes be open & thyne eares attente vnto the prayers made in thys place. And now vp Lorde God in thy restynge place: both thou and the arche of thy strenghte, and let thy preistes put on byctorye and thy sayntes reioyce in goodnesse. And Lorde God turne not away the face of thyne anointed. But remembre the mercyes promysed to Dauid thy seruaunte.

The .vij. Chapter.

A The fyre consumeth the sacrifice. The Lorde appeareth to Salomon the seconde tyme. B

AND when Salomon had made an ende of prayeng, there came downe fyre from heauen & cōsumed the burntofferynge and the sacrifyces. And the glorye of ỹ Lorde fylled the house: that the preistes coulde not go into the house of the Lorde, because the glorye of the Lord had fulfilled the house of the Lorde. And all the chyldren of Israell sawe how the fyre came downe and the glorye of the Lorde vpon the house, & stouped with their faces to the earth vpon the pauement & honred them selues & confessed vnto the Lord, that he was good, and that his mercye lasted euer.

And the kynge and all the people offered offerynges before the Lorde. So that kynge Salomon offered .xxij. thousand oxen, and an hundred and twentye thousand shepe. And so the kynge & all the people halowed the house of God. And the preistes waited on theyr offices, and the Leuites with instrumentes of musycke of the Lorde which kynge Dauid made to confesse vnto the Lorde that his mercye lasteth euer, when Dauid gaue prayse thorowe theyr handes. And the preistes blewe trompetes faste by them: and all Israell stode.

Moreouer Salomon halowed the myddle of the courte that was before the Lorde: for there he offered burntofferynges and the fat of the peaceofferynges, because the brasen aulter which Salomō had made, was not able to receyue the burntofferynges and the meat offerynges and the fatte.

And Salomon kepte a feast the same seuē C dayes, and all Israel with hym, an exceadyng

And the Lorde apeared to Salomon by nyght, and said to him: I haue heard thy petycyon & haue chosen thys place for my selfe to be an house of sacrifyce. Moreouer yf I shut vp heauen that there be no rayne, or yf Iēomalid the locustes to deuoure the lande, or yf I send pestilēce among my people: yet yf my people that are named after my name, shall humble D themselues & make intercessyon & seke my face, & turne from their wicked wayes, then wyll I heare from heauē and be mercyfull to their synnes, & wyl heale their lande. Therto myne eyes shalbe open & myne eares attente vnto the prayers made in thys place. And fynally I haue chosen and sanctyfyed this house, that my name be there for euer, & myne eyes & myne herte shalbe there perpetually.

And yf thou shalte walke before me as Dauid thy father walked, to do accordynge to all that I haue commaunded the, & shalt obserue myne ordynaunces & my lawes: then I wyll stablyshe the seate of thy kyngedome, accordynge to the couenaunt I made with Dauid thy father, saying: *thou shalt haue euer one 3.Reg.ii.a. or other that shall rule in Israel. But and yf ye turne awaye & forsake myne ordinaunces mā.vi.b & my commaundementes which I haue set be- 2.Par.vii.c fore you, and shal go & serue other Goddes & bowe vnto them: then wyll I pluche them vp by the rotes out of my lande which 1. And this house that is sutty of the so hye, shalbe a wonder to al that passeth ther holy scripture not by, that they shall saye: why hath the Lorde the cast out dealte on thys fashyon with thys lande and with this house? And it shalbe answered the because they forsoke the Lorde God of their fathers whiche brought them out of the lāde of Egypte, and caught holde on other Gods, and bowed to them, and serued them: euen therfore brought he on them all thys euyll.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ The cytyes that Salomon buylded after the house of God was fynyshed.

A Fter .xx. yeare when Salomon had buylt the house of the 3.Reg.ix.b. Lorde and hys owne house: he buylte the cytyes that Hiram gaue him, and put of the childē of Israel in them. And Salomon went to Hemath Zobah and strengthed it. And he buylte Thadmor in the wyldernesse and all the stone cytyes whiche he buylte in Hemath. And he buylt Bethhoron the vpper & Bethhoron the nether, and made them stronge cytyes with walles, gates, & barres. And Baalath & all þ stone cyties that Salomon had, & al the charet cytyes & the cities of Horsmen, and all that Salomon had lust to buyld in Ierusalem and Libanon, and thorowoute all the lande of his domynyon.

And all the people that were left of the Hethites, Amorites, Pherezites, Heuites and Iebusites, which were not of the chyldren of Israel: euen the childē of them, which were left after them in the lande, and were not consumed of the chyldren of Israel, them dyd Salomon make tributaryes vnto thys daye. But of the chyldren of Israel dyd Salomon make no bondemen in his worke: but they were men of warre & rulers & great Lordes wyth hym, & capytaynes ouer hys charettes and horsmē. And kyng Salomons officers that ouerlew and ruled the people, were two hundred and fyfty.

And Salomon brought the doughter of E Pharao oute of the cite of Dauid vnto the house that he had made for her. ffor he sayde: my wyfe shall not dwelle in the house of Dauid kynge of Israel, for it is holy, because the arche of the Lorde came into it.

And from thence forthe Salomon offered burntoffrynges vnto the Lorde on þ aulter of the Lord which he had buylt before þ porch to offer day by daye accordynge to the commaundement of Moses, & in the Sabbothes & newe moones, and the thre solempne feastes of the yeare, the feast of swete breade, the feast of weekes and the feast of bothes.

And Salomon put the sortes of prestes in companyes as Dauid hys father had ordered them, vnto the offyces, & the Leuites vn- D to their wayt, for to prayse & mynyster before the prestes daye by daye, and the porters by course at euerye gate. ffor so had Dauid þ man of God cōmaunded. And the cōmaundement of the kynge vnto þ prestes & the Leuites concernynge whatsoeuer cause it was, and concernynge the treasurre, was not disobeyed.

And all the worke of Salomon went lustely forwarde euen vnto the daye of the foundacyon of the house of the Lorde was layde: & from thence tyll he had fynyshed it, that the house of the Lorde was perfecte. And then went kynge Salomon to Asyon Gaber and to Eloth & to the seas syde in the land of Edō. And Hiram sent hym by the handes of his seruauntes, shyppes and seruauntes that couthe saille of the sea. Which went with the seruauntes of Salomon to Ophir, and brought thence foure hundred and fyfty talentes of gouldē, and brought it to kynge Salomon.

¶ The commynycacion of Salomon with the quene

of Saba, & the gyftes that the one gaue the other. The death of Salomon after whom succeedeth Roboboā.

3.Reg.10.a. Mat.vi.b Luc.xi.b

ND the quene of Saba herde of the fame of Salomō, and came to proue hym with ryd delles at Jerusalem, wyth a very great copanye, & with camelles that bare swete odours and plenye of gouldē & precyouse stone. And when she was come to Salomon, she communed with hym of all that was in her herte. And Salomon tolde her all her questyons, that there was nothynge hyd from Salomon, which he tolde her not.

And when the quene of Saba had sene the wysdome of Salomon and the house that he had buylt, and the meate of hys table and the sittynge of hys seruauntes and the standyng of hys waiters, and theyr apparell, and hys butlers with theyr apparell, & his parlour out of which he went into the house of ỹ Lord there was no more herte in her.

And then she sayd to the kyng: the sayinge B which I herde in myne owne lande, of thyne actes and of thy wysdome is trueth. But I beleued not the wordes of them, vntyll I came & myne eyes had sene it. And lo, the one halfe of thy wysdome was not tolde me: thou exceedest the fame that I herd, happye are thy men, & happye are these thy seruauntes which stande before the all waye and heare thy wysdome. Blessed be the Lorde thy God whyche had lust to the, to make the kyng on hys seat, vnto the Lorde thy God. Because thy God loued Israel, to make them contynue euer, therfore made he the kynge ouer them to do ryght and equyte.

C And she gaue the kyng an hundred & .xx. talentes of gould, and of swete odours exceadynge great aboundaunce with precyouse stones, that there was no suche swete odoures as the quene of Saba gaue kynge Salomon. And ouer the seruauntes of Hyram and the seruauntes of Salomon which brought gould from Ophir, brought also * Almug woode and precyouse stones. And the kynge made of the Almug wood steppes in the house of the Lorde and in the kynges palace, and harpes & psalteryes for syngers. And there was no suche woode seue before in the lande of Juda. And kynge Salomon gaue to the quene of Saba all her desyre that she asked aboue that she brought vnto the kyng. And so she turned and went awaye to her owne lande with her seruauntes.

The summe of gouldē & came to Salomō in one yeare, was syxe hundred. lxvi. talentes of gouldē, besydes that whyche chapmen and marchauntes brought, and all the kynges of Arabia and rulers of countreyes brought gouldē & syluer to Salomon. And kynge Salomon made two hundred bokelers of gould D vi. hundred sicles of Beten gould to be a boke lers: & thre hundred sceptres of Beten gouldē, thre hundred sicles of gouldē to a shylde, & he put them in the house of the forest of Lybanon.

And the kyng made a great seate of Iuorie and ouerlayde it with pure gouldē. And there were sixe steppes to the seate with a foote stole of gouldē fastened to the seate & pomelles on eche syde of the sittyng place, & two lyons stode by nyge by the pomelles. And. xij. lyons stode on the one syde & on the other vpon sixe steppes, that there was no such in any kyngdom.

And all the drynkynge vessellles of kynge Salomon were gould, & all the vessellles of the house of the forest of Libanō, were pure gould And as for syluer, it was counted nothynge worthe in the dayes of Salomon. For ỹ kynges shyppes went * to Tharsis with the seruauntes of Hyram euery thre yeare once. And the shyppes of Tharsis brought gould, syluer the tethe of elephantes, apes, and peacockes.

And kynge Salomon passed all the kynges of the earth in ryches and wysdome. And all the kynges of the earth sought the presence of Salomon, to heare the wysdome that GOD had put in hys herte. And they brought euery man his present in vessellles of syluer and vessellles of gouldē, and rayment, harnesse, swete odoures, horses and mules yeare by yeare.

And Salomon had fourre thousand mangers of horses and charettes for them, and twelue thousande horsmen. And he bestowed them in the charet cyties & with the kyng at Jerusalem. And he raigned ouer all the kynges from Euphrates vnto the lande of the Philistyms & so to the borders of Egypte. * And the kyng made syluer in Jerusalem as plentyous as stones, and Cedar trees as plentyous as ỹ mulberye trees that growe in the valeye. And Salomon had horses brought hym oute of Egypte and out of all landes.

And when Jeroboā the sonne of Nabat, beynge in Egypte herde it (for he was fled for feare of Salomon ỹ kyng) he returned out of Egypt. And they sent and called hym. And so Jeroboam and al Israel came and communed with Roboboam, and sayde. And he sayde to them: come agayne after thre dayes to me. And the people departed.

D And kynge Rehoboam counseled with the elders that stode before Salomon his father whyle he lyued, & sayde: what counsell geue ye me, to answere thys people agayne? And they tolde hym, saying: If thou shalt be kynd to thys people, & please them, and shalt speake louynge wordes to them, they wyl be thy seruauntes for euer. But he lefte the counsell whiche the elders gaue hym, & toke counsell with the youngmen that were nourled vp wt hym, & had stande in hys presence, and said to them: what aduise geue ye that I maye answere thys people which haue communed with me, saynge: Abate somewhat of the pouch which thy father dyd put vpon vs.

E And the young men that were nourced vp with hym talked with hym saying: thus answere the people that spake to the saying. Thy father made oure pouche heaupe: But make thou oure pouche somewhat lyghter. Thus wyse answere them: my lytle fynger shalbe heuyer then my fathers loynes. *For where my father put a heaupe pouche vpon you, I wyl put more therto, & where my father chastised you with whyppes, I wyl chastyse you with scorpions. ii.Reg.xii.

And when Jeroboam and all Israel were come the thyrd day, as the king bade, saying: come agayne to me the thyrd daye. The king answered the cruelly, for kynge Rehoboam lefte the counsell of the aged men, & answered the after the aduise of the young men saying: If my father made youre pouche greuous, I wyll adde therto, and where my father chastised you with whyppes, I will chastyse you with scorpions. And so the kynge herkened not vnto the people, for the turnynge awaye was of God, that the Lord might make good hys saynge whiche he spake by the hande of Ahiah the Silonite to Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat.

D And when all Israel sawe that the kinge would not heare them, the people answered the king, saynge: what parte haue we with David or enheritaunce wt the sonne of Isai: let euery man of Israel go to hys tent. *And nowe David se to thyne owne house. And therupon all Israel get them to theyr tentes, so that Rehoboam raygned ouer no moo of the children of Israell then dwelte in the cytyes of Juda. Then kynge Rehoboam sente to them Haduram that was ouer the tribute, and the children of Israell stoned hym with stones that he dyed. And when Abiah was layd to slepe wyth his fathers, they buryed hym in the citie of Dauid, and Asa his sonne raygned in his stede. In whose dayes the lande was quyet ten yeare.

The.xiiij. Chapter.

Abiah dyeth, after whom succeedeth Asa.

ASa did that was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God, & toke away the aulters of straungers and the hyghaulters, & brake the pyllers & cut downe the groues, and commaunded Juda to seke the Lorde God of their fathers, & to do after dyng to the lawe and commaundement. And he put away oute of all the cytyes of Juda, the hyghaulters and the pooles: for the kyngdō was quyet before hym. And he buylt stronge cytyes in Juda: because the lande was in rest, and he had no warre in those yeares. For the Lorde had geuen him reste.

And therfore he sayde to Juda: let vs build these cytyes, and compase them wyth walles and towres, gates, and barres, while we haue the lande quiet. For we haue sought the Lord oure God: & because we haue sought hym, he hath geuē vs reste on every syde. And so they buylt and prospered. And Asa had an Army that bare shylde and speare, out of Juda thre hundred thousand, and out of Beniamin that bare shilde and drewe bowes two hundred and. lxxx. thousande, and were all stronge men.

And there came oute agaynst them Zarah the Morian wyth an Hoste of ten hundred thousande, and thre hundred charettes, and came as ferre of Maresa. And Asa went out to hym. And they put in araye to battel in the valeye of Zephatah beside Maresa. And Asa cryed vnto the Lorde his God and sayd: lord it is all one wyth the to helpe them that haue no power, wyth few or wyth many: helpe vs O Lorde oure God, for we trust to the, & in thine name be come agaynst thys multitude. Thou arte the Lorde oure God, let not man preuayle agaynst the.

And the Lord smote the blacke Moren before Asa & Juda, & they fled. And Asa & the people that was with hym, folowed after the as ferre as Gerar. And the blacke Moren were ouerthrowen, that there bode none a lyue of them, but were destroyed of the lord, and of the Hoste. And they carryed awaye a myghty greate pray. And they smote all the cities rounde about Gerar. For the feare of the Lorde came vpon them. And they robbed all the cities, for there was exceadyng muche to be robbed in them. And therto they smote the tentes of cattel, and caryed awayed plentye of shepe and camelles, and returned to Jerusalem.

The.xb. Chapter.

Howe Asa by the mouthpece of the prophet Azariah after he had put downe the aulters, exercysed to the Lorde. The ij. yeareth hys mother dyed for her transgression.

AND & spyryte of God came on Azariah the sonne of Obed. And he went oute agaynste Asa, and sayd to hym: heare me Asa and al Juda and Beniamin. The Lorde is wyth you, while ye be wyth hym, and yf ye shall seke hym, he wylbe founde of you: but and yf ye shal forsake him, he wil forsake you. There wil come many dayes in Israel, in whyche there shalbe no true God nor preeste that teacheth, nor any lawe. And in their tribulacion they shal turne vnto the Lorde God of Israel and shall seke him, and he shalbe founde of them. And in those dayes there shalbe no peace to them that go out & in. But greate vexacyon vpon the enhabiters of all landes. For one nacion shal destroye another, and one cytye another: for God wyl trouble them wyth aduersyte. But pluche you vp your hertes, and let not your handes laguyr, for your workes shalbe rewarded.

When Asa heard those woordes and the prophesye of Azariah the sonne of Obed the Prophete, he toke courage, and put away the abhominacions oute of al the lande of Juda and Beniamin, and oute of the cytyes whych he wanne in mount Ephraim, and renued the aulter of the Lord that was before the porche of the Lorde. And he gathered al Juda & Beniamin, and the straungers wyth them oute of Ephraim, Manasseh and Simeon. For there fell many to him out of Israel, whē they sawe that God was with hym. And they assembled at Jerusalem in the thirde moneth of the fyftene peare of the raygne of Asa. And they offered vnto the Lord that same time of the spoyle whych they had brought. vij. hundred oxen and. vij. thousand shepe.

And they made a couenaunt to loke the Lorde God of their fathers, wyth all their hertes, & all their soules: so that al that sought not the Lorde God of Israel, shoulde dye for it, whether he were small or great, man or woman. And therto kynge Ala put Maacah hys an ydole in a groue: & brake downe her ydole, & ſtampte it and burnt it by the broke Cedō.

But they put not the hilaulters out of Iſrael:
neuertheleſſe the herte of Ala was pure in all

God the dedicat gyftes whyche he and hys

The.xvi. Chapter.

Ala for feare of Baaſa kynge of Iſrael, maketh a couenaunt with Benhadad kynge of Syria.

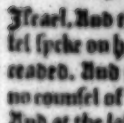
A In the xxxvj. yeare of the raygne of Ala, came Baaſa kyng of Iſrael agayne Juda and built Ramah, to the entent that he woulde let none that perteyneth to Ala kynge of Juda haue paſſage in and oute. Wherupon Ala fet oute ſyluer and goulde oute of the treaſures of the houſe of the Lorde, and of the kynges houſe, & ſent it to Benhadad kynge of Syria that dwelt at Damaſco, and ſayde. There is a confederacie betwene me and the, and ſo was betwene my father & thine, wherfore I haue ſent the ſiluer and goulde, that thou go and breake thyne appointment with Baaſa kynge of Iſrael, for he maye departe from me. And Benhadad
B graunted vnto kyng Ala, and ſent the captay nes of hys armye agaynſte the cities of Iſrael. And they bet Aion, Dan, Abelmaim and all the ſtore cities of Nephtali. And when Ba aſa heard that, he left buyldynge of Ramah & let his worcke ceaſe. And then Ala the kynge toke all Juda, and carryed away and ſtones & tymbar of Ramah, wherwith Baaſa was a buyldynge: and he buylt therwith Gaba and Maſphah.



C At that ſame tyme Hanani the ſear, came to Ala kyng of Juda & ſayde to hym: becauſe thou truſteſt in the king of Syria, and truſteſt not in the Lorde thy God, therfore is the hoſt of the kynge of Syria eſcaped oute of thyne hande. Were not the blacke Moores, and they of Lybya a great hoſt with exceading many charettes and horſemē? And yet becauſe thou truſtedeſt in the Lorde, he deliuered the into thyne handes. For the eyes of the Lorde be-holde all the earthe, to ſtrength the hertes of them that are hole with him. Herin thou haſt done folyſhly, and therfore from henceforth thou ſhalt haue warre. Wherupon Ala was D wroth with the ſear and put hym in the ton-gurynge houſe, for he was diſpleaſed with him becauſe of that. Moreouer Ala oppreſſed certayne of the people the ſame ceaſon.

The dedes of Ala bothe fyrſt and laſt, are written in the boke of the kynges of Juda &

Iſrael. And the xxxix yeare of his raigne Ala fel ſycke on hys fete, and that his diſeaſe exceaded. And therto in his ſyckneſſe he aſked no counſel of the Lorde, but of Phyſycyons.
And at the laſt Ala fel on ſlepe with hys fathers, and dyed when he raygned xli. yeare.
And they buryed hym in his owne ſepulchre whyche he had made in the cyte of Dauid, and layde hym in the bedde whyche he had filled with ſwete odoures of dyuerſe kyndes, made by the craft of the potecaryes. And they dyd exceadynge greate coſte about buryeng of hym.

The.xvij. Chapter.

*Jehoſaphat ſucceadeth after Ala, whyche cauſeth
the feare of the Lorde to be vrged among the people.*

Ad Jehoſaphat his ſonne raygned in hys ſtead, and was myghtyer thē Iſrael. And he put ſoul diſcures in all the ſtronge cities of Juda, and ſet rulers bothe in the lande of Juda, and alſo in the cytyes of Ephraim, whyche Ala his father had wonne. And the Lorde was with Jehoſaphat, becauſe he walked in the olde wayes of his father Dauid, & ſought not Baals, but ſought the Lorde God of his father, and walked in hys commaundementes, and not after doyn-ges of Iſrael. Therfore the Lorde ſtabliſhed the kyngedome in his hande, and all Juda brought him preſentes, that he became exce-
B dynge ryche and glorious. And his herte was courageous in the wayes of the Lorde, & he put doune yet more of the hilaulters and grouen out of Juda.

And the thirde yeare of hys raigne he ſent of his Lordes: Benhail, Abdiah, Zacharias, Nathanael and Michah to teache in the cytees of Juda: and with thē Semeiah, Nathā-niah, Zabadiah, Aſahel, Semiramoth, Jehonathan, Adonias, Tholiah, and Thobadonias Leuites: and with them Eliſama & Joā preſtes. And they taught in Juda, and had the boke of the law with them, & went about throughout all the cytyes of Juda and taught the people.

And the feare of the Lorde fel vpon all the C kyngedomes of the landes that were rounde about Juda, that they durſt not warre with Jehoſaphat. And the Philiſtines brought Jehoſaphat gyftes and tribute ſiluer. And ther-to the Arabians brought hym of theyr, ſeuen thouſand and ſeuen hundred rammes, & ſeue thouſande & ſeuen hundred he gotes. And ſo Jehoſaphat he proſpered and grue vpon hye. And he buylt in Juda, caſteles and florecetes. And he had great ſubſtaunce in the cytes of Juda, & lyghtynge men and men of myghte in Jeruſalem.

And theſe is the order in the houſes of their D fathers, of the capitaynes ouer thouſandes in Juda: Adnah the captayne, and with hym of lyghtynge men thre hundred thouſande. And nexte to him Jehohanan a captayne and with hym two hundreth & lxxx. thouſand. And by

by his ſide Amaſiah the ſonne of Zechri willynge vnto the Lord, & with him two hūdred thouſand myghtye me. And of the children of Beniamin, Eliada was a man of might, and had with hym armed with bowes & ſhyldes two hundred thouſande. And by his ſyde Jehoſabad with whome were an hūdred & lxxx thouſande trimmed for warre. Theſe waited on the kynge, beſyde thoſe whyche the kynge had put in ſtrounge cities throwout all Juda.

The xviii. Chapter.

After Ahab had asked counſell of the four hundred Prophetes, he put Michaiah in prysō. He ſpeaketh wyth the lyers of an Ahabite.

to go vp vnto Ramoth in Galaad. And Ahab kynge of Iſrael ſayde to Jehoſaphat kynge of Juda: wylt thou go wyth me to Ramoth in Galaad? And he answered him: I wylbe as thou, and my people thalbe as thyne, and we wylbe with the in the warre.

But Jehoſaphat ſayde vnto the kynge of B Iſrael: aſke I pray the, the worde of y lorde.
And the kynge of Iſrael gathered together
of the Prophetes foure hundred men, & ſaide
vnto them: ſhal we go to Ramoth in Galaad to fyght, or ſhall I ceaſe? And they ſayde: go,
the Lord ſhall deliuer it into the kinges hād.
And Jehoſaphat ſayde: is there yet here nee-uer a Prophete more of the Lordes, that we myght aſke of hym? And the kyng of Iſrael ſayde to Jehoſaphat: there is yet one, to aſke
the Lorde by hym: But I hate him, for he neuer prophecyed me good, but alwaye euyll, one Micheah the ſonne of Jemla. And Jeho ſaphat ſayde: let not the kynge ſaye ſo.

Then the kynge of Iſrael called one of his chamberlaines and ſaid: fetche hither quickly Micheah the ſonne of Jemla. And the kynge of Iſrael and Jehoſaphat kyng of Juda ſate either of them on his ſeate in their apparell, in C a threſſynge floure beſyde the gate of Samaria, and all the Prophetes prophecyinge before them. And one Zedekiah the ſonne of Chanaanah made him horne of yron, and ſaid: thus ſayth the Lord: with theſe thou ſhalt wounde
Syria, vntil thou haue brought the to nought.
And all the Prophetes prophecyed euen ſo ſayinge: Go vp to Ramoth in Galaad & pro-ſpere, for the Lorde ſhall deliuer it into the hande of the kynge.

And the meſſenger that went to call Micheah, ſpake to him ſayinge: beholde, the wor-des of the Prophetes are pleaſāt to the kyng with one aſſent, let thy wordes I pray the, be lyke one of theirs, & ſpeake that which is plea ſaunt. And Micheah ſayde: as truly as the Lord lyueth, euen what my God ſayeth, that wyl I ſpeake. And when he was come to the kynge, the kynge ſaide to him: Micheah, ſhal
we go to Ramoth in Galaad to fyght, or ſhal D I be in reſte? And he answered, a go ye and proſpere, for the lord ſhal deliuer it into your handes. But the kyng ſayd to him: how ofttymes ſhal I adiure the y thou ſay no thyng
but truthe to me, in the name of the Lorde.

Then he ſayd: I ſaw all Iſrael ſcatered on the mountaines, as theye that haue no ſhepherd.
And the Lorde ſayde: theſe haue no maiſter, let them returne euery man to his houſe in peace. Then ſayde the kynge of Iſrael to Jehoſaphat: dyd I not tel the, that he would not prophecye good vnto me, but euyll?

And he answered: therfore heare ye the worde of the Lorde. I ſawe the Lorde ſit vpō his ſeat, and all the company of heauen ſtan dynge on his ryght hand & on his lefte. And E the Lorde ſayde: who ſhal deceyue Ahab kyng of Iſrael, that he maye go & be ouerthrowen
at Ramoth in Galaad. And whyle one ſayd thus, & another that, there came out a ſpyryte and ſtode before the Lorde and ſayde: I wyll deceyue hym. And the Lord ſayd to him: how?
And he ſayde: I wyll go out & wilbe a lyeinge ſpyryte in the mouthes of all his prophetes.
And the Lorde ſayde: thou ſhalt deceyue him & ſhalt preuayle, go out and do euen ſo. And F now beholde the Lorde hath put a lyeinge ſpyryte in the mouthes of all theſe thy prophetes & yet the Lorde hath ſpoken euyll againſt the.
And Zedekiah the ſonne of Chanaanah, wēt to & ſmote Micheah vpon the cheke, & ſayd: by what way went the ſpyryte of the Lord from me, to ſpeake in the? And Micheah ſayde: thou ſhalt ſe the daye when thou ſhalt renne from chābre to chambre, for to hyde thy ſelfe. Then ſayde the kynge of Iſrael: take ye Micheah & deliuer hym to Amon the gouerner of the ci-tie, & to Joas the kynges ſonne, & ſaye: thus ſayth the kynge: put this felow in preſon, and fede him with breade & water of tribulacion, vntil I come againe in peace. And Micheah ſayde: if thou come againe in peace, then hath not the Lord ſpoken in me. And Micheah ſaid moreouer: herken to ye people euery one of you. And ſo the kynge of Iſrael & Jehoſaphat the kyng of Juda went vp to Ramoth in Galaad. Then ſayd the kynge of Iſrael to Jeho-ſaphat: I will ſe the y get the to battel, but ſe y thou haue thyne owne apparel vpon the. And the kyng of Iſrael chaunged him ſelfe, & they went to battell. But the kynge of Syria commaunded the captaines of his chariottes ſay-

And when the captaines of the chariottes
ſawe Jehoſaphat, they had went he had bene
the kyng of Iſrael, & therfore compaſſed about him, to fyght. But Jehoſaphat cryed out, & the Lord holpe him, & God turned them awaye from him. For whē the captaines of the chariottes perceiued y it was not the kyng of Iſrael,
they turned back againe fro him: & a certayne

And he sayde to the charet man: turne thyne hond, and carye me oute of the hoste, for I am hurte. And the battel arose that day. How be it, the kynge of Israel continueth stadinge in hys charet agaynst the Syrians vntyll euen. And about the soune goynge doune he deyed.

The.xix. Chapter.

After Jehoshaphat was rebuked by the prophet Jehu, he called agayne the people to the honoure of the Lorde God.

AND Jehosophat kynge of Juda returned to hys house safe and sounde to Jerusalem. And Jehu the sonne of Hanani the seer, wente oute agaynst hym and sayd to kyng Jehosaphat: ought sest thou to helpe the wicked, & to loue them that hate the Lorde. And thys verely is the wrathe of the Lorde vpon the. Neuertheless there are good thynges founde in the, in that thou hast put awaye groues out of the lande & hast prepared thyne herte to seke God. And as Jehosaphat dwelt at Jerusalem, he went to agayne and went amonge the people from Berlabe to mount Ephraim, & brought them agayne vnto the Lorde God of their fathers. And he set iudges in the lande, throughout all the stronge cites of Juda, cytye by cytye and sayde to the iudges: take hede what ye do for ye be not iudges in the lawe of man, but of God, whyche is with you in the woordes of the law. Wherfore let the feare of the lord be with you, and take hede and do it. For there is no vnrygh teousnesse in the Lord our God* nor regarding of persones, nor taking of rewardes.

Moreouer in Jerusalem dyd Jehosaphat set of the Leuites & of the prestes and of the auncyent heades of Israel, ouer the customes of the Lorde & causes of strife. And they returned agayn to Jerusalē. And he charged them sayng: do ryght so in the feare of the lord with truthe and pure herte. And whatsoeuer come to you of youre brethren that dwell in their cytyes, betwene blonde & blonde, lawe, commaundement, ordinaūces, and customes, ye that ye warne them, that they trespace not agaynst the Lorde, lest wrath come vpō you and on youre brethren. Thus do and ye shal not offende. And se here Amariah the preste whyche is heade ouer you in all matters of the Lorde, and Zabadiah the sonne of Ismael a ruler in ye house of Juda, he is ouer al causes touchynge the kynge, with officers of the Leuites before you. Take courage to you, and go vpon it, and the Lorde shalbe with the good.

The.xx. Chapter.

The moabytysh worshyppe that the Lorde God gaue Jehosaphat kynge of Juda agaynst the Moabytes, & the children of Ammon and them of Seir.

AFter that came the children of Moab and the children of Ammon and with them of the Ammonites agaynst Jehosaphat to battel. And there came that told Jehosaphat sayng: there cometh a great multitude agaynst the from the other syde the sea oute of Syria. And se they be in Hasason Thamar whyche is Engadi. And Jehosaphat feared, & set him selfe to seke the Lorde, & proclaymed fastinge throughout all Juda. And Juda gathered them selues together for to aske counsel of the lord. And therto there came oute of all the cytyes of Juda to seke the Lord. And Jehosaphat stode in the congregacion of Juda and Jerusalem in the house of the Lord before the new court and sayde: Lorde God of oure fathers, arte not thou God in heauen, & raygnest not thou on all the kyngedomes of the Heathen? And in thyne hande is power and mighte, that no man can stande before the. Art not thou oure God whyche diddest cast oute the enhabyters of this lande before thy people Israel, & gauest it to the seade of Abraham thy louer for euer? And they dwelt therin and haue bylt the a temple therin vnto thy name, and sayd: when euyll cometh vpon vs, as the swerde of iudgement, pestilence or hongre: then we stande before this house and before the (for thy name is in thys house) and shall crye vnto the in oure tribulacion, thou shalt heare and helpe.

And now behold, the children of Ammō & Moab & mount Seir, by whyche thou wouldest not let Israel go, when they came out of Egypte: but they departed from them & destroyed them not. And se, how they reward vs, to come for to cast vs oute of thy possession whyche thou hast possessed vs with al. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them? for we haue no myght agaynst this great company ye cometh against vs. Neyther wote we what to do: but oure eyes be vnto the.

And as all Juda stode before the lorde with their yonge ones, their wyues and their children, the spyryte of the Lorde came vpon Jahaziel the sonne of Zacharias the sonne of Banaiah the sonne of Jeiel the sonne of Mathaniah a Leuite of the sonnes of Asaph, rysen as he was in the myddes of the congregacion: And he sayde: herken all Juda, and the enhabiters of Jerusalem, and also kynge Jehosaphat. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto you: be not afrayde or sayntе herted by reason of thys great multitude. For the warre is not yours, but Goddes. And to morow ye shall go doune to them: se, they come vp at Ziz, & ye shall mete them in the flagges of the broke before the wyldernesse of Jeruel. Moreouer it belongeth not to you for to fight in this quarell: but stepe forth and stande and behold the helpe of the Lorde whyche is with you: feare not, nor let youre hartes fayle you, O ye of Juda and of Jerusalem. To morow go out to them: for the Lorde is with you.

And Jehosaphat bowed hym self with his face to the erthe, & al Juda and the enhabiters of Jerusalem fell before the Lorde, to bowe them selues vnto the Lorde. And the Leuites and the children of the Cahathytes & of the Corathites stode vp, to prayse the Lorde God of Israel with a loud voyce on hye. And so they arose erlye in the mornyng, and get them out into the wyldernesse of Tekua. And as they went out, Jeholaphat stode and sayde: heare me Juda, and ye inhabyters of Jerusalem. Beleue in the Lorde youre God, and so shall ye cõtinue: and beleue his prophetes & so shall ye prosperc. And he gaue the people counsell, & set the syngers of the Lorde, & the that prayse in holy apparel, to go out before ỹ armye and to saye: prayse the Lorde, for hys mercye lasteth euer. And what tyme they begaune to laude & praise, then the Lord set laiers awaite agaynste the children of Ammon and Moab and mounte Seir, to destroye them vtterly & to wype them out. And when they had made an ende of the inhabyters of Seir, then they holpe to destroye eche other.

And when Juda came to Mazphah in the wyldernesse, they loked vnto the multitude. And beholde, they were deade carcases fallen to the earthe, and none escaped. And Jehosaphat and hys people went to robbe awaye the spoyle of them and founde amonge them abundaunce of goodes and rayment & of pleasaunt Jewelles, and caught from them more then they coulde carye awaye: so that they were thre dayes in gatheryng of the spoyle, it was so muche. And the fourth daye they assembled in the valeye of blessyng, for there they blessed the Lord. And therfore they called the name of the sayd place the valeye of blessyng vnto thys daye. And also the men of Juda and Jerusalē returned & Jehosaphat amonge the thyckest of them, for to go again to Jerusalem wyth gladnesse: for the Lorde hath made them to reioyse of their enemyes. And they came to Jerusalem wyth playsteries & harpes and trōpettes, euen vnto the house of the Lorde. And the feare of God fell in the kyngedomes of all landes, when they had heard, that the Lord fought agaynst the enemyes of Israel. And so the realme of Jehosaphat was in trāquyllyte, for hys God had geuen hym rest on euery syde.

And Jehosaphat raigned vpon Juda, and was.xxv. yeare olde when he begaune to raygne, and raygned.xxv. yeare in Jerusalē. And his mothers name was Asuba ỹ doughter of Silhi. And he walked in the waye of Asa his father & howed not therfrom, to do ỹ was pleasaunt in the syght of the Lord. How be it, they put not doune the hylaulters, neither did the people yet prepare their hertes vnto ỹ God of their fathers. The rest of the actes of Jehosaphat fyrste and laste are written in the wordes of Jehu the sonne of Hanani, which noted thē in the boke of the kinges of Israel.

After this, Jehosaphat king of Juda ioyned hym selfe with Ohoziah kynge of Israel whiche was a wycked doer. And he coupled hym selfe with him, to make shippes to go to Tharsis. And they made the shippes in Ezō Gaber. And Eliezer the sonne of Dodauah of Maresa prophesyed agaynste Jehosaphat sayenge: because thou hast ioyned thy selfe wt Ohoziah, the Lord hath broken thy workes. And the shippes were broken that they were not able to go to Tharsis.

The.xxi. Chapter.

¶ Jehosaphat dyeth & Jehoram his sonne succeadeth him. Edomites rebell. Jehoram is reproued of the prophete Helias, and dyeth of the flyx.

IEholaphat layd him to reste wt hys fathers, and was buryed wt his fathers in the cyte of Dauid, and Jehoram his sonne raygned in hys rowme: whiche Jehoram had other brethren, sonnes of Jehosaphat, Asariah, Jehiel, Zacharias, Asariah, Michael and Zephatiah. All these were the sonnes of Jehosaphat kynge of Juda. And their father gaue them many great gyftes in syluer, goulde & other precious thinges with stronge cytyes in Juda: but the kingedom he gaue to Jehoram, because he was the eldest. And when Jehoram was vpon the kingdom of his father & stode, he slue al his other brethren with the swerde, & diuerse of the lordes of Israel therto. * Jehoram was.xxxij. yeare olde when he begāne to raygne, & he raygned viij. yeare in Jerusalem. And he walked in ỹ waies of the kinges of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab (for a doughter of Ahab was his wife) & he wrought euil in the eyes of the Lord. How be it, the Lord would not destroy the house of Dauid, because of the couenaunt ỹ he had made wt Dauid, & as he promised to geue a light to hym & to hys sonnes for euer.

In hys dayes the Edomites departed frō vnder the hand of Juda & made them a king. And Jehoram went forth with his Lordes & all his charettes with him, & rose by nyght & layd on the Edomites. Which compased him in, & the captaynes of his charettes. And so Edom departed frō vnder the hande of Juda vnto thys day. That same time also dyd Lobnah departe frō vnder his power, because he left the Lord God of his fathers. Moreouer he made hylaulters in ỹ mountaynes of Juda & caused the inhabiters of Jerusalē to cōmit adultery, & he * thrust Juda out of the waye.

And there came a writing to him frō Elias the prophet of this tenoure. Thus saith the Lord God of Dauid thy father: because thou walkedest not in ỹ wayes of Jehosaphat thy father, and in the waies of Asa king of Juda, but walkest in the waies of the kinges of Israel, & hast made Juda & ỹ dwellers of Jerusalē go a whorynge, like to the whorynge of the house of Ahab, & had slayne thy brethre ỹ were thy fathers house, which were better thē thou. Therfore behold the lord wil smyte the wyth a mightye plage in thy folke, in thy children, in thy wiues and in thy goodes. And thou shalt haue muche dysease thorowe infirmitye in thy bowelles, vntil thy bowelles fal out by reason of thy sycknesse, daye by daye.

And after all that, ỹ Lorde smote him in his bowelles with an incurable disease. But they made him no bonefire like the bonefires of his fathers. When he began to raygne, he was .xxxij. yeare old, & raigned in Jerusalē .viij. yeare. Obozyah raygneth in the roume of Jehoram. Jehu kyng of Jsrael beheteth Obozyah. Athaliah putteth to death al the kynges lynage, onely Joas excepted.

ANd the inhabiters of Jerusalē made Obozyah his youngest sonne kynge in his stede. For the mē of warre that came with the Arabians in the hoste, had slayne all his elder sonnes. And so Obozyah ỹ sonne of Jehoram kynge of Juda was made kynge. Two & fourtie yeare olde was he whē he began to raygne, & raygned one yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Athaliah the doughter of Amri. And he walked also in ỹ wayes of the house of Ahab, for his mother was his counsellor for to do euill. Wherfore he did ỹ displeased the lorde like ỹ house of Ahab for they were his counsellers after the death of his father, to his destructiō. And he also walked after their counsel. And Jehoram sonne of Ahab kynge of Jsrael went to fyght vp Hazael kynge of Syria at Ramoth in Galaad: & they of Ramoth wounded him. Wherfore he returned to be healed in Jezrahel of the woundes whiche were geuen him at Ramoth, when he fought vp Hazael kyng of Syria. And Obozyah ỹ sonne of Jehoram kyng of Juda went downe to se Jehoram ỹ sonne of Ahab at Jezrahel, because he was diseased.* For it was thus: that into Obozyah of God to go to Jehoram, & ỹ whē he was come, he should go out vp Jehu ỹ againste Jehu the sonne of Namsi, whome the Lorde had annoynted to destroy the house of Ahab.

*For it was thus, &c. of God, vnderstand, to this end that he comming to Jehoram might be ouerthowen of Jehu.

And as Jehu was executinge iustice vpon the house of Ahab. He founde the Lordes of Juda, and the sonnes of the brethren of Obozyah that wayted on Obozyah, and he slue them. And he sought Obozyah, & they caught him where he was hid in Samaria, & brought him to Jehu. And when they had slayne him, they buryed him: because (sayde they) he was the sonne of Jehosaphat, whyche sought the Lorde with all his hert. And there was none of the house of Obozyah, that coulde obtayne to be kyng. *For Athaliah the mother of Obozyah, when she saw her sonne was deade, arose & spake vp al the seade of the kingedō of the house of Juda. But Jehosabeath ỹ dough-ter of the kyng tohe * Jehoas the sonne of Obozyah & stale han frō among the kinges sonnes ỹ were slayn, & put him & his nource in a sleping chāber. And so Jehosabeath ỹ doughter of kinge Jehoram & wyfe of Jehoiada the preste (because she was ỹ sister of Obozyah) hid him frō Athaliah ỹ he slue him not. And he was with thē hid in the house of God syx yeare. And Athaliah raygned ouer the lande.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

Jehoas the sonne of Obozyah is made kyng. Athaliah is put to death.

ANd in the seuenth yeare Jehoiada toke hert, & made a bonde vp the capitaynes of hundredes Azariah the sonne of Jehoram, Jsmael the sonne of Johanā, Azariah the sonne of Obed, Maasiah ỹ sonne of Adaiah and Elisaphat the sonne of Zechri. And they went about in Juda, and gathered the Leuites of all the cytes out of Juda & the auncyent heades of Jsrael, and they came to Jerusalem. And all the congregacyon made a bonde with the kynge in the house of God. And Jehoiada sayde to them: behold, the kinges sonne must raygne ouer the children of Dauid, as the Lorde hath sayde.

And ther shall none come into the house of the Lorde, saue the priestes & the Leuites that ministre. They shal go in, for they are holy: & al ỹ people shal kepe the watche of the Lorde: & the Leuites shal cōpasse the kyng rounde about, euery man his weapō in his hād: & whosoeuer other man come into the house of the Lorde, he shal dye for it: and they shalbe with the kynge as he cometh in and as he goeth out.

And the Leuites & al Juda did in al thinges as Jehoiada the priestes commaunded, & toke euery man his men: both them that came in, & them that went out the Sabboth daye: for Jehoiada the priest did let none of the cōpanyes departe. And Jehoiada the priest delyuered to the captaynes of hundredes speares & shildes & bowclers that pertaineth to kyng Dauid, and were in the house of God. And he set al the people & euery man his weapon in his hand, from the ryght corner of the house to ỹ left corner of the house, alonge by the aulter, and the house rounde about the kynge. And they brought out the kinges sonne, and put vpō him the crowne, & the *testimonye, and made him kyng. And Jehoiada & his sonnes annoynted him & sayde: God saue he kyng.

*That is, the lawe of God. Deu. xvij.

When Athaliah hearde the noyse of the people runninge & praysinge the kynge, she went amonge the people into the house of the Lorde. And when she sawe the kynge stande at his pyller in the enterynge, and the Lordes and and trompiters about the kynge, and all the people of the lande reioysynge and blowing wyth trompetes, and the synguers with instrumentes of musycke teachynge to playe. Then she rent her clothes and cryed: treason treason. And Iehoiada the preste went out with the capitaynes of hundredes that were apoynted to governe the hoste, and sayde to them: haue her out wythout the arayes and whosoeuer folowyth her, let hym be slayne with the swerde. For the preste sayde: slay her not in the house of the Lorde. And they layde

ii.Re.xi.d. and all the people and the kynge, to be the Lordes people. And all the people went to the house of Baal and dystroyed it, and brake hys aulters and hys ymages, and slue Mathan the preste of Baall before the aulters. And Iehoiada put the offyces of the house of the Lorde in the handes of the prestes the Lenites, which Dauid had deuyded in companyes for the house of the Lorde, to offer burnt offerynges vnto the Lorde, as it is wrytten in the law of Moses, wyth reioysynge and synggynge, as it was ordeyned by Dauid. And he set porters vnto the gates of the house of the Lorde, that none that was vncleane in anye poynte shulde entre in.

And he toke the capitaynes of hundredthes and the nobles, and the gouernoures of the people & all the folke of the lande, & brought the kyng downe out of the house of the Lord, and they went thorowe the hye gate in the kynges house, and set the kynge vpon the seate of the kyngedome. And all the people of the lande reioysed, and the cytye was in tranquilite: but they slue Athaliah wyth the swerde.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

Iehoas durynge the tyme of Iehoiada kepyth the law but slayth not death he regardeth it not. He hyreth Zacharias the Prophet. Iehoas is brought of his owne seruauntes, and after hym rayseth Amasiah.

ii.Re.xi.d. IEhoas was seuē yere olde whē he begaume to raygne, and he raigned fourtye yere in Ierusalē. Hys mothers name was Zebiah of Berlabe. And Iehoas dyd & pleased the Lorde all the dayes of Iehoiada & preste. And Iehoiada gaue hym two wyues, & he begatsonnes & daughters.

It chaunced after that, that Iehoas was myndyd to mende the house of the Lorde. And vpon that he gathered to gether the prestes and the Leuites and sayde to them: *go ii.Re.xii.b out thorowe the cytyes of Juda and gather of all Israel syluer, to strength the house of youre God, yere by yere, and se that ye hast the thynge: how be it the Leuites were slacke. Then the kynge called Iehoiada that was
D the chefest, and sayde to him: Why requyrest thou not of the Leuytes to brynge in, out of Juda and Ierusalem the summe apoynted by Moses the seruaunt of the Lorde, and by the congregacion of Israel, for the tabernacle of wytnesse. For wicked Athaliah and her chyldren had broken the house of God, and had therto bestowed all the dedicat gyftes of the house of the Lorde, aboute Baals.

Wherfore at the kynges commaundement, they made a cofer, and set it at the gate of the house of the Lorde: and made proclamacyon thorow Juda and Ierusalem to brynge in to the Lorde *the tax and of Moses the seruaut Exod.xxx.b of God, which he set vpon Israel in the wyldernesse. And the Lordes and all the people
E reioysed and brought in and cast in to the cofer vntil it was full. And whē the tyme came that the cheste shulde be brought in by the handes of the Leuites at the apoyntment of the kynge, whē they saw & there was moche money: then came the kynges scrybe & one apoynted by the hye preste, and powred out that was in the cofer, & then toke it & carved it to hys place agayne: & this they dyd daye by daye, and gathered moche money.

And the kynge and Iehoiada gaue it to workemen that wrought vpon the house of the Lorde, and hyred masons & carpenters to redresse the house of the Lorde, and so dyd D
they artificers in yron and brasse, to repayre the house of the Lorde. And the workemen wrought & the worcke mended thorow theyr handes: and they made the house of God as it ought to be, and strengthed it. And when they had fynyshed it, they brought the rest of the money to the kynge and Iehoiada, & therwyth were made vessels for the house of the Lorde: euen vessels to mynystre with all and to serue for burntofferynges as ladelles and vessels of goulde and syluer. And they offered burntofferynges in the house of the Lorde contynually all & dayes of Iehoiada. And Iehoiada waxed olde and full of yeres
E and dyed. a. An hundred and thirty yere olde was he when he dyed. And they burged him in the cytie of Dauid amonge the kynges because he had done good in Israel, & on God and on his house. And after the death of Iehoiada, came the Lordes of Juda and made obeysaunce to the kynge. And then he herkened vnto them. And so they lefte the house of the Lorde God of theyr fathers, and serued groues and Images. And then came there wrath vpon Juda and Ierusalem, for tyys theyr trespaces sake. Not wythstandynge yet God sent Prophetes to them, to brynge them agayne vnto the Lorde. And they testified vnto them. But they wolde not heare.

a. Note this agaynst the whiche sayeth at God sayde to Noe, Gene. vi. a. & men shulde lyue no moare but an hundred and.xx. yeres.

And the spirite of God came vpon Zacharyah the sonne of Iehoiada the preste, and he F stept vp aboue the people and sayde to them. Thus sayth God: why transgresse ye the cōmaundementes of & Lorde: ye shall therfore not prosperr, but as ye haue forsake hym, so shal he forsake you* Wherupō they conspired Mat.xxiii.d
agaynst hym and stoned hym with stones, at the commaundement of & kynge: euen in the courte of ỹ house of the Lord. And so Jehoas the kynge remebred not the kyndenes which Jehoiada his father had done to hym, but slue his sonne. And when he dyed, he sayde: the Lorde se and require a recompence.

And when the yere was out, the hoste of ỹ Syriens came agaynst hym: and they came to Juda and Jerusalem, and destroyed al the Lordes of the people frō amonge the people and sent all the spoyle of them vnto ỹ kynge to Damasco. And though the armie of Syria came with a smalle compayne of men, yet ỹ Lorde delyuered a very great hoste into their handes, because they had forsaken the Lorde God of their fathers. And therto they serued Jehoas accordynge.

And as sone as they were departed from hym, though they left hym in great diseases yet his owne seruauntes conspired agaynst hym for the bloude of ỹ chyldre of Jehoiada the preste, & slue hym on his bed. And when he was dead, they buryed him in the cytye of David: but not in the sepulchres of the kynges. And these are they that conspired agaynst hym: Zabad the sonne of Samaath an Ammonite and Jehosabad the sonne of Simrith a Moabite. And his sonnes and the summe of the tare that came to hym, and the foundacion of the house of God, are written in the storie of the booke of kynges. And Amaziah his sonne raygned in his steade.

The. xxv. Chapter.

Amaziah ouercometh the Edomites. And Joas kynge of Israel ouercometh and spoyleth Ammon.

AMaziah was. xxv. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, & he raygned. xxix. yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jehoiadan of Jerusalem. And he did that pleased the Lorde: but not with the hoale hert. And as sone as he was setled in the kyngedome, he slue them that killed the kynge his father. But he slue not their chyldren as it is written in the lawe, euen in the boke of Moses to whome the Lord commaūded saying: *the fathers shall not dye for the childrens causes, nor the chyldren for the fathers, but euery man shall dye for his owne sinne. And Amaziah gathered Juda together & made capitaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes in the houses of their fathers throughout all Juda and Beniamin. And he numbred them from twentye yere & aboue, & founde them thre hundred thousande lustie men able to go to battell, and that couldе handle speare and shylde. And he hyred therto an hundred thousande fyghtynge men out of Israel, for an hundred talentes of syluer.

But there came a man of God to him and sayde: kynge, let not the armye of Israel go with the: for the Lorde is not with Israel nether with any of the house of Ephraim. Or elles yf thou wrades wyth, then go and do it, and make thy selfe stronge to battel: and thou shalt se, that God shall make the fall before thine enemyes. ffor God hath power to helpe or to cast downe. And Amaziah sayde agayne to the man of God, what shall we do then, for the hundred talentes whiche I haue geuē vnto the hoste of Israel? And the mā of God sayde: the Lorde is able to geue the moche moare then that.

And then Amaziah seuered the armie that was come to hym out of Ephraim, to go whome agayne. Wherfore they were exceadynge wrothe with Juda, & returned to their owne whome in great angre.

And Amaziah toke herte & carped out his hoste and went to saltdale.* Where he slue of the childrē of Seir ten thousande. And other ten thousande the chyldrē of Juda toke alyue and caried them vnto the toppe of a roche & cast them downe from the toppe of the roche that they all to barst: but the mē of the armie which Amaziah had turned bache and wold not let go with his people to battell, ranne vpon the cities of Juda from Samaria vnto Bethhoron and slue thre thousande of them and wanne moche spoyle.

And it chaunced, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, & had brought the Gods of the childrē of Seir, he set them vp to be his Gods, & bowed hym selfe before them & burned cense vnto them. Wherfore the Lorde was wroth with Amaziah & sent to him a prophete, & sayde to hym: why seketh thou ỹ Gods of the people which were not able to delyuer their owne people out of thyne handes? And as ỹ prophet spake to him, he sayde to the prophete: haue men made the of the kynges councell? cease, leste thou be beaten. And the prophete ceased and sayde: I am sure that God hath taken councell to destroye the, because thou hast done this, and obeyest not my councell.

Then Amaziah kyng of Juda toke aduise & sent to Joas the sonne of Jehoahaz ỹ sonne of Jehu kynge of Israel & sayde, come, & let vs se ether other. And Joas kynge of Israel sent agayne to Amaziah kynge of Juda sayinge: a thistell in Libanō sent to a Cedar tree of Libanon sayinge: * geue thy daughter to my sonne to wife. But there came the wilde beastes of Libanon and troade downe the thistell. Thou thinkest: se, I haue beaten the Edomites, therfore thyne hert arpseth to glorifye thy selfe. Now byde at home, what needeth the to prouoke to euell, that thou perishe and Juda with the.

But Amaziah rested not: for it came of God, euen to delyuer them into the handes of their enemyes: and that because they had sought the Gods of the Edomites. And Joas kynge of Israel came vp: and they saw ether other, both he and Amaziah kynge of Juda at Bethsames in Juda. And Juda was put to the worse before Israel, and fled euery man to his tent. And Joas kynge of Israel toke Amaziah kynge of Juda the sonne of Joas the sonne of * Ohoziah at Bethsames:

The rest of ꝑ actes of Amaziah syrst & last are written in the boke of the kinges of Juda and Israel. The. xxvi. Chapter.

After the death of Amaziah raygneth Oziah which is stryken with the lepre, and Joatham raygneth in hys rowme.

[1] Then all the people of Juda toke Oziah whiche was. xvi. yere olde, and made hym kynge in the rowme of hys father Amaziah. And he buylt Aloth and brought it agayne to Juda after the kynge was layde to rest with his fathers. Sixtene yere olde was Oziah whē he began to raigne and he raigned. lij. yeare in Jerusalem. Hys mothers name was Jecaliah of Jerusalem. And he dyd ꝑ pleased the Lord, in al pointes as dyd hys father Amaziah. And he went to battel agaynst the Philistines and brake downe the walles of Geth, and the walles of Jabneh and the walles of Asdod, and buylt cities about Asdod & amōg the Philistines. And God holpe him against the Philistines & against the Arabiens that dwelt in Gurbaal, & against the Meunites. And the Ammonites gaue tribute to Oziah, & his name spred abroade euen to Egipt: for he played ꝑ man excedyngly. Moreouer Oziah buylte toures in Jerusalem ouer the corner gate, & ouer the valeye gate, and ouer other corners, and made the stronge. And he built toures in ꝑ wildernesse & digged many welles. For he had much catel, both in the valey and also in the playne: and plowmen and vinedressers in the mountaynes and in Charmel, for he loued husbandrye.

And Oziah had an host of fyghtyng men that went out to warre in the armye & were tolde & numbred by Jeiel the scrybe & Maaseiah an officer, vnder the hand of Hananiah one of the kynges Lordes. And the hole nūbre of the auncient heades of ꝑ men of might were. ij. thousande & syxe hundred and vnder the handes of the was the armie of the hoste, ꝑ fyue hundred & seuē thousand, & fyue hundred that made warre wyth myght & strength, to helpe the kynge against hys enemyes. And Oziah prouyded them throwout al ꝑ host shildes, speares, helmettes, habergeynes, bowes & stinges for stones. And he made engynes in Jerusalem by the crafte of artificers to be on ꝑ towres & corners, to shote arowes & great stones with al. And hys name spreade farre abroade, for he was wonderfully holpe, vntyl he was become myghtye.

And in his greatnesse hys hert arose, that he was marred: & trāsgressed against ꝑ Lord his God. For he went into the temple of the Lorde to burne cense vpon the aulter of incense. But Azariah the priest went in after him with foure skore priestes of the Lorde ꝑ were bolde men. And they stepte to Oziah ꝑ kynge & sayde to him: it pertayneth not to the Oziah to burne cense vnto the Lorde, but to the priestes the children of Aaron that are cōsecrate for to burne incense. Come out of the sanctuarye, for thou hast trespaced, and it shalbe no worshepe to the before the Lorde God.

And Oziah was wroth and had cense in hys hande to offer, and in hys indignacyon agaynste the priestes, the leprosye sprange in his forehead the priestes in the house of the Lorde, euen beside the incense aulter. And Azariah the chefe priest with al the other priestes loked vpon him: and beholde he was a leper in his forehead, & they vexed him there. And therto he was lapte to go out, because ꝑ Lord had plaged him. And Oziah ꝑ kynge continued a leper vnto the daye of his death & dwelte in an house at liberte: howe be it, he was cast out of ꝑ house of ꝑ Lord. And Jotham his sonne had ꝑ gouernaunce of the kynges house & iudged the people of the lande.

The rest of the actes of Oziah both syrste and last, did Esaias the prophete the sonne of Amos write. He built the hie gate of the temple of the Lorde, and on the wall Ophel he buylt moche. Moreouer he built cytyes in the mountaynes of Juda, and in the wood countre he built castelles and towres.

of Hadalai ſtode vp agaynſt them that came from warre, and ſayde vnto them: ye ſhall not bringe in the captyues hether. For: where we haue offended the Lorde all readye, ye entende to adde more to oure ſynnes and treſ-pace. For oure treſpace is great all readye, and there is feerce wrath vpon Iſrael. And vpon that the men of armes lefte the captyues and the ſpoyle before the Lordes and all the congregacyon.

And there aroſe certayne apoynted therto
by name, ꝛ toke the priſoners ꝛ clothed all ſ were naked amonge them, of the ſpoyle, and arayed them and ſhoed them and gaue them to eate ꝛ to drinke and anoynted thē, ꝛ caryed
all that were feble of them vpon aſſes and brought them to Jericho the cite of Paulme trees faſt by theyr brethren: and then returned to Samaria agayne.

And at that ſame tyme kynge Ahaz ſent vnto the kynges of Aſſur to haue helpe. And the Edomites came yet agayne and ſlue of Juda and caryed awaye ſome captyues. And the Philiſtines inuaded ſ cities in the lowe countreye and the ſouth of Juda: and toke Bethſames, Aialon, Gaderoth and Socoh with the townes longynge therto, ꝛ Thimna with the townes of the ſame, ꝛ Gimſo wyth her townes, and dwelt therin. For the Lorde brought Juda lowe, becauſe of Ahaz kynge of Juda which made Juda naked and trans-greſſed agaynſt the Lorde. And Thiglath paſneſer kynge of Aſſur came vpon hym and beſieged hym, but preuayled not agaynſt
him. For Ahaz toke awaye out of the houſe of the Lorde and out of the kynges houſe and out of the Lordes houſes, and gaue vnto the kyng of Aſſur, though yt holpe him not. And yet in the very tyme of hys tribulacion dyd kynge Ahaz treſpace yet moare agaynſt the Lorde. For he offered vnto the Gods of them of Damaſco whyche bette hym ꝛ ſayd:
becauſe the Gods of the Syriens healpe thē,
therfore will I offer to them, that they maye helpe me alſo. But they were his deſtruccion ꝛ the deſtruccion of all Iſrael. And Ahaz gathered to gether the veſſels of the houſe of God and brake thē, and ſhut vp the dores of the houſe of the Lorde, ꝛ made him aulters in al corners of Jeruſalem. And in all the cities of Juda cytye by cytye he made hylaulters
to burne incenſe vnto other Gods, ꝛ angred the Lord God of hys fathers. The reſt of his actes ꝛ all his wayes bothe firſt and laſt are written in the boke of the kynges of Juda ꝛ Iſrael. And when Ahaz was layde to reſt wt hys fathers, they buryed hym in cytye of Jeruſalem: but brought hym not into the ſe-pulchres of the kynges of Juda. And *Hez-kiah hys ſonne raygned in hys ſtede.

¶ The.xxix.Chapter.

Ezechiah redresseth vnto the temple of the Lorde all the thynges that had not bene regarded of hys predecessours.

A ij.reg.xviij. EZekiah beganne to raygne when he was.xxv.yere olde, & raygned.xxix.yere in Jerusalē. And hys mothers name was Abiah the daughter of Zacharias. And he dyd that was right in the syght of the Lorde in all poynctes as did Dauid his father. He opened the dores of ỹ house of the Lorde in the fyrst yere & fyrst moneth of hys raygne, & he repayred thē. And he brought in the prestes & the Leuites & geathered them to gether in to the easte strete: & sayde vnto thē.

Heare me ye Leuites: purifye youre selues & halow the house of the Lorde God of youre fathers, & bringe out the fylthynesse out of the holy place. For oure fathers haue trespaced & done euel fauoredly in the eyes of the Lord B oure God: and haue forsaken hym, and turned awaye theyr faces from the habitacion of the Lorde and turned to theyr backes. And beside that they haue shut vp the dores of the porche and quenched the lampes and haue nether burned ceuse nor offered burntofferinges in the holy place vnto the God of Israel.

Wherfore ỹ wrath of ỹ Lord fell on Juda & Jerusalem: & he shattered them & made them so thynne that men hisse at yt, euen as ye se with youre eyes. For se, oure fathers were ouer throwen with the swerde & oure sonnes oure daughters and oure wiues were caried awaye captiue for the same cause. Now haue I in my hert to stryke a couenaunt with the Lorde God of Israel: that his wrath maye cease. Now therfore my sonnes be not necligent: for the Lorde hath chosen you to stande before hym, and for to mynistre and burne offerynges to hym.

C Thē the Leuites arose: Mahath the sonne of Amasai & Joel the sonne of Asariah beyng of the childrē of the Cahathites: & the sonnes of Merari, Kis the sonne of Abdi & Asariah the sonne of Jehaleleel: & of the Gersonites, Joah the sonne of Zimma & Eden the sonne of Joah: & of the sonnes of Elizaphan, Simri & Jeiel, & of ỹ sonnes of Asaph, Zachariah & Mathaniah: & of the sonnes of Heman, Jehuel and Semei: & of the sonnes of Jeduthun, Semaiah & Oziel. And they geathered theyr brethren & purified them selues, & then went at the commaundement of the kynge by the worde of the Lord, for to cleuse the house of ỹ Lorde. And the prestes went into the house of the Lorde to cleuse yt, and brought out all the vncleannesse that they founde in the temple of the Lord, & in the courte of the house of the Lorde. And the Leuites toke yt and caried yt D out in to the broke Cedō. They beganne the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth to purifye, and came the eight daye to the porche of the Lord so that they had purged the house of ỹ Lorde in eyght dayes and the.xvi. daye of the fyrste moneth they made an ende.

And then they went in to Hezekiah ỹ kyng & sayde: we haue cleused all the house of the Lord, & the aulter of burntofferynges with all hys vessels, & the shewbreade table with all hys apparell: & therto all the vessels whyche kyng Ahaz dyd cast a syde when he raygned and transgressed, them we haue repayred and sanctified: and se, they are before the aulter E of the Lorde. And* Hezekiah the kynge rose *Or, Jehezekiah. erlye and geathered the Lordes of the cyte & went vp to the house of the Lorde. And there were brought seuen oxen, seuen rammes, seuen lambes, and seuen kydes to be a synne offerynge for the kyngdom, for the sanctuarye and for Juda. And he commaunded the prestes the sonnes of Aaron to offer them on the aulter of the Lorde.

And they slue the oxen: & the prestes receyued the bloude & sprynkled yt on the aulter: & they slue the rammes & sprynkled the bloude vpon the aulter: and they slue the lambes & sprynkled the bloud vpon the aulter. And thē they brought forth the kydes of the synne offerynge before the kynge & the congregacion which put theyr handes vpō thē. And the prestes slue them & offered the bloude of the vpō the aulter, to make satisfaction for all Israel: for the kynge sayde: that the burntofferynge & F the synneofferyng shoulde serue for al Israel. And they set the Leuites in the house of the Lorde with symbales, psalteries and harpes accordynge to the cōmaundement of Dauid & of Gad the kynges sear of visions & of Nathan the prophete. For so was the commaundement of the Lorde throwe the hande of hys prophetes. And so the Leuites stode with the instrumentes of Dauid, & the prestes with trompettes. And Hezekiah commaunded to offer the burntofferyng vpon the aulter. And when the burntofferyng beganne, the songe of the Lorde beganne, & the trompettes with the instrumentes of Dauid kynge of Israel. And all the congregacion bowed theselues, and the syngers sange, and the trompettes blew, and cōtinued vntyll the burneofferyng was fynesshed.

And when they had made an ende of the burntofferyng, the kyng & all that were with hym kneled downe & bowed them selues and gaue prayse and thankes. And Hezekiah the kynge and the lordes bade the Leuites to prayse the lorde with the wordes of Dauid & G of Asaph the sear of vysions. And the Leuites praysed that they myghte agayne, and the other stowped and bowed them selues.

And Hezekiah answered & sayd: now that ye haue fylled youre handes to the Lorde, go to and bringe in the sacrefyces and thankofferynges in to the house of the Lord. And the congregacion brought in the sacrefyces and thankofferynges, and all that were wyllyng brought burntofferynges. And the nombre of the burntofferynges which the congregacion brought in was.lxx. oxen & an hundred rammes & two hundred lambes: & all for burneoffrynges to the Lorde. And beside that they dedicated fyue hundred oxen and thre thousand shepe.

But the preastes were to few, and were not able to slaye all the burntoffrynges. Wherefore theyr brethren the Leuites holpe them tyll the worke was ended, and vntill the preastes were sanctified. For the Leuites were purer herted to sanctifie them selues then the preastes. And therto the burntoffrynges were many with the fatte of the peace offrynges and the drynck offrynges that belonged to the burntoffrynges. And so the seruyce pertayninge to the house of the Lorde went forward. And Hezekiah reioysed and all the people, that God had made the folcke so ready: for the thynge was sodenly done.

The.xxx.Chapter.

Hezekiah ordeyneth the feast of passeouer.

AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Juda: and therto wrote letters to Ephraim & Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalē, to offer passeouer vnto the Lorde God of Israel. And the kynge helde a councell with hys Lordes and all the congregacion at Jerusalem: to kepe the feast of passeouer in the seconde moneth. For they coulde not kepe yt at ỳ time: for there were not preastes ynowe sanctified, neither was the people gathered to gether to Jerusalē. And the thynge pleased the kynge and all the congregacion. And they decreed that yt should be proclaymed throwe out all Israel from Berlabe to Dan, that they should come and holde the feast of passeouer vnto the Lorde God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not often done yt, as yt is written how they shoulde.

And the messengers went with letters of the hande of the kynge and of his Lordes throwe out all Israel and Juda, at the commaundement of the kyng which sayde: chyldren of Israel, turne agayne vnto the Lorde God of Abram, Isaac and Israel, and so wil he turne to the remnaunt of you that are escaped out of the handes of the kynge of Assur. And be ye not lyke youre fathers and youre brethren which trespaced agaynst the Lorde of youre fathers, whyche therfore gaue them vp that they are walked as ye se. Wherfore be not styffenecked lyke vnto youre fathers, but yelde youre selues vnto the Lord, & come to hys holye place whiche he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the Lorde youre God, that hys wrath maye turne from you. For yf ye turne vnto the Lorde, then youre brethren & youre children shall fynde compassion in the presence of them that holde them captyue, ỳ they maye come agayne vnto this lande: for the Lorde youre God is full of mercye and compassyon, and wyll not turne hys face frō you, yf ye turne agayne to hym.

And the posties went from cytie to cytie throwe oute the lande of Ephraim and Manasseh and euen vnto Zabulon. But they laughed them to skorne & moked the. Neuertheles yet dyuerse of Aser, Manasseh and of Zabulon meekened themselues and came to Jerusalem. And therto the hand of God was in Juda, to make them of one accorde to do the commaundement of the kynge and the capitaynes, whiche was accordynge to the worde of the Lorde. And so there assembled to Jerusalem moche people and a myghtie great congregacō, to holde the feast of swete breade in the seconde moneth.

And they arose and put awaye the aulters that were in Jerusalem. And therto all the incense they dyd awaye and cast them into the broke Cedron. And they slue passeouer the fourtene daye of the second moneth. And the preastes and Leuites sanctified them selues for shame, and brought in the burntoffrynges into the house of ỳ Lorde. And they stode in theyr standynge after theyr maner accordynge to the law of Moses the man of God. And the preastes sprynkled the blonde receyuynge yt of the handes of the leuites. And because there were many in the congregacyon that were not sanctified: and therfore dyd the Leuites sley passeouer for all that were not cleane to sanctifye them to the Lorde.

There was verye moche people out of Ephraim, Manasseh, Issakar and Zabulon that were not cleane, and therfore dyd eate passeouer otherwyse then wrytynge specyfyeth. But Hezekiah prayed for them & sayde: the good Lorde be mercyfull to all that sett theyr hertes to seke the God that is the Lord God of theyr fathers, though they do yt not accordynge to the clennesse of the holy place. And the Lorde heard Hezekiah and healed the people. And so the chyldren of Israel that were founde at Jerusalem, helde the feast of swete breade seuen dayes with great gladnesse, and the Leuites and the preastes praysed the Lorde daye by daye with lowde instrumentes.

And Hezekiah spake hertely vnto the Leuites that had good vnderstādyng of the Lord. And they dyd eate that feast seuē dayes long and offered peace offrynges and thāked the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And the hoale assemble toke councell to kepe seuen dayes mo: and they helde those seuen dayes with gladnesse. For Hezekiah kynge of Juda gaue for heaue offrynges to the congregacion a thousand oxen and seuē thousand shepe. And the Lorde gaue to the cōgregacyon for heaue offrynges a thousand oxen and ten thousand shepe. And the preastes sanctified the selues, that they were prowe.

And all the congregacion of Juda with the preastes and Leuites, and all the congregacyō that came out of Israel and the straungers, both that came out of the lāde of Israel and the dwelt in Juda, reioysed: and there was great ioye in Jerusalem. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel yt happened not so in Jerusalem. And the preastes and the Leuites arose and blessed the people, and theyr voice was hearde and theyr prayer went vp vnto hys holye dwellyng place heauen.

The.xxxi.Chapter.

After Hezekiah had called agayne the people vnto the worke of the Lorde, he appointeth the preastes, vnto whom he commaundeth to geue tythes.

A NOw when they had fynyshed al thys, then all Israell that were founde in the cyties of Juda, went oute and brake the Jmages and cut downe the groues, and all to brake the hyghaulteres and the other aulters thorow out all Juda and Benjamin, Ephraim & Manasseh, vntyll they had made an ende of them. And afterwarde all the chyldren of Israel returned euery man to hys possessyon in theyr owne cyties.

And Hezekiah set the preastes and the Leuites in theyr order to wayte by course, euery man according to his office whether preaste or Leuite: for the burntoffrynges and peace offrynges, & to mynistre and to thanke and to praye in the gates of the lodge of the Lorde. And the kyng gaue a porcyō of his substaūce for burntoffrynges at mornynge, and euen, & for burntofferynges on the Sabboth dayes & new mones & other solempne feastes, accordynge * as it is wrytten in the lawe of the Lorde. And he bade the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to geue the parte of the preastes & Leuites, that they myght be maintened in the lawe of the Lorde. And as soue as the worde came abroade the chyldren of Israel brought aboundance of fyrste frutes of corne, wyne, oyle and honye, and of all maner of frutes of the feld: and the tythes of all maner of thynges brought they in plenteously. And ye chyldren of Israel and Juda that dwelte in the cyties of Juda, they also brought in ye tythes of oxen & shepe, and tythes of dedycate thynges which were dedicated to the Lorde theyr God, and put them on heapes. In the thirde moneth they beganne to laye the heapes, and fynyshed them the seuenth.

And when Hezekiah and the Lordes came and sawe the heapes, they blessed the Lorde and his people Israel. And Hezekiah questioned with the preastes and the Leuites concernynge the heapes. And Azariah the chefe preaste of the house of Sadock answered hym and sayde: sense they beganne to bringe the heaue offerynges into the house of the Lorde, we haue eaten and had ynough, and yet lefte aboundaunce, for the Lorde hath blessed his people, and therof is thys heape lefte. And Hezekiah bade dresse vp the store houses aboute the house of the Lorde. And so they dyd, and carryed in the heaue offerynges and the tythes and the dedycate gyftes euen of fydelyte.

Ouer which Chonaniah the Leuite had the rule wyth Semei hys brother nexte to hym. And Jehiel, Azariah, Nahath, Asael, Jerimoth, Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachiah, Mahath and Bananiah were ouer seuen ordeyned by Chonaniah and Semei hys brother, at the appoyntement of Hezekiah the kynge, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God. And Chore the sonne of Jemna the Leuite porter of the East dore had the ouersyght of the freywyll offerynges of God, to geue heaue offerynges vnto the Lorde, and ouer thynges moste holy. And vnder hym were Eden, Miniamin, Jesua, Semeiah, Amariah and Sechenias in the cyties of the preastes of theyr fydelyte, to geue to their bretheren theyr porcyons, as well to the small as to the great.

And to the males also that were rekened from thre yeare and aboue amonge all that D went into the house of the Lord day by day, to do seruice and to wayte by course. And to the preastes that were rekened in the housholdes of their fathers from twentye yeare and aboue, to wayte when theyr courses came. And to them that were rekened thorow out all theyr babes, wyues, sonnes and doughters thorow out all the congregacyon. For to the fydelyte of them dyd men commit their sanctyfyed gyftes. And thereto amonge the chyldren of Aaron the preastes were men named by name in the feldes of the suburbes of all their cyties, cyte by cyte, for to geue porcions to all the males of the preastes, and to all that were rekened amonge the Leuites.

And of this maner dyd Hezekiah thorow out all Juda, and dyd that was good, ryght and trueth, before the Lorde hys God. And in all the workes that he beganne in the seruyce of the house of God, to seke hys God after the lawe and commaundemente, that dyd he wyth all his herte, and prospered.

The. xxxij. Chapter.

Sennacherib, which would haue besieged Jerusalem is destroyed of the Angel. Hezekiah dyeth after whom succeadeth Manasses.

AFter these deades & trueth A Sennacherib kynge of Assur came and entred into Juda and pitched against the stronge cyties, and thought to drawe them to hym. And when Hezekiah sawe ye Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fyght against Jerusalem: he toke councell with hys capitaynes & men of might, to stoppe the water of the fountaynes that were wythout the cytye: & they were content to helpe hym. And so there gathered muche people together and stopte al the welles and the broke that ranne thorow the myddes of the lande, entendynge that the kynges of Assur shoulde not fynde much water whē they came. And he wente to bulwerke & buylt vp the walle where it was broken, and made toures aboue vpon, and yet another wall wythout, and repayred Melo the cyte of Dauid, and made many dartes & shyldes.

And he sent Capitaynes of warre ouer the people and gathered the to gether into the large strete of the gate of the citie & spake ien-tirely to them, saying. Plucke vp your hertes and be strong: Be not afrayed nor in any wyse discouraged for dreade of the kyng of Assur,
and of the great multitude that is with hym:
*for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is an arme of flesh: But with vs is the Lorde our God for to helpe vs and to fyght our battayles. And the people were well coraged with the wordes of Hezekiah kynge of Juda.

After that Senacherib kynge of Assur sent of his seruauntes to Jerusalem (he hym selfe inge before Lachis & all his kyngdom with hym) vnto Hezekiah kyng of Juda & vnto all Juda that were at Jerusalem saynge. Thus saith Senacherib kynge of Assur: *where in do ye trust, that ye are besieged in Jerusalē?
Hezekiah deceyueth you, to deliuer you to dethe, hongre, & thrist, saying: the Lord our God shall rydde vs out of the hande of the kynge of Assur. Se ye not that Hezekiah that put downe his hyghaulters and his other aulters, and commaunded Juda and Jerusalem saynge: before one aulter ye shall bowe your selues and vpon that offer also.

Wote ouer haue ye not hearde what I and my fathers haue done vnto the people of all landes? were the Gods of the people of other landes able to saue theyr landes out of my hand? which of all the Gods of those nacyōs that my fathers destroyed was yt, that could deliuer his people out of myne hande, that your God should be able to deliuer you out of myne hande? Wherfore now let not Hezekiah deceyue you ether persuade you of this saiynge, nor yet beleue hym. For as no God amonge so many nacyons and kyng-domes, was able to rydde his people out of myne hande & the hande of my fathers: euen
so moche lesse shall your God kepe you oute of myne hande. And yet moare dyd his seruauntes speake agaynst the Lorde God and agaynst his seruaunt Hezekiah. And therto he wrote a letter to raile on the Lorde God of Israel & spake theron saynge: as the Gods of the nacyons of other landes haue not deliuer-ed theyr people out of myne hāde, no moare shall the God of Hezekiah deliuer his people out of myne hande. And they cryed with a lowde voyce in the iewes speache vnto the people of Jerusalem that were on the walles to feare them and to dyssmaye them, that they myght haue taken the cytye. And they spake agaynst the God of Jerusalem, as agaynst
the Gods of the nacyons of the erth, whyche are the worcke of the handes of men.

But Hezekiah the kynge and the prophete Esaiah sonne of Amoz prayed concernynge that thynge and cryed vp to heauen. And the Lorde sent an angell & destroyed all the men of warre and the Lordes & capitaynes of the hoste of the kyng of Assur, that he turned his face wyth shame towarde his owne lande.
And when he was come into the house of his God, he was there ouerthrowen wyth the swerde euen by them that issued oute of his bowelles. And so the Lorde saued Hezekiah and the enhabyters at Jerusalem oute of the handes of Senacherib kynge of Assur and of all other, and maynteined them on all sy-
des. In so muche that many brought presentes vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem and precyouse gyftes to Hezekiah kynge of Juda: so that he was magnifyed in the sight of al na-cyons from thence forth.

*In those dayes Hezekiah was sycke vnto the dethe and besought the Lorde: whiche answered him and shewed hym a wonder-full miracle: But Hezekiah dyd not according to the curtesy shewed him, for his hert arose:
& therfore came there wrath vpō him & vpon Juda and Jerusalē. Not withstāding Hezē-kiah vnbended him selfe for ye rysing of his herte, both he and the enhabyters of Jerusalem. Wherfore the wrath of the Lord fel not vpon them in the dayes of Hezekiah.

And Hezekiah had exceadinge muche rychesse & honoure. And he gathered him treasure of syluer, golde, precyouse stones, spy-ces, shildes & of al maner pleasaunt Jueles:
& made store houses for the fruites of corne, wyne & oyle: & stables for all maner of beastes, and tolldes for shepe. And he made hym townes, because he had catel of shepe & oxen great aboundaunce. For God had geuē him substaunce exceadyng muche. And the same Hezekiah stopped the vpper water sprynges of Gihon & brought them downe to the West syde of the cytye of Dauid. And Hezekiah prospered in al his workes. But when the Ambassadoures of the Lordes of Babylon were sent to hym to enquyre of the wonder that chaunced in the land, God lefte hym: to tempte hym, that all that was in his herte myght be knowen.

The rest of the dedes of Hezekiah and his goodnesse are written in the vision of Esaiah
the prophete the sonne of Amoz in the boke of the kynges of Juda and Israell. And then Hezekiah layde him to reste wyth his fathers: and they buryed hym in the hyeste sepulchre of the sonnes of Dauid: and Juda and the enhabyters of Jerusalē dyd him worshippe at his dethe. And Manasseh his sonne raigned in his stede.

The.xxxiij.Chapter.

Manasseh is taken prisoner, and after he comyth oute, he destroyeth Idolatry. He dyeth, and after him succedeth Amon. After Amō was kylled of his owne people, Iosiah his sonne raygneth for him.

MAnasseh was.xij. yere olde whē
he was made kynge, & raigned fyfty yeare in Jerusalem. And he dyd wickedlye in the syght of the Lord, lyke vnto the abho-minacions of the heathen, whyche the Lorde caste out before the chyldren of Israell. For he went to and buylt agayne the hyllaulters, whych

which Hezekiah his father had broke downe.
And he reered vp aulters vnto Baals & made groues & bowed him selfe vnto all the host of heauē and serued them. And he buylt aulters in the house of the Lorde: Of which & Lorde had sayde* in Jerusalē shall my name be for 4.Reg. vij.b euer. And he made aulters vnto all the hoste of heauen in the two courtes of the house of the Lorde. And he burnt his chyldren in fyre in the valey of the sonnes of Hemon. And he obserued dyssimalle dayes & occupyed wytch craffte and soxserp, and mayntened workers with spirites & seares of fortunes: & wrought moche euell in the syght of the Lorde, to angre hym wyth all.

And he put the kerued Image of an Idole
B which he had made, in the house of God. Of which house God sayde to Dauid and to Sa lomon his sonne, in this house here in Jerusalem which I haue chosen out of all the tribes, *I wyll put my name for euer, and no 4.Reg. vij.b moare bynge the seat of Jsrael from of the 2.Re. viij.b lande whiche I haue ordeyned for my fathers. If so be they shalbe dyligent to do all I haue commanded by Moses in all the lawe ordinances and maners. But Manasseh made Juda and the enhabiters of Jerusa lem to erre and to do worse then the heathen whiche the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Jsrael. And when the Lorde spake to Manasseh and to hys people, they attended not to hym.

Wherfore the Lorde brought vpon them
the Capitaynes of the hoste of the kynge of Assur, which toke Manasseh in an holde and bounde him with chaynes & carped hym to Babylon. And when he was in trybulacyon
C he besought the Lorde his God, & humbled hym selfe exceadyngly before the God of hys fathers, & made intercessyon to hym: and he was entreated of hym and heard hys pra yer and brought hym agayne to Jerusalem into hys kyngdō. And then Manasseh knewe how that the Lorde was the very God.

After that he buylt a wall without & cytye of Dauid on & west syde of Gihō in & broke
& so forth to & fysh gate & rouāde about Ophel & brought it vp of very a great heyght, & put capitaynes of warre in all the stronge cities of Juda. And he toke awaye straunge Gods & the Idole out of the house of God, & all the aulters that he had buylt in the mount of the house of God & in Jerusalem, & cast thē out of the cytie. And he made an aulter vnto the Lord & sacrefyced theron peace offerynges & thankofferynges, and charged Juda to serue the Lorde God of Jsrael. Neuertheles the people dyd offer styll in the hyaulters, how be it vnto the Lorde their God onlye.

D The rest of the actes of Manasseh and his prayer vnto his God, & the wordes of & seares of vysions & spake to hym in the name of the Lorde God of Jsrael, are writte amonge the deades of & kynges of Jsrael. And his prayer & how that he was heard, & all his synne & trespace, and the places where he made hya-aulters and set vp groues & kerued Jmages before he was mekened, are written amonge
the deades of the seares of vysions. And whē Manasseh was layd to rest with his fathers
they buryed him in his owne house: & Amon his sonne raygned in his roume. Amon was xxij. yeare olde, when he beganne to raygne, and raygned two yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lord syre vnto Manasseh his father, for Amon sacrificed to all the kerued Jmages, which Manasseh hys fa ther made, and serued them, & mekened not him selfe before the Lorde as Manasseh hys father had mekened him selfe: But Amō trespaced greatly. Wherfore hys owne seruauntes cōspired against him and slue him in his owne house. And the people of the land slue all that he conspyred agaynst kynge Amon.
And therto the people of the lande made Josiah his sonne kyng in hys roume.

The. xxxiij. Chapter.

Iohab destroyeth the Idoles & reformeth the tēple: in which he founde the booke of the lawe. He sendeth A to Holda the prophetisse for counsell.

IOsiah was made kyng when he was viij. yere olde, and he raigned in Jerusalē. xxxi. yere.
And he dyd that pleased the Lord, & walked in the wayes
of Dauid his father bowing nether to & right hande or to the lefte. In so much that & eight yeare of hys raygne, when he was yet a lad,
he beganne to seke after the God of Dauid hys father. And in the twelueth yeare he be-ganne to pourge Juda and Jerusalē of hya-aulters, groues, kerued Jmages, & Jmages of metal: so that they brake doune the aulters
of Baals euen in his presence, and & pdoles
that were vpon them, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Jmages, & Jmages of metall he brake and made dust of thē, B and strawed it vpon the graues of them that had offered to them. And he burnt the bones of the preestes vpon the aulters, & clensed Ju da and Jerusalem. And euen so dyd he in the cyties of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon & of Nephthali thereto. And in the wyldernesses of them roundabout he plucked a sonder the aulers & the groues and dyd beate them and stampe them to poudre, & bete doune & pdoles throughout all the lande of Jsrael: & then returned to Jerusalem agayne.

And in the. xviij. yeare of his raigne when he had purged the land & the temple, he sente Saphan the sonne of Azaliah, & Maasiah the gouernoure of the cyete and Joah the sonne Joahaz the recorder, to repayre the house of & Lorde his God. And when they came to Hel kiah the hye preest, men deliuered them & mo ney that was brought into the house of God, which the Leuites that kept the entries had gathered of & hāde of Manasseh & Ephraim & of all & yet remayned in Jsrael & of all Juda & Beniamin & of & enhabiters of Jeru-salē. And they put it in the hāde of & worke-men

men that had the ouerseyght of the house of L the Lorde, whiche gaue it to the labourers that wrought on the house of the Lord, to repaire & mende it, and to maisons and carpen ters to hewe stone & timbre for to make couples and beames for the houses whiche the kynges of Juda had destroyed: And the men wrought in the worke of fidelite.

And the ouer seares of them to courage them forwarde, were Jahath & Obadiah Le-uites of the children of Merarite and Zecharia and Mesulam of the children of the Caha thites, and as manye other of the Leuites as coulde skille of instrumentes of Musick. And ouer the bearers of burthens & ouer all that wrought in what soeuer worcheman shipe it were, were there scribes, officers and porters of the Leuites.

And as they brought out the money & was brought into the house, Helkiah the preaste founde the boke of the lawe of the Lord geue
M by Moses. And Helkiah answered and sayd to Saphan the scribe: I haue founde & boke of the law in the house of the Lorde, and gaue
the boke to Saphan. And Saphan carped
the boke to the kynge, and brought the kynge worde agayne, saying: all that was cómitted to thy seruauntes, that do they. And they haue powred out the money that was founde in the house of the Lorde and haue delyuered in to the handes of the ouer seares of the worchemen. And then Saphan the scribe
O shewed the kyng, sayinge: Helkiah the preaste hath geuen me a boke, and he read it before the kynge.

And whē the kyng had hearde the wordes
P of the lawe, he tare his clothes & cómaunded Helkiah and Ahikam the sonne of Saphan and Abdon the sonne of Micah & the sayde Saphan the scribe & Asaia a seruaunt of the kynges, saying: go & enquire of the Lorde for me and for them that are lefte in Israel and Juda, concernyng & wordes of the boke that is founde. For great is the wrath of the Lord that is fallen vpon vs, because oure fathers kept not the worde of the Lorde, to do after all that is written in this boke.

And Helkiah with the that pertayned to the kynge went to Holdah a prophetisse wyfe of Sellum the sonne of Thekohath the sonne of Hasrah keper of the wardrope (which pro-phetisse dwelt in Jerusalē in & secōde warde)
& they commoned so vnto her. And she sayde vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, tell ye the man & sent you to me. Euē thus sayth the Lorde: se, I will bringe euell vpon this place and vpon the enhabiters therof, euē all the curses that are written in the boke which they haue reade before the kyng of Juda, be cause they haue forsaken me and haue offered vnto other Gods to angre me with all maner workes of their handes, therfore is my wrath set on fyre agaynst this place & shall not be quenched.

And as for the kynge of Juda whiche sent you to enquire of the Lorde, so shall ye saye
vnto him, thus sayth the Lord God of Israel
Q cōcernyng & wordes which thou hast hearde
Because thyne hert dyd melt & thou dyddest meke thy selfe before God, whē thou heardest his wordes agaynst this place and agaynste
the enhabiters therof: & humbledest thy selfe before me, and tarest thy clothes and wepest before me, that haue I hearde also sayth the Lorde. Beholde I will take the to thy fathers & thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace, and thyne eyes shall not se all the mysscheue that I will bryng vpō this place & vpō the enhabiters of the same. * And they brought the iiij. Re. xxij.
kynge worde agayne. Then the kynge sent & gathered to gether all the elders of Juda & Jerusalem. And the kyng went vp in to the house of the Lorde, & all the men of Juda and the enhabiters of Jerusalem & the Preastes & Leuites and all the people great and smalle and reade all the wordes of the boke of the R couenaunt that was founde in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge stode at hys stan-dynge & made a couenaunt before the Lorde, to folowe the Lord and to kepe his commaū dementes, his wytnesse and his statutes with al his herte and with all hys soule & to fulfyl
the wordes of the appointment written in the sayde boke.

And he made to come fauth all that were founde in Jerusalem and Beniamin, and the enhabyters of Jerusalem promesed to kepe
the couenaunt of that God whiche was the God of their fathers. And Josiah put away all maner of abhominacyons out of all landes that pertayned to the chyldren of Israel, and brought all that were founde in Israel to serue the Lorde their God. And they turned not a syde from after the Lorde God of their fathers as longe as he lyued.

The.xxxb. Chapter.

And Josiah gaue to the comen people in lambes and kydde, for passe ouer offeringes onlye, vnto all that were present. xxx. thousande by tale, & thre thousande oxen, euen of
B the kynges substaunce. And his Lordes gaue willyngly both vnto the people & also vnto the preastes & vnto the Leuites. Helkiah, Zachariah & Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gaue vnto the preastes for passeouer offerynges two thousand & syxe hundred lambes & kydde, and thre hundred oxen. And Conaniah with Semeiah & Nathanel his brethren, and Hasabiah and Jaiel & Josabad Lordes of the Leuites, gaue vnto the Leuites fyue thousadde passeouer offerynge, and fyue hundred oxen.

And so the seruice went forwarde, and the preastes stode in theyr places, & the Leuites in theyr cõpanies at the kynges cõmaundemẽt. And they slue passeouer: & the preastes sprinckled the bloude receyuynge it of the Leuites, and the Leuites stripte the beastes. And they Ehakim. Jehoacin. Zedekiah. sett awaye the burntofferynges, to geue thẽ vnto the comen people as they were deuyded by auncient houses, for to offer vnto the Lord, lyke as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses.
C And so dyd they with the oxen to. And they dressed the passeouer with fyre as the maner was. But the other halowed dedycat beastes they sodde in pottes, caulderns & pannes & deuyded them quyckly amonge all the comẽ people. And afterwarde they made readye for them selues and for the preastes and for the chyldren of Aaron, which were busied in offerynge of burntofferynges and the fatt vntyll nyght. And therfore the Leuites prepared for them selues and for the preastes the sonnes of Aaron. And the syngers the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr standyng accordyng to the commaundement of Dauid and Asaph, Heman and Jduthun the kynges sear of visions: and the porters wayted at euery gate, and might not departe from theyr seruyce: But theyr brethre the Leuites prepared for them. And so all the seruyce of the Lorde went forwarde the same daye, in offerynge passeouer of burntofferynges vpõ the aulter of the Lorde, accordyng to the commaundement of kynge Josiah.

And so the chyldren of Jsrael that coulde be founde, offered passeouer the same tyme & kepte the feast of swete breade seuen dayes.
D And ther was no passeouer lyke to that, kept in Jsrael from the tyme of Samuel the prophete nether dyd anye of ỹ kynges of Jsrael holde soche a passeouer feast as dyd Josiah and the preastes and Leuites and all Juda, and as moche of Jsrael as coulde be had, and the enhabiters of Jerusalem. And this passeouer was holden in the. xviii. yere of the raygne of Josiah.

ii.Re.xxiii.f * After all this, whẽ Josiah had fynished ỹ tẽple, Necho kyng of Egypt came vp to fight agaynst Carcamis vpon Euphrates, and Josiah wẽt out agaynst him. And the other sent messengers to hym, sayinge: what haue J to do with the thou kyng of Juda? J came not agaynst the nowe at this tyme, but agaynste an house with whom J haue warre, & God bade me haste. Leaue of therfore and medle not with God which is with me, least he destroye the. Neuertheles Josiah turned not his face from him, but made hym readye to fyght with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of God. And when he was come to fyght in the valeye of Magedo, the shoters shotte agaynste the kyng Josiah. And the king sayd to his seruauntes: cutte me awaye, for J am sore hurte. And his seruauntes had him oute of the charet and put him in another, and brought him to Jerusalem where he dyed & was buried in Zacha.xii.d.
the sepulchre of his fathers. * And al Juda & Jerusalẽ mourned for Josiah. And Jeremiah lamented Josiah, and all syngynge men and singing wemen speake of Josiah to this day, & made it an ordinaunce in Jsrael: and they be written in lamentacions. The rest of ỹ actes of Josiah and his goodnes in folowinge the writyng of the law, & his deades fyrste & last are written in the boke of the kynges of Jsrael and Juda.

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

After Josiah raygneth Jehoahas, after Jehoakim Jehoakim, after Jehoakim Jehoacin, after Jehoacin Zedekiah. In whose tyme of the people were caryed away to Babylon and were brought agayne thr. lxx. yeare after, by kyng Cyrus.

AND the people of the land toke Jehoahaz the sonne of Josiah & made hym kynge for hys father in Jerusalem. And Jehoahaz was. xxiii. yeare olde, when he began to raigne, & he raygned thre monethes in Jerusalem. For the kynge of Egypte put him doune at Jerusalem and mulcted the lande in an hundred talentes of syluer and a talent of gold. And the kyng of Egypt made Eliakim his brother kyng vpon Juda & Jerusalem, and turned hys name vnto Jehoakim, but Jehoahaz his brother Necho toke & caried hym to Egypte. And Jehoakim was xxv. yeare olde when he began to raigne, & he raigned a. xi. yeare in Jerusalẽ: & he dyd that displeased the Lorde his God. Againste hym came Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babilon & bounde him in fetters to carye him to Babilon. Ther to the kynge Nabuchodonozor caried the vessels of the house of the Lord to Babilon and put them in hys temple at Babilõ. The rest of the actes of Jehoakim & hys Abhominacions, & that was layde to his charge are wrytten in the boke of the Kinges of Jsrael: and Jehoacin hys sonne raigned in hys steade. Jehoacin was. viii. yeare olde when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned thre monethes and ten dayes in Jerusalem: and dyd that displeased the Lord. And when the pere was out, kynge Nabuchodonozr sent & let him to Babilon with the goodlye vessels of ỹ house of the Lord, & made Zedechiah his *brother kynge ouer Juda and Jerusalem.

* Here brother is taken for vncle, by a maner of speache of the Hebru.

And Zedechiah was .xxi. pere olde when he beganne to raigne, & raigned .a. xi. pere in Jerusalem. And he did that displeased the Lord his God, & humbled not him selfe before Jeremiah the prophete at the mouth of ỹ Lorde. L And therto he rebelled agaynst Nabuchodonozr which had sworne vnto him by God, & was to styffnecked & to harde hertted to turne vnto ỹ Lord God of Israel. Therto all the rulers of ỹ preastes with ỹ people trespaced a pace after all maner of abhominacions of ỹ hethen & polured the house of the Lorde which he had halowed in Jerusalem.

And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, sendynge them betyme: for he had compassyon on his people & on his dwellynge place. But they mocked the messengers of God & despised their wordes & mysse vsed his prophetes, vntyll the wrath of the Lord so arose agaynst his people that it was past remedye. And so he brought vpō them the kyng of Caldey & slue their yonge men with the swerde in their holy temple, & neyther spared yonge man nor mayde, neyther olde man, neyther so moche as him that stouped for age: But gaue all into his hande.

And all the vessels of the house of God bothe great and smalle, & the treasures of the house of God, & the treasures of the kynge & his Lordes he carped to Babilō euery with. And they burnt the house of God and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces therof with fyre with all the goodly stoffe therof, and marred it. And he carped awaye them that had escaped the swerde, to Babilon, where they were seruauntes to him and his chyldren, vntill the kyngdome of Persia beganne to rule, to fulfyll the worde of the Lorde by the mouthe of Jeremiah, vntyll the lande had her pleasure of her Sabethes: for as longe as the laye desolate, she kepte Saboth vntyll she had fulfyll led .lxx. yeres. * And the fyrst yere of Cyrus kynge of Persia to fynysshe the worde of the Lorde by the mouth of Jeremiah, the Lorde stered vp the spirite of Cyrus kyng of Persia that he made a proclamacion throughout all his kyngdom, and therto sett it vp in wrytynge, sayinge. Thus sayth Cyrus kynge of Persia, all ỹ kyngdomes of the earthe hath the Lorde God of heauen geuen me, whiche hath charged me to buylde him an house in Jerusalem that is in the lande of Juda.

Cyrus fynden against the people that was in captiuitye, and restoreth them their holye vessels: And commaunded them to buylde against the temple.

A Ebn. Esdr.

IN the fyrste yeare of Cyrus king of Persia (that ỹ word of ỹ lord spoken * by the mouth of Jeremy might be fulfylled) the Lord stered vp the spirite of Cyrus kynge of Persia, that he caused it be proclamed throughout all his empyre, ye and by wrytinge also, sayinge: Thus sayth Cyrus the king of Persia: The Lord God of heauē hath geuen me al ỹ kingdomes in the land * & hath commaunded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Juda. Whosoeuer now amonge you is of his people, the Lord his God be with him, & let him go vp to Jerusalem in Juda, and buylde the house of the Lorde God of Israell. He is the God that is at Jerusalem. And whosoeuer remayneth yet in any maner of a place (where he is a straunger) let the men of his place helpe him with syluer & golde, with good & cattel, beside that which they willingly offer, for the house of God at Jerusalem.

Then gat vp the principal fathers of Juda and Ben Jamin, & the preistes and Leuites, and all they whose spirite God had rayled to go vp, and to buylde the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. And al they that were aboute them, strengthened their hand with vessels of syluer and golde, with good & cattel, and Jewels, beside that whiche they gaue of their owne frewyll. And kynge Cyrus brought forth of the vessels of the house of the Lorde, whiche Nabuchodonozr had taken oute of Jerusalem, and put in the house of his God. But Cyrus the kynge of Persia brought the forth by Mithridates the treasurer, & numbred them vnto Sesbazar the prince of Juda. And this is the nombre of them: thyrtye basens of gold, and a thousand basens of syluer, and nine and twenty knyues, thyrty cuppes of gold, and of other syluer cuppes foure hundred and ten, and of other vessels a thousande. So that all the vessels both of golde and syluer, were fyue thousand & foure hundred. Sesbazar brought them all vp, with the that came vp out of the captyuite of Babilon vnto Jerusalem.

C In the seconde yeare of their commynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalē in the seconde moneth, begānne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, & the remnaunt of their brethren the prestes and Leuites, and al they that were come oute of the captyuyte vnto Jerusalem, & appoynted the Leuites from twentye yeare old, and aboue, to se, that the worke of the house of the Lorde went forwarde. And Jesua stode wyth hys sonnes and brethren, and Cadmiel wyth hys sonnes, and the children of Juda, to further the workemen of the house of God, namely the children of Henadad with their children and their brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layd the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde, the prestes stode in their araye, with trompettes. And the Leuites the children of Asaph with cymbales, to praise the Lorde* after the maner of 1 Par. xvi. b. David kynge of Israel. And they sange together, gyuynge prayse and thankes vnto the Lorde, because he is gracyous, and because hys mercy endureth for euer vpon Israel. And all the people shouted loude in praysing the Lorde, because the foundacyon of ỹ house of the Lorde was layd. Many also of the old paprestes and Leuites and auncyent fathers, whyche had sene the fyrst house: when the foundacion of thys house was layed before their eyes, wepte wyth a loud voice. And many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gaue a great sounde, in so much that the people could not knowe the ioyfull sounde for the noyse of the weping amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loud cry, so that the noise was heard farre of.

The. iiij. Chapter.

The buylding of the temple is hyndred and let.

B But when the aduersaryes of Juda and Benjamin hearde, that the children of the captyuite buylded ỹ temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to Zorobabel and to the principal fathers, and saide vnto them: We wyll buylde with you: for we seke the Lorde your God ẏke as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto him, synce the tyme that Asor Hadō the kynge of Assur brought vs vp hyther.
But Zorobabel and Jesua and the other auncient fathers of Israel answered them: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buylde the house vnto oure God: for we oure selues wil
1. Esdr. iij. buylde alone vnto the Lorde oure God of Israel,* as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hathe commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the lande hindered the B people of Juda, and made them afraied to buylde, and hyred counceilers agaynst them, and hindred their deuyse, as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued, but yll the raigne of Darius kynge of Persia. But when Ahaserus was kynge, in the beginnynge of hys raygne wrote they vnto him a complaynte against them of Juda and Jerusalem.

And in the tyme of Artharerses, wrote Bselleam, Mithridates, Tabeel, and the other of their counsel vnto Artharerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter was wrytten in the Syriane sprache, and was interpretated in the language of the Syrians. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scrybe, wrote this letter against Jerusalem to Ar- *Or (as some wyll) parte of ỹ counsel.

We Rehum the* chaunceler, and Samsai the scrybe, and other of the counsel of Dina, of Arphasat, of Tarpilat, of Persia, of Arech of Babylon of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam & other of the people, whome the greate & noble Asenaphar brought ouer, and set in the cytyes of Samaria, and other on this syde the Or, peace & water, and * in Cenereth. And this is the health. summe of the letter that they sent vnto kynge C Artharerses.

Thy seruauntes the men on this syde the water and in Cenereth. Be it knowne vnto the kynge, that the Jewes are come vp from the to vs vnto Jerusalem a cytye rebellyous and frowarde, and buylde the same, and laye the foun-foundacyon of the walles therof, and repaire them. Be it knowne nowe therfore vnto the kynge that yf this cyttye be buylded, and the walles made vp agayne, then shall not they geue tribute, tolle, and pearly custome, *and ruen vnto the kinges shal this hurt redound. But nowe that we al are therby, whyche destroyed the temple, we wouldo no longer se ỹ kynges dyshonoure. Therfore sent we out, & caused the kynge to be certyfyed therof. That it maye be soughte in the Chronycles of thy progenitours, and so shalte thou fynde in the same Chronycles, & perceyue, that this cyttye is seditious & noysome vnto kinges & landes, & that they cause other also to rebell of olde, & for the same cause was this cyttye destroyed. Therfore do we certyfy the kyng, that yf this cittie be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt haue no dyngye on this syde the water by the reason of it.

Some reade And the kynges tribute may incurre damage.

D Then sent the kyng an answere vnto Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the Scribe, and to the other of their counsel that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde the water. Peace & salutacyon. The letter whyche ye send vnto vs, hath ben openly read before me, and I haue commaunded to make search: and it is found, that this cyty of olde hath made insurrecyon agaynst kinges, & how the vproze & rebellion hath ben committed therin. There haue ben myghty kinges also at Jerusalē, whyche haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, & tolle, tribute & pearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaundement, forbyd the same men, that the cyty be not buylded, tyl I haue geuen commaundement. Take hede now that ye be not negligent herin, lest the kinge haue harme therby now.

Now when kynge Artharerses letter was read before Rehum the chaunceler and Samsai the scribe and their counsel, they went vp in al the hast to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, & forbad them with violence and power. The ceased the worck of the house of God at Jerusalem, and continued so vnto the second yeare of Darius kynge of Persia.

By the exhortacyon of Aggeus and Zacheri to the temple buylded agayne.

A i. Esd. v. i. a. THe Prophetes, Aggeus & Zacharī the sonne of Ado, prophecyed vnto the Jewes that were in Juda and Jerusalem, in the name of ỹ God of Israel. Then gat vp Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and began to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, and with them the Prophetes of God whyche helped them. At the same tyme came to them Thathanai the captayne on this syde the water, and Starbuzanai, and their counsellers, & sayde this vnto them. Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this buylding. But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Jewes, that they couldo not cause them to ceasse, tyl the matter was brought before Darius, and tyl they had answered by letters therunto. B

This is the copy of the letter that Thathanai the captayne on this syde the water, and Starbuzanai, and their counsellers of Apharsach, which were on this side the water, sent vnto king Darius. And this is the content of the wordes that they sent vnto him: Vnto Darius the kynge, All peace. Be it knowne vnto the kynge, that we came into Jewry to the house of the great God, whyche is buylded with *rouge stone, and beames are layed in the walles, and the worke goeth ful forth and prospereth in their hādes. We asked therfore the Elders and sayde vnto them: Who C hath commaunded you to buylde this house and to make vp the walles therof? We asked their names also, that we might certyfye the, and haue written the names of the men that were their rulers. *Rab. Salo. in Marble.

But they answered vs with these wordes, and sayd: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen and earth, & buylde the house that was buylded many yeares ago* whyche a greate kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. And after our fathers had prouoked ỹ God of heauen vnto wrath, *he gaue them ouer in to the hand of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon ỹ Caldee, whyche brake downe this house, & caried the people away into Babell. 16. Reg. xxv. 2. Para. xxxvi. iii. Re. xxiiii. and. xxv.

*But in the fyrst yeare of Cyrus the kyng of Babilon, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God. For ỹ vessels of gould & syluer in the house of God, whych Nabuchodonozor tooke out of the temple at Jerusalem, & brought thē into the temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of the temple at Babilon, & deliuered them vnto Salbazar by name, whō he made captayne and sayd vnto him. Take these vessels, go thy waye, and bringe them vnto the temple at Jerusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Salbazar and layde the foundacyon of the house of God at Jerusalem. Sence that tyme hath it ben in buyldinge, and yet is it not fynished. Yf it please the kynge now, let there be search made in the kynges treasure house which is at Babylon, whether it haue ben kynge Cyrus commaundement, that ỹ house of God at Jerusalē should be buylded: & send vs the kinges minde concernynge the same. D i. Esd. i. d. i. Esd. i. f.

The. vi. Chapter.

At the commaundement of Darius kyng of Persia after the temple was buylded and dedycate, the children of Israel kepe the feaste of vnleauened breade.

A Then commaunded kyng Darius that search should be made in ỹ tyharcy of the kinges treasure house, whych lay at Babilon. *So at Ecbathanis a castell ỹ lieth in the lande of the Medes, there was iv. Esd. vi. c. Some reade, & there was found in a cerfer (that was in a palace in the land of Me-

des) a volu-

was written such a memorial, &c.

founde a boke, and in it was there an acte written after this maner: In the first year of kyng Cirus, commaunded the same kyng Ci rus to buylde the house of God at Jerusalē, in the place where the sacrifyce is made, & to lay y foundacō to beare thre score cubites height & thre score cubytes bredth, & thre walles of roughe stones, and one walle of tymber, and the expēces shalbe geuen of the kinges house.
And the goulde and syluer vessel of the house of God (whiche Nabuchodonosor toke oute
of the temple at Jerusalem, & brought vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, that they maye be brought vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place into the house of God.

Get you farre frō them therfore, thou Tha thanai captayne beyond the water, & Stharbuzanai, & youre counceilers whiche are beyonde the water, get ye awaye from thē. Let thē worthe in the house of God, that the captayne of the Jewes and their Elders maye buylde the house of God in his place. I have commaunded also, what shalbe done to the Elders of Juda for the buyldyng of y house of God, that there shall diligently be taken of the kinges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, & geuen vnto the men, and that they be not hindred. And yf they have nede of calues, lābes, or goates, for the burnt-offeryng vnto the God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the ordinaunce of the preestes at Jerusalem, there shalbe geuen vn daylie asis accordyng: & se that this be done without faute, that they maye offre swete sayoures vnto the God of heauen, and praye for the kinges lyfe & for his children. This cō-maundement have I geuen. And what man soeuer he be that altereth these wordes, there shall a beame be taken from his house, & set vp, and he shalbe hanged theron, & his house shalbe poysed for the deade.

But the God that dwelleth in heauen, de-stroye al kinges and people, that put to their hande to alter & to breake doune the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue cōmaunded, that this be diligently done.

Then Thathanai the captayne beyond the water, and Sthar buzanai with their counse-lers, (vnto whō king Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And the Elders of the Jewes buildded, and they prospered thorowe the Prophesyenge of Aggeus the Prophet and Zacharī
the sonne of Addo: and they buylded, and set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaunde mente of the God of Israel, and after the cō-maundement of Cyrus, Darius & Artharxer-ses kinges of Persia. And they performed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was in the sixte yeare of the raigne of kinge Darius.

6. Par. bō. b' And the children of Israel, the preestes, y Leuites, & the other children of the captyuite helde the dedicacō of the house of God with ioye, and offered at the dedycacō of the house of God, an hundred calues, two hūdred lam-bes, four hundred goates: and for the synnes ringe for all Israell twelue he goates, accor
dinge to the nombre of the tribes of Israel, and set the preestes in their courses and the Le uites in their offices to ministre vnto God, which is at Jerusalem, as it is written in the boke of Moses.

And the children of the captyuite helde D Passeouer vpō the fourteenth daye of the first moneth: for the preestes and Leuites had purified thē selues, so that they were all cleane
as one man, & killed Passeouer for all y chil dren of the captyuite, and for their brethern
the preestes, and for them selues. And y children of Israel which were come agayne out of captyuite, & al such as had separated them selues vnto them from the filthynesse of the Heathen in the lande, to seke the Lorde God of Israel, ate and helde the feast of vnleuended bread seuen dayes with ioye: for the Lord had made them glad, and turned the herte of the king of Assur vnto them, so that the handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

The. ix. Chapter.

By the commaundement of Artharxerses, Esdras is here ioyned companyon vnto the children of Israel, and recouereth to Jerusalem.

After these actes in the raigne of A Artharxerses kinge of Persia, 10. Esd. viij.
there went vp from Babilon, Es dras the sonne of Saraiah, the sonne of Asariah, the sonne of Helchiah, the sonne of Sellum, the sonne of Sa doc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Azariah, the sonne of Mara-ioth, the sonne of Zaruiah, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Bochi, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the chefe preest. This Esdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, Exo. 37.A
* whiche the Lord God of Israel dyd geue.
And the kinge gaue him al that he requireth accordynge to the hande of the Lord his God vpon him. And there went vp certayne of the children of Israel, & of the preestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yeare of kinge Artharxerses. And they came to Jerusalem in the fyfth moneth, that is the seuenth yeare of the kinge. For vpō the first daye of the first moneth, deuised he to go vp from Babylon: and on the fyfte daye of the fyfte moneth came he to Jerusalē, accordynge to the good hande of God vpon him. B
For Esdras prepared his hert to seke the law of the Lord, and to do it, and do teache the pu rest and iudgement in Israel.

And this is the copy of the letter, that kinge Artharxerses gaue vnto Esdras the preest, the scribe, whiche was a teacher in the wordes of the Lorde & of hys statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Esdras the preest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and salutacyon. I have commaunded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the preestes and Leuites in my reaulme

reaulme, whyche are mynded of their owne good wil to go vp to Jerusalem, that they go wyth the, beynge sent of the kynge and of the seuen Lordes of the counsel, to vysit Juda & Jerusalem, accordynge to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hand. And that thou shouldest take with the, syluer and gouldc, whiche the kinge & the Lordes of hys counsel geue of their owne good will vnto the God of Israel (whose habytacion is at Jerusalem) and all the syluer and gouldc that thou canst fynd in al the countre of Babilon, with it that the people and preestes geue of their owne good wil vnto the house of God at Jerusalem.

Take thou the same, and bye dylygently wyth the same money, calues, lambes, goates, & meatoffe rynges & drinckoffe rynges, to be offered vpon the aulter of the house of youre God at Jerusalem. And loke what it liketh the and thy brethren to do with the remnaunt of the money, & do after & wyl of youre God. And the vessels that are geuen the for the mynystracion in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thynge more shalbe nedeful for thy house of thy God, whych is necessary for the to fynde, let the same be geuen out of the kynges chäber. I kynge Artharerses haue commaunded al the treasurers beyõd the water, that loke whatsoeuer Esdras the preeste and scrybe in the lawe of the God of heauen requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same dylygently, vntyll an hundred talentes of syluer, vntil an hundred quarters of wheat and vntil an hundred Batthes of wyne, and vntil an hundred * Batthes of oyle, and salt wythoute measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the law of the God of heauen, let the same be done wyth dylygence for the house of the God of heauen, that there come no wrathe vpon the kynges reaulme and his children.

And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shal haue no auctorite to requyre tayenge and custome, & pearly rentes vpõ any of & preestes Leuites, singers, porters, Nethinims & mynysters in the house of thys good. But thou Esdras (after the wysedome of the God that is in thy hand) sit thou iudgers and arbiters to iudge all the people that is beyonde Jordan, euen all suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se, & ye teachers wholsoeuer wyll not dylygẽtly fulfyll the law of thy God, and the kynges law, shal haue his iudgemẽt for & dead whether it be vnto death or to be banished or to be condẽned in goodes, or to be put in prison.

1.Esd.viij.c * Blessed be the Lord God of our fathers which so had inspired the kinges hert to garnysh the house of God at Jerusalem: & hath inclined his mercy vnto me in the presence of the king, & his councelers, & before al the kinges hye estates. And I was coumforted (according to the hande of the Lorde my God ouer me, & so gathered I the heades of Israel together, that they might go vp with me.

The.viij.Chapter.

The noumbre of them that returned to Jerusalem with Esdras.

THese are the heades of their fathers that were named, whyche A wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kinge Artharerses raygned. Of the children 1.Esd.viij.a of Phinehes, Gersom: of the children of Ithamar, Daniel: of the children of David, Hatus: of the children of Zecaniah & of the children Pharos, Zacharye, & with him were noumbred an hundred and fyfty men. Of the children of Paharh Moab, Elioenai the soune of Zarahiah, and with them two hundred men. Of the children of Zethaniah, the soune of Jahaziel, and with hym thre hundred men. Of the children of Adin Abed the soune of Jonathan, and with hym fyfty men. Of the children of Elam, Jesaiah the soune of Athaliah, and wyth him seuenty men. Of the children of Saphatia, Zebadiah the soune of Michael and wyth hym foure score men.

Of the children of Joab, Obadiah & soune B
of Jehiel, and wyth hym two hundred and eyghtene men. Of the children of Selomith, the soune of Josphiah, and with hym an hundred and thre men.

Of the children of Bebai, Zacharye the soune of Bebai, and with hym eyght & twenty men. Of the children of Asgad, Johanan the soune of Hakatan, and with him an hundred and ten men. Of the last children of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Jehiel and Samaiah, and with them three score men. Of the children of Begui, Uthai, and Zabud and with them seuenty men. And I gathered them together by the water that runneth towarde Ahaua, and there abode we thre dayes. And when I loked amõg the people and the preestes, I found no Leuites there. C
Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semeiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zacharye, & Mosollam the rulers, and Joiarib and Elnathan the teachers, & these sent I vnto Edo the chefest at Casphia, that they should fetche vs mynysters for the house of oure God, and I tolde the that they should saye vnto Edo, and to hys brethren the Nethinims at Casphia.

And (accordyng to the good hande of our God vpon vs) they brought vs a wyse man from amonge the children of Moholi the soune of Leui the soune of Israel, euen Sarabia, with his sounes and brethren, eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with him Jesaiah of the children of Merari, wyth hys brethren and their D sounes, twenty. And of the Nethinims, whõ Dauid & the Princes gaue to mynister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twenty: all named by name.

And euen there at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a. fastynge to be proclamed, & a. Fastynge as the scripture maketh mẽ cõ haue bene we myght humble oure selues before oure God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, and oure children and all oure substaunce. For

I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, sonne dyers and horsemen, to helpe vs agaynst the kynge. The hande of oure God is vpon all them that seke him in goodnes, and his wyse sore wrathe vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought thys at oure

God, and he hearde vs.

And I toke out twelue of the chefe prye-stes, Sarabia and Hasabia, and ten of theyr brethren with them, and weyed them there the syluer and goulde and vessels for the hea-uenly offrynge vnto the house of our God, which the kynge and the Lordes of his counsell and all Israel that were at hande, had geuen to the heauenly offrynge: & there weyed them vnder their hand syx hundred & fyfty talentes of syluer, and an syluer vessel an hun dred talentes, & in gould an hundred talentes twentye cuppes of goulde of a thousande drammes, and two costly ornamentes of good bryght, as cleare as goulde, and sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the Lorde, therfore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer
and goulde that is geuen of a good will vnto
the Lorde God of your fathers: Watche ye therefore and kepe it tyll ye weye it downe before the chefe priestes and Leuites, and ancyent fathers of Israel at Jerusalē in the chabres of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the priestes and the Leuites that weyed syluer & goulde and vessel, to bringe it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God. So we brake vp frō the water of Ahaua on the twelueth day of the fyrst moneth, to go vnto Jerusalem: &
the hande of our God was vpon vs, and delyuered vs from the hande of the enemies & perey waytinges by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, & abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth day was the syluer and goulde and vessell weyed in the house of oure God
vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the preeste, and with him Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes, and with them Jesabad
the sonne of Jesua, and Noadiah the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, accordyng to the nōber & weight of euery one. And the weyght was all wryten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captyuyte, whyche were come out of prison, offered burntofferynges vnto the God of Israel: twelue bullockes for al Israel, syxe and nynetye rāmes, seuen and seuentye lambes, & twelue goates
for a synofferynge, al to the burntofferynge of the Lorde. And they delyuered the kynges commission vnto the kinges officers, and to the captaines on this side of the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The. 9. Chapter.

Ezras complayneth on the people that both married them selues from God, and medyed with the gentyles.

When all this was performed,
the rulers came to me, & sayde:
The people of Israel, and the preestes, & Leuites are not separated from the nations in the landes as thou-thynge they: abhomynacions, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptyans, and Amorites. * For they have taken the doughters of the same, and their sonnes, and have myxte the holy seade wyth the nacyons in the landes: and the hande of the rulers and rulers hath bene chefe in this trespace.

feared the worde of the Lorde God of Israel because of the greate transgression. And I sate mournynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifyce.
And about the euenynge sacrifyce I rose vp from my heavynes, & rente my clo-

and spred out my handes vnto the Lorde my

My God I am ashamed, and darre not wyckednesses are growne ouer our heade, & oure trespaces are waxen greate vnto the hea-

because of oure wyckednesses have we and oure kinges ben delyuered into the hād of the kynges of the nacyons, into the swerde, into captyuyte, into spoyle, and into confusion of face
as it is come to passe thys daye.

Deut.xxviii.

But now is there a lyttle and sodayne gra-tyousnes come from the Lord oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he may geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that oure God may lyghte oure eyes, and geue vs a lyttle life in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and oure God hath not forsaken vs in oure bondage, and hath enclined mercy vnto vs in the syght of the kinges of Persia, that he should geue vs lyfe, and promote the house of oure God, & to set vp the desolacyon therof, and to geue vs an hedge in Juda and Jerusalem.

And now O our God, what shall we say
after thys? for we have forsaken thy commaū dementes, whiche thou hast cōmaundyd by thy seruauntes the Prophetes, and sayde: The lande vnto whiche ye go to possesse, it is an vnclene land thorow the fylthynes of the people of the landes, in their abhominacyons, wherwyth they have made it ful of vnclenes
on euery syde. * Therfore shall ye not geue your doughters vnto their sonnes, and their doughters shal ye not take vnto your sonnes & seke not their peace & welthe for ever, that ye maye be stronge, and eniope the good in the lande, & that ye and youre chyldren may have the enheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all thys that is come vpon vs (because of oure euyll deades & greate tres-pace) thou our God hast spared oure wyckednesse, and hast geuen vs a delyueraunce
as it is come to passe thys daye.

The.x.Chapter

¶ The people repente them and turne, & put away their ſtraunge wyues.

A Nd when Eſdras prayed after this maner, & knowledge, wept & laye before the houſe of God, there reſorted vnto hym oute of Iſrael a very great congregacyon of men and wemen, & chyldren: for the people wepte very ſore. And Iechaniah the ſonne of Jehiel one of the chyldren of Elam, anſwered and ſayde vnto Eſdras: We haue treſpaced agaynſte the Lorde oure God, in that we haue taken ſtraunge wyues of all the people of the lãd. Now there is hope yet in Iſrael cõcernyng this therfore, let vs make a couenaũt nowe wyth our God, that we ſhall put away al the wyues (and ſuche as are borne of them) accordynge to the counſel of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, that we maye do accordyng to the law. Ryſe vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be wyth the, be of good cõforte, and do it.

B *Then roſe Eſdras, and toke an othe of the rulers, prieſtes and Leuites, & of all Iſrael, that they ſhulde do accordynge to this word: and they ſware. And Eſdras ſtode vp before the houſe of God, and wente into the chãber of Johanan the ſonne of Eliaſib. And when he came thyther, he ate no bread, nor dranke water: for he mourned becauſe of the tranſgreſſyon of them that had bene in captyuite.

Then all the men of Juda and Beniamin gathered themſelues together vnto Jeruſalẽ in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nynth month: and all the people ſate in ỹ ſtreete before the houſe of God, and trembled, becauſe of the matter, and for the rayne. And Eſdras the prieſte ſtode vp, and ſayde vnto them: Ye haue tranſgreſſed, that ye haue taken ſtraunge wyues, to make the treſpace of Iſrael yet more: confeſſe now therfore vnto ỹ Lorde God of your fathers, and do hys pleaſure, and ſeparate youre ſelues from the people of the lande, and from the ſtraunge wyues. Then anſwered all the congregacyon, and ſayde wyth a loude voyce: Let it be done as thou haſte ſayd. But the people are many, & it is a rayne wherby, and they can not ſtãd here wythout, neyther is this a worcke of one daye or two, for we are many that haue offended in thys tranſgreſſyon. Let vs appoynte oute rulers therfore in all the congregacyon, & all they which haue taken ſtraunge wyues in oure cytyes, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the elders of euery cyty & they iudges wyth them, tyll the wrath of our God be turned awaye from vs for thys offence.

Then were appoynted Jonathan ỹ ſonne C of Aſahel and Jahaſia the ſonne of Thekuah oure thys matter. And Moſollam and Sabathai the Leuites holpe them. And the chyldren of the captiuite dyd euen ſo. And Eſdras the prieſt and the auncyent heades throwe the houſe of their fathers, and all that were now rehearſed by name, ſeparated them ſelues, and ſate them doune on the fyrſt daye of the tenth moneth to examen thys matter. The.ij. Chapter.

¶ After Nehemiah had obtayned letters of Arthaxerxes he cometh to Jerusalem, & buyldeth the walles.

IN the moneth Nisan in the twē A tieth yeare of kynge Artharterxes, when the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne, & gaue
it vnto the kynge & I was heauy
in his presence. Then sayd the kyng vnto me:
why lokest thou so sadly? Thou arte not sick, that is not the matter, but thou arte heuy hert-
ted. Therefore I was sore afrayed & sayde vnto the kynge: God saue the kynges hyse for euer, shulde I not loke sadly: the cytye of my fathers buryall lyeth waste & the gates thereof are consumed with fyre. Then sayde the kyng vnto me: what is then thy requeste? then made I my prayer to the God of heauen, and sayde vnto the king: yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruaunte be fauoured in thy syghte, I be seche the sende me into Juda vnto the cytye
of my fathers buriall, that I maye buylde it.

And the kynge sayde vnto me, & so dyd the B
quene that sat by him: how long shal thy iour
ney continue, & when wylt thou come againe?
And it pleased the kinge to sende me, and I set him a tyme, and sayde vnto the kynge: yf it please the kynge, let him geue me letters to captaynes beyond the water, that they may conueye me ouer, tyll I come into Juda: & let ters vnto Asaph the Lord of the kynges wood that he may geue me wood for beames to the gates of the palace, which are hard on the house and harde on the walles of the cite, and for the house that I shall entre into. And the kynge gaue me accordynge to the good hand of God
vpon me: And when I came to the captaynes beyond the water, I gaue them the kynges letters. And the kyng sent captaynes and horsmen with me.

But when Sanballat the Horonite and C Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites heard it, it greued them sore, that there was come a mā which sought the welth of the children of Is rael. And when I came to Jerusalem, & had bene there three dayes, I gat me vp in the nyght season, & a fewe men with me: for I told no man what God had grue me in my hert to do at Jerusalem: and there was not one beast to me, saue it that I rode vpon. And I rode by nyght vnto the baley porte before the Dragon well, and to the Donge porte, and consy dered the walles of Jerusalē that were broke doure, and the postes thereof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the welposte, and to the hynges conduyte, & there was no roume for my beaste, that it coulde go vnder me. Then went I an in the vpghte by the broke fyde, & considered the wall, and turned backe and came home agayne to the valeye poste.

And the rulers knewe not whether I went or what I dyde, or other to had I not told the Jewes & the prestes, & the connceilers and the rulers, & the other that laboured in the worke. And I spake vnto them: ye se the myserye that we are in, how Jerusalem lyeth waste, & how the gates thereof are burnte with fyre, come let vs buylde vp the walles of Jerusalem, that we be no more a rebuke. And I tolde them of the good hande of my God whiche was vpo me: and the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayde: lette vs gette vp, and buylde: and their handes were strength ted to good.

But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunte of the Ammonites, and Gesem the Arabian hearde it, they laughed vs to skorne, and despysed vs, & sayde: what is thy that ye do? Wyll ye fall away agayne from the kynge? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen he it is that causeth vs to prospere: and we be his seruaunts. Let vs get vp and buylde. As for you, ye haue no parcyon nor ryghte nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

The.iiij. Chapter.

1 ❧ The buildyng of Ierusalem is hyndred a lyt, but the Iewes burde it dyligẽtly ready harnesshed for their enemyes shulde inuade them.

BVt when Sanabalat heard that we buylded the wall, he was wroth, and tooke great indignacion and mocked the Iewes, and sayde before hys brethren, and the hoste of Samaria: what do the impotente Iewes? shall they be thus suffered? shall they offre? shal they perfourme it in one daye? shal they make ỹ stones whole agayn ỹ are broughte to dust, & beit? And Tobiah ỹ Ammonite besyde hi sayde: let shē buyld on, yf a fore go vp he shall breake doune theyr stoupe wall. Heare O thou oure God, howe we are despysed, turne theyr shame vpon theyr owne heade, ỹ thou mayest geue them ouer into despysynge in the land of theyr captyuite. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not oute theyr synne frō thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the wall, and ioyned it whole together, vnto the halfe heyght. And ỹ people were well mynded to laboure.

B But when Sanabalat, and Tobiah, & the Arabians, and Ammonites, and Asdodites heard that the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begōne to stoppe vp the gappes they were verye wroth, and conspired all together to come & fyghte agaynste Ierusalem, and to make an hinderaunce there in. Neuertheles we made our prayer vnto our God, and set watchemen vpon the wall daye & nyght ouer against them. And Juda sayde: the strength of the beasters is to feble, & there is to muche dulte, we are not able to buylde on the wall. And oure aduersaryes thoughte: they shall not knowe nether se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, and slaye them and hynder the worke. But when the Iewes that dwelt besyde them, came out of all the places where they dwelt about vs, and tolde vs as good as ten tymes, then set I the people after their kynredes with their swerdes, speares and bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall, and loked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chefe men and rulers, & to the other people: be not ye afrayed of shē * thinke vpon the greate Lord, which ought to be feared and fyghte for youre brethren, sonnes, doughters, wyues, and houses. Neuertheles when oure enemyes hearde that we had gotten worde of it, God broughte their councell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall, euery one vnto his laboure. And from that tyme forth it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the younge men dyd the laboure, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whyche buylded on the wall, and bare burthens, frō those that laded them. Wyth one hande dyd they the worke, and wyth the other held they their weapen. And euery one that buylded, had hys swerde gyrde by hys syde, and so buylded they. And the trompetters stode besyde me.

C And I sayde vnto the principall men, and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is greate and large, and we are separated vpon the wall one farre frō another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resorte ye thether vnto vs. * Oure God shall fyght for vs, and we wyll be labouring in the worke. And the halfe parte of them helde the speares from the morninge spринge, tyll the starres came forth. And at the same time sayde I vnto the people: euery one abyde wyth hys seruaunt at Ierusalem, that in the nyght season we maye geue attendaunce to the watche, and to laboure on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethren, and my seruauntes, and the men of the watche behynde me, we put neuer of oure clothes, so muche as to washe oure selues.

Exo. xiiij.A.

The.v. Chapter.

The people are vexed with hunger. Nehemiah forbiddeth vsurye. He requyred not the reuenge of a captyuite.

A MOre there arose a greate complaynte of the people, and of their wyues against their brethren the Iewes. And there were some that sayde: oure sonnes and doughters are to many, let vs take some for them and eate, that we maye lyue. Some sayde: let vs set oure landes, vyneyardes and houses to pledge, and take vp some in the darth. But some sayde: let vs borowe money of the kynges tribute for oure landes and vyneyardes. Now are oure brethren bodyes as oure owne bodyes and their children as our children: & lo we subdue oure sonnes and doughters vnto bondage, & some of oure doughters are subdued alreadye, * and no strength is there in oure handes, and other men shall haue oure landes and vyneyardes.

* After the Hebrue sorte reader: we haue not wherwith to redeme thē.

B But when I hearde their complaynte and such wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduysed so in my mynde, that I rebuked ỹ counsellers, and the rulers, and sayde vnto them: * wyll ye requyre vsury one of another? And I brought a greate congregacion against thē and sayde vnto them: we (after oure ability) haue bought oure brethren the Iewes, which were were solde vnto the heythen. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whom we haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Oughte ye not to walche in the feare of God C because of the rebuke of the heythen oure enemyes? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes haue lente them money and corne: but as for vsury, let vs leaue it. Therfore thys same day se that ye restore them their landes agayne, their vyneardes, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundred part of the money of the corne, wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of the. Then sayde they: we wyll restore the agayne and wyll require nothynge of them, and wyl do as thou haste spoken. And I called the pryestes, and toke an othe of them, that they shuld do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayde: God shake oute euerye man after the same maner from hys house and laboure, that maynteyneth not thys worde: euen thus be he shaken oute, and voyde. And all the congregacyon sayde: Amen, and praysed the Lorde. And the people dyd so.

And from the tyme forth that it was commytted vnto me to be a captayne in the lande of Juda, namely from the twentyeth yeare vnto the two and thyrtyeth yeare of kynge Artharzerxes (that is twelue yeare) I and my brethren lyued not of suche sustenaunce as was geuen to a captayne. For the olde captaynes that were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had take of them bread and wyne, and fourtye syckes of syluer: yea and their seruauntes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lande. And all my seruauntes came thyther together vnto the worke. Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyftye of the Jewes and rulers, whyche came vnto me, from among the heythen, that are about vs. And there was prepared me daylye an oxe, and syxe chosen sheepe, and byrdes, and euer once in ten dayes a greate store of wyne. Yet required not I the lyuynge of a captayne for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thynke vpon me my God vnto the best, accordynge to all that I haue done for thys people.

A Nd when Sanabalat, Tobiah and Gesem the Arabian, and the other of our enemyes hearde that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no mo gappes therein) howbeit at the same time had I not hanged the doores vpon the gates) Sanabalat & Gesem sent vnto me, sayinge: come, and let vs mete together * in the * Alter, gr. Jn Ephari. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euyll. Notwythstandynge I sente messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I can not come doune. The worke shuld stande styll, yf I were negligent, and came doune to you. How be it they sente vnto me as good as iiij. times after the same maner. And I gaue them same answere. Then sent Sanabalat hys seruaunt vnto me the fyfth tyme, wyth an open letter in hys hande, wherein was wrytten: It is tolde the heythen, and Gesem hath sayd it, that thou and the Jewes thynke to rebell: for which cause thou buyldest the wall, & wylte be their kynge in these matters, and haste ordeyned the Prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalem, and to saye: he is kynge of Juda.

Now shall this come to the kynges eares: come now therfore, & let vs take oure counsell together. Neuertheles I sente vnto him sayinge: there is no such thyng done as thou sayest: thou haste fayned it oute of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayed and thoughte: they shall withdrawe their handes from the worke, that they shall not labourre. Howbeit I strengthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semaiah the sonne of Delaiah the sonne of Mehetabeel, and he had shut hym selfe within, & sayde: let vs come together into the house of God, euen vnto the myddes of the temple, & shut the doores of the temple: for they wyll come to slaye the, yea euen in the nyght wil they come to put the to death. But I sayde: shulde any suche man as I flye? Who is that, beyng as I am, that wyll go into the temple, to saue hys lyfe? I wyll not go in.

For I perceyued, that God had not sente hym: Yet spake he prophesye vpon me, neuertheles Tobiah & Sanabalat had hyred hym for money. Therfore toke he the money, that D thoughe feare I shulde so do, and synne: that they myght haue an euyl reporte of me, to blaspheme me. The.viii. Chapter.

Esdras gathered together the people & readeth to them the lawe. They kepe the feaste of tabernacles 8 bothes.

NOwe when the seuen moneth came nye, and the children of Israel were in their cytyes, all the people gathered themselues together as one man vpon the strete before the Watergate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moses, whiche the Lorde commaunded to Israell. And Esdras the Priest brought the lawe before the congregacion both of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande, vpon the fyrste daye of the seuenthe moneth, and red therein in the strete that is before the watergate (from the morninge vntyll the noone daye before men and women, and suche as coulde vnderstande it: and the eares of all the people were inclined vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scribe stode vpon an hye pulpyte of woode, whiche they had made for the preachyng, and beside hym stode Mathathiah, Sema, Anaiah, Vriah, Helkiah, and Maaseiah, on hys right hande: and on hys lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Hasum, Hasbadanah, Zacharye and Mosolam.

And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode above all the people. And whe he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras praysed the Lorde the greate God. And all the people answered Amen, Amen, with their hãdes vp, & bowed them selues, & worshipped the Lorde with their faces to the grounde. And Iesus, Bani, Serabiah, Jamin, Acuba, Sebathai, Hodaiah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabed, Hanã, Phalaiah, and the Leuites, caused ỹ people to geue hede vnto the law, ỹ people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly & plainly, so the mẽ vnderstode the thinge that was red. And Nehemiah (whyche is Hatherlatha) & Esdras the priest and scribe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holy vnto the Lord youre God: be not ye sory therfore, & wepe not. For all the people wepte when they hearde the wordes of the lawe.

Therfore sayde he vnto them: go youre waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete, and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues: for this daye is holye vnto our Lorde, be not ye sory therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is youre strength. And the Leuites stilled all the people, and sayde: holde youre peace for the daye is holye, vexe not ye youre selues. And all the people wente their waye to eate and drynke, and to sende parte vnto other, and to make great myrth, because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the chefe fathers amõge all the people and the priestes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde teach them the wordes of the lawe. And they founde written in the lawe, how that the Lorde had commaunded by Moses that the children of Israel shulde dwell in bothes in the feaste of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaimed in all their cytyes, and at Jerusalem, sayinge: go vp vnto the mount and fetche Olyue braunches, Pynebraunches, Myrtebraunches, Palmebraunches, & braunches of thicke trees, to make bothes as it is wrytten.

And the people wente vp, and fet them, & made them bothes, euerye one vpon the rofe of hys house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of GOD, and in ỹ strete by the Watergate, and in the strete by youre Ephraim. And all the congregacion of them that were come agayne out of the captyuyte, made bothes, and dwelte therein: for sence the tyme of Iosua the sonne of Nun vnto thys daye, had not the children of Israell done so, and there was verye greate gladnesse. And euerye daye from the fyrste daye vnto the laste, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feaste, & on the eyghte daye of the gatheryng together, according vnto the maner.

The.ix. Chapter.

The people repent & confesse their synnes. Esdras rehearseth the benefytes of God, and the synnes of the people.

And the Leuytes stode on hye, namely Jesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabaniah, Bani, Serebiah, Bani ꝑ Chanani, ꝑ cryed loude vnto the Lorde theyr God. And the Leuites, Jesua, Cadmiel Bani, Galabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebamah, Phathahiah, sayde: Stande vp, people the Lorde youre God for ever, ꝑ let thankes be geuen vnto the name of thy glorye, which excelleth all thankesgeuing ꝑ prayse. Lorde, thou alone hast made heauē, ꝑ the heauen of al heauens, with all theyr host the earth ꝑ all that is therein, the sea and all ꝑ is therein: thou geuest lyfe vnto all, ꝑ the host of heauen bowe them selues vnto the. Thou arte the Lorde God, thou hast chosen Abram, ꝑ broughtest hym out of * Ur in Chaldea, * ꝑ calledst hym Abraham, ꝑ foundest hys herte faythfull before the, * ꝑ madest a couenaunte with hym, to geue vnto hys sede the lande of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pherezites, Jebusites ꝑ Gergesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou arte ryghteous, * ꝑ hast considered the mysery of oure fathers in Egypte, ꝑ hearde theyr complaynte by the read sea, ꝑ shewed tokens and wonders vpon Pharao, ꝑ on all hys seruauntes, and on al ꝑ people of hys land: for thou knewest that they were presumptuous ꝑ cruell agaynst them, ꝑ so madest thou the a name as it is this daye. And the reed sea dyddest thou deuyde in sunder before them, so that they went thorowe ꝑ myddes of the sea drye shode: and theyr persecutors threwest thou into the depe as a stone, in the myghtye waters, and leddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudy pyller, and on the nyghte season in a pyller of fyre, to shew them lyghte in the waye that they went.

* Some read them.

* Thou camest doune also vpon mount Sinai, and spakest vnto them from heauen, and gauest them ryght iudgementes, true lawes good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredest vnto them thy holye Sabboth, ꝑ commaundedst them precepts, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaunt: and * gauest them breade from heauen when they were hongrye, and * broughtest forthe water for them out of the rock when they were thyrstye: and promysedest them, that they shulde go in, and take possession of the lande, ouer whiche thou haddest lyfte vp thyne hande for to geue them.

But oure fathers were proude and hardenecked, so that they folowed not the commaundementes, and refused to hearc, and were not myndefull of the wonders that thou dyddest for them: but became obstynate ꝑ headye, in so muche that they turned backe to theyr bondage in theyr disobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracyous, mercyfull, patyente, and of greate goodnesse, and forsokest them not. * And though he they made a moulte calfe (and sayde: Thys is thy God, ꝑ broughte the oute of the lande of Egypte) ꝑ dyd greate blasphemyes, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernes, accordynge to thy great mercye. And the cloudye pyller departed not frō them on the daye tyme to leade them the waye neyther the pyller of fyre in the nyghte season, to shewe them lyghte in the waye that they wente.

And thou gauest them thy good spyrte to enfourme them, * ꝑ withheldest not thy Manna from theyr mouthe, * and gauest them water when they were thyrstye. Fourtye yeares longe madest thou prouysyon for them in the wyldernesse, so that they lacked nothynge: ꝑ theyr clothes waxed not olde, and theyr fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngedomes and nacyons, and partedest them accordynge to theyr coostes, so that they possessed * the lande of Sehon kynge of Hesebon, and the lande of Og the kynge of Basan. And theyr chyldren multyplyedst thou as the starres of heauen, and broughtest them into the lande whereof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they shulde go into it, and haue it in possessyon.

And the chyldren went in, and possessed ꝑ lande, * and thou subduedst before them the inhabyters of the lande, euen the Cananites, ꝑ gauest them into theyr hande, ꝑ theyr kynges and the people of the lande, that they myghte do with the what they wolde. And they wanne theyr stronge cytyes, ꝑ a fat a. lande, and tooke possessyon of houses that were ful of al maner goodes, welles digged oute, vynyardes, oyle gardens, and many frutefull trees: ꝑ they ate ꝑ were spylled, ꝑ became fat, and lyued in welthe thorowe thy great goodnesse. Neuerthelesse they were disobedient, ꝑ rebelled agaynst the, and caste thy lawe behynde their backes, and slewe thy Prophetes (which exhorted them to earnestlye, that they shulde conuerte vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemyes. Therfore gauest thou them ouer into the hande of theyr enemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble they cried vnto the, and thou hardest them from heauen and thorowe thy greate mercye thou gauest them .b. sauyours, which helped them oute of the hande of theyr enemyes. But when they came to reste, they turned backe agayne to do euyll before the: therefore lefteste thou them in the hande of theyr enemyes, so that they had the dominyon ouer them. So they conuerted, and cryed vnto the, and thou hardeste them from heauen, and many tymes hast thou delyuered them accordynge to thy greate mercye, and testyfyest vnto them, that they should turne agayne vnto thy lawe.

Notwythstandyng they were proude, and herkened not vnto thy commaundementes, but

Therfore gauest thou them in to the hande of the nacyons in the landes. *Nowe oure God, thou great God, mighty and terrible, that thou kepest couenaunte and mercy, regarde not a lyte of the trauaile that hath happened vnto vs, and oure kynges rulers, preestes, prophetes, fathers and all thy people, sence the tyme of the kynges of Assur vnto thys daye. Thou arte rygh teous in all that thou hast brought vpon vs, for thou hast done ryght. Beholde, therfore are we in bondage thys daye: yea euen in the lande that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the frutes and goodes thereof, beholde there are we bondemen. And greate is the increase of it vnto the kynges, whome thou hast set ouer vs because of oure synnes, and they haue dompnyon ouer oure bodyes and cattell, and we are in great trouble. And Bakbukiah the seconde amõge hys brethren, and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Jdithum. All the Leuites in the holye cyte were two hundreth and foure and foure score. 1.Par.22

D And the porters Accub and Talmõ and their brethren that kepte the portes, were an hundreth and two and seuentye. As for the residue of Israel, the priestes and Leuites, they were in all the cytyes of Juda, euery one in hys inheritaunce.

And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Ziha and Gaspha belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouerseer of the Leuites at Jerusalem, was Vsi the sonne of Bani, the sonne of Hasabiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Micha.

Of the chyldren of Asaph there were syngers aboute the busynes in the house of God: D for it was the kynges commaundemente concernyng them, that the syngers shulde deale kaythfullye euery daye as nede: dyrge was.

And Pathaiah the sonne of Meselabel of the chyldren of Zarah the sonne of Juda were the kynge in all matters concernyng the people and their busynes, throughoute all their regyons. The.xii. Chapter.

¶ The priestes & Leuites which came with Zorobabel to Jerusalem, are nombred, & the wall is dedicate.

T Hese are the priestes & Leuites that wente vp with Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiell & with Jesua: Saraiah, Jeremye, Esdras, Amariah, Melluth, Hatus Sechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth, Ado, Genthoi, Abiah, Miamin, Maadiah, Bilgah, Semaiah, Joiarib, Jadaiah, Sallu, Amok, Helkiah and Jadaiah. These were the heades amonge the priestes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites were these: Jesua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juda and Mathaniah ouer the offyce of thanksgyuyng helgrupng, they and their brethren: Bachbuiah and Uni and their brethren, were about them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these the chefe fathers amonge the prieſtes: vnder Saraiah Maraiah, vnder Jeremy Hananiah, vnder Esdras Mosolam, vnder Amariah Jehohanan, vnder Melico Jonathan, vnder Sebaniah Joseph, vnder Harim Edna, vnder Maraioth Helcai, vnder Adia Zachari, vnder Genthon Mosolam, vnder Abia Zechri, vnder Miniamin & Moadia Peltai, vnder Belgah Samua, vnder Semeiah Jehonathan, vnder Joiarib Mathnai, vnder Jadaiah Uſſi, vnder Sellai Kallai, vnder Amok Eber, vnder Helchiah Hasabiah, vnder Jadaiah Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Johanan & Jadua were the chefe fathers amonge the Leuites, and the prieſtes written vnder ye rayne of Darius the Perſian. The chyldren of Leui the princypall fathers were written in the Cronycles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathā the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amonge the Leuites, Hasabiah, Serebiah and Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brethre ouer agaynſte them, to geue prayſe and thanks, according as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer agaynſt another. Mathania, Balbukiah, Obadiah, Mosolam, Talmon and Akub were porters in ye watche at the thresholdes of the gates. These were in the tyme of Joiakim the sonne of Jesuas sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemiah the captayne and of the prieſte Esdras the scribe.

And in the dedycacyon of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Leuites sought oute of all their places, that they myghte be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedycacyon and gladneſſe, with thankesgeuynges, with synging with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes. And the chyldren of the syngers gathered themselues together from the playne countrey aboute Jerusalem, and from the villages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Galgal, and out of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for the syngers had buylded them villages aboute Jerusalem. And the prieſtes and Leuites purgyed them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the princes of Juda to go vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queres of thankesgeuynge, whiche went on the ryghte hande of the wall towarde ye Dūg gate, and after them went Osaiah, and half of the princes of Juda, & Azaria, Esdras, Mosolam Juda, Beniamin, Semeiah and Jeremy, and certayne of the prieſtes chyldre with trompetes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathā, the sonne of Semeiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, the sonne of Zecur, the sonne of Asaph, and hys brethren, Semaiah, Asarael, Mesalai, Galalai, Maai Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the musicall instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

And Esdras the Scribe before them, towarde the welgate, and they went vp ouer agaynſte them vpon the steppes of the cyte of Dauid at the gopnge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of thankesgeuynge went ouer agaynſte them, and I after them, & the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, towarde the Fornargate vpwarde, vntyll the brode wall, and to the gate of Ephraim, and to the oldegate, and to the Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyll the sheepgate. And in the prysongate stode they styll, and so stode the two queres of thankesgeuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prieſtes, namelye Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zacharye, Hananiah with trompettes, and Mathiah Semeiah, Eleasar, Uſſi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ezer. And the syngers sang loud & Jesrahiah was the ouerseer.

And the same daye were there greate sacrifices offered, and they reioyſed: for God had geuen them greate gladneſſe, so that both the wyues & chyldren were reioyſull, & the myrthe of Jerusalem was hearde farre of.

At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure chestes (wherein were ye heaue offerynges, the fyrſte fruytes and the tythes) that they shulde gather them oute of the feldes aboute the cytyes, to destrybute them vnto the prieſtes and Leuites accordynge to ye lawe: for Juda was glad of the prieſtes, and Leuites, that they stode and waited vpon the office of their God, and the office of the purificacion. And the singers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon hys sonne: * for in the tyme of Dauid and Asaph, were the chefe syngers founde, and the songes of prayſe and thankesgeuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemiah, dyd all Israel geue portyons vnto the syngers and porters, euerye daye his portyon, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thynges that were sanctyfyed, vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

On what tyme as the boke of Moyſes was read in the eares of the people there was found wrytten therein, * that the Ammonytes and Moabites shulde neuer come into the congregacyon of God, because they met not the chyldre of Israel with breade and water, * and hyred Balaam agaynſte them, that he shulde curse them: neuertheleſſe oure GOD turned the curse into a blessynge. Nowe when they hearde the lawe, they separated from Israell euerye one þ had myxte hym selfe therewith. And before this had the preste Eliasib delyuered the chelle of the house of oure God vnto hys kynsman Tobiah: for he had made hym a greate chelle, and there had they afore tyme layed the meatoffe-rynges, frankensence vessel, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (according to the commaundement geuen to the Leuytes, syngers & porters) and the heaueoffrynges of the preistes.

But in all thys was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thyrtyeth yeare of Artharxerses kynge of Babilon, came I vnto þ kyng, and after certayne dayes obtayned I leaue of the kyng to come to Jerusalem. And I gat D knowledge of the euyll that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah, in that he had made hym a chest in þ courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forthe all the vessels of þ house of Tobiah out of the chest, and commaunded them to clense the chestes. And thyther broughte I agayn the vessels of the house of God, the meatoffrynge and the incense.

And I perceyued, that the portyons of the Leuytes were not geuen them, for the whiche cause the Leuytes & syngers were fled, euerye one to hys lande for to worche. Then reproued I the rulers, and sayde: why forsake we the house of God. But I gathered them together & set them in theyr place. Then broughte all Juda the thythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto þ treasure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preste, and Zadoc þ scribe, and of the Leuytes Phadaiah: vnder theyr hande Hanan the sonne of Zacur þ sonne of Mathaniah: for they were counted faythfull, and theyr office was to dystrybute vnto theyr brethren. *Thynche vpon me O my God herein, and wype not oute my mercye, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers thereof.

At the same tyme sawe I some treadynge wynepressen on the Saboth, and bryngynge in clusters, and all sortes laden with wyne, grapes, figges, and bryngynge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabothday. And I rebuked them in earnest in the same daye that they solde the vytayles. There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, whiche brought fysshe & all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the children of Juda, and Jerusalē. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto them: what euyll thynge is thys that ye do, & breake the Sabothday? Dyd not our fathers euen thus, and oure GOD brought all thys plage vpon vs & vpon thys cytye? And ye make the wrathe more yet vpon Israel, in that ye breake the Saboth.

And it fortuned, that when* the posterne of Jerusalē made shadowe before the Sabothe, I commaunded to shut the gates, & charged, þ they shulde not be opened tyll after þ Sabothe & some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, þ here shulde no burthen be broughte in on the Sabothday. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes ouer all tymes ouer nyghte wythoute Jerusalem wyth all maner of ware. Then reproued I them sore, and sayd vnto them: why tarye ye all nyghte aboute the wall? If ye do it ones agayne, I will lay handes vpon you. From that tyme forthe came they no more on the Sabothe. And I sayde vnto the Leuytes whiche were clene, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabothday. Thynke vpon me (O my God concernynge this also, and spare me accordyng to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I Jewes, that maryed wyues of Asdod, Ammō & of Moab, and theyr children spake halfe in the speache of Asdod, and could not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge myghte a mā perceyue euerye people. And I reproued them, & cursed them, and smote certayne men of them, and pluckte them vp, and toke an othe of the by God: Ye shall not geue youre doughters vnto theyr sonnes, neyther shal ye take theyr doughters vnto youre sonnes, or for your selues. Dyd not Salomō þ kyng of Israel synne there in? & yet amōg many kynges was there no kynge lyke hym, and he was deare vnto hys God, and God made hym kynge ouer all Israel, and yet neuertheles outlandyshe wemen caused hym to synne? And shall we then obeye vnto you, to do all thys greate euyll, & to transgresse agaynst oure God, and marye straunge wyues?

And one of the children of Jehoiada the sonne of Eliasib the hye preest, had made a cōtracte wyth Sanaballat the Horonite: but I chased hym from me. O my God, thynke thou vpon them that are gylty of the preesthode, & haue defyled the couenaunte of the preesthode and of the Leuytes. Thus clensed I them frō all suche as were outlandyshe, and appointed the courses of the preestes and Leuytes, euerye one to hys office, and to offre the wood at tymes appoynted, & the fyrste fruytes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the beste.

The first Chapter.

The kynge Ahasuerus, whiche is called Pertaxerxes maketh a royall feaste, wherunto the quene Vasthi will not come: for whiche cause she is deposed.

IN the tyme of Ahasuerus which raygned frō India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred & seuē and twentye landes, what tyme as he sate on hys seate royall in ỹ castell of Susan in the thyrde yeare of hys raygne, he made a feaste vnto all his princes and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Persia and Media, to the captaynes and rulers of hys countreys that he might shewe the noble riches of hys kyngdome, and the glorious worshippe of his greatnesse, many dayes longe, euen an hundreth and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were expired, the kynge made a feaste vnto all the people that were in the castel of Susan, bothe vnto great and small, seuen dayes longe in the courte of B the garden by the kynges palace, were there hanged white, gred and yalowe clothes, fastened with cordes of lynnen and scarlet in siluer rynges, vpon pilers of Marble stone.

The benches were of goulde and siluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, yalow, and black Marble. And the drynke was caried in vessels of goulde, & there was euer chaunge of vessell. And the kynges wine was moche accordynge to the power of the kynge. And no man was appoynted what he should drynke: for the kynge hath commaunded all ỹ officers of his house, that euery one should do as it liked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feaste also for the wemen in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kynge was merye of the wine, he commaunded Mehuman, Baztha, Harbona, Bagatha, C Abagatha, Zethar & Carcas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd seruice in the presence of kyng Ahasuerus) to fetche ỹ quene Vasthi, with the crowne regal, that he might shewe the people and princes her fayrenesse: for she was bewtiful. But the quene Vasthi would not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kinge very wroth, and his indignacion kindled in him.

And the kyng spake to the wyse men ỹ hath vnderstandyng in the ordynaunces of the lāde for the kynges matters must be handled before all suche as haue knowlege of the lawe and iudgement: and the nexte vnto hym were Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Ha- D res, Marsena and Mamucan, the seuen princes of ỹ Persians, and Medes, which sawe the kynges face, and sat about in the kingedō. What lawe should be executed vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordynge to ỹ worde of the kynge by his chamberlaynes. Then sayde Mamucan before the kynge and the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not onely done euyl agayll the kinge but also agaynst all the princes and all the people in all ỹ landes of kyng Ahasuerus, for this deed of the quene shal come abroad vnto all the wemen, so that they shall despise their husbandes before their eyes, and shall saye: the kyng Ahasuerus commaunded Vasthi the quene to come before him, but she would not. And so shall the princesses in Persia and Media saye likewyse vnto all the kynges princes, when they heare of this deede of the quene, thus shal there aryse despytefulnes and wrath ynough. Yf it please the kynge, let there go a commaundement frō him, and let it be written accordynge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before the kynge Ahasuerus, and let the kyng geue the kyngedome vnto another that is better then she.

And that this writtynge of the kyng which shalbe made, be publyshed throwe out all his empyre (whiche is greate) that all wyues maye honour their husbandes in honour, both amonge greate and small.

This pleased the kinge and the princes, and the kynge dyd accordynge to the worde of Mamucan. Then were there letters sent forthe in all the kynges landes, vnto euery lande, accordynge to the writtinge therof, & to euery people after their language, that euery man should be lord in his own house. And this caused he be spoken after the language of hys people.

The .ii. Chapter.

After the quene put awaye, certayne goodly young damosilles are sought out. Edyssa otherwyse called Esther, placed in the kynges, and in stede quene. Mardocheus vncurseth vnto the kyng vnder that would betraye him.

After these tymes whē the displeasure of kyng Ahasuerus was layed, he thought vpon A Vasthi, what she had done, and what was concluded ag̃ her.

Then sayd the kynges seruauntes: Let there be sought yong virgins faughter for the kyng, and let the kyng appoynte ouerseers in all the landes of hys empyre, that they maye gather together all fayre younge virgins vnto the castell of Susan to the wemens howsedyrge, vnder the hād of Hege the kynges chamberlayne, that keepeth the Wemen, and let hym geue them their apparell. And lohe whiche damosell pleaseth the kyng, let her be quene in Vasthis stede. This pleaseth the kyng, and he dyd so.

In the castel of Susan there was a Iewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of

Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cis the sonne of Jemini, whyche was caryed awaye from Jerusalem, * when Jehoiakim the kinge
4.Reg.xxiiij.c of Juda was led awaye (whom Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon caryed awaye, and he norysshed Hadasah (that is Esther) hys vncles doughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and she was a fayre and beutiful Damosel. And when her father and mother dyed, Mardocheus reteyned her as hys owne doughter.

Now when the kynges commaundement and commission was publyshed, and many
B Damoselles were broughte together vnto ỹ castell Susan, vnder the hande of Gagei, Esther was taken also vnto the kinges house vnder the hand of Gagei the keper of the wemen, and the damosel pleased him, & she found grace in hys syghte. And he caused her ornament to be geuen her, and her gyftes, & gaue her seuen notable gentyl wemen of the kynges house, and arayed bothe her and her gentyll wemen very richely in the house of ỹ wemen. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her that she shoulde no tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before the courte of the wemens buyldynge, that he myghte knowe howe Esther dyd, and what shoulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damosell came that she shoulde come to the kynge Assuerus, after ỹ she had ben twelue monethes in the dechynge of the wemen (for their dechynge must haue so muche tyme, namely sixe monethes with Balme & Myrre, & syxe Monethes with good spices, so were the wemen beutyfyed) then wente one damosell vnto the kinge, and whatsoeuer she required, that must be geuen her to go with her out of the wemens buyldyng vnto the kinges palace. And when one come in the euenynge,
C that same went from hym on the morowe into the seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saasgas the kynges chamberlain, whyche kepte the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kynge no more, excepte it pleased the kynge, and that he called her to be called by name.

Now when the tyme came of Esther the doughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (whō he had reteyned as hys owne doughter) that she shoulde come to the kyng, she desyred nothynge but what Gagei the kinges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen layde.

And Esther founde fauoure in the syghte of all them that loked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto kynge Assuerus into the house royall, in the tenth moneth whyche is called Tebeth, in the seuenth yeare of hys raygne.

And the kinge loued Esther aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his syghte before all the virgins: and he sette the quenes crowne vpon her heade, and made her quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kinge made a great feaste vnto all hys princes and
D seruauntes (whyche feaste was because of Esther) and let the landes be in quyetnes, & gaue royall gyftes.

And when the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kinges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred & her people, according as Mardocheus had bidden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, like as whē he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kinges chamberlaynes Bagathan and Thares whiche kepte the dore, were wroth, & sought to laye their handes on the kynge Assuerus: wherof Mardocheus gat knowelege, & tolde it vnto quene Esther, & Esther certyfyed the kinge therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquisicion was made, it was founde so. And they were bothe hanged on tre: and it was written in the Chronycles before the kinge.

The.iij. Chapter.

Aman the Agagite, after he was exalted, obtayned of the kyng that all the Jewes shoulde be put to death, because Mardocheus had not done hym lyke honour as other had.

After these actes dyd the kynge promote Haman ỹ
E sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, and set hym hye, & set hys seate aboue all the princes that were vnder hym. And all the kinges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, & dyd reuerence vnto Haman: for the kinge had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whyche were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: why trāsgressest thou the kynges commaundement? And when they spake thus dayly vnto him, & he folowed them not, they tolde Haman, that they might se whether Mardocheus maners
F would endure: for he had tolde them, that he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacyon and thought it to lyttell to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed hym the nacyon of Mardocheus, but he soughte to destroye all the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in the whole empyre of Assuerus.

In the fyrste moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the twelueth yeare of kynge Assuerus they cast Phur (that is a lot) before Haman, on what day & what moneth this shoulde be done: & it went oute the twelueth moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kyng Assuerus: There is a people scattered abroade & dispersed amonge all people
G in all the landes of thyne empire, & their lawe is contrary vnto all people, & they do not after the kynges lawes, neither is it the kinges pro-

set to suffre the after this maner. Yf it please the kinge let hym wryte, that they maye be destroyed, & so will I wepe downe ten thousande talentes of syluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought into the kinges chamber. Then toke the kinge his ryng frō his hande, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemy. And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the syluer be geuen the, and that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Then were the kinges scribes called on the thirteenth daye of the fyrst moneth, and there was wrytten (accordyng as Haman cōmaunded) vnto the kinges princes and to the captiues euery where in the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accordynge to the wrytynge of euery nacyon, and after their language in the name of kynge Ahasuerus, and sealed with the kynges ryngs. And the writtinges were sent by posts into all the kinges landes, o rote out, to kyll, and to destroye all Jewes, both younge and olde, chyldren and women in one daye (namely vpon the thyrteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar) & to spoyle theyr goodes.

Thys was the summe of the writtynge, that there shoulde be a commaundement geuen in all landes, to be publyshed vnto all people, that they shoulde be ready against ỳ same daye. And the posts went in all the hast according to the kinges cōmaundement. And in the castell of Sulan was the commaundement deuised. And the kynge and Haman sate and dranke. But the cyty of Sulan was disquyeted.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Mardocheus geueth the quene knowlege of the cruell decree of the kinge against the Jewes.

Then Mardocheus perceiued al that was done, he rente his clothes, and put on sacke clothe, & asshes, and went out into the middes of the cite & cried loud and lamentably, and came before the kinges gate: for there myght no man entre wythyn the kynges gate, that hath sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended there was greate lamentacyon among the Jewes, and many fasted, wepte, mourned, & laye in sacke clothes & in asshes. So Esthers Damosels & her chamberlaynes came & told it her. Then was the quene exceedingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shoulde put them on, and laye the sacke clothe from hym. But Mardocheus would not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kinges chamberlaynes (whyche stode before her, and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Mardochens, that he myght knowe what it were, & wherfore he dyd so. So Hathath went forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cite, whyche was before the kynges gate. And Mardocheus told hym of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to wepe downe in the kinges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroy the (and he gaue him the copy of the cōmaundement, that was deuised at Sulan to destroy them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speake to her, and charge her, that she shoulde go vnto the kynge and make her prayer and supplycacion vnto hym for her people.

And whē Hathath came in, & told Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and cōmaunded hym to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the king know that whosoeuer cōmeth within the courte vnto the king, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundement is that the same shall dye immediatly, excepte the kinge holde out the goulden scepter vnto him, ỳ he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come vnto the kyng, now this thirty daies.

And when Mardocheus was certifyed of Estheres wordes Mardocheus bad saye again vnto Esther: thynke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou arte in the kynges house before all Jewes: for yf thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliueraunce out of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to ỳ kyngedome, for this tymes sake? Esther bad geue Mardocheus this answere: Go thou thy wayes then, and gather together all the Jewes that are founde at Sulan, and fast ye for me, that ye eat not & drinke not in thre dayes, wether day nor nyght. I & my Damosels wil fast lykewise, and so wil I go into the kynge contrary to the commaundement: yf I perish I perysshe. So Mardocheus wente his way, and dyd all that Esther had cōmaunded him.

The.v. Chapter.

Esther entreth into the kyng and bryngeth him and Haman to a feaste. Haman prepareth a gallowes for Mardocheus.

And on the thyrde daye put Esther on her royall apparell, & stode in the courte of the kynges palace within ouer against ỳ kynges house. And the kinge sat vpon his royal seate in the kynges palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kyng sawe Esther the quene standynge in the courte, she founde grace in his syghe. And the kynge helde out the goulden scepter in his hand towarde Esther. So Esther stept forth, and touched the toppe of ỳ scepter. Then sayde the kynge vnto her: What wylt thou quene Esther? and what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empyre, and it shalbe geuen the. Esther sayde: Yf it please the kynge, let the kyng and Haman come this day vnto the banchet that I haue prepared. The kyng sayde: cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath sayde.

Then

a The Jewes were spoyled by Gebues, as Gebet the eldest sonne of Salesoune of Arphaxat, as it appeareth Gen. xi. and 1. Pa. Esther were they called Jewes of Jacob after Jewes

b of one of the sonnes of Jacob, that is to wete of Juda

Now when the kynge & Haman came to the bácket that Esther had prepared, & kynge sayd vnto Esther at ye bácket of wyne: Esther what is thy petycion? and it shalbe geuen the. And what requyrest thou? yee it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther & sayde: my petycion & desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kynge, & yf it please the kynge to geue me my petycion, and to fulfyll my request, then let the kynge & Haman come to ye banchet, that I shall prepare for them, and to morow will I do to morow as the kynge hath sayde.

Then went Haman forthe the same daye ioyfull and merry in his mynde. And whe he sawe Mardochens in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was ful of indygnacyon at Mardochens. Neuertheles he refrayned him selfe, and when he came home, he sent, & called for his frendes and Zares his wyfe, & tolde the of the glory of his ryches, & the multitude of his children all together how the kyng had promoted him so greatly, and howe that he was take aboue the princes and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman said moreouer. Yee, and Esther the quene let no man come with the kyng vnto the banchet that she had prepared, except me, & to morowe also I bidden vnto her also with ye kyng. But in all this am I not satisfyed as longe as I se Mardechaus the Jewe sytteynge at ye kynges gate. Then sayde Zares his wyfe & all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a gallowes of fyfty cubytes hye, and to morow speake thou vnto the kyng that Mardochens may be hanged theron, yf thou commest merely with the kynge vnto the banchet. Haman was well content with all, and caused a gallowes to be prepared.

The.vi. Chapter.

The kynge rehearseth out of the Chronicles & fyndeth the processe of Mardochens, & that to the confusion of Haman, commaundeth Mardochaus to be had in honour.

THe same nyght could not ye kyng slepe, she commaunded to bring the Chronicles & storyes: which when they were read before the kynge, they happened vnto the place where it was written, howe Mardochens had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kepte the thresholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Ahasuerus. And the kyng said: what worshippe & good haue we done to Mardochens therfore? Then said the kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him: There is nothing done for him. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone into the courte without before the kynges house, that he might speake vnto the kyng to hange Mardochens on the tre, that he had prepared for him.) And the kynges seruauntes sayd vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth in the courte. The kynge sayde: let him come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayd vnto him: what shalbe done vnto ye man, whō the kyng would fayne haue vnto worshyp?

But Haman thought in his herte: Whome should the kynge elles be glad to doynge vnto worshippe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whome the kyng would be glad to do worshippe, be brought hyther, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes wherin the kynge vseth, to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, and that the croune royall maye be set vpon his heade. And let this rayment & horse be deliuered vnder the handes of one of the kynges princes, that he maye araye the man withall (whome the kynge would fayne honoure) and cause him vpon the horse thorow the streete of the cyte, & cause it to be proclamed before him: thus shall it be done to euery man, whom the kyng would fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde vnto Haman: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment and the horse: & go euen to with Mardochens the Jewe that sytteth before the kynges gate, & let nothinge faple of all that thou hast spoken. Then tooke Haman the rayment and the horse, & arayed him, and brought him on horsebacke thorowe the streate of the cyte, and caused it to be proclamed before him: thus shall it be done vnto euery man whom the kyng is disposed to honoure. And Mardochens came again to the kynges gate, but Haman got him home in all the haste mourninge with bare heade, and told Zares his wyfe & all his frendes, euery thyng that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men & Zares his wyfe vnto him: yf it be of Mardochens of the sede of the Jewes, before whom thou hast begonne to fall, thou canst do nothynge vnto him, but shalt fall before him. Whyle they were yet talkynge with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the banchet that Esther had prepared.

The.vii. Chapter.

The quene bewrayeth the wronge and Hamās ingratitude & prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman, and he is hanged on the gallowes, which he had prepared for Mardochens.

ANd when the kynge and Haman came to the banchet that quene Esther had prepared, the kyng sayde vnto Esther on the seconde day at the bácket of wyne: what is thy petycion quene Esther, that it may be geuen the. And what requyrest thou? Yea, alhe euē halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done. Esther the quene answered & sayde: yf I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O kynge) & yf it please the kynge, then graunte me my lyfe at my desire & my people for my peticions sake: for we are sold I & my people bothe to be destroyed, to be slayne & to perish: & would god we were solde to be bondmen & bondwemen, then would I holde my tonge, for so should not the enemye be so hye to the kynges harme. The kynge Ahasuerus spake and sayde vnto quene Esther: what is he that? Or where is he that darre presume in his mynde to do such a thynge after that maner? Esther sayde: the enemy

a Haman was although the enemy should not prohibite the kynges harme.

euerup and abhorlarpe is this wicked Haman.

As for Haman, he was exceadingly afrayed before the kynge & the quene. And the kyng arose from the banchet & from ỳ wine in his displeasure, and wente into the palace garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought quene Esther for his life: for he sawe ỳ there was a mischefe prepared for hym of the king all ready.

And when the kynge came agayne oute of the palace garden into the parler, where they had eaten, Haman had layed hym vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde the kynge: will he force the quene also besyde* me in the house? As sone as that worde wente out of the kynges mouthe, they* couered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of the chamberlaynes that stode before the kynge, sayde: Behold, there standeth a galowes in Hamãs house fyfty cubytes hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for ỳ king. The kynge sayde: hange him theron. So they hanged Haman on the galowes that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacyfyed.

* Or: in my presence.

* To couer his face, is, to shewe hym worthye of death.

The.viij. Chapter.

After the death of Haman to Mardocheus ys geuen, and then are there comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

THe same daye dyd kynge Ahasuerus geue the house of Hamã the Jewes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kynge: for Esther told howe that he belõgeth vnto her. And the king put of his fynger ryng, which he had take frõ Haman, & gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the king, & fell downe at his fete, & besought hym, that he would put away the wickednes of Haman the Agagite, and his deuice that he had ymagened agaynst the Jewes. And the king helde oute the goulden skepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther and stode before the kinge, and sayde: yf it please the kynge, & yf I haue found grace in his syght, & yf I be commẽded for the kyng, and it be accepted in his syght then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha, the Agagite, may be called agayne: which letters he wrote, to destroy the Jewes in all the kinges landes. For how can I se the evil that shal happen vnto my people? and how can I lyue vpon the destruccion of my kinred.

Then sayde kinge Ahasuerus vnto quene Esther, & to Mardocheus the Jewe: Behold, I haue geuen Esther the house of Haman, & hym haue they hanged vpon a tre, because he layed hand vpon the Jewes. Wyrte ye nowe therfore for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kinges name, and seale it with the kynges ringe (for the writtinges that were writte in the kinges name, and sealed with the kinges ringe, durst no man dysanulle.) Then were the kinges scribes called at the same tyme in the thirde moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was written, as Mardocheus commaunded vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the debytes and captaynes in the landes from India vntil Ethiopia, namely an hundred & seuen & twenty landes, vnto euery one according to the writtyng therof, vnto euery people after their speche, and to the Jewes according to their writtynge and language.

And it was written in the king Ahasuerus name, and sealed with the kinges ringe. And dyd poste that rode vpon swyft pony mules sent he by the writtinges, wherin the king graũted ỳ Jewes (in what cities soeuer they were) to gather them selues together, & to stand for their lyfe, and for to rote out, to slaye, and to destroy all the power of the people & land that woulde trouble them, with children and wemen, & to spoyle their good vpon one day in all the landes of king Ahasuerus namely vpon the thyrteenth daye of the twelueth moneth whiche is the moneth Adar.

* To stande for: their lyfe is a maner of speaking lykewhat to the Hebrues, for: ỳ we saye, to defende their lyues, & thinke the selues frõ the cruel persecucyon of their enemies

The summe of the writting was, how there was a cõmaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto al the people, that the Jewes shoulde be ready against that day to auenge thẽ selues on their enemies: & the postes that rode vpõ the mules, made haste with al spede according to the kinges word: & the commaundement was deuysed in the castel of Sulan.

As for Mardocheus, he went out frõ the king in royal apparel of yelow & whyte, and with a great croune of gould, beynge araped wt a garment of linnen & purple, & the cyty of Sulan triumpled & was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come light & gladnesse, & hope & worthyppe. And in all landes & cytyes, into what places soeuer the kinges worde & commaundement reached, there was ioy & myrth prosperite & good dayes among the Jewes, in so muche that many of the people in the lãd became of the Jewes beleue, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The.ix. Chapter.

At the commaundement of the king the Jewes put their aduersaries to deed. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feaste daye in remembraunce of their deliuerye come.

IN the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar, vpon the thyrteenth day, which ỳ kinges word & commaundement had appoynted that it should be done, euen vpon the same day ỳ the enemies should haue destroyed the Jewes to haue oppressed the, it turned contrary wise, so that ỳ Jewes should subdue their enemies. Then gathered the Jewes together in their cytyes within all the landes of kinge Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as would do the evil, & noman could withstand them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, & princes and Debytes, & officers of the kinge promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardo-

chews was great in the kinges house, and the P reporte of him was noysed in all landes, how he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all their enemies with a sore slaughter, & slewe & destroyed, & dyd after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castell of Susan slue the Jewes & destroyed fyue hundreth men: &
slewe Pharsandatha, Delphon, Aphatha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, Vaizatha, the ten sonnes of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the enemy of the Jewes: but on hys goodes they layed
no handes. At the same tyme was the kynge certified of the nõbre of those that were slaine at the castel of Susan. And the kynge sayde
E vnto quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne & destroyed fyue hundreth men at the castell of Susan, & the ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kinge?
What is thy peticion, that it maye be graun
ted? & what requirest thou more to be done?
Esther sayde: If it please the kynge, let hym suffre the Jewes to morow also to do accordynge vnto thys dayes commaundemente, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vp on the tree. And the kyng charged to do so, & the commaundement was deuysed at Susan, & Hamãs ten sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them selues together at Susan, vpon the fourteenth day of the moneth Adar, & slue three hundreth men at Susan, but on their goodes they layed no handes.

And for the other Jewes in the kinges la-

des, they came together, & *stode for their ly-ues & gat rest from their enemies: and slewe of their enemies fyue & seuentie thousand, how be it, they laye no handes on their goodes.
D Thys was done on the thirteenth daye of the moneth Adar, & on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they ordeyned to be a day of feastinge & gladnesse.
But the Jewes at Susan were come together bothe on the thirteenth daye and on the fourteenth, and on the fyfteenth daye they rested, & the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastynge & gladnes. Therfore the Jewes y dwelt in the vyllages and vnwalled townes ordeyned the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, to be a daye of feastinge and gladnes,
and one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and E sent these writinges vnto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of Kynge Ahasuerus, both nye & farre, that they shoulde yearly re-serue & holde the fourteenth & fyfteenth day of the moneth Adar, as the daies wherin the Je wes came to rest frõ their enemies, & as a mo neth wherin their payne was turned to ioye, & their sorowe into prosperite: that they should obserue the same as dayes of wealth & glad-nes, and one to sende gyftes vnto another, & to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes receyued it that they had begonne to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: howe that Haman the sonne of Ha madatha al the Jewes enemy, had deuysed to destroy all the Jewes, & caused to cast Phur (that is Lot) for to put them in feare, and to bringe them to naught: and how Esther wẽt and spake to the king, that thorow letters his wycked deuice (which he imagined against the Jewes) might be turned vpon his owne heade, and howe he & hys sonnes were hãged on the tree. For the whiche cause they called this day Phurim after the name of Phur, ac- *That is lot cordynge to all the wordes of this writtinge and what they thẽ selues had seue, and what had happened vnto them.

And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon
them and their sede, & vpon al such as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wouldo not misse to obserue these two dayes yearly, ac-cordinge as they were written and appointed, how that these daies are not to be forgot-tẽ, but to be kepte of childers children amõg all kinredes, in all landes & cyties. They are C the dayes of Phurim, whiche are not to be o-uerslipte amonge the Jewes, and the memorall of them oughte not to perysshe from their sede.

And quene Esther the doughter of Abihail & Mardocheus the Jewe wrote wyth al auctorite, to confirme this seconde writtinge of Phurim, and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the hundreth & seuen and twentye landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, wyth frendly and faythfull wordes, to confirme
these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appoin ted, accordinge as Mardocheus the Jew and Esther the quene had ordeyned concernynge them, lyke as they vpon their soule and vpon their sede had confirmed the actes of the *fa- *Esth. 9.d. stynges and of their complaynt. And Esther commaunded to stablysshe the actes of thys
Phurim, and to wryte thẽ in a boke.

The .x. Chapter.

The glorye and nobleness of Ahasuerus, and autho rite of Mardocheus.

A And the kynge Ahasuerus laied tribute vpon the lande, & vpon the Iles of the sea. As for al the worke of his power and aucto rite, and the great worshippe
of Mardocheus, whyche the kinge gaue him, beholde it is wryten in the Chronicles of the kinges of Medya and Persia. For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto the kinge Ahasuerus, and greate amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of hys brethren, as one that seketh the welth of his people and speaketh the beste
for all hys seade.

¶ The boke of Job.

The fyrst Chapter.

Job is plaged of God by the losse of hys goodes and chyldren.

21 ¶ In the lande of Hus there was a mā called Job: an innocent & vertuous mā, soche one as feared God, & eschued euell. This man had. vij. sonnes, & .iij. daughters. Hys substaunce was .vij. M. shepe: .iij. M. camels, .v. C. pouck of oxen, .v. C. she asses, & a very greate housholde: so that he was one of the moste principall men amonge all the of the east countre. And his sonnes went, and made banchettes: one daye in one house, another daye in another, and sent for their .iij. systers to eate and drinche with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their banchettynge rounde aboute, Job sent for them, and clensed them agayne, and gat vp early, & offered for every one a burntoffrynge. ffor Job thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, and haue bene vnthankfull to God in 22 their hertes. And thus dyd Job euery daye. Now vpon a tyme, when the a* seruauntes of God *b. came & stode before the Lord, Sathan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: ffrom whence commest thou? Sathan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande and walched thorow it.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: hast thou not cōsydered my seruaunt Job, how þ he is an innocent & vertuous man: soch one as feareth God, & eschueth euell, & that there is none lyke hym in the lande? Sathan answered, & sayde vnto the Lord: Doeth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued him, his house, and all hys substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the worckes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande? But laye thyne hande vpon him a lytle, touche ones all that he hath, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayd vnto Sathan: lo all that he hath, be in thy power: only vpon hym selfe se that thou laye not thyne handes. Then went Sathan forth from the Lorde.

Now vpō a certayne daye whē his sonnes & daughters were eatynge, and drinckinge wyne in their eldeste brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, & sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge, & the asses going in the pasture besyde them: the Sabees came in violently, and toke thē all awaye: ye they haue slayne thy seruaunts with the swearde and I only came my waye, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hath consumed, and brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes: and I only came my waye, to tell the. In þ meane season whyle he was yet speakynge there came another, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armies, & fell in vpon thy camels, which they haue caried awaye, yee and slayne thy seruaunts with the swearde: and I only am D gotten awaye, to tell the: Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet another, & sayde: Thy sonnes and daughters were eatyng & drynckynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, & sodenly there came a mighty greate wynde out of the South, and smote the .iiij. corners of the house, which fell vpon thy chyldren, so that they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone, to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rente hys clothes shaued his heade, fell doune vpō the ground, worshipped, and sayde: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, & naked shall I turne thether agayne. The Lorde gaue, and the Lord hath taken awaye * now blessed be the name of the Lorde. In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, * nor murmured folysshye agaynst God.

*The Greke and Origen adde hereunto, As it hath pleased the Lord so is it done.

*The Greke addeth with hys lyppes.

¶ The notes.

a* By the seruantes of God here, vnderstande, not onely angelles, by whom he ordereth the course & workes of the worlde: but also the godly & chosen, whom he continually careth and prouydeth for. Job. ij. a.

b* Came & stode before the Lord. Thynke not that God some tyme appeareth to the angelles, and sometyme not for the good angelles do all waye se þ face of God. Neither commeneth God ether with the angelles or with the deuell with bodely speache, but the holy ghoost in the scriptures speaketh many thynges vnto vs accordynge to oure fealynge and vseth a maner of speakynge semyliar to vs, sittynge appearynge speakynge enquerynge answerynge to God and to angelles, which thynge man onely vseth, to thentent that we thereby maye the easyar perceyue his meanynge. The comynge of the angelles here is no nother thynge then to geue accomptes of the offyce inioined them: which they geue, knowynge that God seyth wyth what truſt they dyd it: and ſo geue lawes, and wayte for their reward. They came (ſayth Origen) honouryng, magnifyinge, prayſyng, geuynge thäcker. Of Sathan alſo wryteth he thus. He came, neither with goyng to, or commyng in, but he came in thought, councell, and moſt wycked deſpyte to accuſe the ryghtwyſe before God. His thought and deſpyte are take as a commynge. The deuyll then is counted to haue come into the ſyght of God, not that the moſt wycked came in deade in the ſyght of the good God, but becauſe his cruell and moſte wycked thought tho came into ỳ ſyght of God. And thus euē now a dayes alſo commeth the deuyll with them in to the ſyght of God, in that he dayly accuſeth, ſyndeth faute vexeth, perſecuteth and troubleth the godly.

The.ij. Chapter.

Job is plaged with foure byles, and afterwarde is mocked of his wyfe. His frendes viſyte hym, & haue compaſſion on hym.

IT happened alſo vpon a tyme, that when the ſeruauntes of God came & ſtode before the Lorde, Sathan came amonge them, and ſtode before hym. a* And the Lorde ſayde vnto Sathan: From whence commeſt thou? Sathan anſwered & ſayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, & walked thorow it.

Then ſayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: haſt thou not conſydered my ſeruaunt Job, how that he is an innocēt and vertuous man ſoch one as feareth God, and eſchueth euel, and that there is none lyke hym in the land? But thou mouedeſt me agaynſt hym, to punyſhe hym: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth ſtill in his godlynesse. Sathan anſwered ỳ Lorde, and ſayde: Skynne for ſkynne? yee a man will geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne hande vpon him, touche hym ones vpon the bone and fleſhe, and (I holde) he ſhall curſe the to thy face. Then ſayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: lo, there haſt thou hym in thy power, but ſpare his lyfe.

So went Sathan forth from the Lorde, and ſmote Job with marueylous ſore byles, from the ſole of the fote vnto hys crowne: ſo that he ſat vpon the grounde in the aſhes, and ſcraped of the fylth of hys ſores wyth a potſherde.

Then ſayd his wyfe vnto him: Doeſt thou contynue in thy perfectnes? curſe God, and dye. But Job ſayde vnto her: Thou ſpeakeſt lyke a folyſh woman. Seynge we haue receyued proſperite at the hand of God, wherfore ſhuld we not be content with aduerſyte alſo? In all theſe thynges, dyd not Job ſynne with his lyppes.

L Now when Jobs frendes herde of all the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from hys owne place: namelye, Eliphas the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, D to ſhewe theyr compaſſyon vpon him, and to comforte hym: So when they lyfte vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: then euerye one of them rente hys clothes, and ſprynckled duſt vpon theyr heades in the ayre. They ſat them doune by hym alſo vpō the grounde vij. dayes and. vij. nightes. Neither was there eny of them that ſpake one worde vnto hym, for they ſawe that hys payne was verye greate.

a* God is here deſcribed aſkynge and demaundyng, not that he vnto whō all thinges are knowen ſhuld therby learne any thynge: but that the deceates and rēchoner of Sathā whiche alwayes ſpeth in wayte, might be vnto vs the better knowen, to them ent that we ſhulde walke the moare warely.

The.iij. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth that thys perſent lyfe is miſerable, & that the death of the ryght teures is ioyouſe and fortunable.

AFter thys opened Job hys mouth, and, a. curſed his day and ſayde: lolte be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the nyght, in ỳ which it was ſayde: there is a man chylde conceyued. The ſame daye be turned to darckneſſe, & not regarded of God from aboue, nether be ſhyned vpon with lyght: but be couered with darckneſſe, & the ſhadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, & let it be lapped in with ſorow. Let the darck ſtorme ouercome that nyght, let it not be rechened amonge the dayes of ỳ yeare, nor counted in the monethes. Deſpyſed be that night, & diſcōmended: let .b them B that curſe the daye, euē thoſe that be ready to rayſe vp mournynge geue it alſo theyr curſſe. Let the ſtarres be dymme thorow darckneſſe of it. Let it loke for lyght, but let it ſe none, nether the ryſyng vp of the fayre morynge, becauſe it ſhut not vp the wombe that bare me, nor hyd theſe ſorowes from myne eyes.

Alas, why dyed I not in the byrth? Why dyd not I perysh, as ſone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why ſet they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me ſuch wyth their duglles? Then ſhulde I now haue ſpen ſtyll, I ſhulde haue ſlepte, & bene at reſt: like as ỳ kynges & lordes of ỳ erth, which buyld them ſelues ſpecyall places: As the princes C that haue greate ſubſtaunce of gould, & theyr houſes full of ſyluer. O that I vtterlye had no beynge, or were as a thynge borne out of tyme (that is put aſyde) ether as ponge chyldren, which neuer ſawe the light. There muſt ỳ wycked ceaſſe frō their tyraūny, there ſoch as are ouerlaboured be at reſt: there are thoſe let out free, whych haue bene in preſon, ſo that they heare nomore ỳ voyce of the oppreſſour: There are ſmall and greate: the bonde man, and he that is free from his maſter.

Wherfore

Wherfore is the lyght geuen to hym that is in miserye: and lyfe vnto them, that haue heuy hertes? Whyche longe for death, yf it come not: and searche for it more then for treasure which also would be exceding glad, ¶ re ioyce yf they found their graue. That should be ioye to ỹ man whose way is hyd, *which God hepeth backe from him. For my sighes come before I eate, and my roarynges fall oute lyke flowynge water. For the thynge that I feared, is come vpō me: and the thing that I was afraied of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happye? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in rest? And now commeth such misery vpon me.

*Vnderstande, to death, in ỹ he cā not obtayne to dye which thyng he so greatly desireth for.

a.* Curled hys dayes. Lyke as a man hauing an impostume (layeth Thalostome) yf he be cut of the Surgeon, haueynge not hing wherwyth he maye respire, duryng the tyme of hys cuttynge, holdeth backe the thynges that be aye hym, and is redy to byte them that stand by hym, and yet can do nothynge vnto them: euen so Job fearing the greuousnes of blaspheminge and curssyng, doeth wrong to vnlyuelye thynges, and speakynge after the maner of the common people, which impute their misery to the influence of the starres, and to the daye of theyr birth, curseth his daye, that is, reasoneth wyth cursseynge, howe bytter a lyfe he lyueth, and vnto howe great myserye he was borne (as we commenlye saye) in an vnhappye houre, euen as though nowe a dayes a man repentinge his synnes, should saye, Wo is me wretch. In an vnhappy houre was I borne, whyche wyth my deades haue denied my maker, wo worth it &c.

b.* They that curse the daye, are those that are wery of theyr lyfe, in so muche that they sal in deade to cursseyng.

The.iii.Chapter.

Job is reproued of impatience and rashnesse, & of the presumption of the other righteousnes.

1 THen answered Eliphas ỹ Themanite and said vnto him: yf we beginne to comm̄e with the peraduenture thou wilt be displa cosent, but who can withhold him selfe from speakinge? Behold, thou hast bene a teacher of manye, and hast comforted the wery handes.

2 Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou haste refreshed the weake knees. But nowe that the plage is come vpon the thou shrinkest awaye: nowe that it hath touched thy self, thou arte sayne hatted. Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consyder (I praye the) whoeuer perysshed beynge an innocent? Or, whē were the godly destroued? As I haue sene them that plowe vanity and sowe malicie reape the same. With the blast of God dyd they perysh, ¶ with the bath of his anger cōsumed they awaye. The a* roarynge of the lyon, the voyce of the lyonesse, and the teeth of the lyons whelpes are broke. The lyon perisheth, for lacke of praye ¶ the lyons whelpes are scattered abrode.

And vnto me was the worde hyde, and myne eare hathe receyued a lytell therof. In the phantasyes and thoughtes of the vysyōs of the nyght, whē slepe cometh on men: feare came vpō me and drede ỹ made my bones to shake. And when the wynd passed by before my presence it made the heares of my flesshe stande vp. He stode there and I knew not his face, an ymage there was before me ¶ there was styines, so that I heard thys voyce.

b.* Shall man be more iust then God? Or shall mā be purer thē this maker? c.* Behold there is no trust to his seruauntes, and in his aungelles hath he founde frowardnes. How moche more in them that dwell in houses of claye whose foundacion is but earth, which shalbe consumed by the moth. They shalbe smytten from ỹ morninge vnto the euenyng yee they shall perysh euerlastynglye, and no mā thynche theron. Is not their d.* dignitie taken awaye with them, they shall dye and not in wysdome.

a.* By the roarynge the voyce and the teethe, are vnderstande the blasphemyes and backbytynges that are vsed against the innocent, as it is sayde Prouerb.xxv.b. By the symilytude of the lyon he meaneth, that the wycked shall perysshe howe great or myghtye so euer they be.

b.* Shall mā be more iust? &c. Of this parti cyple wyll Elyphaces reason thus against Job. Yf God wolde destroye an innocent, it shulde folowe that man were more ryghteous and pure than God, but this is impossible, for the contrarye is shewed vnto me by reuelacyon.

c.* Behold they: is no trust. &c. He labowreth in confirmynge that whyche he had before propounded. The summe of ỹ reason is, Aungelles are not purer thē God, ergo not men.

d.* Dignitye, signifyeth here whatsoeuer they haue wherin they excell other, whether it be ryches or honour, power or cōnyng &c. For none of these shall redeame them from death.

The.v.Chapter.

The ende of a bad. The ryght mindes of God. The kynde chastenynge of, and deliuerynge from agayne.

1 CAlle me one (yf thou canst fynde eny) per lohe aboute the, vpon eny of the holye men. As for the foolyshe man, displeasure kylleth hym, and anger slayeth the ignorante. I haue sene my selfe, when the foolishe was depe rooted, that hys bewty was sodenly destroued, that his chyldren were without prosperite or healt: that they were slayne in the dore, and no man to deliuer them: that hys harueſt was eaten vp of the hungrye: that the weapened man had spoyled it, and that the thurſtye had dronche vp his riches. Is it not ỹ earth that bringeth forth trauayle, neither cōmeth sorow out of ỹ grounde: but is man, that is borne vnto mys-

serye, lyke as the byrde for to ſle.

But now wyll I speake of the Lorde, and B talke of God: which doeth thinges, that are vnsearcheable, and maruayles without nombre: Which geueth rayne vpō the earth, and poureth water vpon all thinges: whiche setteth vp thē of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heuinesse: Which destroyeth the deuyces of the subtill, so that they are not able to perfourme ỹ thinges that they take in hande: whyche compaſſeth the wyse in theyr owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the councell of the wycked. In so much ỹ they runne into darcknesse by daye
C and grope aboute them at the noone daye, lyke as in the nyght.

And so he deliuereth the poore from the swearde, from their mouth, and frō the hāde
of the cruell, that the poore maye haue hope,
and that the mouth of the oppreſſoure maye be stopped.

Beholde, happye is the man, whom God punisheth: therfore, dispyſe not thou ỹ chastesynge of the Almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he geueth a medicine againe:
though he smyte, hys hande maketh whole agayne.

a.* He deliuereth the oute of syxe troubles
so that in ỹ seuenth there can no harme touch
the. In the middeſt of hongre he saueth the from death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swearde.

D He shal kepe the from the perlous tonge that so when trouble cōmeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In destruccion & derth thou shalt be merry, & shalt not be afrayed for the beastes of the earth: But the castels in the land shal be confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shall geue the peace.

Ye thou shalt knowe, that thy dwellinge place shalbe in reste: thou shalt beholde thy substaunce, & be nomore punished for synne Thou shalt se also, that thy sede shall encrease, and that thy posterye shalbe as the grasse vpon ỹ earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a parfyt age, lyke as the corne cheruen are brought into the barne in due season. Lo, this is ỹ matter, as we oure selues haue proued by experience. Therfore now that thou hea-rest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

¶ The notes.

a.* He deliuereth the &c. This sentence purpoumded after the maner of a Prophecy, sygnifyeth allone wyth that of Paul. i. Corinth. x. c. God is faythful whych shall not suffre you to be tempted aboue your strēgth,
but shall in the myddes of the temptacyon make awaye to eſkape oute. Eliphas mea-neth: He hath verelye wrapt the in many mi-series, but when the seuenth cometh, and when it shall seame to hym that the offence is sufficyently pumyshed, and that thou hast left thyne impacyence (for that lapeth he to Job, though vnmustye) then wyll he prosper the wyth so greate health, that thou shalt after leade thy lyfe moſte fortunatelye.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

Job answereth, that his payne is moste grouous, and his sorre, yet not withstondyng he offereth them.

Iob answered, and sayde: O that my myserye were weyed, A and my punishemente layed in the balaunces: for then should it be heuyer, then the sande of the sea. Thus is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For. a.* the arowes of the almyghty are in me, whose indignacyon hath dronche vp my spyrite, and the terrible feares of GOD fyghte agaynste me. Doeth the wylde aſſe roare when he hath grasse? Or cryeth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynough? That which is vnsauery, shall it be eaten wythoute salte, or is there any taſte in the whyte of an eggr?
The thynges that some tyme I myghte not awaye wythall, are nowe my meate for very sorowe. O that I myghte haue my desyre: O that GOD would graunte me the thynge, that I longe for. That he would begynne and smyte me: that he would let hys hande B go, and hewe me doune. Then shoulde I haue some comfortesye I would despyse him in my payne, that he shoulde not spare, for I wyll not be agaynſt the wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is myne end, that my soule myghte be pacy-ente? Is my ſtrength the strength of stones?
Or, is my flesthe made of brasse? Is it not so that there is in me no helpe? and. b.* that my substaunce is taken from me. He that is in tribulacyon ought to be comforted of hys neyghbour. &c.* but the feare of the Lord is cleane awaye: Myne owne brethren passeuer by me as the water broke, that haltelye runneth thoroow the ballepes. But they that feare the hote frost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When they: time commeth, they shalbe destroyed and perisshe: and when they be set C on fyre, they shalbe remoued oute of they:
place, for the pathes that they go in, are cro-ked: they haste after vayne thinges, and shal perysh. Consyder the pathes of Theman, & the wayes of Saba, wherin they haue put their truſt. Cōfoumded are they, that put my confydence in them: For when they came to optayne the thinges that they loked for, they were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now D that ye se my miserye, ye are afrayed. Dyd I despyse you

delyre you, to come hether? Or, to gyue me eny of youre substaunce? To delyuer me frō the enemyes hande, or to saue me from the power of the myghtye? Teach me and I wil holde my tonge: and yf I do erre, shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then the wordes, that are wel and truely spoken? which of you can reproue them? Saynge only that ye are subtill to check mens sayinges, and can speake many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, & go about to ouerthrowe youre owne frende. Wherfore loke not onely vpon me, but vpon youre selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into youre owne selues, I praye you) be indifferent iudges, and consider mine vngodlynesse: whether there be eny vnrighteousnesse in my tonge, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

a. * The Arrowes of the almyghtye after some mennes opinion, are the sotrenesse of his iudgemente and hys wrath: after some other, they are the trouble, whyche the lawe moueth in the hertes of men, whyle they there by are styred to hate them selues, and so are healthfully kylled: as it is sayed Psal. xxxviij. a. Some agayne expounde them to be the crosse of myserye and wretchednes, wherin God had nowe wrapped hym. For the Sapnytes (saye they) receyue theyr crosse of the hand of God. The same wyl, that this sentence be a increasyng and amplifying of that, which hir aduersarye had fraterly laid against him. Eliphas in the beginnig of the fourth Chapter had sayde, that the plage was come vpon hym and had touched him. wyth thys (saye they) meaneth he nowe. Beholde it not onely toucheth me, but woundeth me wyth Arrowes, and those venowmed wyth beresunne, hapely wyth the gall of dragons, wyth whyche touchynge, both my blonde waxeth woode, and all my spyrite is supped vp. Moreouer God hath not onely throwen these dartes vpon me, but also hys dreadeful feares, that is, whatsoeuer he hath that is terrible, layeth he on me.

b. * That my substaunce is taken from me. The Chald. interpr. hath. Wysdome is departed from me, and that after Rab. Mol. the wysdome of disclosynge iudgynges and expinge of thynges. As though he shoulde saye, so sore is my greefe, sythe my helpe is taken from me, that I am not permytted to breathe so longe, tyll I maye call to remembraunce what is moste acceptable to God. Some rede. Is not all the strength of myne enforcement gone from me.

c. * But the feare of the Lorde &c. As though he sayde. But alas, nowe a dayes, there is no feare of the Lorde left: and therfore it is no marueil, yf charitie also which is ioyned to the feare of God, be not in vse.

The.viij.Chapter.

Iob thinketh that thys lyfe is but a warfare or bonde seruice.

IS not the lyfe of man vpon earth a verye batayll? Are not hys A dayes lyke vnto dayes of an hyred seruaunte? For lyke as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe, and as an hyrelynge wouldes fayne haue an ende of hys worcke: Euen so haue I labored whole monethes longe (but in vayne) and maye a carefull nyght haue I tolde. When I layed me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I ryse? Agayne, I longed sore for the nyght. Thus am I full of sorowe, tyll it be darcke. My flesche is clothed wyth wormes, spithynesse and dust: my skynne is wyderered, and crompled together: my dayes passe ouer more spedelye, then a weuer can weeue out his webbe: and are gone, or I am aware. O remembre, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall nomore se the pleasures therof, ye & that none other mans eye shall se me eny more. For yf thou fastest thyne eyes vpon me, I come to naught lyke as a cloude is consumed & vanished away euen so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth nomore vp, ner turneth agayne into hys house, nether shall hys place knowe him eny more.

Therfore I wyll not spare my mouth, but C will speake in the trouble of my spirite, in the bytternesse of my mynde wyll I talke. Am I a see or a whalfysh, that thou kepest me so in prison? When I thynke: my bed shall comforte me. I shall haue some refreshynge by talckinge by my self vpon my couche: Then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afraied thorowe visions, that my soule wysheth rather to be strangled, and my bones to be dead.

I can se no remedy, I shall loue nomore! D
Spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. What is man, that thou hast hym in eche re pute acyon, and settest somoch by hym? Thou takest diligent care for hym, & sodenly doest thou proue hym.

Why goest thou not from me, ner lettest me alone, so longe tyll I swalowe downe my spetle? I haue offended, what shall I do vnto the, O thou preseruer of me? Why hast thou made me to stande in thy way, and am so be vp a burden vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgeue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wyckednesse. Beholde, nowe must I slepe in the dust: & yf thou seekest me to morow in the morning, I shalbe gone.

The. viij. Chapter.

Iob is reproued and moued to haue delyuered too grose a sentence of vprightnesse.

THen answered Baldad the Sa- A phyte, and sayde: How long wilt thou talke of suche thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Doth

God peruerte the thynge that is lawfull? Or doth the Almyghtye destroye the thynge that is ryght? When thy sonnes synned agaynst hym, dyd not he punish them for theyr wyckednesse? If thou wouldest now resorte vnto God by tymes, & make thyne humble prayer to the Almyghtye: yf thou wouldest lyue a pure and a godly lyfe: thulde he not wake vp vnto the immediatly, & geue the, the dewe of of righteousnesse agayne? In so moch, that where in soeuer thou haddest lyttle afore, thou shuldest now haue greate aboundaunce. En-quere of the that haue bene before the, learch dylygently amonge thy forefathers: Name-lye, that we are but of yester daye, and consyder not, that oure dayes vpon earth are but a very shadowe. They shall shewe the,
they shall tell the, ye they wyll gladly con-fesse the same.

Maye a ryshe be grene wythout moysture?
maye ye grasse growe wythout water? No:
but (or euer it be shot forth, and or euer it be gathered) it withereth, before eny other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all them, that forget God: and euen thus also shall the ypo crytes hope come to naught. His confydence shalbe destroyed, for he trusteth in a sponders webbe. He leaneth hym vpon hys house, but he shal not stande: he holdeth hym fast by it, yet shall he not endure. Oft tyme a thynge doth flourysshe, and men thynke that it maye abyde the Sonne shynynge: it shooteth forth the braunches in hys garden, it taketh many rotes, in so moche that it is ipse an house of stones.

But yf it be taken out of hys place, euery man denyeth it, saying: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it vp him, that triopseth in hys owne doynges: and as for other, they growe oute of the earth.

Beholde, God wyll not cast awaye a ver-tuous man, nether wyl he helpe the vngodly.
Thy mouth shall be fyll with laughynge, and thy lyppes wyth gladnesse. Thy that hate the, shalbe confounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodly shall come to naught.

The.ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the dewtyes of God, & that mannes ryghteousnesse is nothynge.

Iob answered, & sayde: As for that, I know it is so of a trueth,
that a man copared vnto God,
can not be iustified. If he wyll argue with hym, he shall not be able to answere hym vnto one among a thou sande. He is wyse of hert, and myghtie in strenght. Who euer prospered, & toke parte against hym? a* He translateth the mountay nes, or euer they be aware, & ouerthroweth them in hys wrath. He remoueth the earth oute of her place, that her pylers shake with all. He commaundeth the Sonne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp the starres, as it were vnder a syguet. He him selfe alone spre-deth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the bayres of heauen, the Orions, the.vii. starres and the secrete places of the south. He doth greate thynges, soch as are vnsearcheable, ye and wonders without nombre.

If he came by me, I myght not loke vpō hym: yf he went his waye, I shulde not per-ceaue it. If he be hasty to take eny thynge awaye, who will make hym restore it agayne?
Who wyll saye vnto hym: what doest thou?
He is God, whose wrath no man maye with stande: but the proudest of all muste stoupe vnder hym. How shulde I the answere him?
or what wordes shulde I fynde out agaynst hym? Yet though I be righteous, yet wyll I not geue him one worde agayne, but mekely submytte my self to my iudge. All be it that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure, that he hath herde my voce: he troubleth me so with the tempest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He wyll not let my spyrte be in rest, but fylleth me with bytternesse.

If men wyll speake of strength, he is the strongest of all: yf men wyll speake of ryght-wysnes, who darre be my recorde. b* If I will iustifye my self, my awne mouth shall condemne me: yf I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: for that I shulde be an innocēt, my cōscyence knoweth it not, ye I my selfe am weery of my lyfe.

This one thyng wyll I saye: He destroyeth both the ryghtuous & vngodly. And though he slaye sodenly wyth the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punyshment of the innocent.
As for the world, he geueth it ouer in to the power of the wycked, soch as the rulers be, wherof al landes are full. Is it not so? where is there eny, but he is soch one?

My dayes haue bene more swyfte then a runner: they are gone sodenly, and haue sene no good thynge. They are passed awaye, as the shippes that be good vnder saple, and as the Aegle that hasteth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynges to chaunge my countenaunce, & to comforte
my selfe, the am I afeaped of all my workes, for I knowe, thou fauourest not an euell doer. If I be then a wycked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my self with snowe water, & made myne handes neuer so clene, yet shuldest thou dyppe me in the myer, and myne awne clothes shulde de spise me. For he that I must geue answere vnto, and with whom I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Nether is there eny mayesman to reporue both the partes, or to laye hys hande betwixte vs. Let him take hys rod awaye frō me, ye let him make me no more afeaped of hym, and then shall I an-swere hym wythout eny feare. For as longe as I am in suche fearfulnesse, I can make no answere. And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

*a God translateth the mountaynes, not only these of the erth, but also the arrogant and proude tyrauntes, and the great traulmes of the worlde, which by a borowed speche are of ten times in the Scripture spoken of by mountaynes and hylles. So translated he Pharao. Exodi.xiiii.g. and kynge. Senacherib. Esaie.xxxvii.g.

b* Here is it good to se that Job presumeth not of hys awne rygh teousnes, but playnely confesseth hym selfe unrighteous and a synner before God, all thoughe before the world he had lyued blameles. God loketh on the herte thoughe men looke but onely on the outward appearaunce. His aduersaryes thought that he shulde neuer haue had soche a crosse layde on him, in lesse then he had also outwardly and openly lyued in wyckednesse. To ỳ answereth Job in dyuerse places that he therin was not culpable, and therfore accuseth as it were after the maner of men, the iudgement of God, concernynge soch as are outwardly ryghteous: and studiouse to lyue hertwoustly: namely soche as lyue wythout blame amonge men, and that bothe entende and do well to all men, and yet are wrapped in many myseries and wretchednes often tyme ouer cruell. And her inlyeth the chefe of the contrauersy betwyxt Job and hys aduersaryes, that Job defendeth hym selfe not to haue deserued hys punishmente by hys outwarde lyuynge: where as his aduersaryes armed onely with manly and stealthy wyth, thought God to be unryghteous, yf he wold so grieuously punishe hym that had not bene an outwarde synner agaynst hym. Job, his conscyence beynge hym witnesse, had lyued innocently and stronghely, and hurt no man, had alwayes feared God, and worshipped hym onely, his chyldren also had he nourred to the feare of God, ỳ coulde of no man be accused of wyckednes. Yet wytnesseth he iustly here (as all the godly do) that he was not vtterlye with oute synne, for other wyse had he bene a lyar. i. Johan. i. If we saye, we haue no synne, we deceaue oure selues, and trueth is not in vs. Wherfore in the places where he sayth that he hathe not deserued his punyshment, and that shulde seame to shew himblameles knowe, that he speaketh of his outwarde maner of lyuinge, not of the inwarde thoughtes and desyres of the herte, wherin he was vndoutted an offender.

The.x.Chapter.

Job in misery of his lyfe, complayneth vnto God. He desyreth to vnderstand why God so handleth him.

I Nwardtheles, mine wyll I put forth my wordes: I will speake out of the very bytternesse of my soule, and wyll saye unto God: O do not condemne me, but shewe me the cause, wherfore thou iudgest me on thys maner. Thynkest thou it well done, so oppresse me, to caste me of (beinge a worke of thy handes) and to mayntayne the councell of the ungodly? Hast thou fleshly eyes then, or doest thou loke as mā loketh? Are thy dayes as the dayes of man, and thy yeares as mans yeares? that thou makest soche inquisicio for my wyckednesse, and searchest out my synne: where as (notwithstandynge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that there is no man able to delyuer me out of thyne hande. Thy handes haue made me, and fashoned me altogether roundabout: wilt thou then destroye my sodenlye? O remembre (I beseke the) how that thou madest me of the mould of the earth, and shalt bryng me to earth agayne.

Hast thou not milked me, as it were mylcke and turned my to crudden lyke chese? Thou hast couered me wyth synne and flesshe, and ioyned me together wyth bones & synewes. Thou hast graunted me life, & done me good and the diligent kepe that thou takeste vpon me, hath preserued my spirite.

Though thou hidest these thinges in thine hert, yet am I sure, that thou remembrest the all. Wherfore dyd best thou kepe me, when I synned, and haste not cleansed me from myne offence: yf I do wickedlye, wo is me therfore: yf I be righteous, yet darre I not lyfte vp my heade: so full am I of confusion, and se myne awne myserye.

Thou huntest me out (being in heynesse) as it were a Lyon, and troublest me oute of measure. Thou bringest fresh wytnesses against me, thy wrath increasest thou vpon me, berye many are the plagues that I am in. Wherfore hast thou brought me oute of my mothers wombe? O that I had perysshed, and that no eye had sene me. yf they had corped me to my graue, as sone as I was borne, then should be I be nowe, as though I had neuer bene.

Shall not my tyme lyke come sone to an ende? O holde thy hande, let me alone, that I maye take my self a lyttle afore I go thether, from whence I shall not turne agayne. Namely, to that lande of darcknesse & shadowe of deathe: yee into that darck cloudy lande & deadly shadow, where as is no order, but yet eyble feare as in the darcknesse.

The.xi.Chapter.

Sophar reproueth Job of his wordes, and exhorteth him to repentaunce.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathyte, and sayde: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shulde he that babbleth much, be commended therfore? Shulde men geue vnto lyers fowly? Thou wylt laugh other men to scorne, and shal no body rebuke the agayne? Wylt thou saye vnto God: The thynges that I take in hande is perfecte, and I am clene in thy syght? O that God wolde speake, and open hys lyppes agaynst the, that he myght shewe the (out of his secrete wysdome) howe many folde his Lawe is: the shuldest thou knowe, that God had forgotten the, because of thy synnes.

Though he turne all thynges vp syde downe, close them in, or shutt them together who darre chech hym therfore?

For it is he that knoweth the vayne of men: he seeth their wickednesse also, shulde he not then consider it? A vayne body exalteth hym selfe, & the sonne of man is lyke a wyld

If thou haddest now a right herte, and spreddest vp thyne handes towarde hym: yf thou woldest put awaye the wickednesse which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodly nesse dwelt in thy house: Then myghtest thou lyft vp thy face without shame, then shuldest thou be sure and have no nede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy mysery, and thynke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shuld thy lyfe be as D cleare as the noone daye, and synnge forth as the morninge. Then myghtest thou have comforth, in the hope that thou hast: & slepe quietly, whē thou art buryed. Then shuldest thou take thy reste, and no man to make the afrayed, ye many one shuld set moch by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly, they shalbe cōsumed, and not escape: their hope shalbe mysery and sorow of mynde.

The.xiiij.Chapter.

Job declareth the lyfe of a man, and prophesieth of the resurrection. Hope iudgeth the good, yet they obtayne not ener lyke ioy.

A MAn that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of diuerse miseries. He commeth vp and falleth awaye lyke a flowre. He slyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Thynkest thou it now well done to open thyne eyes vpon soche one, and to bringe me before the in iudgement? Who can make it cleane, that commeth of an vncleane thynge? No body. The dayes of man are shorte, the nombre of his monethes are knowne only vnto the. Thou hast appointed hym his bounder, he can not go beyond them. God trō him, that he maye rest a lytle vntyll hys daye come, whyche he loketh for, lyke as an hyrelynge doth.

If a tre be cut downe, there is some hope yet, that it wyll spronte and shute forth the braunches agayne: For though a rote be waxen olde and dred in the grounde, yet wyll the stocke gette the sent of water, yt wyll budde, and bringe forth bowes, lyke as whent it was fyrst planted. But as for man, when he is dred, perysshed and consumed awaye, what becommeth of hym? The flowdes when they be dryed vp, and the ryuers when they be emptie, are fylled agayne therwith the flowynge waters of the sea: but when man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne, tyll the heauen perish: he shall not wake vp nor ryse out of his slepe. O that thou woldest hyde me, and hyde me in the hell, vntyll thy wrath were stylled: and to appoynte me a tyme, wherin thou myghtest a* remembre me. Shall a dred man lyue agayne? All the dayes of thys my pilgrymage am I tokynge, when my chaungynge shall come. If thou woldest but call me, I shulde obeye the, only despyse not the worke of thyne owne handes.

For thou hast nombred all my goynges, yet be not thou to extreame vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercyfull vnto my wyckednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the last, & rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearse thorow the very stones by lytle & lytle, the flouddes washe awaye the grauell & earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man in lyke maner. Thou prenaylest agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his estate, & puttest hym frō the. Whether his chyldrē come to worshippe or no, he can not tell: And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. While he lyueth his flesh must haue trauayle: and whyle the soule is in hym, he must be in sorowe.

Job reporteth hys miseries and greuous payens. He prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

Job

Ob answered, and sayde: howe
A longe wil ye vexe my mynde, & trouble me with wordes? Lo, ten tymes have ye repraued me:
are ye not ashamed, for to laugh
me to to scorne: yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye will enhaunce your sel nes against me, & accuse me to be a wicked person, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe then, that it is God, which hath handled me so violently & hath compased me about with his scourges. Be-holde, though I crye, yet violence is done vn to me, I can not be herde: Though I complaine, there is none to geue sentēce with me.
B He had hedged vp my path, I can not get awaye, he hath set darcheneſſe in my gate. He hath spoyled my of myne honoure, and take the .a.* crowne awaye frō my head. He hath destroyed me on euery syde, & I am vndone:
My hope hath he taken awaye frō me, as it were a tre plucte vp by the rote. His wrath is kyndled against me, he taketh me, as though I were his enemy.

His men of warre came together, whyche made their waye ouer me, and besieged my dwellinge rō about. He hath put my C brethren farre awaye from me, and suche as were of myne acquaintaunce, are become straungers vnto me. My owne kynsfolkes have forsaken me, and my frendes have put me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes & maydens of myne owne house take me for a straunger, and I am be come as an alcaunt in their syght.

When I call vpon my seruaunt, he geueth me no answere: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe may not abide my breth, I am lothsome to speake sayre vnto
the children of myne owne body. Ye the very delerte fooles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euell vpon me.
All suche as were my most familiers, abhorre me: and they whom I loued best, are turned against me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, D & my flesh is awaye, only there is left me the skynne about my teth. Have pyte vpon me, have pyte vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lorde hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me .b.* as God, and .c.* are not satisfied of my flesshe?

O that my wordes were written, O that they were put in a boke: wolde God they were grauen with an yron penne in leade or in stone. For I am sure, þ my redemer liueth & that I shal ryse out of the earth in þ latter day: that I shal be clothed agayne with thys skynne, & se God in my flesshe. Ye I my selfe shal beholde him, not with other but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: Why do not we persecute him: we haue founde an occasion against him. But beware of the swearde, for the swearde wyll be auenged of wickednesse, and be sure, that there is a iudgement.

shulde counterfet.

c.* Are not satisfyed of my flesshe. To eate & be satisfyed of a mannes flesshe, is a borowed speache taken both in the good and euel parte. In the good parte it sygnifyeth to loue to iudge frendlye, and then at the length to fall to playfynge. In the euell parte, it is cruelly and beastlye to misuse, and (as ye were) to treate with spitefull and hapnouse wordes.

The xx. Chapter.

Sophar ryseth, and the vnfayethfull, the tyrannous, and the wicked shal vtterly perysh.

Then answered Sophar þ Naa A mathite, and sayde. For þ same cause do my thoughtes compel me to answere. And why? my mynde is tolled here and there.
I have sufficiently herde thy chechinge and reproue, therfore am I purposed to make answere after myne vnderstandinge. Know-est thou not this, namely: that from the begynninge (euer sence the creacion of man vpon earth) the reuelacion of the vngodlye hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites cō-tinued but þ twynckling of an eye? Though B he be magnifyed vp to the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perisheth at the laste dyche dounge: In so moche that they which have sene hym, saye: Where is he? He vanysheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be founde, & passeth awaye as a vysyon in the nyght. So that the eye whiche sawe him before, getteth nowe no syght of hym, and his place knoweth hym no more.
His chyldren go a begynge, theyr handes
bringe them to sorowe and heuynesse.

Frō his youth his bones are full of vyce,
which shall lye downe with hym in þ earth.
When wyckednesse is swete in his mouth,
he hydeth it vnder his tunge. That he emongeth, that wyll he not forsake, but kepeth it C close in his throte. The meate that he eateth, shalbe turned to the poyson of serpentes,
with in his body. The ryches that he deuou-reth, shall he perbreake agayne, for God shal draw the out of his belly. a* he shal suche
þ serpentes head, & þ adders tonge shal slaye hym: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers & brookes of honye & butter: But laboure shall be, and he, and yet haue nothinge to eate. Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not holpen them: houses hath he spoyled, and not builded them. Ons belye could neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perish

D in his couetousnesse. He deuoured so greedyly that he lefte nothinge behynde, therfore lyes goodes shall not prosperr. Thoughe he had plentyousnesse of euery thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he is but a wretche on earth.

Ffor though the wicked haue neuer so much to spill his belye, yet God shall send his wrath vpon hym, and cause hys battaill to rayne ouer hym: so that yf he flie the yron weapens, he shall be shott with the stele bowe. The arrow shal be taken forth, and go out at hys backe, and a glistering swearde thorow the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. b. There shal no darckenes be able to hyde him. And vnkendled fyre shall consume him, and lohe what remayneth in his house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shal declare his wickednesse, and the earth shall take parte against hym. The substaunce that he hath in hys house, shalbe taken awap and perysshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. This is the porcion that the wycked shall haue of God, and the heritage that he may looke for of the Lorde.

The notes.

a. He shall sucke the serpentes heade, that is, he shalbe subiect to all cursednesse and suffer all maner sorowes. It is suche a maner of speache as is before in the.xv.d. of drinking wickednesse.

b. That is, he can not hyde hym from perrilles.

The.xxij. Chapter.

A Job reproued the prosperyte of the wycked, & alsoo beforeseeth their sodayne ryppe and destruccion.

A Job answered, and sayde. O heare my wordes, and amende youre selues. Suffer me a lytle that I may speake also, and the laughe my wordes to scorne, yf ye wyll. Is it with a man, that I make this disputacyon? Wherfy yf it were so, shoulde not my spyrite be then in sore trouble? Marck me well, be abashed, and laye youre handes vpon youre mouth. Ffor when I ponder thys matter, I am afeared, & my flesche is smytte with feare. Wherfore do wicked men lyue in health and prosperite, come to their olde age, and increase in ryches? Their children children loue in their syght, and their generacion before their eyen. Their houses are safe from all feare, for the rod of God doth not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, and that not oute of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not barrayne full.

They sende forth their children by flockes, and their sonnes lead the daunce. They beare
B with them tabrettes and harpes, & haue instrumentes of musycke at their pleasure. They spend their dayes in wealthynesse: but sodenlye they go downe to hell. They say vnto God: Departe from hence for we knowledge of thy wayes. What maner of seruice is the Almighty, that we shoulde serue him? What profyte shoulde we haue, to submytte ourr selues vnto him? Lo there is verelye no goodnesse in the, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly. How oft shall the candle of the wicked be put oute? howe oft commeth their destruccion vpon them? O what sorowe shal god sende the for their part in his wrath? Yea, they shalbe euen as chaffe before the wynde, and as dust that the storme carryed awaye.

And though God saue their children from further sorowe, yet wyll he so rewarde the selues, that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruccion and misery shall they se with their eyen, and dyncke of the fearfull wrath of the Almighty. Ffor what careth he, what be come of his housholde after his death: whose numbers passe awaye swyfter then an arowe. In as murche then as God hath the hyest power of all, who can teache hym any knowledge? One dyeth now, when he is myghtye & at his best, riche, & in prosperite: euen when his *bowels are at the fattest, & his bones ful of mary. An other dyeth in sorowe and heuynesse, and neuer had good dayes. Nowe lye they bothe a lyke in the earthe, and the wormes couer them. But I knowe what ye thinche, yea and what ye ymagin against me vnrighteousnesse. For ye saye where is the Princes palace? where is the dwellinge of the vngodly? Aske any man that goeth by the waye, and (yf ye wyll not regarde their tokens and beades) he shal tell you, that the wicked is kept vnto the daye of destruccion, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forthe in the daye of wrath. Who dare reproue him for his wayes to hys face? who rewardeth him for the wickednesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and watche amonge the heape of the deade. Then shall he be sayne to be buryed amonge the stones by the brooke syde. All men shall folowe him, and there are innumerable gone before him. O howe vayne is the comforte that ye geue me? Are not youre answeres cleane contrary to right and truthe.

*After the Greke. Some read pappes.

The.xxiij. Chapter.

Eliphas the Themanite gaue answere and sayde: May a man be compared vnto God in wysdome, though he seme to hym selfe, lyke to be lyke him? What A pleasure hath God in that thou art righteous? Or what doth it profyte hym, that thy wayes are perfecte? Is he afeared to reproue the, & to stryke forth to the into iudgement? Closeth not this for that great wickednesse, & for thine vngracious deades which are innumerable? for thou

and robbed the naked of their clothing. To D suche as were wery, hast thou geuen no water to dincke, thou hast withdrawe bread frō
the hungry. Shoulde suche one thē as liueth vi olence, wrong and oppression (doing all thing of partialite, and hauinge respecte of persownes) dwel in the lande? Thou hast sent wydowes awaye empty and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore art thou compased aboute wyth snares on euery side, and sodenly vexed with feare. Shouldest thou then se no darcknesse?
Should not the water floude runne ouer the?
Now because god is hyer then the heaues,
& because thou sepst that the starres are so hye
wilt thou therfore saye: Tush, how shoulde God know? Doth his dominion reach beyōd the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer him, that he may not se, for he dwelleth in heauē. Well thou wilt kepe the olde waye, that all wicked E men haue gone: bothe olde and young, whose foundacion is a runninge water, whiche lay vnto God: go from vs, and after this maner:
Tush, what will the Almyghty do vnto vs?
where as he (notwithstandinge) fylleth their houses wyth all good. Wherfore meruayle of the vngodly be farre from me. For with my shall the godly, and with gladnesse shall the innocent se, that their enemie shall be hewen doune, and their posterite consumed wyth fyre.

Therfore reconcile the vnto God, and be rōtent, so shall all thinges prosperre wyth the & ryghtwell. Receyue the lawe at his mouth, &
F lay vp his wordes in thine hert. For yf thou wilt turne to the Almighty, thou shalt stande fast, & al vnrighteousnesse shalbe farre from thy dwellinge: He shall geue the an harueste, whiche in plenty & aboundance shall exceade
the dust of the earth, and the gould of Ophir lyke riuer stones. Yea, the almighty his own self shalbe thine harueste, and the heape of thy money. Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Almighty, & lift vp thy face vnto God.
Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him,
and he shal heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promises. Then loke what thou takest in hād he shall make it to prosperre with the, and the light shall shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth him self, him shall he set vp: and who so loketh meke, shalbe healed. Yf thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and thorow the vnpurenesse of thyne handes shalt thou be deliuered.

The xxij. Chapter.

Job answereth that he both knoweth & feeleth the power and sharpenes of the stripe, & sayeth that he hath deserued no soch punishment.

IOb answered, & sayd: My saynge is yet this day in bitternes & my hande heauy among my G mourninges. O that I might fynde him, and fynde him. O that I myght come before his seat, to pleat my cause
before him, & to fill my mouth wyth argumētes.
That I might know, what answer he would geue me: & that I might vnderstand, what he woulde saye vnto me. Wyll he pleate against me with his greate power & strength, or will he leaue him selfe vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not do so with me. But let him geue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to winne my matter. For though I go before, I fynde him not. Yf I come behynde, H I can get no knowledge of him: Yf I go on the left side to ponder his workes, I can not atteine vnto them. Agayn, yf I go on the right syde, he hydeth him self, that I can not se him.
But as for my way, he knoweth it: & tryeth
me as the goulde in the fyre.

Neuertheles my fete kepe his path, his wayes haue I holden, and not gone out of it.
I haue not forsaken the commaundements of I his lippes, but loke what he charged me wyth
his mouth, that haue I shut vp in my herte.
It is he him selfe alone, who wyll turne him
backe. He doth as him lusteth, and bringeth to passe what he will. He rewardeth me into K my bosome, and many other thinges mo doth he, as he maye by his power. This is the cause, that I shrincke at his presence, so that when I consyder him, I am afrayed of him.
For is so muche as he is God, he maketh my herte soft: and seynge that he is Almighty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darcknesse, the cloude hath so couered my face.

The xxiij. Chapter.

Job declareth the wyckednes of men & sheweth
what vnrest belongeth to the vngodly.

WHy peradueture then that there is no tyme hyd frō the almigh ty, how happeneth it, that they A whyche know him, will not regarde his dayes? For some men there be, that remoue other mens landemarches, that robbe them of their catell, and kepe the same for their owne:
that driue away the asse of the fatherlesse, that take the widdowes oxe for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waie, and oppresse
the simple of the worlde together. Beholde, the wilde asses in the deserte go by tymes, as their maner is, to spoile: Yea, the very wyl-dernesse mynistreth fode for their children.
They reape the corne fele & in not their owne B and gather the grapes out of hys vineyard,
whome they haue oppressed by violence.
They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes to couer the and kepe them from coulde: So that when the showers in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them among the rockes.

They spoile the sucking fatherlesse childe and put the dore in pawne. Ye so muche that they let them go naked without clothinge, and yet the hungry beare the sheues. The poore are fayne to labour in their ople mylles, C yea and to treade in their wyne presses, & yet to suffer thyrst. The whole cyty cryeth
vnto

vnto the Lorde with lyghynge, the soules of the slayne make their complaynte. But God destroieth them not for al this, where as they (notwithstandinge) are rebellious and disobedient enemies: whiche seke not his lyghte and wayes, nor turne agayne into hys pathe.
C Tymely in the mornynge do they aryse, to murther the simple and poore, & in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the adoulterer, that wayteth for the darcknesse, & sayeth thus in hym selfe: Tush, there shall no mā se me, & so he dilygently hyde his face. In the nyghte season they searche the houses, and hyde them selues in the day tyme, but wyll not knowe the light. For as sone as the daye breaketh, the shadow of death commeth vpon them, & they go in horrible darcknesse. The vngodly is very swyft. O that his portion also vpon earth were swyfter then the runninge water, D whiche sulleeth not the shipman to beholde the fayre & pleasaunt vineardes. O that they (for the wickednesse whiche they haue done) were drawen to the hel, sooner then snow melteth at the heate. O that all compassion vpon them were forgotten: that their dayntyes were wormes, that they were cleane put oute of remembraunce, & vtterly hewen downe lyke an vnfruteful tree. For they mantayne the barren, and make them that they can not beare, and vnto wyddowes they do no good. They pluche downe the myghtye with their power, and when they themselues are gotten vp, they are neuer without feare, as longe as they lyue. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyll not trempne it, for their eyes loke vpō their own wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme powerte, and take oute of the wayes & vtterly plucte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll the reproue me as a lyar, & lay my wordes are nothyng worth.

The.xxv. Chapter.

Baldad proueth that mankynde is cleane & vnpure before God.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, & said: Power & feare is vp him alone, that maketh peace, sitting in his highnes whole me of warre are innumerable, & whose light ariseth ouer all. But how may a mā compared vnto God, be iustified? Or, how cā he be cleane that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the mone shyneth nothynge in comparison to him, and the starres are vncleane in his sight. Howe muche more then man, that is but corruption: & the sonne of man, whyche is but a worme?

The.xxvi. Chapter.

Job declareth that man cannot helpe God, and prayseth his power.

Then answered Job, and said: O how helpest thou the weake: what cōfoute geuest thou vnto hym that hath no strength? Where in the counsell that thou shouldest geue him, which hath no wysedome? Wilt thou so shewe thine excellent ryghteousnes? Before whom hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the breth to come out of the mouth? The goastes & worthies that are slayne, and lye vnder the waue with their companions: yea & all they which dwell beneth in the hell are not hid from him, and the very destruccion of hell can not be kepte oute of his sighte. He stretched oute the north ouer the empte, & hangeth the earth vpon nothynge. He bindeth the water in hys cloudes, that they fall not downe together. He holdeth back his stoul, that it can not be sene, and spreadeth his cloudes before it.

He hath compaseth the waters vnto certayne bounders, vntill the day and nyght come to an ende. The very pillers of heauen tremble & quake at his reproue. He stilleth the sea with his power, and throwe hys wisdom hath he set fourthe the world. With his spirite hath he garnished the heauens, & with his hand hath he wounded the rebellious serpent. This is nowe a shorte summe of his doynges. But who is able sufficiently to rehearse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstand the thonder of his power?

The notes.

4. Heauen and earth haue properly no pillers nor anye thing to leapue to, but should forbeapue and beare the vp, as it appeareth of the earth aboue in this chapter: but Job taketh his similitude of our earthly buyldinges, because his hearers should so the sooner vnderstande him.

The.xxvij. Chapter.

Job protesteth his integrity, & the part of the vnbeleuers shall perish.

Also Job proceaded & with fayth in his communicacion, saying: As truly as God liueth, which hath take away my power frō me) and the almighty, that hath vexed my mynd. My lippes shall talke of no vanite, and my tonge shall speake no deceyte whyle my breth is in me, and as longe as the spirite (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrels.

God forbidde, that I should graunt your cause to be ryght. As for me, vntil mine ende come, will I neuer go frō mine innocencye. My ryghteous dealinge kepe I fast, whyche I will not forsake: my hert shall not reproue my of my dayes. 4. Therfore myne enemye shalbe founde as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte against me, as the vnrighteous. What hope hath the hypocrite, though he haue greate good, and though God geue him ryches after his hertes desire? Doeth God heare him the sooner, when he crieth vnto him in his necessite? Hath he suche pleasure and delyte in the Almighty, that he darre alwaye call vpō God? I wyll teache you in the name of God: and the thinge that I haue of the Almighty will I not kepe from you. Beholde, ye all in youre owne conceite, as though ye knewe all thinges. Wherfore then do ye go about with suche vaine wordes, saying: This is the portion that the wicked shall have of God, and the heretage that Tirauntes shall receyue of the almighty. Yf he get many children, they shall perishe with the swearde, and hys posterite, shal have scarcenesse of bread. Loke whom he leaueth behynd him, they shall dye & be buried, and no man shall haue pite of hys widdowes. Though he haue as muche money as the dust of the earthe, and rayment as redy as the clay, he maye wel prepare it: but the godly shall put it vpon him, & the innocent shall deale oute the money. His house shall endure as the moth, and as a bothe that the watcheman maketh. When the riche man dyeth, he caried nothing with him: he is gone in the twinckelynge of an eye. Destruccion taketh holde vpon him as a water floud, and the tempest stealeth hym awaie in the nyghte season. A vehemente wynde caried him hence and departeth: a stonne plucketh hym oute of his place. It fullyeth in vpon hym, and spareth him not, he maye not escape from the power therof. Then clappe men their handes at him, yea and peall of him, whan they loke vpon his place.

The notes.

a. Understande, myne sprete. He meaneth that he will not suffre that his conscience be lauty and that he will not haue an euyll conscience for myne spendyng o this life time, in which he had lyued moste innocently.

The.xxviii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that the wysdome of God is vnsearchable.

THere are places where syluer is molten, and were golde is tried: where yron is digged out of the ground, & stones resolued to metall. The darkenes shal ones come to an ende, he can seke out the grounde of all thynges: the stones, the darcke, & the horrible shadowe. With the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder the straunge people, that kno weth no good neyghbourheade: suche as are rude, vnmanerly and bepusshouns. He bringeth foode out of the earthe, & that whiche is vnder consumeth he with fyre. There is fonde a place, whose stones are cleane Saphire, & where the clottes of earthe are golde. There is a way also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vultures eye hath sene: wherin the proude & hye minded walke not, and where no lyon commeth. There putteth he his hande vpon stony rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Riuers flowe out of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaut, his eye seeth it. Out of droppes bringeth he greate floudes together & the thinge that is hyd bringeth he to lighte. Howe commeth a man then by wysedome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandinge? Verely no man can tell howe worthy a thynge she is, neither is she founde in y land of the liuinge. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The sea sayeth: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for the most fine gould, neither may the price of her be bought with any money. No wedges of goulde of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphire maye be compared vnto her. No, neyther goulde, nor Christal, neyther swete odoures, nor golden plate. There is nothinge so worthy, or so excellent, as ones to be named vnto her: for perfecte wisedome goeth farre beyonde them al. The Topas that commeth out of Inde, may in no wise be lykened vnto her: yea no maner of apparel howe pleasaunt and fayre soeuer it be.

From whence then commeth wysedome? & where is the place of vnderstandinge? She is hyd from the eyes of all men, yea & from the foules of the ayre. Destruccion and death saye: we haue hearde tell of her with oure eares. But God seyth her waie, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world & loketh vpon al that is vnder heauen. Whē he weyed the windes, & measured the waters when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the mighty floudes a lawe: Then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knew her. And vnto man he sayde: Beholde, to feare the Lorde, is wisedom, and to forsake euil, is vnderstandinge.

The.xxix. Chapter.

Job complayneth of the prosperite of this tyme past forthy reproueynge hys frendes of vnkyndes, because they sayde, that Job suffered aduersyte to hys destruccion.

MOreouer Job proceaded and wet forth in his communicacion, saying: O that I were as I was in the monethes by past, & in the daies when God preserued me: when his light shyned vpon my head: when I went after the same lyght and shininge euen thorowe the darcknesse. As it stode with me, whē I was welthy and had ynoughe: when God prospered my house: when the almighty was w me: whē my household folckes stode about me: whē my wayes rāne ouer w butter and when the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I went thorow the cytye vnto the gate, and when they set me a chaire in the streete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me) hid them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the Princes lefte of their talkinge, & layed their hande to their mouthe: when the mighty kepte styll their voice, and when their tonges cleaued to the rofe of their mouthes. When al they that heard me, called me happie: & when all they that sawe me, wyshed me good. For I delyuered the poore when he cried, and the fatherlesse that wanted helpe. He that should haue bene lost, gaue me a good worde, and the widdowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me righteousnes, whyche couered me as a garment, and equyte was my stroune. I was an eye vnto the blinde, and a fote to the lame. I was a father vnto ỹ poore and whom I knew not their cause, I sought it oute diligently. I brake the chaftes of the vnrighteous, and plucte the spoyle oute of their tethe.

Therfore I thought bereby, that I should haue dyed in my nest: ỹ that my daies should haue bene as many as the sounde of the sea. For my rote was spred oute by the water side and the dew lay vpon my coune. My honour encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me me gaue care, me they regarded, and with silence they tarped for my counsel. If I had spoken they woulde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They waited for me, as the earth doeth for the raine: and gaped vpon me, as ỹ ground doeth to receyue the.b. latter showre. When I laughed, they knew well it was not earnest: and this testimony of my countenaunce pleased them nothinge at all. When I agreed vnto their wayes, I was the chefe, and sat as a kynge amonge hys seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth suche as be in heaynesse.

The notes.

a. This righteousnes is no nother thynge, thā to lyue iustly amongst men, hurtynge no man and gruynge vnto euery man that whyche belongeth vnto him. Gen.xxx.c. ỹ Psal.xv.a.

b. By the latter showre is vnderstande holesome doctrine, whyche causeth iustice ỹ iudgement to sprynge.

The.xxx.Chapter.

The great vnkyndenes of men and mercie of God, that Job knoweth.

BVt now they that are myne inferiours and younger then I, haue me in derision: yea euen they, whose fathers I would haue thought scorne to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strength of their handes might do me no good, and as for their age, it is spent and past away: without any profit. For very misery ỹ hōger, they wet about in the wildernesse lyke wretches and beggers, plucking vp herbes from amonge the bushes, and the Iunipers rote was their meat. And when they were driuen forth, men cried after them, as it had bene after a thefe.

b Their dwellynge was beside foule brookes, yea in the caues and holes of the earth. Vpō the dape heth went they about tryinge, and in the bushe hilles they gathered them together. They were the chyldre of fooles and vnlearned, which are vtterly awop frō the world. Now am I their songe and am become their prouerbe stocke: they abhorre me, they fle far from me, and spare not spit in my face. For the Lorde hath opened his quyuer, he had hyt me, and put a bridle in my mouthe. Vpon my ryght hād they rose together against me, they haue hurte my fete, made a wage to destrope me, and my path haue they cleane marred. It was so easy for them to do me harme, that they neded no man to helpe thē. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakinge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroy me. Fearfulnesse is turned against me.

My honoure vanysheth awaye more swyftly then wynde, ỹ my prosperite departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my minde poured full of heauynesse, ỹ the dayes of trouble haue taken holde vpō me. My bones are pearced thorow in the nyghte season, ỹ my sinewes take no rest. Wyth all their power haue they chaunged my garment ỹ gyrded me therwith, as it were wt a cote. I am euen as it were clave, ỹ am become like asshes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me: ỹ though I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become mine enemy, ỹ with thy violent hande thou takest part against me. In tymes past thou didest set vp me on hie, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou geuen me a ouerthrow. Sure I am, that thou wilt dispatche me vnto death: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all men lyuinge. Now vse not men to do violence vnto thē, that are destroyed all readye but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe. Dyd I not wepe in ỹ tyme of trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuertheles where as I looked for good, euyl happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lyghte, there came darkenesse. My bowels seeth within me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely ỹ lowly came I in yea and without any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion, and cōmuned with thē. But now I am a companion of dragons, ỹ a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to blacke, and my bones are burnt with heate, my harpe is turned to sorow and my pype to wepynge.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

Job reciteth the innocencye of his liuynge, and numbreth vp his vertues.

I Made a couenaunt with mine eyes, that I would not loke vpon a damosell. For how great a portion shal I haue of God frō aboue? ỹ what enheritaūce from the almyghty on hye? Is not the vngodly ỹ he that worketh hym selfe to the company of wycked doers shall not destruccō ỹ misery come vpon him? Worth not he se my wayes, and tell all my goynges. If I haue cleaued vnto vanite or if my fete haue runne to disceyte: let me be weyed in an euē balaūce that God may se my innocencye. If so be that I haue with drawne my fote out of the right waye, or my herte hath followed myne eye lyght, or I haue stayned or defyled my handes. O then it is reason that I sowe, and another eate, yea ỹ my generacion ỹ posterite be kleane rooted oute. Yf my hert hath lusted after my neyghbours wyfe, or yf I have layd wayte at his doore. O then let my wyfe be another mans harlot, and let other lye by her. For this is a wicked dwelle and synne, that is worthy to be punished, yea a fyre that burnyp shoulde consume, and rote oute all my substaunce. Dyd I ever thinke scorne to do right vnto my servaunte and maydens, whe they had any matter against me. But seynge that God will syt in iudgement what shall I do? And for so muche as he will vndes vpset me, what answere shall I geve hym? Or that fashioned me in my mothers wõb, made he not him also? were we not bothe shapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes? When the poore desyreth any thinge at me, have I denyed it? Have I caused the wyddowe stande wayting for me in vayne? Have I eaten my porcyon alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte wyth me? for mercy grewe vp with me from my youth, and compassion from my mothers wombe. Saw I ever any man perysh thorow nakednesse and want of clothinge? Or any poore man for lack of rayment, whose lyues thanched me not, because he was warmed wt the wolle of my shepe?

Dyd I ever lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be sure to optayne: then let myne arme fall from my shoulder, and myne arme holes be brake from the ioyntes. For I have ever feared the vengeaunce & punishement of God, & knew very wel, that I was no able to beare his burthen. Have I put my truste in golde? Or have I sayde to the fyneste gould of all: thou art my confidence? Have I reioyced because my substaunce was great, and because my hande gat so muche? Dyd I ever greatly regard the rysynge of the sunne? or had I the goyng downe of the moone in greate reputacyon? Hath my hert medled priuyly wt any disceyte? Or dyd I ever kisse mine owne hande? that were a wicked dwelle worthy to be punished, for then I should have denyed the God that is above. Have I ever reioyced at the hurte of myne enemy? Or when I ever glad, that any harme happened vnto hym? Oh no. I never suffred my mouth to do such a synne, as to wysshe hym evyll. Yet they of mine owne housholde saye: who shall let vs to have oure belly full of hys fleshe? I have not suffred a straunger to lye without, but opened my doores vnto him. Have I ever done any wicked dede where thorow I shamed my selfe before men: or any abhomination, that I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I had feared any greate multitude of people, or yf I had bene dysprysed of the symple, O then shoulde I have bene afrayed. Thus have I quyetly kept my life, and not gone oute at the doore. O that I had one where vnto I myght appeale! Lo, this is my desire. Let ỳ almyghty geve me answere: and let hym that is my contrary parte, sue me with a lybell. Then shal I take it vpon my shoulder, & as a garlande about my heade. I have tolde the nõbre of my goynges & delyuered them vnto hym as to a Prynce. But yf case be that my .c. lande crye against me, or that the forowes therof make any complaynte: yf I have eaten the fruites therof vnpaied for, yea yf I have greued any of ỳ plowmen: then let thystles growe in steade of my wheate, and thornes for my barlye.

The notes.

a. To make a couenaunt with his eyen, is, to mortifye the concupiscence of the hert, that cõmeth by the meanes of the eye: whyche is to plucke out the eye, as is sayde Matth. v. c.

b. To regarde the rysinge of the sunne and the goynge downe of the moone is, to be glorious in prosperite, and to vse the thinges of this worlde to pleasure. Jerem. xvi. c. For on them that be in prosperite is the sunne counted to shyne, and the moone to go downe pureyously and pleasauntly, & on the contrary parte, to them that be in tribulacion, are bothe the sunne and the moone counted cloudy, and darkesome.

c. The lande cryeth agaynste him, when the housbande men defrauded of their wages crye therfore agaynste him, so the hyre of the workemen cryeth. Jacob. v. a. And the forowes make lamentacion, when they that plowe the grounde and make the forowes, are deputed of their duetye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The xxxii Chapter.

Eliu after the other had synyshed their communycacyon, reproueth vnkyndenesse. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spyryte of God.

SO these thre men would stryue no more wyth Job, because he helde him selfe a ryghteous mã. ¶ But. a. Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite of the kinred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iust before God. And wyth Jobs thre frindes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable answere to overcome him. Now tarped Eliu till they had ended their communycacion with Job, for why they were elder then he. So when Eliu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job answere, he was myscontent: so that he gaue answere hym selfe, and sayde: Consyderinge, that I am younge, & ye be men of age, I was afraid, & durst not shewe forth my minde, for I thought thus within my selfe. It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wisedom. Every man (no doute) hath a mind but it is the inspiracion of the Almyghty that geueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wise neyther bothe every aged man vnderstande the thinge that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (in so farre as I may be heard) & wyll shewe vpon myne oppynõ. For when I had wayted till ye made an ende of your talking & hearde youre wysedome: what argumẽtes pe made in poure communycacyon: yea whē I had dylygentlye pondred what pe sayde, I I founde not one of you that made any good argumente agaynst Job, or that directly could make answere vnto hys wordes: lest ye shuld prayse youre selues, to haue founde oute wysdome: because it is God that hath caste hym oute, and no mā. Neuertheles, seyng he hath D not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll not I answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coude not make answere, nor speake one worde) but in so muche as ye wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke dommē men, and makynge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shappe hym an answere, and to shewe hym my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is in me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whyche hath no brute, and bursteth the newe bottels in sunder. Therfore wyl I speake, that I may haue a brute: I wyl open my lyppes, & make answere. I wyll regarde no maner of person, no man wyll I spare. For yf I wolde go about to please men, I knowe not, how sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The notes.

a.S. Hyerome in hys treatyse of ỹ tradicions of the Hebrues vpon Genesis sayth, that thys Elyu was that Balaam, of whome is spoken Numer.xxiij.

The.xxxiij. Chapter.

Elyu sheweth wherein Job offended. What God maye vse not styrue, and curyously searche ouer hys workes.

Herfore heare my wordes (O A Job) and herken vnto me all, ỹ I wyll saye: Beholde, I wyl open my mouthe, and my tonge shall speake out of my chawes. My herte shall order my wordes aryghte, & my lyppes shall talke of pure wysdome. The spirite of God hath made me, & the breth of ỹ almyghtye hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canste, then geue me answere: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I euen as thou, for I am fashioned, and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore, thou nedest not be afrayed of me, neyther nedest thou to feare, that my auctoryte shalbe to heauye for the. Now haste B thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue heard the noyse of thy wordes: I am clene without any faute, I am innocente, & there is no wyckednesse in me. But lo, he hath ymagined a quarell agaynste me, and taketh me for hys enemye, he hath put my fote in the stockes, & loketh narowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wil I make answere.

Shulde God be reproued of man? Why dost thou then stryue agaynst hym, because he geueth the no accomptes of all hys doynges? For when God doth ones commaunde a thynge, there shulde no man be curyous, to searche whether it be ryghte. In dreames and vysyons of the nyght season (when slombring commeth vpon men, that they fall a slepe in theyr beddes) he rouseth them in the eares, C he informeth them, and sheweth them playnelye, that it is he, which withdraweth man from vnpitie, delyuereth hym from pryde, kepeth hys soule from destruccyon, and his life from the swarde. He chastneth hym with sycknesse, and buyngeth hym to hys bedde: he layeth sore punyshment vpon hys bones, so ỹ hys lyfe maye awaye with no bread, & hys soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meate. In so muche ỹt hys body is cleane cōsumed awaye, and hys bones apeare no more. Hys soule drawēth on to destruccyon, & hys lyfe to death. Nowe yf there be a* messenger (one *That is, an amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto instructor in man, and to shewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto hym, & sayeth: He shalbe delyuered, that he fall not downe to D destruccyon, for I am fullye reconcyled. Then hys fleshe (which hath bene in myserye and trouble) shalbe as it was in hys youth. For yf he submytte hym self vnto God he is graycious, and sheweth hym his countenaunce ioyfully, and rewarde man for hys ryghteousnes. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hath chastened and reformed me: I dyd vnryghteously, neuertheles he hath not recompensed me therafter. Yea he hath delyuered my soule from destruccyon, and my lyfe, that it seeth the lyght. Lo, thus woorcketh God alwaye with man, that he kepeth hys soule from perdycyon, and lyghteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuyng. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde thy tyl, vntyll I haue spoke. But yf thou hast any thyng to saye, then answere me, and speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. If thou hast nothyng, then heare me, and holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

The.xxxiiij. Chapter.

Elyu proueth the iustyce of God, which suffreth the wycked, and preuenteth all.

Elyu proceadynge forth in his cōmunycacyon, sayde: Heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouthe tasteth the meates, so the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs take it oute among oure selues, that we may knowe what is ryghte. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but GOD doth me wronge. I muste nedes be a lyar, though my cause be ryghte, and vprightly I am payned Lyke before where as I make no fout: where is there such in the.xxvj. one as Job, that dyaucheth vp scornefulnes lyke water: which goeth in the compayny of wycked doers, & walketh with vngodly men? For he sayeth: Though a man be good, yet is he naughte before God. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shulde wrōle with wyckednesse: and farre be it frō the almyghtye, that he shuld medle with unrighteous dealynge: but he rewardeth the workes of man, and causeth ewerye man to fynde accordynge to hys wayes. For sure it is, that God condemneth no man wrongfullye, and the iudgemente of the Almyghtye is not unrighteous. Who ruleth the earth in hys stead? Or, whome hath he set to governe the whole worlde? To whome hath he geuen hys herte, for to drawe hys spirite and breth vnto hym? All flesh shall come together vnto naught, & all men shall turne agayne vnto earthe. If thou nowe haue understandynge, heare what I say, and herken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte? If thou wert a verye innocente man, shuldest thou then be punyshed? For he is euen the same, that knoweth the rebellyous hyndes, and sayth to Princes: Ungodly men are ye. He hath none respecte vnto the persones of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then pore. For they be al hys worke of hys handes. In the twynckelynge of an eye shal they be slayne: and at midnight, whē the people and the tyraunte rage, then shall they perysshe, and be taken awaye without handes. And why? hys eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seith all hys goynges. There is no darckenes, nor thicke shadow, that can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgemente with God.

Many one, yea innumerable doth he punyshe, and setteth other in theyr steades. For he knoweth theyr cupll and darcke workes, therfore shall they be destroyed. They that were in the stede of beares, dealte lyke ungodly men. Therfore turned they backe traytorously and vnfaythfully from hym, & wolde not receyue hys wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and nowe he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in necessite. If he delyuer and graunte pardō, who wil iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde awaye hys countenaunce, who wyll turne it aboute agayne, whether it be to the people or to anye man? For the wyckednesse and synne of the people, he maketh an vproure to rayse ouer them. For so muche then as I haue begonne to talke of GOD, I wyll not hynder the. If I haue gone a mysse, enfourme me: yf I haue done wronge, I wyl leaue of. Wylte thou not geue a reasonable answere? Art thou afrayed of anye thynge, seynge thou beganneste fyrste to speake, & not I? For in the men of understandyng & wysdome, that haue heard me, myght saye: What causte thou speake? As for Job he hath neither spoken to the purpose nor wiselye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath turned hym self to the wycked: yea above hys synnes he hath blasphemed. whiche offence he hath done ryd before vs, in that he sturyeth against God with his wordes.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

A further rebuke of Elihu, proouing that God is not to be iudged by man.

Elihu spake moreouer, and sayde: Thynkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before GOD? Seynge, thou sayest so, howe dorst thou knowe it? What thynge haste thou more excellente then I, that I am a synner? Therfore wyll I geue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyder the cloudes, how they are hyer then thou. If thou synnest, what dorst thou vnto hym? If thyne offences be manye, howe getteste thou his fauoure? yf thou be ryghteous what geuest thou hym? Or what receyueth he of thy handes? Of such an ungodly persone as thou, and of the sone of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendeste to be: there is a great crye & complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euerye man complayneth vpon the cruell arme of tyrannes. For suche one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? & that styrreth vpon vs, & we myght praise him in the nyghte: Whiche geueth vs more vnderstandyng then he doth the beastes of the earthe, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

If anye suche complaynt, no man geueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyraunte. But yf a man call vpon God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the almyghtye accepte hys crye? When thou spekest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, and put thy truste in hym? Then sheth he no violence in his wrath neither hath the pleasure in curyous & depe inquisicions. Therfore hath Job opened hys mouthe but in vayne, and folyshlye hathe he made so many wordes.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

Elihu declareth wherefore God punysheth and correcteth.

Elihu proceaded forth in his talking & sayde: Hold the styll a lytle, & I shal shewe the, what I haue yet to speake on Godes behalfe. I wil open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstandynge, and proue my maker ryghteous. True are my wordes, & no lyer is he that knowledge where with al I argue against the, is perfect. Behold, God casteth not away the myghtye, for he hym selfe is myghtye in power and wysdome.

As for the ungodly, he preserueth the not, but helpeth the poore to their ryght. He turneth not his eyes awaye frō the ryghteous, he setteth vp kynges in theyr trone, and confyrmeth them, so that they alwaye sit there in. But yf they be layed in prison & cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of powerte: then sheweth he the theyr workes & deedes & the synnes where with they haue vsed cruell violence.

a. He with punyshynge and nurturynge of them, rouseth them in the eares, warneth the to leaue of from their wyckednesse, and to amende. If they nowe will take hede, and be obedyente, they shall weare oute their dayes in prosperite, and their yeares in pleasure & lope. But yf they wyl not obeye, they shal go thorowe the swearde, and perysh or euer they be aware. As for suche as be lapued, dissemblers and ypocrytes, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpō hym, though they be hys prysoners. Thus their soule perysheth in folishnesse, and their lyfe with the condemned. The poore delyuereth he oute of hys straytnesse, and comforteth suche as be in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylte be contente (from the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: and yf thou wilt holde the quyete, he shall fyll thy table with plentyousnesse.

L Neuertheles thou hast condemned the iudgemente of the ungodly, yea euen suche a iudgement and sentence shalt thou suffre. For then shall not thy cause be fyled with cruelte, nor parcyall with mayne gyftes. Hath God ordeyned then, that the glorious lyfe of the, & all suche myghtye men shuld not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyl there come a nyght for the, to se other people in thy stead. But beware that thou turne not a syde to wyckednesse and synne, whiche hyther to thou hast chosen more then mesenesse. Behold God is of a myghtye hye power: Where is there suche a gyde and lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reproue hym of his wayes? who will saye vnto him: thou hast done wronges?

P Consyder how greate and excellent his workes be, whom all men laue and prayse: yee wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth oure knowledge, wether are we able to come to the experience of hys yeares. He turneth the water to small droppes, he bryngeth hys clouddes to gether for to rayne, so that they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can spreade out the clouddes (a couerynge of hys tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them: and to couer the botome of the sea. Vp these thinges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meate. In the turnynge of a hande he hydeth the lyght, & at hys cōmaundement it commeth agayne. The tydinge vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the cattell.

a. With punyshyng & nurturynge to remynde them in the eares, is to bringe them to the knowledge of their synnes, and to cause the to be perswaded in them selues that they be punyshed for them.

The.xxxvij. Chapter.

AT this, my herte is afrayed, & A moued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of hys voyce, & the noyse that goeth out of hys mouth. He gouerneth euery thig vnder the heauen, & his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roreynge voyce followeth hym: for hys glorious maiestye geueth suche a thonder clappe, that (though a mā heare it) yet may he not perceiue it afterward. It geueth an horyble sounde, when God ordeyneth oute hys voyce: great thynges doth he, whiche we can not comprehende. When he commaundeth the snow, it falleth vpon the earth: As sone as he geueth the tyme a charge, commendyng the showers haste their strength, & B fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man that they myght knowe their owne workes. The beastes creepe into their dennes, and take their reste. Oute of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the.a. breth of God, the frost commeth, & the waters are shed abroad. The clouddes do their labourre in gruyng mystines, the clouddes poure downe their rayne. He dyspersyth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth hym to deale oute hys workes, that they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorowe the whole worlde: whether it be to punysh any lande, or to do good vnto them, that serue him.

Herken vnto this (O Job) stande styll, and C consider the wonderous workes of God. Art thou of counsell with God, when he doth these thinges? When he causeth the lyghte to come forthe of his clouddes? Arte thou of hys counsell when he spardeth oute the clouddes? Hast thou the perfect knowledge of his wonders? and howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styll thorowe the Southe wynd? Hast thou helped him to spreade oute the heauen, which is to loke vpō, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache me what we shall saye vnto hym, for we are dumme because of darckenes. Shall it be tolde hym what I saye? Shulde a D man speake, or shuld he kepe it backe? For euery man seeth not the lyghte, & he keepeth cleare in the clouddes, which he cleuseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought oute of the North, but the prayse & honoure of Gods feare commeth from God hym self. It is not we that can fynde oute the almyghty for in power, equyte, and righteousnesse, he is hyer then can be expressed. Seyng then euery body feareth him, why shuld not all wise men also stande in feare of hym.

The notes.

a. The breth of God here sygnifyeth a stryng and vehemente wynde, as in the Southe wynde.

The.xxxviij. Chapter.

¶ The wonders and meruailes that the Lorde hath done from the begynnynge.

Then

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayd: what is he that hideth hymselfe with folysh wordes? Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I will aske thee, & thou geue me a perfecte answere. Where wast thou, when I layde the foundacyons of the earth? Tell playnly yf thou hast vnderstandyng. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath spreade the lyne vpon it? Whereupon stande the pylers of it? Or who layed ỳ corner stone? Where wast thou, a. when the morning starres praysed me together, & all the chyldren of God reioysed triumphantly? Who shut the sea with doores, when it broke forth as a chylde out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a couerynge for it, & wadled it wyth the darcke: when I gaue it my commaundement, makynge doores & barres for it, sayng: Hytherto shalt thou come, but no farther, & here shalte thou lay doune thy proude & hye wawes. Hast thou geuen the mornyng his charge, as long as thou hast bene) and shewed the daye sprynge his place, ỳ it might take holde of the corners of the earthe, & that the vngodlye myght be shaken out? Turne to them a weapons haste thou turned lyke claye & set them vp agayne as the chaungynge of a garment. Yea thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their lyght, & broke the arme of the proude. Canst thou ener into the grounde of the sea: or haste thou walked in the lowe corners of ỳ depe? Haue the gates of death ben opened vnto the, or haste thou sene the doore of euerlastig treasure? Hast thou also perceaued, how broode the earth is? Tell yf thou haste knowledge of all, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, & where darckenes is: that thou mayest bringe ỳm vnto their quarters, yf thou canste tell the waye to their houses.

Knowest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be? Wentest thou ener in to the threasuries of the snowe, or haste thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, whiche I haue prepared against the tyme of trouble, against the tyme of battell and warre? By what waye is the lyght parted, and the heate deale out vpon the earth? Who deuydeth ỳ aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the storme wether, that it watereth & moysteneth the dry and baren grounde, to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wylderne where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hath begotten the droppes of drue? Owte of whose wombe came the yce? Who hath gyrded the volumes of ỳ ayre, that the waters are as harde as stones, and ỳ couered about the depe. Haste thou brought the bondes of Arcturus together? Or art thou able to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bringe forth the mornynge starre or the reuolyng starre at conuenyente tyme, & conuoye them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordynaunce therof vpon the earth? Wouldest thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, ỳ they maye powre doune a greate rayne vpon the? Canste thou thonder also that they maye go their waye, & be obedient vnto the, saying: Lo here are we. Who geueth sure wysdome or vnderstandyng? who numbreth the cloudes in wysdome? who stylleth the vehement waters of heauē? who turneth ỳ clottes to dust, & them to be clottes agayne? Huntest thou the praye from the hon, or fedest thou hys welpes lying in their denes, & lurkyng in their couches? who prouydeth meate for ỳ raurn, when his younge ones crye vnto God, and fle about for wante of meate?

The notes.

a. He saith not that heauen was made before ỳ earthe, but when hys godlye wysdome made them, he saith, he had a dwellyng place & that he made no earthly mansyō: for then was he prayed of the angels, which here are called ỳ chyldren of God. He meaneth also that there was no man by at the edifyenge, when he made the starres and created the intellectuall & spyrytuall natures.

The.xxxix. Chapter.

God teacheth vnto Job, shewyng vnto hym by the exemples of hys workes, that hys ryghteousnes is no barcharde.

Knowest thou the tyme when ỳ wylde goates bringe forthe their younge among the stony rockes? Or layest thou wayte when the hyndes vse to fawne? Knowest thou the monethes after their conception, that thou knowest the tyme of their bearynge? or when they bye doune, when they caste their younge ones, & when they are delyuered of their trauayle and payne? How their younge ones growe vp & waxe greate thorowe good fedynge: who letteth the wylde asse go free, or who looseth the bondes of the wilde? Vnto whom I haue geue the wylderne to be their house, & the barrayne lande to be their dwellynge place. That they maye geue no force for the multytude of people in the cyttye, neither regard the crying of the driuer, but seke their pasture about the mountaynes, and folow ỳ grene grasse. Wyll the vnicorne be so tame as to bide the stroke, or to abyde by thy crybbe? Canste thou bynde the vnicorne about him in the furrowes, to make him plowe after the in the valleys? Wayest thou trust him (because he is strong) or commyte thy labour vnto hym? Wayest thou beleue him, that he wyll bringe home the corne, or to carry any thyng vnto the barne? The Estrych (whose fethers are softer then the wynges of the sparowe hauke) when he hath layed hys egges vpon ỳ grounde he bideth them in the dust, & forgetteth them: so that they myght be troden with fete, or bee ben with some wylde beaste. So harde is he vnto hys yong ones, as though they were not

not hys, & laboureth in hayne without anye feare. And that because God hath taken wysdome from hym, & hath not geuen hym vnder standynge. When hys tyme is, he lyfteth vp on hye, & scorneth neyther fo[r] horse nor man.

Haste thou geuen the horse his strength, or learned him to bowe downe his necke & feare? that he letteth him selfe be dryuen louthe lyke a grashopper, where as the stoute neyghynge of his maketh, is fearfull: he breaketh the ground with the hoffes of hys fete cheartfullye in hys strength, & runneth to mete the harnesse men.

D He laycth a syde all feare, hys stomach is not abated, neyther starteth he a backe for anye swerde. Though he the quyuers rattle vpō him though the speare & shyld glystre: yet ruſheth he in fearcelye, and beateth vpon the ground, he feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as sone as he heareth the thawmes blow, thushe (sayth he) for he smelleth the battell a farre of, the noyse, the Captaynes and ſ thou tyuge.

Commeth it thorow thy wisdome, that the Goshauke slyeth towarde the South? Dothe the Aegle mounte vp, and make his nest on hye at the commaundement? He abydeth in ſ stonye rockes, and vpon the hye tappes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and hys eyes sparcle about with hys eyes. His younge ones are fed with bloude, & where any deade bodye lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job & sayde: Can he that stryueth with the almightye, be at reste? Shulde not he whiche disputeth with God, geue hym an answere? Job answered the Lorde, & sayde: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therfore will I a. laye my hand vpon my mouth. Once or twise haue I spoken, but I will saye no more.

The notes.

a. To put his hand vpon his mouth, is to hold hys peace, & to be styll & astonyed at the sodayne anger of God. Psalme. lxij. b.

The.xl.Chapter.

Job humbleth himself vnto God, the discripcyon of an Elephant. Leuiathan.

1 Job answereth a

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, & sayde: Gyrd vp thy loynes lyke a man, & tell me the thynges that I will aske the. Wilt thou disanulle my iudgemente? Or wilt thou condempne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made righteous? Ye thynke * a. arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as hys doeth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power, hye, decke the in thy holy araye, poure out the indignacyon of thy wrath: se that thou caste downe all the proude, loke well, that thou make all suche as be stubborne to obeye: treade all the vngodlye vnder thy fete, caste them downe into the myre, and couer their faces in darcknesse. Then will I confesse also, ſ thyne owne ryghte hande hath saued the.

Behold, b. Behemoth (whom I made with the) which eateth hay as an oxe. Beholde strength he is in his loynes, & what power he hathe in the muscle of hys bodye. He sturdeth out hys tayle like a Cedre tre, all hys vaynes are knit. His thynnes are lyke pypes of brasse, hys rygge bones are lyke staues of yron. Ye euen when God made hym, he ordered the wylde C vnrule for hym, that the mountaynes shuld geue hym gresse, where all the beastes of the fylde take their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the shaddes, the frumes hyde him with their shadowe, & the wyllowes of the broke couer hym rounde about. Lo, without any labour myght he drynke out of the whole flood & suppe of Jordane without anye traple.

Who darre laye handes vpon him openlye, & vndertake to catche hym? Or, who darre put a hooke thorowe hys nose, & laye a snare for hym.

Darrest thou drawe out. c. Leuyathan wt an angle, or bynde hys tonge with a snare? Canste thou put a ryngge in the nose of hym, or bore hys chaftes thorow wt a nayle. Will he D make many layre wordes wyth the (thynckest thou) or flatter the? Will he make a couenaunte with the? Or art thou able for to compel him to do the contynuall seruyce? Wylt thou take thy pastyme wyth hym as with a byrd, or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye bewe hym in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canste thou stycke nett with his skynne, or fylle pannyers with hys heade? Darrest thou laye handes vpon hi? It is better for the to consyder what harme might happē the there thorow & not to touche hym. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon hym, he shall beggyle the: Euery man also that seyth hym, shal go backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde as to rayse hym vp.

The notes.

a. Arme for power, strength or myght: as in Psalm. lxxxix.

b. The Hebrues vnderstande by Behemoth the greatest beast in the earth that is an Elephant. Other vnderstand thereby any earthly beaste that is great but vnto an Elephant do al the properties here vrged wyll agree wherfore it seemeth most agreable to the truth, that by the worde be signified an Elephant.

c. Leuyathan as diuerse learned men exposite signifyeth the greatest fyshe that liueth in ſ sea, which is a whalle.

The.xli.Chapter.

Of the same Leuyathan whereof is mencyoned in the Chapter afore.

Who is able to stande before me? Or, who hath geuen me anye thynge afore hande, that I am bounde to rewarde hym again? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I meane hym not, whether he therof or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hym vp, & stryppeth hym out of hys clothes, or who taketh him by the dyt of hys bupde? Who openeth the dore of hys face? for he hath horyble teth rounde about. Hys body is couered with scales as it were with shyldes, locke to, kepte, & welcom pacte together. One is so ioyned to another, y no ayre can come in: Yea one hangeth so vpon another, & sticketh so together, that they can not be sundered. His neesynge is lyke a lyghte-yng fyre, & his eyen lyke the morning sprynge. Out of hys mouthe go torches & fyre balles out of hys nostrels there goeth a smoke, lyke an oute of an hote sethynge pot. His berth maketh the coles burne, the flamme goeth out of hys mouth. In his necke remayneth strength & before hys face sorow is turned to gladnes. The membres of his body are ioyned so strait one to another, and cleue so fast together, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as harde as a stone, & as faste as the stythe that the hammer man smyteth vpon. When he goeth, the myghtiest of all are afrayed, & the waues swap. If he drawe out the swearde, there maye neyther speare nor burst plate, abyde hym. He setteth as much by a strawe as by yron, and as much by a rotte stocke as by metall. He starteth not away for hym that bendeth the bowe: & as for stynge stones, he setteth as moche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in the myre lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh the depe to seethe and boyle lyke a pot, & sheweth the sea together lyke an ointment. The waye is lyght after hym, the depe is hys walkynge place. Vpon earth is there no power lyke vnto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man will consyder all hys thinges, thys same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

The xlij. Chapter.

The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for his frendes & his goodes are restored double vnto him.

Then Job answered the Lorde, and sayd: I know that thou hast power ouer all thynges, & that there is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can hyde his owne counsell fro the, but it shalbe knowne? Therfore haue I spoken vnwyselye, seynge these thynges are so hye, & passe myne vnderstandynge. Oh heare thou vnto me also, & let me speake: now I wyll aske the, & haue geuen dylygence vnto the, & notwithstandynge I se the with myne eyen. Wherfore I geue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and asshes.

Now when the Lord had spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Elyphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the & thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken the thynge that is right before me, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath done. Therfore take vnto you seuen bullocks and seuen rammes, and go to my seruaunte Job: offre vp also for your selues a burntoffrynge: & let my seruaunte Job praye for you. Hym will I accepte, & not deale with you after youre folyshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thynge whiche is right, like as my seruaunt Job hath done.

So Elyphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhyte & Sophar the Naamathite went their waye, and dyd accordynge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the persone of Job, and the Lorde turned hym vnto Job, when he prayed for his frendes. Yea the Lorde gaue Job twyse as muche as he had afore.

And then came there vnto him all hys brethren, all hys sisters, with all them that had bene of hys acquayntaunce afore, & ate bread with hym in his house, wondrynge at hym, & comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euery man gaue hym a shepe and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job richer then he was before: for he had xiiij. M. shepe. vi. M. camels. a. M. yoocke of oxen, & a. M. asshes. He had seuen sonnes & iij. doughters. The fyrste called Dayerthe sweete Dowtre: the thyrde all pleasauntes. In all the lande were none found so fayre as the doughters of Job, & their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethren. After this lyued Job. xl. yeres, so that he sawe his children, & his children children vnto the fourthe generacyon. And so he dyed, beynge olde & of a perfecte age.

¶ Thos that forsake the counsayls and tradi tions of the wicked, and wholy geue thē selues to knowe the lawe of God, and to worke it in their liuyng: doth this Psalme pronoūce blessed, both here and in the woyld to come: and the contrary parte, in both the worldes, miserable and wretched.

Blessed is the mā, ꝑ goeth not in the counsayll of the vngodly: that abydeth not in a. ꝑ waye of sinners b. and sitteth not in the seate of ꝑ scornefull.

But delyteth in the lawe of the Lord, and exercyseth hym self in hys lawe, bothe daye and nyght.

And he a man is lyke a tree planted by the waterspyde, that bringeth forthe hys fruite in due season.

His leaues shall not fall af, & lyke what soeuer he doth, it shall prosper.

As for the vngodly, it is not so with them but they are lyke the dust, wych the wynde scatereth awaye from the grounde.

Therfore ꝑ vngodly shall not be able .c. to stande in the iudgement, nether the synners in the congregacyon of the ryghteous.

For the Lorde alloweth the waye of the righteous, but the waye of the vngodly shal perysshe.

¶ The notes.

a. The maners and ordinaunces of sinners wher in they walke as it were in a waye are called the waye of sinners. And in the scriptures, it is commune too take this waye for whatsoeuer we do or go aboute be it good or euell. As in the laste verse of this psalme. The waye of sinners.

b. He sitteth in the seate of the scornfull, that conspireth with them and becometh felowe of their mischief, as in the psalm. xxvi. b. To sit in the seat of ꝑ scornefull.

c. He standeth in iudgemente, that wynneth the procesle, and hath sentence pronounceth on his side, as he that leseth the procesle and hath sentence pronounced agaynst right and trueth, robbeth iudgemēt. As in Esai. v. a. So then this text meaneth no more here, but that the wicked so terrible a sentence geuen vpon theym, that they shall not be able to abyde when the Lord shal come to the general iudgement. It meaneth not that the wicked shal not appeare in iudgement. To stande in iudgement.

¶ The Notes.

To the chaunter. a. The which is here trãslated, to the chãter: is in Hebrue Lamnazeah. Which word after Ezra and Dauid Kimhi (expositoures in hebrue) signifieth to the chiefe of the syngars, whom we commonly cal in englishe, the father of the quyre or chaunter. This interpretation also, doth with the moste number and the best lerned of the latmistes, best alowe, and therfore haue I folowed the same the whole Psalter thorowe expressynge it by this word chaunter. Notwythstanding diuers authours do diuersly enterprete it. Some saye that it signifieth, to the victour or ouercõmar, some to the victorye, whiche maye thus agre together, if thou take a psalme to be a stirring vp and exhortacion to put our truste in God, be yng sure to obtayne the victorye. And where some enterprete, vnto ỹ ende vnderstãd euen the same, For therfore do we put our trust in God, that we may come to the end of the victorye. Some translate the title thus. A vehemente and often made exhortacion in instrumentes of musiche, a psalme to Dauid, that is, as they them selues expounde it. A psalme reuelate vnto Dauid. For Dauid is in Hebrue the datiue case and not the genitiue.

Neginoth .b. b. This word signifieth ỹ tune or note of ỹ instrumẽts. Wher after ỹ Psalmes before whiche it is put ỹred were longe. For the Psalmes were song at certen instrumentes but so that the swete tune and instrumente, prepared the mynde more perfectly to receyue the worde of the holy ghoste.

The Lorde is my succour, my refuge, my sauoure: my God, my helper in whome I trust: my buckler, b. the horne of my, healthy, and my protection.

I will prayse the Lorde, and call vppon hym, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes.

c. The sorowes of deathe compassed me, and the bookes of vngodlynes made me afrayed.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, the snares of death take holde vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpõ the Lorde, and complayned vnto my God.

So

So he hearde my voyce out of hys holye temple, and my complaynte came before hym pe euen into hys eares.

B Then the earth trembled and quaked, the verye foundacyones of the hylles shoke and were remoued, because he was wroth.

There wente a smoke oute of hys nostrels and a consuming fyre out of his mouth so that .b. coales were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heauens & .c. came downe, and it was darke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon the .f. Cherubyns & dyd flee: he came flyenge wyth the wynges of the wynde.

He made darcknesse his pauylion rounde aboute hym, wyth darcke water and thycke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of his presence the cloudes remoued, wyth hayle stones and coales of fyre.

The Lord also thondred out of the heauen and the heygth gaue his thonder wyth haile stones and coales of fyre.

He sente oute hys arrowes and scattered them, he cast foorth lyghtenynges, and destroyed them.

The springes of waters were sene, and the foundacyons of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chydynge (O Lorde) at the blastynge and brieth of thy displeasures.

C He sente downe from the heygth to fetch me, and toke me out of .g. greate waters.

He delyuered me fro my stronge enemies & fro my foes whych were to myghtye for me

They preuented me in the time of my trouble, but the Lorde was my defence.

He brought me forthe also into lyberte: and delyuered me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lorde shall rewarde me after my righteous dealynge, and accordynge to the clennesse of my handes shall he recompense me.

For I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde: and haue not behaued my selfe wickedly agaynst my God.

I haue an eye vnto all hys lawes, and caste not oute hys commaundementes fro me.

D Vncorrupte wyll I be before him, and will eschue myne owne wyckednes.

Therfore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my ryghteous dealynge, and accordinge vnto the clennesse of my handes in his eye sighte. i.

With the holye thou shalte be holye, and wyth the innocente thou shalte be innocente.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalte be frowarde.

For thou shalte saue the poore oppressed, and bynge doune the hye lokes of the proude.

Thou lyghtest my candell, O Lorde my God: thou maketh my darcknesse to be light: For in the I can dyscomforte an hoste of men: yea in my God I can leape ouer E the walle.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyrnace to a shylde of defence, for all them that trust in hym.

For who is God, but the Lord? Or who hath any strength, but our God?

It is God that gyrded me wyth strength, and made my way vncorrupt.

He hathe made my fete lyke hertes fete, and set me vpon hye.

He teacheth myne handes to fyght, & maketh myne armes to breake euen a bowe of steele.

Thou haste geuen me the defence of thy healthe, thy ryghte hande vpholdeth me, and thy louynge correctyon maketh me greate.

Thou hast made .h. roume ynough vnder me for to go, that my fote steppes shuld not slyde.

I wyll folowe vpon myne enemyes, and take them: I wyll not turne tyll they be dys- F comforted.

I wyll smyte them, they shall not be able to stand, but fal vnder my fete.

Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto the battel, thou hast throwen them al downe vnder me that rose vp agaynst me.

Thou hast made myne enemyes to turne their backes vpon me, thou haste destroyed them: that hated me.

They cryed, but there was none to helpe them: yea euen vnto the Lorde, but he heard them not.

I wyll beate them as smalle as the duste clape in the wynde, I wyll cast them out as the clap in the streetes.

Thou shalt delyuer me from the stryuynges of ỳ people, thou shalt make me ỳ .i. head of the Heathen.

A people whom I haue not knowne shal serue me.

As soone as they heare of me, they shall obey me, but the straung chyldren dyssemble wyth me.

The straunge chyldren are waxen olde, G and go halynge out of their pathes.

The Lorde lyueth: and blessed be, my helper, praysed be the God of my healthe.

Euen the God which seeth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that delyuereth me frō my cruell enemyes: thou shalt lyfte me vp from them that ryse against me, thou shalt rid me from the wycked man.

For this cause I wyll geue thankes vnto the (O Lorde) among the gentiles, and synge prayses vnto thy name.

Greate prosperitye geueth he vnto hys kynge: and sheweth louynge kyndnesse vnto Dauid hys anoynted, yea & vnto his sede for euermore.

¶ This Psalme made Dauid vpõ some great ieopardus perill, agaynste whyche he hertened himselfe not a lytle, with callyng to remembrãce the promes of God: and therby perfuaded him self that he shuld haue victorye, and after lyue peaceably in the trade of godly lyuyng.

Of Dauid.

A THe Lorde is my lyghte and my healthe: whome then shoulde I feare: the Lorde is the strength of my life, for whom then shuld I be afraied?

Therfore when the wycked, euen myne enemies and my foes, came vpon me, to eate vp my flesh, stombled and fell.

B Though he an hoost of men were layed agaynst me, yet shall not my herte be afraied: and though there rose vp warre agaynst me, yet will I put my trust in him.

One thynge haue I desyred of the Lorde, which I will require: namelye, that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my lyfe, to beholde the fayre beutye of the Lorde, and to visit his temple.

For in the tyme of trouble he hath hydde me in his tabernacle, yea in the secrete place of his dwellynge hath he kept and set me vp vpon a. a. rocke of stone.

And now hath he. b. lifted vp my head aboue myne enemyes, that compassed me rounde aboute.

Therfore will I offer in his dwellynge. C the oblacyon of thanckesgeuynge: I will singe and speake prayses vnto the Lorde.

Herken vnto my voyce, O Lorde, when I crye vnto the: haue mercye vpon me and heare me.

My herte speketh vnto the, my face seketh the, yea Lorde, thy face will I seke.

O .c. hyde not thou thy face fro me, caste not in thy seruaunt of displeasure.

Thou art my succour, leaue me not, nether forsake me. O God my sauioure.

For my father and my mother haue forsaken me, but the Lorde hath taken me vp. D

Shewe me thy waye O Lord and lede me in the right path, because of myne enemyes.

Delyuer me not into the wyles of myne aduersaryes, for there are false wytnesses risen vp against me, and they ymagyne myschefe.

Neuertheles I beleue verely to se the goodnesse of the Lorde in the .d. lande of the lyuynge.

O .e. tarye thou the Lordes leysure, be strõg let thyne herte be of good comfort, and waite thou still for the Lorde.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

A How louyng is God vnto Israel, to suche as are of a cleane herte?

Neuertheleße my fete were almoste gone, my treadynges had well nye sloppte.

And why? I was grieued at the wicked, to se the vngodly in suche prosperitie.

For they are in no parell of deathe, but stande fast lyke a palace.

They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke, neither are they plaged like other me.

And this is ꝑ cause that they be so puft vp in pryde, and ouerwhelmed with crueltie & vnrighteousneße.

Their eyes swell for fatneße, they do euē what they lyst.

B Corrupte are they, and speake blasphemyes maliciously, proude and presumptuous are their wordes.

They stretche forth their mouthe vnto the heauen, and their tongue goeth thorow the worlde.

Therfore fall the people vnto them, and therout suche they no small auauntage.

Tush (saye they) howe shoulde God perceiue it? is there knowlege in the most hyest?

Lo, these are the vngodly, these prosperē in the worlde, these haue ryches in possessiō.

Shoulde I then clense my herte in vayne (thought I) and .a. washe my handes in innocency?

Wherefore shoulde I be then punyshed daily, & be chastened euery morninge?

C Yea I had almoost also sayd euē as they: but lo, then shoulde I haue condemned the generacion of thy chyldren.

Then thought I, to vnderstande this, but it was to harde for me.

Vntyll I went into the Sanctuary of God, and considred the ende of these men.

Namely, how thou hast set them in a slipperye place, that thou mayst cast them doune headlinges and destrope them.

O how sodenly do they consume, perysh, and come to a fearful ende?

Yea, euē like as a dreame when one awaketh, so makest thou their .b. ymage to vanysh out of the cytye.

¶ An instruccion of Asaph.

O God, wherfore doest thou cast vs so cleane away? why is thy a. wrath so hoote agaynste the sheepe of thy pasture?

O thynke vpon thy congregacion, whome thou hast purchased frō the beginnynge: the stafe of thyne enheritaunce, whome thou hast redemed, euen this hyll of Sion wherein thou dwellest.

Treade vpon them with thy fete, and cast them doune to the groūde, for the enemye hath destroyed altogether in the Sanctuary.

Thyne aduersaries roare in thy houses, & set vp their banners for tokens.

B

Men may se the axes glyster about, lyke as those that hewe in the wood.

They cut doune all the sprynge worke of the Sanctuary with hylles and axes.

They haue set fyre vpon the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwellyng place of thy name, euen vnto the groūde.

Yea, they say in their hertes: let vs spoyle them altogether, thus haue they burnt vp all the houses of God in the lande.

We se oure tokens no more, there is not one Prophet more, no not one that vnderstādeth any more.

O God, how long shall the aduersary do this dishonoure? how longe shall the enemye blaspheme thy name? for euer?

Why withdrawest thou thyne hand, why pluckest thou not thy right hande out of thy bosome, to consume thyne enemyes?

But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doth it hym selfe.

Thou deuidest the sea thorow thy power thou breakest the heades of the dragons in the waters.

Thou smitest the heades of Leuiathan in peces, and geuest him to be meate for people in the wyldernes.

Thou diggest vp welles and brookes, thou dryest vp mighty waters.

The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thine thou hast prepared the lightes and the sunne.

Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made both sommer and winter.

Remember this, O Lord, how the enemy rebuketh, and howe the foolyshe people blaspheme thy name.

O delyuer not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto the beastes, and forget not the congregacion of the.b. poore for euer.

Loke vpon the couenaunte, for the darcke houses of the earth are full of wyckednesse.

O let not the symple go awaye ashamed: for the poore and needy geue prayses vnto thy name.

¶ She ſheweth that it is the commaundement of God and a ſpecial good thynge, perfectly to remembre the actes and deades of the Lorde done to his people. The faith be, & all though they were vnfaithfull, yet dyd he wonders in Egypt, and brought them from there, and though they prouoked hym to anger in the wylderneſſe yet he, gaue them aboundaunce his benefyte. And after that, when they were deſtroyed whyche came forth of Egypte, for their wyckednes: yet brought he them ſonnes (although they folowed their fathers vnfaythfulnes, and deſpyſed the wonders done in the wylderneſſe) for their fathers, into the lande promyſed, and droue out the inhabiters: In which, although he often puny ſhed them greuouſlye, when they prouoked and tempted him, and at the laſt in the hand of a great feruent wrath, deliuer their great ſlaughter, ſuffered alſo the Arche to be taken from them, in the tyme of Hy the Prieſt: yet beſyde he them fauourably againe, geuing them Dauid to their kynge (and reſtoryng yet ſonnes againe at Jeruſalem. In whyche thynge he alſo prophecyeth of Chriſte vnder the ſhadowe of Dauid.

An inſtruccyon of Aſaph.

GIue eare my lawe, O my people, enclyne your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth.

I will open my mouth in parables, and ſpeake of thynges of olde.

Whych we haue herde and knowne, and ſuch as our fathers haue told vs.

That we ſhoulde not hyde them from the chyldren of the generations to come: but to ſhewe the honoure of the Lorde, his myghte and wonderfull workes that he hath done.

He made a couenaunte with Jacob, and gaue Iſrael a lawe, whiche he commaunded our forefathers to teache their chyldren.

That their poſteryte myghte knowe it, and the chyldren whych were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp they myghte ſhewe their chyldren the ſame.

That they alſo myghte put their truſte in God, & not to forget what he had done, but to kepe his commaundementes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a. a. frowarde and ouerthwarte generacyon, a generation that ſet not their hertes aryghte, and whoſe ſpirite was not true towarde God.

Lyke as the chyldre of. b. Ephraim, which beyng harneſſed and carryng bowes, turned them ſelues backe in tyme of battayl.

They kept not the couenãt of god, and would not walke in his law.

They forgate what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he had shewed for them.

Marueilous thynges dyd he in the sighte of our fathers in the lande of Egipt, euen in the felde of Zoan.

He deuided the sea & let them go thorowe it, & made the waters to stande like a wall.

In the daye tyme he ledde them with a cloude, and all the night thorow with a light of fyre.

He cloue the harde rockes in the wildernesse, & gaue them drynke therof, as it hadde bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters out of the stony rock, so that they gusshed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they synned agaynste hym, and prouoked the moost hyest in the wyldernes.

They tempted God in their hertes, and requyred meate for their lust.

L For they spoke agaynst God, & sayde: yea yea, God shall prepare a table in the wildernesse, shall he?

Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the watry streames gusshed out, and the streames flowed with all: but how can he geue bread and prouyde flesh for hys people?

When ỹ Lord hearde this, he was wroth so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, and heauy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, & putte not their trust in hys helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, & opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned doune Manna vpon them for to eate, and gaue them bread from heauen.

Then eate they aungels fode, for he sente them meate ynough.

He caused the East wynd to blowe vnder the heauen, & thorow hys power he brought in the South wynde.

He made flesh to raine vpon thẽ as thicke as dust, and fethered foules like as the sande of the sea.

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde about their habitacions.

So they eate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne desire.

D They were not disapointed of their lust.

But whyle ỹ meate was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpon thẽ, slewe the fatt wel thiest of thẽ, & smote doune the chosen men of Israel.

But for all this they synned yet more, and beleued not hys wonderous workes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanyte, and sodenly their yeares were gone.

When he slewe them, they sought hym, & turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succour, and that the hye God was their redemer.

Neuertheles they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, and dissembled with hym in their tonges.

For their herte was not whole with hym, neither continued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercifull, that he forgaue their mysdedes, and destroyed them not.

Yea, many a tyme turned he hys wrathe awaye, and wolde not suffre hys whole displeasure to aryse.

For he considered that they were but.g. flesh: euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and commeth not agayne.

O how ofte haue they greued hym in the L wyldernesse?

How many a tyme haue they prouoked hym in the desarte?

They turned backe, and tempted God, & moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of hys hand, in the day when he delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

Howe he had wrought hys myracles in Egypte, and hys wonders in the lande of Zoan.

How he turned their waters into bloude, so that they myght not drynke of the ryuers.

How he sent lyce among them, to eate thẽ vp, and frogges to destroye them.

Howe he gaue their frutes vnto the caterpyller, & their labour vnto the grashopper.

Howe he bete doune their vyneardes with hayle stones, and their mulberye trees wyth the frost.

Howe he smote their cattel with hayle stones, & their flockes with hote thonder bolttes.

Howe he sent vppon them the furiousnesse of his wrath, anger & displeasure: with trouble and sailing in of euell aungels.

When he made a waye to hys fearful indignacion, and spared not. h. their soules frõ death, yea, & gaue their. i. cattell ouer to the pestilence.

When he smote al the first born in Egipt, the moost principall and mightyest in the dwellynges of. k. Ham.

But as for his owne people, he lead them F south lyke sheepe, and caried them in the wyldernesse lyke a flocke.

He brought thẽ out safely, ỹ they shulde not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the sea.

He carped them. l. vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen into thys hyl, which he purchased with hys ryght hande.

He dyd cast out the Heathen before them, caused their lande to be deuyded among the for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tentes.

For all this they tempted & displeased the moll hye God, and kept not hys couenaunt.

But turned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, startynge aside like a broken bowe.

And so they greued hym with their hye places, & prouoked him with their ymages.

When

When God hearde thys, he was wroth, and toke ſore diſpleaſure at Iſrael.

So that he forſoke the Tabernacle in Silo, euen his habitacion wherin he dwelte amonge men.

He delyuered their power into captiuite and their glory into the enemies hande.

He gaue his people ouer into the ſwearde for he was wroth with his herytage.

The fyre conſumed their yonge men, and their maydens were not geuen to mariage.

Their Prieſtes were ſlaine with the ſwerd and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacion.

So the Lorde, m. awaked as one oute of ſlepe, and like a gyaunte refreſhed with wyne.

He ſmote his enemyes in the hynder partes, and put them to perpetuall ſhame.

He refuſed the tabernacle of Joſeph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

Neuertheles, he chose the tribe of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, and layd the foundation of it like the ground that it myght perpetually endure.

He chose Dauid also his ſeruaunte, and toke him away from the shepe folders.

As he was folowynge the yewes greate with yonge, he toke him, that he myghte fede Jacob his people, & Iſrael his enherytance.

So he fedde them with a faythfull and true herte, and ruled them with diligence of of his power.

Thou rulest the pryde of the sea, when the lyft the wawes therof, when they ryse.

Thou breakest the proude, like one that is wounded, thou scatterest thine enemies abroad with thy mighty arme.

The heauens are thine, the earth is thine: thou hast layed the foundation of the rounde worlde, and al that therin is.

Thou hast made the north and the south, C Tabor and Hermon shal reioyce in thy name.

Thou hast a mighty arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy righthande.

Righteousnes and equite is the habitacio of thy seate, mercy and truethe go before thy face.

Blessed is the people, O Lorde, that can reioyse in the, & walketh in the lyghte of thy countenaunce.

Their delyte is in thy name all the daye longe, and thorowe thy righteousnesse they shalbe exalted.

For thou art the glory of their strength, & thorow thy fauoure shalt thou lyfte vp oure hornes.

The Lorde is our defence, and the.c. holy one of Israel is our kyng.

Thou spakest sometyme in visions vnto thy sayntes, and sayedest: I haue layed helpe vpon one that is mighty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue founde Dauid my seruaunt, with my.d. holy oyle haue I anoynted hym.

My hande shal holde him fast, and myne arme shall strengthen hym.

The enemye shall not ouercome hym, nor the sonne of wyckednesse shall not hurte hym.

I shall smyte doune hys foes before hys face, and plage them that hate hym.

My truethe also & my mercy shalbe wyth hym, and in my name shall hys.f. horne be exalted.

I will set hys hande in the sea, & his right hande in the floudes.

He shall call me, thou art my father, my God, and the strength of my saluacion.

And I will make hym my fyrste borne, hyer then the kynges of the earth.

My mercy will I kepe for hym for euermore, and my couenaunte shall stande faste wyth hym.

Hys sede will I make to endure for euer, yea, and his trone as the dayes of heauen.

But if hys children forsake my law, and walke not in my iudgementes.

If they breake myne ordynaunces, & kepe not my commaundementes.

g. I will vysyt their offences wyth the rodde, and their synnes wit scourges.

Neuertheles, my louinge kyndnesse wil I not vtterlyt take from hym, nor suffre my trueth to faple.

My couenaunt wyl I not breake, nor disanulle the thynge that is gone out of my lippes.

I haue swome once by my holinesse, that I will not faple Dauid.

Hys sede shall endure for euer, and hys seate also lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande faste for euermore as the moone, and as the faythfull wytnesse in heauen. h. Selah.

But now thou forsakest & abhorrest thyne anoynted, and art displeased at hym.

Thou hast turned backe the couenaunte of thy seruaunt, and caste hys croune to the grounde.

Thou hast ouerthowen all his hedges, & broken doune his stronge holdes.

All they that go by, spoyle hym, he is become a rebuke vnto hys neyghbours.

Thou settest vp the righthande of his enemyes, and makest all hys aduersaries to reioyse.

Thou hast taken awaye the strengthe of his swerde, and geuest him not victory in the battayle.

Thou hast put out his glory, and cast his trone doune to the grounde.

The dayes of his youth hast thou shortened, & couered him with dishonoure. Selah. E

Lord, how longe wilt thou hyde thy self? For euer? shall thy wrathe burne lyke fyre?

O remembre how shorte my time is, hast thou made all men for nought? What man is he that lyueth, and shall not se death?

Maye a man deliuer his owne soule fro the hande of hell? Selah.

A prayer of Moyses the man of God.

LOrde thou art oure refuge fro one generacion to another. ¶

Before the mountaines were brought forthe, or euer the earthe and the worlde were made, made, thou art God from euerlastynge and worlde without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruccyon, Agayne, thou sayest: come agayne ye chyldren of men. a.

For a thousande yeares in thy sighte are but as yesterdaye that is past, and lyke as it were a wyght watch.

As sone as thou scatterest them, they are euen as a slepe, & fade awaye sodenly like the grasse.

In the mornyng it is grene and groweth vp, but in the euenynge it is cut doune and wythered.

For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and are afrayed at thy wrathfull indignacion.

Thou settest our mysdedes before the, and our secrete sinnes in the light of thy countenaunce.

For when thou art angrye, all oure dayes are gone, we bringe our yeares to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

b. The dayes of oure age are, iii. score yeares and ten: and though men be so strōg that they come to foure score yeares, yet is their strength then but labour, & sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye, and we are gone.

But who regardeth ye power of thy wrath thy fearfull and terrible displeasure?

O teach vs to numbre our dayes, that we maye applye our hertes vnto wisdome.

Turne the agayn (O Lorde) at the last, & be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, & that sone, so shall we reioyse and be glad all the dayes of our lyfe.

Comforte vs agayne, now after the tyme that thou hast plagued vs, and for the yeares wherein we haue suffred aduersitie.

Shewe thy seruauntes thy worke, & their chyldren thy glory.

And the glorious maiesty of the Lord our God be vpon vs: O prospere thou ye worke of our hādes vpon vs, O prospere thou our handy worke.

B An vnwyse man will not knowe thys, and a foole will not vnderstande it.

But thou Lorde O moost hyest, abydest worlde without ende.

PRayse the Lorde O my soule: all that is within me prayse hys holy name. a.

Prayse the Lord O my soule, and forget not all his benefites.

Which forgeueth all thy synnes, and healeth all thyne infirmities.

Which sauyeth thy lyfe from destruccion, and crowneth the with mercy, and louyng kyndnesse.

Which satisfieth thy desire with good thynges, making thy youge and lusty as an Aegle.

The Lorde executeth righteousnesse and iudgement, for all them that suffer wronge. b

He shewed his wayes vnto Moses, and his workes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

The Lord is ful of compassion and mercy, long sufferyng, and of great goodnesse.

He will not alwaye be chydynge, neither will he kepe his anger for euer.

He hath not deale with vs after oure synnes, nor rewarded vs according to our wickednesse.

For lyke how hye the heauen is in comparison of the earth, so greate is his mercy also towarde them that feare hym.

Lyke how wyde the East is frō the West, so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs.

Yea, lyke as a father pitieth his owne children, euen so is the Lord mercifull vnto them that feare hym.

For he knoweth whereof we be made, he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in hys time is but as grasse, and floureth as a floure of the felde.

For as sone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place thereof knoweth it no more.

D But the mercyfull goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer, vpon them that feare him, and his righteousnesse vpon their children.

Suche as kepe hys couenaunte, & thynke vpon hys commaundementes to do them.

The Lorde hath prepared his seate in heauen, and his kingedome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lorde ye aungels of his, ye that be myghty in strength fulfyllynge hys cõmaundement that men may here the voice of hys wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all ye his Hostes, yea seruauntes of his, that do hys pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye workes of his, in euery place of his dominion: prayse thou the Lorde, O my soule.

℣ The notes.

Long suffe-rynge. a. The Lorde is longe sufferynge, whyche is more then patient, for he not onely sufferyth, but also differreth vengeaunce, desyrynge the amendement of the sinner, louynge better to pardone and forgeue, then to punysh. Rom. ii. a. Other despysest thou the ryches of hys goodnes, pacyence and long sufferaunce. &c.

℣ The .cxiii. Psalme.

The prayseth God for the creation of al thin gs, and for hys holy gouernaunce therof.

R Prayse the Lorde O my soule: O Lord my God, thou art become exceedinge glorious, thou arte clothed with maiesty and honoure.

Thou deckest thy self with light, as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heauẽ lyke a curtayne.

Thou boltest it aboue with waters, thou makest the cloudes thy chaire, & goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

*Heb. i. b. *Thou makest thyne aungels spirites, and thy ministers flammes of fyre.

Thou hast layed the earth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at any tyme.

Thou couerest it with the depe lyke as wt a garmente, so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flye, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayed.

B (Then are the hylles seene aloofe, and the valleys beneth in their place which thou hast appointed for them.)

Thou hast set them their bounden, which they maye not passe, that they turne not agayne to couer the earth.

Thou causest the welles to springe vp amonge the valleys, and the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That all beastes of the felde maye haue drynke, & that the wilde asses maye quenche their thyrste.

Aboue vpon the hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitacion, and singe amonge the braunches.

Thou waterest the hilles from aboue, the earth is filled wt the frutes of thy workes.

Thou bringest forth grasse for the cattell, and grene herbes for the seruice of men.

Thou bringest foode out of the earth: wyne to make glad the herte of man, oyle to make hym a chearfull countenaunce and breade to strength mans herte.

The trees. a. of the Lord are ful of sappe, & euen the trees of Libanus whiche he hathe planted.

There make the birdes their nestes, & the fyrre hylles are a dwellyng for the storke.

The hilles are a refuge for the wilde goates, & so are the stoup rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appoynted the moone for certayne seasons, the sunne knoweth hys going downe.

Thou makest darkenesse, that it maye be nyght, wherin all the beastes of the forest do moue.

Yea, and the yonge lyons which roare after their praye, and seke their meate at God.

But when the sunne ariseth, they get them awaye together, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to hys worke, and to tyll hys lande vntyll the euenynge.

*Psal. civ. *O Lord, how manifolde are thy workes, right wisely hast thou made them all: yea, the earth is full of thy ryches.

So is this great & wyde sea also, wherin are thynges creping innumerable, both smal and great beastes.

D There go the shippes ouer, and there is that b. Leuiathan, whom thou hast made, to take hys pastyme therein.

They wayte all vpõ the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season.

When thou geuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hande, they are filled with good.

But when thou hydest thy face, they are sorowfull: if thou takest awaye their breth, they dye, & are turned agayne to their dust.

Agayne, when thou sendest thy breth goo forth, they are made, and so thou renuest the face of the earth.

The glorious maiesty of the Lorde endureth for euer, & the Lorde .r. reioyseth in hys workes.

The earth trembleth at the looke of hym, he doeth but touche the hylles and they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue. I will prayse my God whyle I haue my beyng.

O that my wordes might please hym, for my ioye is in the Lorde.

As for synners, they shalbe consumed out of the of the earth, and the vngodlye ſhall come to an ende: but prayſe thou the Lorde, O my ſoule. Prayſe the euerlaſtynge.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

A Geue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracyous, and hys mercy endureth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lord, or shewe forth all hys prayse?

Blessed are they that alwaye kepe iudgement, and do ryghtuousnes.

Remember vs, O Lorde, accordynge to the fauour that thou beareste vnto thy people O vyset vs with thy sauynge health.

That we mygh̄t se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we mygh̄t reioyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and geue thankes with thyne enherytaunce.

We haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wyckedlye.

Oure fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypte, they kepte not the great goodnes in remembraunce: but were dysobedyent at the sea, euen at the reed sea.

B Neuertheles, he helped the for hys names sake, that he mygh̄te make hys power to be knowne.

He rebuked the read sea, and it was dryed vp: so he led them thorowe the depe as in a wyldernes.

Thus he saued them from the hand of the hater, and delyuered the frō the hande of the enemye.

*Exo. xiiij. *As for those that troubled them the waters ouerwhelmed them, ther was not one of them left.

Then beleued they in his worde, and sang prayse vnto hym.

But within a whyle they forgat his workes, and wold not abyde his counsel.

C A lust came vpon them in the wildernesse, so that they tempted God in the desert.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent thē ynough at their wylles.

They angred Moyses in ꝑ tentes, & Aaron the sayncte of the Lord.

So the earth opened & swalowed vp Dathan, & couered the congregacyon of Abyrō.

The fyre was kyndled in their companie, the flamme burnt vp the vngodly.

They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage. Exo. xxxij. a.

Thus they turned their b glorye into the similitude of a calfe, that eateth hay.

They forgat God their Sauiour, whyche D had done so greate thynges in Egypte.

Wonderous workes in the lād of Cham and fearfull thynges in the read sea.

So he sayde he wold haue destroyed them had not Moyses hys chosen stand before him in that gappe to turne awaye his wrathfull indignacyon, lest he should destroye them.

Yea, they thought scorne of that pleasaūt lande, and gaue no credence vnto hys worde

But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto the voyce of the Lord.

Then lyft he vp his hand against them to ouerthrowe them in the wildernes.

To cast out their sede among the nacions, and to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned them selues vnto Baal Peor E and eate the offrynges of the dead.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne inuencyons, and the plage was great among them.

*Then stode vp Phynehes and executed * Num. xxv. iustice, and so the plage ceased.

And that was counted vnto him for ryghtuousnesse, amonge all posterityes for euermore.

They angryed hym also at the waters of strife, so that Moyses was punished for ther sakes.

Because they prouoked his spirite, and he told them plainly with his lippes.

Neither destroied they the Heathen, as the Lorde commaunded them,

But were mingled among the Heathen, and lerned their workes.

In so much that they worshipped their ymages, which turned to their owne decay.

Yea they offred their sōs and their daughters vnto deuils. F

And shed the innocent blood of their sonnes and of their daughters, whō they offred vnto the ymages of Canaan, so that the lād was defiled with blood.

Thus were they stayned with their owne workes, and wēt a whoring with their owne inuencyons.

Therfore was the wrath of the Lord kindled ageynst hys people, in so much that he abhorred his owne enherytaunce.

And gaue them ouer into the hand of the Heathen, and they that hated thē, were lordes ouer them.

Their enemyes oppressed them, and had G them in subiection.

Many a tyme did he delyuer thē, but they prouoked him with their owne inuencyons and were broughte downe for their wyckednesse.

Neuertheles when he sawe their aduersitie he herd their complaynt.

He thought vpon hys couenaunt, and pytyed them, accordyng vnto the multytude of hys mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led them awaye captyue, to pytye them.

Delyuer vs, O Lorde oure God, and gather vs from amonge the Heathen: that we maye geue thankes to thy holye name, and make our boast of thy prayse.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel from euerlastyng and world without ende, and let

O geue thankes vnto the Lord, for he is gracious, & his mercy endureth for euer.

Let the geue thākes whome the Lord hath redemed, & deliuered from the hande of the enemye.

And gathered them out of the landes, frō the Eaſt, from the Weſt, frō the North and from the.a. South.

They went aſtraye in the wildernesse in an vntroden waye, and founde no cytye too dwell in.

Hungry & thirſty, and their ſoule fainted in them.

So they.b. cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he deliuered them from their diſtreſſe.

He ledde them forth by the ryghte waye, that they myghte go to the cytye where they dwelt.

O that men wolde praiſe the goodneſſe of the Lorde, and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

For he ſatisfied the empty ſoule, & fylled

B the hungry ſoule with good.

Such as ſat in darkeneſſe and in the ſhadow of death, beyng faſt bounde in myſery and.c. yron.

Becauſe they were not obedient to the cōmaundementes of God, but lightly regarded the counſaell of the moſt hyghest.

Their hert was vexed with labour, they fell doune, and there was none to helpe the.

So they cryed vnto the LORD in their trouble, and he deliuered them oute of their diſtreſſe.

He brought them out of darkeneſſe & oute of the ſhadow of death, & brake their bondes in ſonder.

O that men wolde praiſe the goodneſſe of the Lord, and the wōders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

For he hath broken the.d. gates of braſſe, and ſmytten the.e. barres of yron in ſonder.

Folyſh men were plaged for their offence

C and becauſe of their wickedneſſe.

Their ſoule abhorred all maner of meate, they were euen harde at deathes dore.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he deliuered them oute of their diſtreſſe.

He ſent hys worde and healed them, and ſaued them from deſtruccion.

O that men wolde praiſe the goodneſſe of the Lord, and the wōders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

That they wolde offre vnto him the ſacrifice of thankeſgeuyng, & tell out hys workes with gladnes.

They that go doune to the ſea in ſhippes, and occupy their buſineſſe in great waters.

These men ſe the workes of the Lorde, & his wonders in the deape.

For at his worde, the ſtormy winde aryſeth, and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are carped vp to the heauen, & doun agayne too the deape, their ſoule melteth away in the trouble.

They rele to and fro, they ſtacker lyke a dronchen man, and are at their wittes ende.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he delyuereth them oute of their diſtreſſe.

He maketh the ſtorme to ceaſſe, ſo that the waues are ſtyll.

Then are they glad because they be at reſt & ſo he bringeth them vnto the hauen, where they wolde be.

O that men wolde praiſe the goodnes of D the Lorde, and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

That they wolde exalte him in the cōgregacion of the people, & laude hym in the ſeate of the elders.

Which turneth the floudes into dry lād, and dryeth vp the water ſpringes.

A frutefull lande maketh he barē, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin.

Agayn, he maketh the.e. wildernes a ſtāding water, and water ſpringes of a dry grounde.

There he ſetteth the hongrye, that they may buylde them a cytye to dwell in.

That they may ſow their grounde, plante vyneyardes, to yelde the frutes of increaſe.

He.f. bleſſeth them, ſo that they multiplye exceedingly, and ſuffereth not their catel to be cleane.

When they are minished & brought lowe thorowe oppreſſion, thorowe any plage or trouble.

Though he ſuffer them to be euell intreated thorow tyrannes, & lette them wander out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore out of miſery (at the laſt) and maketh hym an houſholde lyke a flocke of sheepe.

For the mouth of the vngodlye yea and y mouth of the deceatfull is opened vpon me, and speake against me with falle tonges.

They compase me about with wordes of hatred, and fight against me without a cause

For the loue that I had vnto them, they take now my contrary parte, but I geue my selfe vnto prayer.

Thus they reward me euel for good, and hatred for my good will.

Set an vngodly mā to be ruler ouer him and let Satan stande at his ryght hande.

When sentence is geuen vpō him, let him be condempned, and let his prayer be turned into synne.

Let his daies be few, and his bishopriche let another take.

b Let hys children be fatherlesse, and hys wyfe a wydowe.

Let his children be vagabondes, and begge their breade: lette them seke it, as they that be destroyed.

D

Let the extorcioner cōsume al that he hath and let straungers spoyle his labour.

Let ther be no man to pytye, nor to haue compassyon vpon his fatherles children.

Let hys ende be destruccyon, & in the next generacion let his name be cleane put oute.

Let the wickednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the syght of the Lorde & and let not the synne of hys mother be done awaye.

Let thē alway be before the Lorde, but as for the memoryall of them selues, let it perysh from out of the earth.

And that because hys mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpeles, and hym that was vexed at the harte, to slay hym.

Hys delyte was in cursynge, and therfore shall it happen vnto hym: he loued not blessynge and that shall be far from hym.

He clothed hym selfe with cursynge lyke as with a rayment: yea it went into hys bowels lyke water, and lyke oile into his bones

Let it be vnto hym as the clothe that he hath vpon hym, and as the gyrdle that he is gyrded with al.

Let it thus happen from the Lorde vnto myne enemyes, and to those that speake euel against my soule.

But deale thou with me, O Lorde God, accordynge vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O deliuer me, for I am helpeles, and poore and my herte is wounded within me.

I go hence lyke the shadowe that departeth, & am driuen away as the grashoppers.

My knees are weake thorow cfastynge my flesh is dryed vp for want of fatnesse.

I am become a rebuke vnto thē, they lobe vpon me and shake their heades.

Helpe

Helpe me, O Lorde my God, oh ſaue me for thy mercies ſake.

That they maye knowe, how that thou is thy hand, and that thou haſt done it.

Though they curſe, yet bleſſe thou: and let the be confounded, that ryſe vp againſt me, but let thy ſeruaunt reioyſe.

¶ The .cxxxviij. Psalme.

¶ He praiseth the goodnes of God towarde him which hath deliuered him forth of al ieopardyes, and promoted him vnto the dignitye of a kynge.

Of Dauid.

I Will geue thankes vnto the, O Lord, with my whole herte, euen before the Gods, will I singe prayses vnto the.

I will worshipp toward thy holy temple and prayse thy name, because of thy louyng kyndenesse and trueth, for thou hast magnified thy worde, according vnto thy greate name.

When I call vpon the, thou heerest me, & endewest my soule with muche strength.

All the kynges of the earthe shall prayse the, O Lord, when they heare the wordes of thy mouth.

They shall singe in the wayes of the Lorde, that great is the glory of the Lord.

For though the Lorde be hye, yet hath he respecte vnto the lowlynes for the proude, he beholdeth them a farre of.

Though I walke in the middest of trouble, yet shalte thou refreshe me: thou shalte stretche forth thyne hande vpon the furiousnes of myne enemyes, and thy righte hande shall saue me.

The Lord shall make good for me. yea, thy mercy, O LORDE, endureth for euer despyse not then the worcke of thyne owne handes.

¶ The .cxxxix. Psalme.

¶ She weth that al thinges are euident and open vnto God which made them: and that he is euery where, and seyth all thinges.

¶ a. To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Lorde, thou searchest me out, and knowest me.

Thou knowest my doune sitting and myne vprysinge, thou vnderstandest my thoughtes a farre of.

Thou art about my path & about my bed and spiest out all my wayes.

For lo, there is not a worde in my tonge, but thou, O Lorde knowest it altogether.

Thou hast fashioned me behynde and before, and layed thyne hande vpon me.

Such knowlege is to wonderfull and excellent for me, I can not attayne vnto it.

Whither shal I go then from thy spirite? Or, whyther shall I go then fromme thy presence?

If I clyme vp into heauen, thou art there if I go doune to hel, thou art there also.

If I take the wynges of the morninge, & remayne in the vttermost parte of the sea:

Euen there also shall thy hande leade me, and thy right hand shall holde me.

If I saye: peraduenture the darkenesse shall couer me, then shall my nyght be turned to daye.

Yea, the darkenesse is no darkenesse with the, but the nyght is as clere as the day, the darkenesse and light are both a lyke.

For my reynes are thyne, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe.

I will geue thankes vnto the, for I am wonderously made: marueylous are thy workes, & that my soule knoweth right well.

My bones are not hyd from the, though I be made secretly, and fashioned beneth in the earth.

Thyne eyes se myne vnperfectnesse, they stande all writte in thy boke: my dayes were fashioned, when as yet there was not one of them.

How deare are thy counsails vnto me O God: O how greate is the summe of them!

If I tell them, they are mo in nūbre then the sande: when I wake vp, I am presente with the.

Wylt thou not slaye the wycked (Oh God) that the bloudthyrsty myght departe fro me?

For they speake vnright of the, thyne enemyes exalte them selfes presumptuously.

I hate them, O Lorde, that hate the: and I mayne not awaye with those that ryse vp against the.

Yea I hate them right sore, they are myne enemyes.

Trye me, O God, and seke the grounde of myne herte: proue me, and examen my thoughtes.

Let not the vngodly haue hys deſire, O Lord, let him not haue hys purpoſe, leſt they be to proude. Selah.

Let the miſchief of their owne lippes fall vpon the head of them, that compaſe me about.

¶ The.iii. Chapter

DMy ſonne, forget not my law B but ſe that thyne hert kepe my commaūdementes. For they ſhall prolong the dayes ỹ yeares of thy life, ỹ bring ỹ peace. Let mercy ỹ faythfulnes neuer go frō the: bynde them about thy necke, ỹ write them in the tables of thyne hert. So ſhalt thou fynde fauour ỹ good vnderſtanding in the ſight of God ỹ men. Put thy truſt in the Lord with all thyne hert, and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderſtandinge. In all thy wayes haue reſpecte vnto hym, ỹ he ſhal order thy goinges. Be not wyſe in thyne owne cōceyte, but feare the Lord, ỹ departe from euell: ſo ſhall thy.a a. What is ſignified by nauell be whole, ỹ thy bones ſtrong. D vaill ye ſhall finde in Ezechiel.xvi.a

Honour the Lord with thy ſubſtaunce, ỹ with the firſtlinges of all thyne encreaſe: ſo ſhall thy barnes be filled with plentifulneſſe, and thy preſſes ſhall flowe ouer with ſweete wyne. My ſonne, deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lorde, neyther faynte when thou arte rebuked of hym. * For whome the Lord lo- * Hebr.xij.b ueth hym he chaſteneth: ỹ pet delyteth in him Apoca.iij.b. euen as a father in his owne ſonne. Well is hym that findeth wyſdome, and getteth vnderſtandinge, for the getinge of it is better then any marchaundiſe of ſyluer, and the profet of it is better then golde. Wyſdome is more worth then precious ſtones, and all E thinges that thou canſt deſyre, are not to be cōpared vnto her. In hon her right hande is longe lyfe, and vppon her left hande is ryches and honour. Her wayes are pleaſaunte wayes, and all her pathes are peaceable. She is a tree of lyfe to them that lepe holde vpon her, and bleſſed are they that kepe her faſt.

With wyſdome hath the Lorde layed the foundacion of the earth, ỹ through vnderſtanding hath he ſtabliſhed the heauēs. Through hys wyſdome the deapthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe of the dewe.

My sonne, let not these thinges depart from thyne eyes, but kepe my lawe and my counsel: so shalt it be life vnto thy soule, and grace vnto thy mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye, and thy fote shal not stomble. If thou slepest, thou shalt not be afraied, but shalt take thy rest and slepe swetely. Thou nedest not to be afraped of any sodaine feare neither for the wolent rushynge in of the vngodly, when it commeth. For the Lorde shal be beliege the, and kepe thy fote that thou be not taken. Refuse not to do good vnto hym D that shoulde haue it, so longe as thyne hande is able to do it. Say not vnto thy neyghbour go thy waye and come agayne, to morowe wyll I geue the: where as thou hast nowe to geue him. Intend no hurt vnto thy neighbour seing he hopeth to dwel in rest by the. Stryue not lightely with any man, whyr as he hath done the harme. Followe not a wycked man, and chose none of hys wayes: for the Lorde abhorreth the frowarde, but hys secrete is amonge the righteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly, but he blesseth the dwellynges of the righteous. As for the scornefull, he shall laugh them to scorne, but he shal geue grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honour in possession, but shame is the promocion that fooles shall haue.

The.iii.Chapter.

¶ Wysdom and her fruites and wayes ought to be searched.

A HEare, O ye children, the fatherly exhortation, and take good hede, that ye maye learne wysdome. Yea I shall geue you a good rewarde, if ye wyll not forsake my lawe. For when I my selfe was myfathers deare sonne, and tenderlye beloued of my mother, he taughte me also, saying: Let thyne herte receaue my wordes, kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalt lyue. Get the wysdome, get the vnderstanding forget not the wordes of my mouth, q shunne not from them. Forsake her not, she shall pre B serue the: loue her, and she shal kepe the. The chefe poynte of wisdom is, that thou be willing to optayne wysdome, and before all thy goodes to gett the vnderstondynge. Make muche of her and she shall promote the: Yea if thou embrace her, she shall bringe the vnto honoure.

She shall make the a gracyous heade, and garnysshe the. a *with a crowne of glorye. Heare my sonne, and receyue my wordes, that the yeares of thy lyfe maye be many. I wyll shewe the, the waye of wysdome, and leade the in the ryght pathes. So that if thou goest therin, ther shall not straytenesse hynder the and when thou runnest thou shalte not fall. Take fast holde of doctryne, let her not go: C kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. Come not in the path of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, and go not therein: departe a syde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe, except they haue first done some mischefe: neither take they anye rest, except they haue fyrst done some harme For they eate the breade of wickednesse, and drynche the wyne of robberye. The path of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknes, wherin men fal, or they be aware.

My sonne, marche my wordes, and encline D thyne eare vnto my sayinges. Let them not depart from thine eyes, kepe them euē in the myddest of thyne herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them, and health vnto all their bodyes. Kepe thyne herte with all dilygence, for ther vpon hangeth lyfe. Put away from the a frowarde mouth, and let the lippes of sclander be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thinge that is right, and let thine eye lidden loke straight before the. Ponder the path of thy fete, so that al thy waies be sure. Turne not a side, neither to the. b*right hande nor to the lefte, but withholde thy fote from euel.

☞ The Notes.

a. That is, with greate and singular honour as after in the.xv.a.

b. By the right hand is vnderstande the false and wycked confidence in workes, and by the lefte desperation. To turne aside or adde to the right hand is to ad that to the word of God which god neuer cōmaūded. To turne a syde or bowe to ỹ left hand is to take away from the worde of God or to that whyche is forbidden. As it is wrytten in Deuter. xxviij b. and Iosue. xxiij. b.

The.b.Chapter.

The warneth to eschue and fle whordome. He forbyddeth prodigalitye and wastfull spendynge. He willeth vs to lyue of ours owne laboure. Men must loue their wyues.

My sonne, gene hede vnto my A wysdome, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayest regarde good counsel, and that thy lyppes may kepe nourloure. For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppynge combe, and her throte is softer then ople. But at the laste she is as bytter as worme wode, and as sharpe as a two edged sweard. Her fete go downe vnto death, and her steps pearse thorow vnto hel. She regardeth not the path of life, so vnstedfast are her B waies, that thou canst not know them. Heare me therefore (O my sonne) and departe not frō ỹ wordes of my mouth kepe thy way far from her, and come not nye the doores of her house. That thou geue not a* thyne honoure vnto another, and thy yeares to the cruell. That other men be not filled w thy goodes ỹ ỹ thy labours come not in a strāge house. correction? Wherfore was not I obedyent vnto ỹ voyce of my teachers, ỹ herkened not vnto them that informed me? I am come al moste into all myschefe, in the middest of the multytude and congregacion. b* Drinke of the water of thine owne wel, and of the ryuers that runne out of thine owne springes. c* Let thy welles flowe out abroad, that ther may be ryuers of water in the stretes: but let them be only thyne owne, and not strangers with the.

D Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wyfe of thy youth. Louyng is the hynd, ỹ frendly is ỹ Roo: let her bestes alwaye satisfye the, and holde the euer content with her loue. Why sone, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlotte, and embrace the bosome of a nother woman? * For euery mannes waies are open in the sight of the Lorde, and he ponderth all their goynges. The wyckednesses of the vngodly shal catch him selfe, and with the snares of of his owne synnes shall he be trapped. Because he wold not be reformed he shall perish for his greate folyshnesse he shalbe destroyed.

¶ The Notes.

a* That is thy substance.

b* That is, hold the only to thine owne wife.

c, That is, let thy children come oute of thy house with honour, and not as baltardes.

¶ The fourthfull and fowrth is pyched and stryued to wrothe. The leprosie is reproued. Idolatry ought to be earnestly auoyded.

The.vi. Chapter.

M Y son, if thou be surety for thy nepghboure, thou hast fastened thyne hand with another man: yet thou art bound with thyne owne wordes, ỹ taken in thine owne speache. Therfore, my sonne, do thys & discharge thy selfe, for thou art come into thy nepghbours daunger. Go thy way then sone and intreate thy neighbour: let not thine eies slepe nor thyne eye lydes slomber. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hande, and as a bryde from the handes of the fowler. Go to the Emmet (thou slogard) consyder her wayes, and learne to be wise. She hath no guide, no teacher, no leader: yet in the Somer she prouideth her meate, and gathereth her foode together in the harueste. * How longe wilt thou slepe? thou slogysh man? When wylte thou aryse out of thy slepe? Yea slepe on ful a lyle, slomber a spele, folde thyne handes together yet a spele, that thou mayest slepe: so shall powerte come into the as one that trauaileth by the way, and necessitie like a weaponed man. A dissembling person, a wycked man goeth with a frowarde mouth, he twincheth with his eyes, he taketh with his fete, he poynteth with his fingers. he is euer pondryng mischefe and frowardnesse in his hert, ỹ causeth discord. Therfore shal his destruccion come hastely vpon him, sodenly shal he be all to broken, and not be healed.

*Prouerb. xxiii.b.

Thre be sixe thinges.

There be sixe thinges which the Lorde hateth, and the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth: A proude loke, a dyssemblynge tonge, handes that shede innocent blood, an hert that goeth about with wicked ymaginacions, fete that be swift in renning to do mischefe, a false witnes that bringeth vp lies, and such one as sowyth discord amonge brethren. C

My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vp together in thine herte, and bynd them about the neck. That they may leade the whyle thou goest, preserue the when thou art a sleape, and that when thou awakest, thou maiest talke of the. For the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyghte, a chastening, and nurture in the waye of lyfe: that they maye kepe the from the euell woman, and frō the flatteryng tong of the harlot: that ỹ lust not after her eyen vp in thyne herte, & let ỹ be taken in her lappes lokes. An harlot will make a man to begge his breade, but a maried woman wyl haunte for ỹ precyous lyfe. May a man take fyre in his bosome and his clothes not be burnt? Or can one go vpon hoote coales, ỹ his fete not be hutte? Euen so, whosoeuer goeth into his nepghbours wyfe, and toucheth her can not be vngilty. D Men do not vtterly despise a theefe that stealeth to satisfye his soule, when he is hongry: but if he may be gotten, he restoreth agayne seuen tymes as muche, or els he maketh recompense with al the good of his house. But who so committeth aduoutry with a woman, he is a fole, and bringeth his life to destruccō. He getteth him selfe also shame & dishonour, such as shal neuer be put out. For the gelousy and wrath of the man wil not be intreated, no though thou wouldest offer him greate giftes to make attonemēt, he wyll not receiue them.

The.vii. Chapter

God ought to be feared and honoured: Hys commaundementes ought to be kept: Mannes appetytes and desyres ought to be ruled.

My sonne, kepe my wordes, and lay vp my commaundementes by the. Kepe my commaundementes and my lawe, euen as the apple of thyne eie, and thou shalt lyue. Bynd them vpon thy fingers, and write them in the table of thyne herte. Say vnto wysdome: thou art my sister, and call vnderstandyng thy kynswoman: * that she may kepe ỹ frō the straunge woman, and frō the harlot which geueth swete wordes. For out of ỹ windowe of my house I loked thrugh the trayllesse, & beheld the simple people: and among other yong folkes I spyed one yonge sole going ouer the stretes, by the corner in the way toward the harlots houses in the twylight of ỹ euening, when it began nere to be nyght and darke. * And beholde, ther met him a wo man in an harlots apparel, a dyssemblyng wil ỹ wanderyng mynde: whose fet could not abyde in ỹ house, now is she without, now in ỹ stretes, lurkyth in euery corner, she caught

¶ The prayse of the wysdome of God.

A

Doth not wysdome crye? doeth not vnderstãding put forth her voyce? Standeth she not in the hye places in the stretes & wayes doth she not crie before ỹ whole cite, and in the gates where mẽ go out & in?
It is you, O ye men (saieth she) whom I call?
Vnto you (O ye chyldren of men) lyft I vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowlege, O ye ignoraũt, be wyse in hert O ye fooles. Geue B eare, for I will speake of great matters, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be right.
For my throte shalbe talking of the trueth, &
my lyppes abhorre vngodlinesse. All ỹ wor-des of my mouth are righteous, there is no frowardenesse nor falsede therin. They are all playne to suche as will vnderstande, and ryght to them that fynde knowlege. Receyue my doctrine therfore, & not syluer: my know ledge, more then fyne golde. For wysdome is more worth then precious stones, yea, all the thinges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto it.

C I wysdome haue my dwelling wt knowledge, & prudent counsaill is myne owne.
With me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschuyng of euell. As for pryde, vsurpyng, & euell waye, & a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre them. I can geue counsayl, & be a ayde: I haue vnderstanding
I haue strength. Through me, kinges reygn:
through me, princes make iust lawes. Thorrow me, lordes beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am louynge vnto those that loue me, & they that seke me early, shall fynde me. Riches and honoure are with me, yea, excellent goodes & righte-ousnes. My frute is better then golde & precious stone, & myne encrease more worth thẽ fyne syluer. I walke in the waye of righteous nes, and in the strete of iudgement.

That I may sende prosperite to those that loue me, & to encrease their treasure. * The *Sapien.b Lord hym self had me in possession in the begynning of hys wayes, or euer he begame hys workes afore tyme. I haue bene ordeyned from euerlasting, & frõ the beginning or euer the earthe was made. When I was borne, there were nether depthes nor springs of water. Before the foundacions of the mountaynes were layed, yea, before al hylles was I borne. The earth & all that is vpõ the D earth was not yet made, no not the grounde it selfe. For when he made the heauens, I was present: when he sette vp the depthes in order: whẽ he hãged the cloudes aboue: whẽ he fastened the springes of the depe: When he shut the sea within certayn boundes, that the waters should not go ouer their marches.
When he layed the foundacõs of the earth
I was with hym, ordering all thinges, delp-tynge dayly, and reioysinge all waye before hym.

As for the rounde compase of his worlde,
I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be among the chyldren of men. Therfore herken vnto me, O ye chyldrẽ, for blessed are they ỹ kepe my wayes. O geue eare vnto nurture, be wyse, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watchynge dayly at my gates, & gruynge attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For who so findeth me, findeth life and shall obtayne fauour of the Lorde. But who so offendeth agaynste me, hurteth hys owne soule. All they that hate me, are the lo-uers of death.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

¶ Wysdome mouth all men to embrace her. The properte of a whore.

Isdome hath buylded her selfe A an house, & hewen out.a. seuen pylleres: she hath kylled her viaples, poured out her wyne, & prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maydes to crye vpõ the hyest place of ỹ cite: Who so is ignoraũt, let hym come hyther. And to the vnwyse she sayd: Come come on your way, eat my bred, & drinke my B wyne, which I haue poured out for you.
Forsake ignoraũce, & ye shall lyue: & se ỹ ye go in the way of vnderstãdinge. Who so reproueth a scornefull persone, getteth hym selfe dishonour: & he that rebuketh ỹ vngodly stayneth him self. Reproue not a.b. scorner, lest he owe ỹ euell will: but rebuke a wise mã, & he will loue the. Geue a discrete mã but an occasiõ, & he wilbe the wiser, teache a righteous man, and he will increase. The feare of the Lorde is the beginning of wisdome, and

the

the knowledge of holy thinges is vnderstandynge. For thorow me thy dayes shalbe prolonged, and the yeares of thy life shalbe multiplied. If thou be wyse thy wysdome shall do thy selfe good: but if thou thynckest scorne thereof, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A foolish restles woma, ful of wordes, and such one as hath no knowledge, sitteth in the doore of her house vpon a stoole aboue in the cytie, to call such as go by, y walke streight in their waies, Who so is ignorant (saieth she) let him come hyther, and to the vnwyse she saieth: Stollen waters are swete, and the bread that is priuely eaten, hath a good taste. But they consyder not that death is there, and that her gestes go downe to hell.

The Notes

a. Or, mayne the certen number for the vncertaine.

b. Scornefull or mockynge persones after Dauyds mynde, are those which be subtel and craftye to hurt other and wyrch are ready to diffame other and to ope and tel secretes and so to bringe concord and vnitye: And those al so which make a mocke at the worde of God and despyse it, and that repute it for foolishenesse: as after in the.xiiij.a.xix.b.and.xxij.b.

The.x. Chapter.

In this Chapter and in al that folow vnto the thyrteenth, the wyse man exhorteth by diuers sentences which he calleth Parables, to folow vertues & the wayes of wysdom, and what profit cometh of wysdom, and what hynderaces procedeth of folysshenesse.

The Parables of Salomon.

A Wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete sonne is the heuinesse of his mother.

a Some reade lapynges.

Treasures that are wickedly gotten, profit nothing, but righteousnesse deliuereth from death. The lorde wyll not let the soule of the righteous suffer honger, but he putteth the vngodly from his desire. An vnle hād maketh poore, but a quicke labouring hand maketh ryche. Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wyse: but he that is slouthfull in harueste, bringeth him selfe to confusion. Courage and fauourable is the face of the righteous, but the fourhead of the vngodly is full of shame and presumptuous. The memorial of the iust shall haue a good reporte but the name of the vngodly shal stynche. A wyse man wyll receyue warnyng, but a foole wyll sooner be smytten in the face. He that walketh an innocente life, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wrong way, shalbe knowne.

b. He that winketh with his eye, wyl do some harme: but he that hath a foolish mouth shalbe beaten. The mouth of a righteous man is a welle of life, but the mouth of the vngodly is full of shame and presumptuous. Loue wyll hyde all synne, and the mouth of the wyse is a token of no multytude of synnes. In the lippes of him that hath vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wysdome, but the rod belongeth to the backe of the foolish. Wyse men lade vp knowledge, the common mouth of the foolish is ope destruction as before in 9 on. The rich mans goodes are his strong hold, but pouerte oppresseth the poore. The ryghteous laboureth to do good, but the vngodly wirth his rycchesse bringeth him to euyll. To take herde vnto the chastenyng of nurture, is the way of life: but he that refuseth to be reformed, goeth wrong. Dissemblyng lippes kepe hatred secretly, and he that speaketh euyll sclaunder, is a foole. Where much babling is, there must nedes be offence: but he that refraineth his lippes is wyse of all. An innocent tong is a noble treasure, but the hert of the vngodly is not worthe. The lippes of the righteous feed a whole multitude, but fooles shal die in their owne folye. The blessing of the Lord maketh rich men, and he carefull trauaple, it doth not hynge therto. A foole doth wickedly and maketh but a sport of it: neuertheles it is wysdome for a man to beware of suche.

The thinge that the vngodly are afeared of, shall come vpon them, but the righteous shall haue their desire. The vngodly is like a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no more seene but the righteous remayneth sure for euer. As vynegre is to the tethe, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is slouthfull person to them that send him forth. The feare of the Lorde maketh a long life, but the yeares of the vngodly shalbe shortened. The patiente abydynge of the righteous shalbe turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the vngodly shal perish. The waye of the Lorde is strength vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wicked doers. The righteous shall neuer be ouerthrowen but the vngodly shalnot remaine in the land. The mouth of the iust wilbe talkyng of wysdome, but the tonge of the frowarde shall be rooted out. The lippes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thinges, but the mouth of the vngodly take them to the worst.

The.xi Chapter

A False balance is an abhominacion vnto the Lord, but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusion: but where as is lowlynesse, there is wysdome.

The innocente dealyng of the iust shall leade them, but the vnfaithfulnesse of the despisers shalbe their owne destruccion. Riches helpe not in the day of vengeaunce, but righteousnesse deliuereth frō death. The righteousnesse of the innocent ordereth his way, but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wyckednesse. The righteousnes of the iuste shall deliuer them, but the despisers shalbe taken in their owne vngodlynesse.

When an vngodly man dieth, his hope is gone, the confydence of ryches shal perish. The righteous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shal come in his stede. Therwith the mouth of the hypocrite is neyghboure destroyed, but thorowe knowledge shall the iust be deliuered. When it goeth well with the righteous, the cyte is merye: and when the vngodly perish, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cite prosperyth: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A foole bringeth vp a sclaunder of his neyghbour, but a wyse man wil kepe it secrete. A dissembling person will discouer preuy thinges, but he that is of a faythful hert, wil kepe counsayl. Where no good counsail is there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsayll, there is wealth. He that is suerty for a straunger, hurteth him self: but he that medleth not with suertishipp, is sure. A gracious woman mayntayneth honesty, as for the mighty, they mayntayne ryches. He that hath a gentle liberall stomach is merciful: but who so hurteth his neyghbour, is a tyraunt. The labour of the vngodly prosperyth not, but he ꝑ soweth righteousnes, shal receyue a sure rewarde. Like as righteousnes bringeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euel, bringeth death. The Lord abhorreth a lapued hert, but he hath pleasur in them that are vndefiled. Ye shal not helpe the wicked, though they lape all their hādes together, but the sede of ꝑ righteous shalbe preserued. A fayre woman without discrete maners, is like a ringe of golde in a swynes snoute.

The iust labour for peace and tranquyllite, but the vngodly for disquietnesse.

Some man geueth out his goodes, & is the rycher, but the spyard (hauyng enough) will departe from nothynge, and yet is euer in pouerty. He that is liberal in geuyng, shal haue plentye: and he that watereth, shalbe watered also him self. Who so hoorderth vp hys corne, shalbe cursed amonge the people: but blessing shall light vppon hys head that selleth it. He ꝑ labourreth for honesty findeth hys desire: but who so seketh after mischiefe, shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in hys ryches shall haue a fall, but the righteous shall florish as the grene leaf.

Who so maketh disquyetnes in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for hys heritage, and the foole shalbe seruant to the wyse.

The fruyt of the righteous is as the tree of lyfe, a wyse man also wynneth mens soules.

1.Petri.iii.b. ✠ If the righteous be recompensed vppon earth, how much more then the vngodly and the sinner?

¶ The.xii.Chapter.

WHo so loueth wysdome, wil be content to be refourmed: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole. A good man is acceptable vnto the Lord, but the wicked will he condemne. A man can not endure in vngodlinesse, but the rote of ꝑ righteous shall not be moued. A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husband: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly is a corrupcio in hys bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are righte, but the ymaginacion of the vngodly are disceatfull. The talkyng of the vngodlye is howe they maye lape waste for blood, but the mouthe of the righteous wyll deliuer them. Or euer thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shalbe ouerthrowen: but the house of the righteous shall stande. A man shalbe commended for hys wysdome, but a fole shalbe despised. A symple man which laboureth & worketh, is better then one that is gorgyous and wanteth bread. A righteous man regardeth the lyfe of his cattell, but the vngodlyhaue cruel hertes. He that tilleth his lande, shal haue plentyousnesse of bread: but he that folowyth pleasures, is a very foole.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after mischief, but the rote of the righteous bryngeth forth fruyte. The wicked falleth into the snare thorow the malyce of his own mouth, but the iust shal escape out of parel. Euery man shall enioye good accordinge to the innocency of his mouth, & after the workes of his handes shal he be rewarded. Loke what a.b. foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it wel done: but he that is wyse, wil be counsayled. A foole vttereth his wrath in all the hast, but a discrete man forgeueth wrong. A iust man wil tel the truth, & shewe the thynge that is right: but a false witnesse disceyueth. A sclaunderous persoone pricketh like a sword, but a wise mans tōge is wholsome. A true mouth is euer constant, but a dissemblyng tonge is soone chaunged. They that ymagyn euell in their mynde, will disceyue: but the counsaylers of peace shall haue ioye folowing them. There shall no misfortune happē vnto ꝑ iust but the vngodly shalbe filled with misery.

The Lord abhorreth discreatful lyppes, but they that laboure for truth please hym. He that hath vnderstādyng, can rule his wil home: but an indiscrete hert telleth oute hys foolishnesse. A diligent hande shal beare rule, but the ydle shalbe vnder tribute. Heauinesse discouageth the hert of mā, but a good worde maketh it glad again. The righteous is liberall vnto hys neyghbour, but the waye of ꝑ vngodly will disceyue them selfe. A discreatfull man shall fynde no substance. But he that is content with that he hath, is more worthe then golde. In the waye of righteousnesse there is lyfe, as for any other waye it is the pathe vnto death.

¶ The Notes.

b. By a fole in the Prouerbes is principally vnderstāde hym that in folowyng hys owne counsayll defendeth infidelitie and the vnknowynge of God, for truth and hath wil home: and wyll by no meanes herken & obey to the worde of God, as before in the.i.a.iij d.v.b, and.xiiii.a.

¶ The.xiii.Chapter.

A wyse

A Wyse sonne wyll receaue hys fathers warninge, but he that is a* scornefull, wyl not heare when he is reproued. A good man shall eniope the fruite of hys mouth, but he that hath a frowarde mind shalbe spoyled. He that kepeth his mouth, kepeth his life: but who so speaketh vnaduisedly findeth harme. The slogarde woulde fayne haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligente shall haue plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodlye shameth both other and hym selfe. Righteousnesse kepeth the innocente in the waye, but vngodlynesse shalouerthrow the sinner.

a Of this ye haue before in.x.Cha.b

Some men are ryche, thoughe they haue nothynge: againe some men are poore hauing greate ryches. With goodes euery man deliuereth his life, and the poore wyll not be reproued. The light of the righteous maketh ioyfull, but the candle of the vngodly shalbe put out among the proude there is euer strife, but amonge those that do all thynges with aduysemente, there is wysdome. Hastely got goodes are lone spit, but they that be gathered together with the hond, shall increase Longe tarryenge ma a thing that is desired, greeueth the hert: but when ỳ desire cometh, it is a tre of life. Who so despiseth ỳ worde b destroyeth hym selfe: but he that feareth the commaundemente shal haue peace. The lawe is a wel of life vnto the wise, that it may kepe him from the snares of death. Good vnderstandyng geueth fauour, but hard is the way of the despisers. A wyse man doth al thynges with aduysemente, but a foole wyl declare his folly. An vngodly messanger bringeth mischefe, but a faythfull embassyoure is wholsome. He that thynketh scorne to be reformed, commeth to poouerte a shame: but who so receaueth correction, shal come to honour

D When a desire is brought to passe, it delyteth the soule: but fooles abhorre hym that eschueth euell. He that goeth in the company of wyse men, shalbe wyse: but who so is a companyon of foles, shalbe hurte. Misfortune folowyth vpon synners, but the righteous shal haue a good reward. Which their children children shalbe in possession, for the riches of the synner is layed vp for the iuste. There is plenteousnesse of foode in the fielde of the poore, and shalbe increased out of measure. He that spareth the rod, hateth hys sonne: but who so loueth hym, foloeth hym euer in nurture. The righteous eateth, and is satisfied, but the belly of ỳ vngodly hath neuer enough. The.xiiii.Chapter.

B Who so feareth the Lorde, walketh in the right path: and regardeth not hym that abhorreth the wayes of the Lord. In the mouth of the foolyshe is the beatynge of lordshyppe, but the lyppes of the wyse wyll be ware of such. Where no.a*. oxe are, there ỳ cribbe is empty: but where the D oxe labour there is much frute. A faythfull witnesse will not dyssemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye. A scornefull body seketh wisdom, and findeth it not: but knowlege is easy to come by, vnto him that wyl vnderstande Be that thou medle not with a foole, and so as though thou hadest no knowledge. The wysdome of hym that hath vnderstandyng is, to take heede vnto hys way: but the foolyshnes of the vnwyse deceaueth. Fooles make but a sporte of synne, but there is louyngnesse loue amonge the righteous. The hert of him that hath vnderstandyng wyll neyther dyspaire for any sorowe, nor be to presumptuous for any gladnesse.

The houses of the vngodly shalbe ouerthrowne, but ỳ tabernacles of the righteous shal flouish. There is a, b* waye whiche some men thinke to be right, but the ende thereof leadeth vnto death. The hert is sometymes in a laughter, and the ende of mirth is he vnwise. An vnfaythfull persoone shalbe filled with hys owne wayes, but a good man wyl beware of suche. An ignorant body beleeueth all thynges, but who so hath vnderstandyng, loketh well to his goinges. A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euil, but a foole goeth on presumptuously. An impacient man dealeth foolishly, but he that is well aduysed both other wayes. The ignorante haue foolyshnes in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowledge. The euel shal bowe hem selues before the good, and the vngodly shall waite at the doores of the righteous. The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghbours, but the rich hath many frendes.

Who so despiseth his neyghbour, doth a mysse: but blessed is he that hath pytye of the poore. They that imagyne wickednes, shall be disapoynted: but they that muse wyl good thynges, loue suche shall happen mercy and faythfulnesse. Diligent labour bringeth ryches, but where many wordes are, there is scarcenesse. Ryches are an ornamente vnto the wyse, but the ignorance of fooles is very foolyshnesse. A faythfull witnesse deliuereth soules, but a lyer disceaueth them. The feare of the Lord is a strong hold for vnto him he wyl be a sure defence.

The feare of the lorde is a well of lyfe, to D auoide the snares of death. The increase and G prosperite of the commens is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confusion of the Prince. Pacyence is a token of wisdo, but wauth y hasty disposicion is a token of foolyshnesse. A mery hert is the life of the bodye, but enuye rotteneth almoste the bones. He that doeth a poore man wronge, blasphemeth hys maker: but who so hath pytye of the poore, doeth honoure hym God. The vngodlye is afrayed of euery payne, but the righteous hath a good hope eue in death. Wysdome resteth in the herte of him that hath vnderstandynge, and he wyll teach them that are vnlearned. Ryghteousnes setteth vp the people, but wickednes bringeth folke to destruccyon. A discrete seruaunt in a pleasure vnto the kynge, but one þ is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

The Notes.

a* By the oxen are signified preachers, as in 1. Corint. ix. and by the stable the chyrche.

b* Make for maner of liuing. Psal. i. a that abideth not in the waye of sinners. &c. þ here after in the .xvi. c.

¶ The .xv. Chapter.

A Soft answere putteth downe displeasure, but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto anger. A wise tonge commendeth knowledg, a foolish mouth blabbeth oute no thynge but foolyshnesse. The eyes of the Lord loke on euery place, both vpo the good and badde.

A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A foole despyseth hys fathers correccyon, but he that taketh hede whan he is reproued shall haue þ more vnderstandyng.

B In the house of the ryghteous are greate ryches, but in the increase of the vngodlye ther is myssorder. A wyse mouth poureth out knowledge, but the herte of the foolish doth not so. The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodlye, but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable vnto hym. The waye of the vngodlye is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde, but who so folowe the righteousnesse, hym he loueth. He that forsaketh the ryghte strete, shalbe sore punyshed: and who so hateth correccyon, falleth into death. The hell with her payne is knowne vnto the Lorde, howe much more then the hertes of men? A frowardly body loueth not one that rebuketh hym, nether wyll he come amonge the wyse. A merye hert maketh a cheareful countinance but an vnquiet mynde maketh it heuy. A wise hert wil seke after knowledg, but the mouth of foles medleth with folishnesse. All the dayes of the poore are myserable, but a quyet hette is as a continuall feaste. Better is a litle with the feare of the Lord then great treasure, farther they are not without sorowe. Better is a messe of potage with loue, then a fat oxe with euel wyll.

C An angry man stereth vp strife, but he that is pacient stilleth discord. The waye of þ slouthful is full of thornes, but þ strete of the righteous is wel cleared. A wyse son maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameth hys mother. A foole reioyseth in folysshe thynges but wyse man loketh wel to hys owne goinges. Vnbuilded thoughtes shal come to naught but wher as men are þ can geue counsel, ther is stedfastnes. O howe ioyfull a thyng is it, a man to geue a conuenyente answere? O how pleasaunt is a word spoken in due seasō, son. The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heauen, that a man thoulde beware of hell beneth.

D The Lord wyll breake downe the house of the proud, but he shal make fast the borders of the widdowe. The Lorde abhorreth the ymaginacons of þ wycked, but pure wordes are pleasaunt vnto him. The courtous man roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes shall liue. A ryghteous man museth in hys mynde howe to do good, but the mynde of the vngodly ymagineth, howe he may do harme. The Lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the praier of the righteous. Lyke as the clearenesse of the eyen reioiseth the herte so doth a good name fede the bones. The eare that herkeneth vnto wholsome warnynge, and enclyneth therto, shal dwell amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soulet but he that submytteth hym selfe to correccyon, is wyse.

The .xvi. Chapter.

T He feare of the Lord is þ ryghte sciperce of wysdome, and lowli- A nes goeth before honure. a* A a. That ma man may wel purpose a thinge wt of man is in his herte, but the answere of come to good the tong commeth of the Lord. A man thyn- purpose, wit keth al his waies to be cleane, but it is þ Lord out the spir that iudgeth the myndes. Cōmit thy wor- of God, kes the Lord, and loke what thou deuisest, it shal prosper. The Lorde doth al thynges for hys owne sake, yea when he hyreth the vngodly for the day of wrath. The Lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude herte, ther may neyther strength nor power scape.

With louyng mercye and fayethfulnesse synnes be forgeuen, and who so feareth the Lorde, he eschueth euell. When a mās waye please the Lord, he maketh his very enemies to be hys frendes. Better is it to haue a litle B thinge with righteousnes, then greate rentes wrongously gotten. A man deuyseth a waye in his herte, but it is the Lorde that ordreth hys goinges. When the prophecye is in the lyppes of the kynge, hys mouth shal not go wronge in iudgment. A true measure and a true balaunce are the Lordes, he maketh all weightes. It is a great abhommynacyon when kynges are wycked, for a kinges seat should be holden vp with ryghteousnesse. Ryghteous lyppes are pleasaunte vnto kynges, and they loue hym that speaketh the truth. The kynges displeasure is a messaunger of deathe, but a wyse man wyll pacifye hym. The chearefull countenaunce of the kynge is lyfe, and hys louynge fauoure is as the reuwynge dewe. To haue wysdome in possessiō is better then gold, & to get vnderstanding is more worth then syluer. The path of þ righteous eschueth euel, & who so loketh wel to his waies, kepeth hys owne soule. Presumptuousnes goth before destructiō, & after a proud stomake there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde dreuyde the peoples with the pouer. He that hideth a matter wisely, optayneth good: and blessed is he, that putteth his trust in the Lord. Who so hath a wyse understanding, is called to counsel but he that cannot speake faire getteth more riches. Understanding is a well of lyfe vnto him that hath it. as for the chastenyng of fooles, it is but foolishnesse. The hert of the wyse enstructeth his mouth, and amendeth the doctryne in his lyps.

¶ Faire wordes are an hony combe, a refreshynge of the mynde, and helth of the bones. * There is alwaye ꝑ men thinke to be right but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. A troublous soule dyspayreth her selfe, for her owne mouth hath brought her thereto. An vngodly personne styreth vp euell, and in hys lyps he is as an whote burnyng fyre.

A frowarde body causeth strife, and he that is a blabbe of his tonge, maketh deuyll on amonge princes. A wycked man beguyleth his neyghbour, and leadeth hym the waye that is not good. He *that wynketh with hys eye, imagineth mischefe: and he that bytyth his lyppes, will do some harme. Age is a crowne of worshippe, if it be founde in the waye of ryghteousnes. A patyente man is better then one stronge: and he that can rule him selfe, is more worth then he that wynneth a city. The lotte are caste into the lappe, but there sal standeth in the Lorde.

The.xviii.Chapter.

BEtter is a dry morsell with quietnes, then a full house and many fat eatell with strife. * A discrete seruaunt shall haue more rule then the sonnes that haue no wysdom, and shal haue like heritage with the brethren. Lyke as syluer is tryed in the fyre and golde in the fornace, euen so tryeth the Lorde powre the hertes. A wycked body holdeth muche of false lyppes, and a dissemblyng personne geueth eare to a dyscreatefull tonge. * Who so laugheth the poore to scorne blaspemeth hys maker: and he that is glad of another mans hurt, shall not be vnpunished.

Children children are a worshippe vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of ꝑ children. An eloquent speach becometh not a fole, a dissemblyng mouth also becometh not a prince. Liberalite is a precyous stone vnto hym ꝑ hath it, for whersoeuer he becketh, he prospereth. Who so couereth another mans offence seketh loue: but he ꝑ discloseth ꝑ same setteth frendes at variance. One reproufe only doth more good vnto him ꝑ hath vnderstandynge then an. C. stripes vnto a fole. A frowarde person soweth mischefe, but a cruell messanger shall be sent against hym. It were better to come against a fyre bere robbed of her whelpes, then against a fole in his foolyshnes. * Who so rewarded euell for good, the plage shall not departe from hys house. He that soweth discord, ꝑ braule, is lyke one that byggeth vp a water banke: but an open rumor is lyke the water that breaketh out, ꝑ renneth abroad. The Lord hateth as well hym ꝑ iustifyeth the vngodly, as hym that condemneth the innocent. What profyt is it to geue a foole money in his hand, where as he hath no mind to lyue wysdome: he is a frende that alwaye loueth, and in aduersite a sul that leaueth vs in his brother. Whoso promyseth vp the hande, and is surtye for another, he is a foole.

He that loueth stryfe, beloueth synne: ꝑ who so setteth his dore to hye, seketh after a fall. Who so hath a frowarde herte obtayneth no good: he that hath an euyll tonge, shall fall into mischefe. An vnthryfte body bringeth him selfe into fawte, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye. * A merye hert maketh a lusty age, but a sorrowful mynde dryeth vp the bones. The vngodlye taketh gyftes out of the bosome, to wrest the waye of iudgment. * Wysdome shineth in the face of hym that hath vnderstanding, but the eyes of fooles wander thyther in out all landes. An vnthryfte sonne is a greif vnto his father, ꝑ an heuynesse vnto hys mother that bare him. To punish the innocent, and to smite the princes that geue true iudgmente, are both euell. * He is wyse and discrete, that temperyth his wordes: and he is a man of vnderstandinge, that maketh much of his spirite. Yea a verye foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wyse, and to haue vnderstandinge, when he shutteth his lyppes.

The.xviii.Chapter

HE so hath pleasure to forsake the ꝑ vnde, geketh a quarrel in euery thyng. A foole hath no delite in vnderstandyng, but only in those thynges wherein his herte reioyceth. Where vngodlynes is there is also dishonour: and so there followeth shame and dishonoure. The wordes of mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a full streame. It is not good to a*ccepte the ꝑsonne of the vngodly, ꝯ to put backe the ryghteous in iudgmente. A fooles lippes are ryght hatefull. A fooles mouth is his owne destruccion and his lippes are the snare for his owne soule. The wordes of a tale tenter are very wounders, and go thorow vnto the inmost parts of ꝑ body. Who so vnfaythful ꝑ slacke in his labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. The name of ꝑ Lord is a strong castel, the righteous flyeth vnto it, and shalbe saued. But ꝑ rich mans goodes are his strong hold, ꝑ he taketh them for an hie wall vnnethe about hym. After pryde commeth destruccion, and honour after lowlynes. * He ꝑ geueth answere in a matter before he here it, is a foole, ꝑ worthye to be confounded.

A good stomacke boldeth stoupe a mans infirmite, but who can beare a wounded mynde? A wyse herte inhaunceth his knowledge, and a prudent eare seketh vnderstandynge.

mans ſake. Every man lyketh the bread that is gotten with diſceate, but at the laſte hys mouth ſhalbe filled with grauell.

braule go forward and with diſcretiō ought warres to be taken in hande. Medle not with hym that bewrayeth ſecretes, and is a ſclaunderer, and diſcloſeth with hys lippes. Whoſo curſeth hys father and mother, hys lyght ſhalbe put outin the myddeſt of darcknelle. The herytage that commeth to haſtely at the fyrſte, ſhall not be prayſed at the ende.

Saye not thou: I wyll recompence evel, but put thy truſte in the Lorde, and he ſhall defende the. The Lorde abhorreth two maner of wepghtes, and a falſe balaunce is an evell thinge. The Lorde ordeth every mans goinges, for what is he that underſtandeth hys owne wayes? It is a ſnare for a man to to blaſpheme that which is holy, and then to go aboute wyth vowes. A wyſe kynge deſtroyeth the ungodly, & bringeth the wheele over the. The lanterne of ✠ Lord is the breath of man, and goeth thorow all the inwarde partes of the body. Mercy and faithfulnes preſerue the kynge, and wyth louyng kyndnes his ſeate is holden vp. The ſtrength of yonge men is their worſhip, and a grap head, is an honour vnto the aged. Woundes kepe away evel, and ſo do ſtripes the inwarde partes of the body. The.xxi. Chapter.

THe kinges hert is in the hand of the Lord, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whether ſo ever he wyll. Every man perſwadeth hys owne waye to be ryght, but the Lord iudgeth the herte. To do righteouſnes & iudgment is more acceptable to the Lorde then ſacrifice. A parliamentarous loke, a proude ſtomache, and the lanterne of the ungodly is ſynne. The thoughtes of one ✠ is diligente, lyenge perſwadeth but he that is vnadviſed, commeth vnto penurie. Who ſo gaudeth vp ryches wyth the diſceatfulnes of his tonge, he is a foole, and lyke vnto the ✠ ſeke their own death ✠ vnkyndnes of the ungodlye ſhalbe their owne deſtruccion, for they wolde not do the thinge that was right. The waies of the frowarde are ſtraunge, but the workes of him that is clenne, are ryght. *It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the houſe toppe, then wyth a braulynge woman in a wyde houſe.

The ſoule of the ungodlye wyſheth evell, and hath no pytye vpon hys neyghboure. When the ſcornefull is punyſhed, the ignorant take the better heade: and when a wyſe man is warned, he wyll receaue the more vnderſtandynge. The righteous conſyderath the houſe of the ungodlye, but the ungodlye goo on ſtyll after their owne wyckednelle. Who ſo ſtoppeth hys eare at the crienge of the poore he ſhal cry him ſelfe and not be herde. A preſent pacifyeth diſpleaſure, & a gift in the boſome ſtrongly ſtormeſtarck.

The iuſt beholdeth & iudge the thing that is ryghte, but the wickednes of wyckednelle abhorre the ſame. The man that wandereth out of the waye of vnderſtandynge, ſhall remayne in the congregacion of the dead. He that loueth pleaſure in banckettes, & ſuche a prouse man: Who ſo delyteth in wyne and be lecherous, ſhall not be ryche. The ungodlye ſhalbe geuen for the righteous, and the wicked for ✠ iuſt. *It is better to dwell in a wyldernelle, then wyth a chydynge and an angrye woman. In a wyſe mans houſe there is a greate treaſure and a pleaſaunt ſwelle, but a foolyſh body ſpendeth vp all. Who ſo followeth righteouſnes and mercy, fyndeth both life, righteouſnes and honoure. A wyſe man vpmounteth the cytye of the mighty, and an ſtrength that they truſt in, he ouerguyth it wyth ſorowe. Who ſo kepeth his mouth and his tong, ſhe ſauyt kepeth hys ſoule from troubles. He that is proude & parliamentarous, is called a lycenceful man, wherche in wrath hatte wonke malycyouſlye. The longynge deſyre of the ſlouthfull ſo hys owne death, for hys handes wyll not labour. He coueteth and be ſlouth. All the day longe, but the righteous ſo alwayes gruyng, and keepeth not ſtyngy backe. *The ſacrifice of the ungodly is abhominable, for they offer the ſtyng that is gotten wyth wicked dedes. A falſe witneſſe ſhall perish, but he that wolde counſel to ſpeake, ſhall alwaye haue power to ſpeake him ſelfe. An ungodly man goeth ſtoute wyth hys face, but the iuſte reformeth hys owne wayes. *There is no wyſedome there is no vnderſtandynge, there is no counſell againſte the Lorde. The horſe is prepared againſt the day of battail, but the Lorde geueth the victory. The.xxii. Chapter.

*A Good name is more worthe then great ryches, and louyng fauoure is better then ſyluer and golde.

Whether ryches or poverty hys more ſure, & alwayes of God. A wyſe man ſeth the plage and hideth him ſelf, but the foolyſh go on ſtyll and are punyſhed. The rewarde of lowlynes and ✠ feare of God, is ryches, honour, proſperity and health. Sprine and ſnares are in the waye of the frowarde, but he that wyll kepe his ſoule, ſhal ſpeu fe from ſuche. If thou teache a child in his youth wyſe waye he ſhalle go, for ſhal not leaue it wyſe he is olde. The rich ruleth ✠ poore, & ✠ borrower is ſeruaunt to the lender, the ✠ ſowe wyckednes ſhall reape ſorowe, & ✠ rod of his plage ſhall ceaſſage him. *A louyng eye ſhalbe bleſſed, for he geueth of his bread vnto ✠ poore. Caſt out ✠ ſcornful man, & ſtrife ſhall go out & ſo, yea ſtrife & ſclaunder ſhall ceaſe. Who ſo loueth to be pure in ✠ ſight of cleanſe hert and of gracious lippes, the kynge ſhall be his frende. The eyes of the Lorde preſerue knowlege, but he ſubuerteth ✠ wordes of the vngodly. The ſlouthful ſayeth there is a lyon without, I ſhalbe ſlayne in the ſtreate. The mouth of an harlot is a deepe pyt, wherein he fallen ✠ the Lorde is angrye wyth all. Foolyſhnes ſticketh in ✠ herte of the lad, but the

L rod of correccion dryueth it awaye. Who so doth a poze man wrong to increase his owne riches, geueth (commenly) vnto the ryche, & at the last commeth to powerte him selfe. My sonne, bow downe thine eare, and herke vnto the wordes of wysdome, applye thy mynde vnto my doctryne: for it is a pleasaunt thyng if thou kepe it in thyne hert, and practise it in thy mouth: that thou mayest alwaye put thy trust in the Lorde. Haue not I warned the verey oft with counsel & learning: that I might shew the truth and that thou with the verey mygheest answere them that lay any thynge agaynst the? Be that thou robbe not the poze because he is weake, & oppresse not the symple in iudgment: for the Lorde him selfe wyll defende their cause, and do vyolence vnto them that haue vsed vyolence. Make no frendshyp with an angry wilful man, and kepe no company with the furious: lest thou learne hys wayes, and receaue hurte vnto thy soule. Be not thou one of the that bynd their hand vpō promyse, and are suertye for dett: for if thou hast nothyng to paye, he shall take awaye thy bed from vnder the. Thou shalte not remoue the lande marke, which thy fore elders haue sette. Sepst thou not, that they whyche be diligent in their busines stād before kinges and not among the symple people?

The.xxiii.Chapter

WHen thou sittest at the table to eate with a lorde, order thy selfe manerly with the thinges that are set before the. Measure thine appetite: and if thou wilt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer gredye of his meate, for meate begyleth and disceaueth. Take not ouer greate trauaple and labour to be ryche, beware of suche a purpose. Why wylt thou set thyne eie vpon the thing, which sodenly vanysheth awaye? For ryches make the selues wynges, & a* take their flight lyke an Aegle into the ayre. Eat not the vnmercyfull, & delite not his meat, for he hath a meruelus hert. He saith vnto the eate & drinke, as his hert is not with the. Yea, the morsels the thou hast eaten shalt the perchabe, & lese thyne swete wordes. Tel nothyng into the eares of a fole, for he will despise the wysdome of thy wordes. Remoue not the olde lande marke, and come not within the feld of the fatherles For he that defendeth them is mygheye, euen he shall defend their cause against the. Apply thyne herte vnto learning, and thine eare to the wordes of knowledge.* Withholde not correction from the childe, for if thou beatest him with the rodde, he shall not dye therof. Thou smytest him with the rod, but thou deliuerest his soule from hel. My sonne, if thy herte receaue wysdome, my herte also shal reioyce yea my reines shalbe very glad, if thy lyppes speake the thynge that is ryght.* Let not thyne herte be gelous to folowe synners, but kepe the fyl in the feare of the Lord, b* at the so shall the knowledge of wysedome be vnto thy soule, as soone as thou hast gotten it.

And there is good hope, yea thy hope shall not be in vayne. Laye no pryue wayte wyckedly vpō the house of the righteous, and wast quiete not his resting place. ffor a iust man falleth .c. seuen tymes, and ryseth vp agayne, but the vngodly fal into wickednes. Reioyce not thou at the fall of thyne enemye, and let not thyne herte be glad when he stombleth. Lest the Lord (when he seyth it) be angrie, & turne hys wrath from him vnto the. *d. Let not thy wrath and grefe moue the, to folowe the wycked and vngodlye. And why? the wycked hath nothyng to hope for, and the candle of the vngodly shal be put oute. My sonne, feare thou the Lord and the kyng, and kepe no company with the sclaunderous: for their destruccion shal come sodenly, and who knoweth the ire of them both?

These are also the sayenges of the wyse. It is not good, to haue respect ofe aup person in iudgment. He that saieth to the vngodly: thou art righteous, him shal the people curse, yea the comenty shall abhorre hym. But they that rebuke the vngodly shalbe commended and a ryche blessynge shall come vpon them. He maketh him selfe to be well lourd, that geueth a good answere. Make vp thy worke that is wythout, & loke wel vnto that which thou hast in the felde, & then buyld thyne house. Be no false witnesse agaynst thy neighbour hurte hym not with thy lyppes. Laye not I wil handle him, ruf as he hath delte vnto me and wil reward euery man accordyng to his dedes. I went by the felde of the slouthful, and by the vineyarde of the fole of the slouthful and by the vyneyardes of the folish man. And lo, it was all couered with nettels, and stode ful of thistles. and the stone wall was broken downe. Then I sawe, and consydered it well I loked vpon it, and toke it for a warnyng. *Yet a slepe or tyl a lytle, slomber a lytle, fold thyne handes together yet a lytle, & thou shalt powerye come vnto the as one that trauaileth by the way, and necessite like a weaponed man. The.xvi. Chapter

¶ These also are the sayinges of Salomon, which the men of Ezechias kynge of Juda, dyd gather together.

It is the honour of God to kepe a thyng secret, but the kynges honour is to serche out a thyng. The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, & kings hert is vnsearchable.

Take the dosse from the syluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessel therof.

Take away vngodlynes from the king, & his seat shalbe stablished in rygtuousnes.

Put not forth thy self in the presence of the king, & stande not into the place of great men.

Better is it that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hyther, then thou to be set downe in the presence of the prince whō thou hast with thyne eyen. Be not hastye to go to the law, lest happely thou order thy selfe so at the laste, that thy neighbour put the to shame. Handle thy matter to thy neyghbour him self, and discouer not an other mans secretes: lest when men heare therof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and lest thine euell name do not cease. A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a syluer dish. The correction of the wise is to an obedient eare, a golde chayne & a Jewel of gold. Lyke as the waater cooleth the hasarde, so is a faythfull messenger to him y sent him, & refresheth his maisters mynde. Whoso maketh great boaste & geueth nothyng, is like clowdes & wind without rain. With pacience may a prince be pacified, & a soft tong may rigorousnes be broke. If thou findest hony, eate so much as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouer ful, & perhaps it out againe. Withdraw thy fote fro thy neighbours house, lest he be werye of the, and so abhorre the. Who so beareth false witnesse agaynst hys neyghbour, he is a berye speare, a swearde, and a sharpe arowe. *The hope of the vngodlye in tyme of neade, is lyke a rotten toth and a slippery fote. Who so singeth sig to a wyc hed her hert, clotheth him vp rage in the cold & powreth vynegre vpō chalke. *If thyne enemye hōger, feed him: if he thyrst, geue him drinke to drinke so shalt y heape coles of fyre vpō his head, and the Lord shal reward the. The North wind driueth away the raine, euen so doth an earnest sober countenaunce backbytyng tong. It is better to sit in a corner vnder y rofe, then in a busking wyfe in a wide house. A good reporte out of a farre countre, is like cold water to a thirsty soule. A rygteous man falling down before y vngodlye, is like a troubled well & a spoyled spring. Like as it is not good to eate to much hony, euen so he y wil search out hygh thynges, it shalbe to hony for him. He y can not rule him self, is like a city which is broke downe, & hath no walles.

The.xxx. Chapter.

The wise sayinge is not vnlyke in summer, vnto rayne in haruest: euen so is worshyp vnfytte for a foole. Like as the byrde and the swallowe take their flyght and sit here and there: so the curse that is geuen in dispite, shall not lyght vpon a man. Vnto the horse belongeth a whippe, to the asse a bridle, and a rodde to the fooles backe. Geue not the foole an answere after his folyshnesse, lest thou become lyke vnto him: but make the fole an answere to his foolishnes, lest he be wise in his owne conceyt. He is lame of his fete yea euen he is in daunger, y cōmitteth any thyng to a fole. Like as it is an vnfrutefy thyng to haue legs y not to walke euē so is a parable in y fooles mouthe. He that setteth a foole in hye dignity, that is euen as if a man did cast a precious stone vp on the gallous. A parable in a fooles mouth is lyke a thorne that pricketh a dronken man in the hand. A man of experience discerneth all thynges well, but whoso byeth a foole, byeth such one as will take no hede.

Lyke as the dogge turneth agayne to hys bompte, euen so a foole beginneth hys folish nesse agayne a freth. If thou seest a man that is wyse in his owne conceate, there is more hope in a fole then in him. The slouthfull saieth there is a leopard in the way, and a lyō in the myddest of the streetes.

Lyke as the dore turneth aboute vpon the thresholde, euē so doth the slouthfull welter hym selfe in his bedde.* The slouthfull bodye thrusteth his hād into his bosome, and it greueth him to put it agayne to his mouth. The slogard thynketh hym selfe wyser then vij. men. b. that teach. Who so goeth by a medleth wyth other mens stryfe, he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares.

Lyke as one shutteth deadly arowes and dartes out of a parup place, euen so doth a dissembler wyth his neighboure. And then saith he: I dyd it but in sporte. Where no wodde is, there the fyre goeth oute: and where the backbyter is taken awaye, there the stryfe ceaseth.

* Coales kyndle heate, and wodde the fire: euen so doth a brawlynge felowe stere up warre.

A slaunderers woordes are lyke swetemeate, but they pearce the inwarde partes of the bodye.

Venimous lippes and a wicked herte, are lyke a potsherde couered with syluer drosse. An enemy dissembleth with hys lippes, and in the meane season he ymagineth mischefe: but when he speaketh fayre, beleue hym not, for there are seuen abhominacons in hys herte. Who so hideth euel will, secretly to do hurte, his malice shalbe shewed before the whole congregacion.* Who diggeth vp a pyt, shal fal therin: and he that weltreth a stone shal retorne vpon hym selfe. A dissembling tong hateth one that troubleth hym, and a flattering mouth worketh mischefe.

The.xxvij. Chapter.

Take not the boaste of to morow, for thou knowest not what maye happen to day. Let another man praise the, & not thine owne mouth: a straūger, & not thine.

The stone is heuy, and the sand weyghty: but a fooles wrath is heuier then the they both.

Wrath is a cruel thyng, and furyousnesse is a swift tempeste: yea who is able to abyde enuye? An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue. Faythfull are the. a* wounides of a louer, but the kysses of an enemy are deceatful. The that is ful, abhorreth an hony combe: but vnto him that is hongry, every bytter thyng is sweete. The that oft times flytteth, is like a lord & stoppeth her nese. The hert is glad of a swet ointmēt and sauoure, but a stormable that can geue good counsel, reioyseth a mās neyghbour. flees, prayse & flatte not yow &c.

Thyne owne frend, and thy fathers frend forsake thou not, but go not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frēd at hād, the a brother far of.

My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalt make me a glad herte: so that I shall make answere vnto my rebukers. A wyse man seyngeth the plage wyll hyde hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styll, and suffer harme. Take hys garmente that is suerte for a straunger, & take a pledge of him for the vnknowne mās sake.

He that is to hasty to prayse his neyghboure aboue measure, shalbe take as one y curseth hym and cursel reporte. A braulling woma and the rofe of the house dropping in a rayny day may well be compared together.

He that refraineth her, refraineth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in hys hande. Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man conforte another. Who so keepeth his syggetre, shall enioye the fruytes therof he that waiteth vpon hys master, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there appeare diuerse faces, euen so diuerse men haue diuerse hertes. Lyke as hell and destruccyon are neuer full, euen so the. b* eyes of men cānne neuer be satisfyed. Siluer is tryed in the mold, and golde in the fornace: and so is a man, when he is openlye praysed to his face. Though thou shouldest bray a foole wyth a pestell in morter like otemel, yet wyll not his folysnesse go from hym. Be that thou know the number of thy catell thy selfe, and loke wel to thy flockes. For riches abyde not alway, & the. c* crowne endureth not for euer. The hey groweth, the grasse cōmeth vp, & herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shall clothe the, and for the gotes thou shalt haue goates mylche ynough to fede the, to susteyne thy housholde, and to fynde thy maydens.

The.xxviii. Chapter.

The vngodly. a* flyeth no man chasyng him, but the righteous standeth stedfast as lyon. Because of synne the lande doth oft chaunge her prynce: but through men of vnderstandynge and wysdome a tenure endureth long.

One poore man oppressinge another by violence is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the fruyte. They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodly: but such as kepe the lawe abhorre them. Wycked men discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they that seke after the Lord, discusse all thynges.

A poore man leadyng a godly lyfe, is better then the ryche & goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so keepeth the lawe, is a childe of vnderstandynge: but he that feedeth ryotous men shameth hys father. Who so increaseth hys ryches by b* vsurage and wronge, let hym gather them to helpe the poore wyth al. He that turneth away his eare from hearing the latter his prayer shalbe abhorred. Who so leadeth the righteous out an euel waye, shal fal into his owne pit, but the vnsil shall haue the good in possession. The rych man thynketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstandynge can perceaue hym well ynough. When righteous men are in prosperite, then doth honoure flourishe: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. He that ioyneth hys goodes, shall not prosper: but who confesseth and forsaketh them shal haue mercy.

Well is hym y feareth alwaye in drede: as for hym that hardeneth his hert, he shall fal into myschefe. Lyke as a rampynge lyon and an hongry beare, euen so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.

Where the prynce is vnprudent vnderstandyng, there is greate oppression and wronge: but if he be such one as hateth couetousnesse he shall longe raygne. He that by violence sheddeth anye mannes bloude, shall be a rennagate vnto his grave, and no man shall be able to succoure hym. Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent life, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall once haue a fall. *He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plentyousnesse of breade: but he that followeth idelnesse, shall haue pouerte ynough. A faithfull man is greatlye to be commended, but he that maketh to much haste for to be ryche, shall not be vngylty. To haue respecte of persones in iudgement is not good: and whye he wil do wronge, yea euē for a pece of bread.

He that wyll be rych all to soone, hath an euell eye, and considereth not, that pouertye shall come vpon him. He that rebuketh a man, shal fynde more fauoure at the laste, then he that flattereth him. Who so robbeth hys father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is like vnto a murtherer. He that is of a proud stomache, stereth vp strife but he that putteth hys truste in the Lorde, shalbe wel fedde. He that trusteth in his owne hert, is a foole: but he y dealeth wysely, shal be safe. He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye hys eyes from suche as be in necessitye, shal suffer greate pouertye hym selfe. When the vngodlye are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selues: but whē they perysh, the righteous increase.

The.xxix. Chapte.

MAN that is styffnecked and wyll not be reformed, shal sodenly be destroyed without any helpe. Where the righteous haue the ouer hād the people are in good quyetnesse: but where the vngodly beareth rule, there the people mourne. Who so loueth wysedome, maketh his father a glad man: *but he y keepeth harlottes, spendeth away y he hath. With true iudgement the kyng stayeth vp the land, but if he be a man that taketh giftes, he burneth it vpsyde downe. Who so flatereth hys neyghboure, layeth a nette for hys fete. The synne of the wycked is hys owne snare, but the righteous shall be glad and reioyce.

The righteous considereth the cause of y poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge. Wycked people bourge a cyte in decay, but wyse men stire it vp againe. If a wyse man go to lawe wyth a foole (whether he deale wyth him frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest. The blynde ruleth not the righteous, but the vnrighteous *rule the foole.

A foole powreth out his spirit altogether, but a wyse man keepeth it in till afterwarde.

If a prynce beleue in lyes, all his seruaūtes are vngodly. The poore and the vsurer meete together, the Lord lyghteneth both their eyes. The state of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall contynue fast for euermore. The rod and correction maketh wyse-dome, but if a chylde be vnruly vnto, he bringeth his mother to shame. When the vngodly come vp, wickednesse increaseth: but the righteous shall se their fal. Chastyse thy sonne wyth correction, and he shall comforte the, yea he shall do the good at thyne herte. Where no *Prophecie is there the people go vnbridled: but wel is hym that kepeth the lawe. A seruaunte wyll not be the better for wordes for thoughe he vnderstande, yet wyll he not regarde them.

Se thou seest a man that is hastye to speake headlynesse, thou mayest truste a foole more then hym. He that delicately bringeth vp his seruaunt from a chylde, shall make hym hys master at length. An angrye man stereth vp stryfe, and he that heareth euell wyll in hys mynde, doeth muche euill. After pryde commeth a fal, *but a lowly spirit bringeth great worshippe. Who so keepeth cōpanye wyth a thefe, hateth hys owne soule: he heareth blasphemyes, and telleth it not fourth. He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but whoso putteth his truste in the Lorde shall come to honoure. Many there be that seke the prynces fauoure, but euery mans iudgement cometh from the Lorde. The vnrighteous abhorreth the vngodlye: but as for those that be in the ryght way, the wicked hate them.

Two thynges I require of the, that thou wilt not denye me before I dye, Remoue fro me vanite and lyes: geue me neither pouerte nor ryches, onely graunte me a necessary lyuinge. Lest I be to full, I denye the, & saye: what felow is the Lord? And lest I beynge constrayned thorow pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and forsweare the name of my God. Accuse not a seruaunt vnto his master, lest he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurt. He that bringeth vp an euell reporte vpon the generacion of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generacion that thynke them selues cleane, shall not be clensed from their filthynesse. There are people that haue a proude loke, and cast vp their eye lydes. This peoples teth are swerdes, and with their chaste bones they consume and deuour the symple of the earth, and the poore from among mẽ.

This generacion (whiche is lyke an horsleche) hath two daughters: the one is called, fetch hither, and the other bring hyther.

C There be thre thinges that are neuer satisfied, and the fourth sayeth neuer hoo. The hell, a womans wombe, and the earthe hath neuer water ynough. As for fyre, it sayeth neuer hoo. Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundement at naught: the rauens picke out his eyes in the valley, and deuoured be he of the yonge Aegles.

There be thre thinges to hye for me, and as for the fourth, it passeth my knowledge. The way of an Aegle in the ayre, the way of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shyp in the sea, and the waye of a man with a yonge woman. Such is the way also of a wife that breaketh wedlocke, which wypeth her mouth like as when she hath eaten, & sayeth. As for me, I haue done no harme. Thorow thre thinges the earth is disquieted, & the fourthe may it not beare: Thorow a seruaunt that beareth rule, thorow a foole that hath greate ryches, thorow an vgly houswyfe, & thorow an handmayde that is heyre to her maistres.

D There be foure thinges in the earth, & which are very litle: but in wysdome they excede the wyse. The Pismetes are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate together in the harueste. The Conyes are but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes. The grashoppers haue not a kynge, yet go they forth together by heapes. The spyder labourith with her handes, & that in the kynges palace.

There be thre thinges that go stilly, but the going of the fourth is the goodlyest of all. A Lyon, which is kynge of beastes, & geueth place to no mã: A cocke trayde to fight: A tame and a kynge that goeth forth with his people. If thou be so folish to magnifie thy selfe, or medlest with any such thing, then laye thine hande vpon thy mouth. Who so churneth mylke, maketh butter: he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it blede: and he that caulseth wrath, bringeth forth stryfe.

¶ The boke of the Preacher, otherwyse called Ecclesiastes.

The.J.Chapter.

☞ All that is in this worlde is vanitie.

THese are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, king of Ie-rusalem. a. All is but vanitie (saieth the preacher, all is but plaine vanitie. For what cõmoditie hath a man of all the labeute that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One gene-racion passeth away, another commeth, but the earth abideth styll. The Sunne ariseth, the sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he may there ryse vp agayn. The wynde goeth towarde the South, & fetcheth his cõpasse about vnto the North, & so tur-neth into him self agayn. All floudes runne into the sea, & yet the sea is not filled: for lode vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come agayn. All thinges are so harde, that no man can expresse them. * The eye is not satisfied with sight, the eare is not filled with hearing. The thing that hath bene, cometh to passe agayn: & the thing that hath bene done, is done agayn, there is no new thyng vnder the Sunne. Is there any thyng wherof it may be sayd: lo, this is new? for it was ofte a goo in the tymes that haue bene before vs. The thyng that is past, is out of remembraunce: but so the thynges that are for to come, shall no more be thought vpon among them that come after. I my self the Preacher, hepuge hynge of Israel & Hierusalem, applied my mynde to seke out & search for the knowlege of all thinges that are done vnder heauen. Such trauaple and labour hath God geuen vnto b. the chyldren of men, too exercyse thẽ selues therein.

Thus I haue considred all the thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, & so they are all but vanitie & vexacõ of mynde. The croked can not be mayde straight, & the lacking can not be numbred. I cõmoned with myne owne hert, saying: lo, I am come to a greate estate, & haue gotten more wisdome, then all they that haue bene before me in Jerusalem. Yea, my hert had great experience of wyse-dome & knowlege, for there vnto I applyed my mynde, that I might knowe what were wisdome & vnderstãding, what were errour & folishnes. And I perceyued that this also was but a vexacõ of mynde: for where much wysdome is, there is also great trauaple and disquietnes, and the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

The.ii.Chapter.

¶ Moreouer of ryches, of pleasure and of buyldyng are vayne thynges.

Then sayde I thus in my hert: Now go to, I will take myne ease and haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanitie also: in so much that I sayd vnto laughter thou art mad, and to myrthe: what doest thou?

So I thought in my hert, to withdraw my flesh frõ wyne, to apply my mynde vnto wysdome, & to cõprehende folishnes, till I tryed that (amõg all the thinges which are vn-der the sunne) I might se what were best for men to do, so long as they lyue vnder heuen.

I made me gorgious sayre workes. I buyld-ed me houses, & planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardens of pleasure, & plã-ted trees in them of al maner frutes. I made pooles of water, to water therwith a grene & frutefull trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maidens and had a greate houshold. Also for cattell and shepe, I had more substance of them then all they that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered syluer and gold together, & ouen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me syngers and women which could playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth and pastime. I gat me dauchyng cuppes also and glasses. Shortly, I was greater and in more worshippe, then all my predecessoures in Jerusalem. For wysdome remained with me and toke what soeuer myne eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and wherin soeuer my herte delyted or had any pleasure, I wythholde it not from it. Thus my herte reioysed in all that I dyd, and this I toke for the porcion of all my trauayle. But when I consydered all the workes that my handes had wrought, and all the laboures that I had taken therein, lo, all was but but hauype and veracio of mind, & nothyng of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consyder wysdome, errours and folysshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that myght be compared to me the kyng in suche workes?) and ¶ I saw that wysdome excelleth folysshnesse, as a After in the. farre as lyght doth darcknesse. a For a wyse latyn, a Prouer man beareth his eyes about in his head, but

bio. the foole goth in the darcknesse: I perceaued also that they both had one end. Thē thought I in my mynde: If it happen vnto the foole as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth, me then to laboure anye more for wysdome? So I confessed wythin my herte, that this also was but hauype. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolish, and all the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse man dyeth as well as the fole. Thus began I to be wery of my lyfe, in so muche that I coulde awaye wyth nothynge that is done vnder the Sunne, for all was but hauype and veracion of mynde: Yea I was wery of al my laboure, which I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shoulde be faine to leaue them vnto another man, that commeth after me for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse man or a fole? And yet shall he be lorde of al my laboures, which I wyth suche wysdome haue taken vnder the Sunne. Is not this a vayne thynge.

D So I turned me to refraine my mynd frō all such trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sunne for so much as a man shuld weery hym selfe with wysdome, w̄ vnderstādyng & opē sumpte & yet be faine to leaue his laboures vnto ano ther, that neuer swet for them. This is also a vayne thinge and a greate miserie. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauaile of his mind, wherby he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heuinesse, sorow and disquietnes al the dayes of his life? In so much that his herte can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Is it not better then, for a mā to eat & drinke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? Yea

I saw that this also was a gyfte of God: For who may eat, drinke, or bring any thing to passe wythout hym? And why? he geueth vnto man, what it pleaseth him: whether it be wysdome, vnderstandyng, or gladnesse. But vnto the sinner he geueth werines and sorow that he may gather and heape together the thing that afterward shalbe geuē vnto him whō it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thynge yea a very disquietnes and veracion of mind

¶ The.iii. Chapter

¶ All thynges come in their tyme and passe away in their tyme.

EVery thynge hath a tyme, yea all that is vnder the heauen, A hath his cōuenient seasō. Their is a tyme to be borne, & A tyme to dye.

Ther is tyme to plant, and a time to pluche vp the thing, that is planted.

A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make whole
A time to breake down, & a time to bild vp
A time to wepe, and a time to laugh:
A time to mourne, and a tyme to daunce:
A time to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together:
A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne B
from embracyng.
A time to win, and a tyme to lese:
A time to spare, and a tyme to spende:
A time to cut in peces, and a time to sowe together:
A time to kepe silence, and a time to speake:
A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate:
A tyme of war, and time of peace:

What hath a man elles (of yt doth any thinge) but werines & labour? For as touchyng the trauayle and carefulnes which God hath geuē vnto man, I se yt he hath geuē it thē, to be exercised in it. Al this hath he ordeyned maruelous goodly: to euery thyng his due tyme He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of men, yt they should not find out yt grounde of his workes, whiche he doth frō yt beginning to the end. So I perceiued, yt in these thinges their is nothinge better for a man, then to be C merry and to do wel so long as he liueth. For al yt a man eateth & drinketh, yea whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of al his labour, the same is a gyfte of God. I considered also that what soeuer God doth, it cōmeth for euer, & yt no thing cā be put vnto it nor take frō it: & yt god D doth it to the intent, that men should feare him. The thing yt hath bene, is now: & yt thing that is for to come, hath bene afore time, for God restoreth agayne the thynge that was passe. Moreouer, I saw vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgemente, and iniquyte in stede of righteousnesse. Then thought I in my mind: God shal separat the righteous frō yt vngodly, & thē shalbe yt time and iudgmēt of al councels and workes. I conceiued with mine own hert also cōcerning the childre of men how God hath chosen the & yet letteth thē apeare: as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, ¶ as the one dieth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of breth so that (in this) a man hathe no preeminence aboue a beast, but al are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so that they all turne vnto dust agayne. Who knoweth * the spirite of man that goeth vpwarde, ¶ the breath of the beast that goeth downe into the earth? Wherefore I perceyue, that there is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour, for that is hys portion. But who will bring him to se the thing that shall come after hym?

* The comen translacio reading, whether the spirite of a man goo vpwarde, ¶ the breath of a beaste downeward.

¶ The.iiii.Chapter.

¶ The miseries of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The child that is poore & wyse. etc.

A SO I turned me, ¶ considred al the violent wrong that is done vnder the sunne: ¶ beholde, the teares of such as were oppressed, ¶ there was no man to cõforte them: & that wolde deliuer ¶ defende them frõ the violẽce of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are dead, to be more happy then such as be alyue: yea, hym that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seith not the miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

B Agayn, I sawe that all trauaple and diligence of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vayn thing, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his hãdes together, and eateth vp hys owne flesh. One hãd full (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour and trauaple. Moreouer, I turned me, ¶ beholde yet another vanitie vnder the Sunne. There is one mã, no mo but him self alone, hauing neither childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauaple, hys eyes can not be satisfied with ryches, (yet doth he not remembre him selfe, ¶ sayeth) ffor whome do I take such trauaple? ffor whose pleasure do I thus cõsume away my lyfe? This is also a vayne ¶ miserable thynge. Therfore two are better then one, for they may well enioy the profyt of their labour. If one of them fall, hys cõpanion helpeth hym vp agayn: But wo is hym that is alone, for if he fall, he hathe not another to helpe hym vp. Agayn, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two may make resistaunce: A three folde cable is not lightly broken. A poore chylde beynge wyse, is better then an olde kynge, that doteth, ¶ cãnot beware in tyme to come. Some one commeth out of prysone, ¶ is made a kyng: and another which is born in the kyngdome, commeth into pouerte. And I perceyued, that al men liuyng vnder ¶ Sunne, go with the seconde chylde, that cõmeth vp in the steade of the other.

C As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioy the greater therin. This is also a vayne thyng and a vexacion of mynde. When thou commest in to the house of God, beare thy foote, ¶ drawe nye, b. that thou mayest heare: that is better then the offeringes of fooles, for they knowe not what euell they do.

a. Some translate: rather to receyue the sacrifices that fooles geue.
b. Some translate: rather to heare, then to geue, as fooles offering sacrifice.

¶ The.v.Chapter.

¶ Admonicion to beware of rashe communycacion. We ought not too murmur at the oppression of the poore. The couetous is not satisfied with hys ryches.

BE not hastie with thy mouth, ¶ let not thyne herte speake any thyng rashly before God. ffor God is in heauen, ¶ thou vpõ earth, therfore let thy wordes be few. ffor where much carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles.

* If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folish vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promise any thynge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe then that thou shouldest promyse, and not paye. Wil not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne, that thou saynest before the aungell: my foolishnesse is in the faute. ffor then God will be angry at thy voyce, ¶ destroye all the workes of thyne hãdes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are also diuerse vanities: but loke that thou feare God. If thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongously dealt withall, so that equite ¶ the right of the law is wasted in the lande: marueil not thou at such iudgement, for one great mã hedeth touch with another, and the mightye helpe them selfes together. The whole lãde also with the feldes and all that is therin, is in subiection ¶ bondage vnto the kyng. He ¶ loueth money, will neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delyteth in ryches, shall haue no profit therof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as much ryches is, there are many also that spende the away. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth the, saue yng that he may loke vpon them with hys eyes? A labouryng mã sleepeth swetely, whether it be little or much that he eateth: but the aboundance of the ryche wil not suffre him to slepe.

* Deu.xxiii.d Eccle.v.c.

Yet is there a sore plague, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. ffor oft times they perishe with hys greate misery ¶ trouble: and if he haue a chylde, it getteth nothynge. * Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thyther agayn, and careth nothyng atwaye with hym of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shal go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his life also muste he eate in the darke, with greate carefulnesse, sickenesse and sorowe.

Therefore me thinche it a better and a fayrer thinge a manne to eate and dyncke, and to be refreshed of all hys labour, that he taketh vnder the Sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe which God geueth hym, for this is hys porcyon. For vnto whom soeuer God geueth ritches, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioy it, to take it for hys porcyon, and to be refreshed of hys labour: this is nowe the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not muche how longe he shall lyue, for so much as God fylleth hys herte with gladnesse.

The.vi. Chapter.

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The dyfference of a fole and a wyse man.

A HEre is yet a plage vnder the Sunne, and it is a generall thing amoge men: when God geueth a man ryches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothynge of all that hys herte can desyre: and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge and a myserable plage.

B If a man begette an hundred chyldren, and lyue many yeares, so that his dayes are many in number, and yet cannot enioy his good ne yether be buried: as for him I saye, that an vntymely byrth is better then he. For he commeth to naughte, and goeth hys waye into darckenes, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seith not the Sunne, and knoweth of no rest neyther here ner there: Yea though he lyued two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is for himselfe, and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole. What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walcke before the lyuynge? The syght of the eyes is better, then that the soule thoulde so departe awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thynge and a dysquyetnesse of mynde. What is more excellente then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victorye of him that is myghtyer then he: A lame thing is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els? The.vii. Chapter

¶ That which passeth our strengthe and wytte ought we not to sehe after.

A WHo knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of hys vayne lyfe, whych is but as a shadowe? Or, who wyll tell a man, what shall happen after him vnder the Sunne.

*A good name is more worth then a precious ointmente, and the daye of death is better then the daye of byrthe. It is better to go into an house of mourninge, then into a banckettynge house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuyng, taketh it to hert. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for whē the countenaunce is heuye, the herte is ioyfull. The herte of the wyse is in the mourninge house, but the hert of the folish is in the house of myrthe. It is better to geue eare to the chastenynge of a wyse man, then to heare the song of fooles. For the laughing of fooles is lyke the crackinge of thornes vnder a pot, And that is but a vayne thing.

Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man to goo out of hys wytte, and destroyeth a gentle herte. The ende of a thyng is better then the begynnynge. The pacient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastie hye angrye in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is the cause that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be now? for that were no wyse question. Wysdome is better then ritches, yea much more worth thē the eye syght. For wysdome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowledge and wysdome geueth lyfe vnto him that hath it in possession. Consyder the worke of God, how that no man can make ꝑ thyng straight whych he maketh croked. Vse well the tyme C of prosperyty, and remembre the time of misfortune: for God maketh the one by ꝑ other, so that a man can fynd nothyng els.

These .ii. thinges also haue I considered in the tyme of vanytye: that ꝑ iust mā perisheth for hys ryghteousnes sake, and the vngodly lyued in hys wickednesse. Therefore be thou nether to righteous ner ouer wyse, that thou perysh not; be nether to vnrighteous also ner to folysshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of thys, and not to let that go out of thy hand. For he ꝑ feareth God shal escape them al.

Wisdō geueth more courage vnto the wyse then ten myghty men of the cyty: * for there *iii. Re. xxiii. ii. Paralip. xxxv.b. i. Iohn.i.b. is not one iuste vpon earth, that doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunt curse the: for thyne owne herte knoweth, that thou thy selfe also hast ofte tymes spoken euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued because of wysdome: for I thought to be wise, but she went farther fro me then she was before, yea and so depe that I might not reach vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowledg, and to seke out science wysdome and vnderstandynge: to know the foolishnesse of the vngodly, and the errour of dotynge fooles. And I founde, that a woman is bytterer then death: for she is a snerp angle, her herte is a net, and her handes are chaynes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her, but the synner wil be taken of her. D

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently serched oute and proued, that I myght come by knowledge: whych as yet I seke, and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo this only haue I founde, that God made man iust and right, but they seke the purest secretes, where as no man hath wysdome and understandynge, to gyue answere therunto.

The.viii. Chapter.

WYsdome maketh a mans face to shyne, but malyce putteth it oute of fauoure. Kepe the kynges commaundemente (I warne the) and the othe that thou hast made vnto* god. Be not hasty to go out of his syght, and se thou continue in no euell thynge: for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him, that doth he, Lyke as when a kynge geueth a charge, his commaundemente is myghtye: Euen so who maye saye vnto hym what doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shal fele no harme: but a wise mans herte discerneth tyme and maner: For euerye thinge wil haue oportunite and iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh men ful of carefulnes and sorowe. And why a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tel him? Nether is there any man that hath power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite, nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: it is not he also that can make an ende of the battail, nether maye vngodlynes deliuer him that medleth with al.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applyed my mynde vnto euerye worcke that is vnder the Sonne: howe one mā hath lordshyppe vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue oft sene the vngodly brought to their graues, and fallen downe frō the hye & glorious place: in so muche that they were forgotten in the cytye, where they were had in so hye and greate reputacion. This is also a vayne thynge. Because now that euell worckes are not hastely punyshed the herte of man geueth him selfe ouer vnto wickednesse. But though an euell persone offende an hundred tymes, and haue a longe lyfe yet am I sure, that it shall go well with the that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shal not be well with him, neyther shall he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitye vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whome it happeneth, as thoughte they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, vnto whom it goeth as though they had the workes of the righteousnes. Thys me thynke also a vayne thyng. Therfore I commaunde gladnesse, because a man hath no better thynge vnder the Sonne, then to eate and drynke, and to be merye: for that shal he haue of his labour al ye dayes of hys lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the Sonne. When I applyed my mind to learne wysdome, and to knowe the trauail that is in the worlde (and that of such a fashion, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of god, that it is not possible for a mā, to attaine vnto the workes that are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them oute, yet can he not reach vnto them: yea though a wise mā would vndertake to knowe them, yet myght he not fynde them.

The.ix. Chapter.

¶ A man wotteth not, by the righteousnes of his owne workes, whether he be worthye of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with his wife & prayse wysdome.

FOr all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The righteous and wyse yea and their a*workes also are in the hande of God: and. b*their is no man knoweth eyther the loue or hate of the thyng ꝑ he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth vnto the righteous as vnto the vngodly: to the good & cleane as vnto the vncleane: vnto him that offereth as vnto him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the sinner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto him ꝑ is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, this is a mysery, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are ful of wickednes, and mad folishnes is in their hertes as longe as they lyue, but yet they dye.

And why? As longe as a man liueth, he is careles: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better then a dead lyon: for they that be lyuyng, knowe that they shall dye: but they that be dead, knowe not thynge, neyther deserue they any more. For their memoriall is forgotten, so that they be nether loued, hated nor enuied nether haue they anymore parte in the worlde, in al that is done vnder the Sunne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy bread with ioy, and drynke thy wyne with gladnesse, for thy workes please God. c* Let thy garmēte be alway white, and let thy head wāt none oynt ment. Lyue thy selfe to thyne owne fully with the wyfe whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vaine, that God hath geuen the vnder the Sunne, all the dayes of thy vanite: for that is thy portion in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takeste vnder the Sunne. Whatsoeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for among the dead, whether as thou goest vnto, there is nether worcke, counsel, knowledge nor wysdome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the Sunne, and I sawe, that in running, it helpeth not to be swift: in battayll, it helpeth not to be stronge, to fyght: it helpeth not to be wyse to riches, it helpeth not to be skylful, to haue fauoure, it helpeth not to be cunninge: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not his tyme, but like as the fishes are take with the angle and as the birdes are catched with the snare

Euen so are men taken in the perilous time,

D This wysdome haue I seue also vnder ỹ
Sunne, and me thought it a great thynge.
There was a litle cite, and a fewemē within it: so there came a great kyng and besieged it, and made great bulwarkes agaynste it And in the cytie there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which with his wis-dome deliuered the cytie: yet was there no body, that had any respect vnto such a symple man. Then sayde I: wysdome is better then strength. Neuertheles, a simple mans wysdome is despised, & his wordes are not herde. A wyse mās counsayl that is folowed in silence, is farre aboue the crying of a captayne among fooles. * For wysdome is better then harnesse: but one vnthryft alone de-stroyeth much good.

A Ead flyes that corrupte & swete ointment and make it to stinke are somthyng more worth then the wysdome and honour of a foole. A wyse mans hert is a.

negligente then in thine office: for so shall great wacke onelle be put doun, as it were vb

raunce that is commenly among princes: in

The wordes of out a wyse mās mouth are hym self. The begynnyng of his talkynge is foolishnes, and the last worde of his mouth is great madnesse. A foole is so full of wor-des, that a mā can not tell what ende he will make: who will then warne hym to make a conclusion? The labour of the foolish is greuous into them, whyle they know not how to go into the cytie.

her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

All is but vanitie (sayeth the Preacher) all is but playne vanite.

The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowlege also: he gaue good hede, sought out the ground & set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, right scripture, and the wordes of truth. For the wordes of the wise are like pitches and nayles that go thorow, wherewith men are kepte together: for they are geuen of one shepeherde onely. Therfore be ware (my sonne) & above these thou make thee not many and innumerable bokes, nor take diuerse doctrynes in hande, to weery thy body withall.

Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges Feare God, and kepe his commaundementes, For that toucheth al men: For God shal iudge all workes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or euell.

The Ballet of Ballets of Salomon: called in Latyne Canticum Canticorum.

The.J.Chapter.

Salomon moues this Ballade as songe by them self and hys wyfe the daughter of Pharao, vnder the shadow of their fayre figuring Christ and vnder the person of hys wyfe the Churche.

The voyce of the Churche.

The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers children had rule will at me, they made me the keper of the vyneyarde. This was I sayne to kepe a vyneyarde, which was not myne owne.

The voyce of the church to Christ.

Tell me (O thou whom my soule loueth) where thou feedest, where thou restest at the noone daye: lest I go wrong, and come vnto the flockes of thy companyons.

Christ to the Churche.

If thou knowe not thy selfe (O thou fayrest among women) then go thy ware forthe after the foteteppes of the shepe, as though thou wouldest fede thy goates beside the shepeherdes tentes. There will I tarye for the (my loue) with myne hoste and with my charettes which shalbe no fewer then Pharaos. Thou shalt thy cheekes & thy neck be made fayre, & hanged with spanges & goodly iewels: a neck bande of golde will we make the with siluer buttons.

The voyce of the Churche.

When the king sitteth at the table, he shal smell my Nardus: for a bodel of myrre (O my beloued) lyeth betweene my breastes. I cluster of grapes of Cypers, or of the vynyardes of Engaddi art thou vnto me, O my beloued.

¶ The voyce of the Churche.

Me thynke I heare the voyce of my beloued. Lo, there cometh he hoppyng vpon the mountaynes, & leappng ouer the litle hylles. My beloued is lyke a Roo or a yong hart. Beholde, he standeth behynde oure wall, he loketh in at the wyndow, and peepeth thorow the grate. My beloued answered, & sayde vnto me.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

Stande vp my loue, my doue, my bewtifull, & come: for lo, the wynter is now paste, & the rayne is away & gone. The flowres are come vp in the felde, the ryght tyme is come, the voyce of the turtle doue is heard in our lande. The fygge tree bringeth forthe her figges, the vynes beare blossoms, & haue a good smell. O stande vp my loue, my bewtifull, & come (O my doue) oute of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaunce & heare thy voyce, for swete is thy voyce and fayre is thy face.

¶ The voyce agaynst the heretikes.

Get vs the foxes, yea, the litle foxes that hurt & vynes, for our vines beare blossoms.

¶ The voyce of the Church.

My loue is myne, and I am hys (which feedeth among the lilies) vntill the day breake, and till the shadowes be gone. Come again swyftly (O my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yong hart vnto the mountaynes.

The watchemen that go about the cite, founde me.

Who is this yͭ cōmeth out of the wildernesse lyke pyllers of smoke as it were a smell of Myrre, franckencence and al maner spyces of the Apotecary?

¶ The voyce of the Church.

Behold, aboute Salomons bedstede ther stande .lx. valeaūt men of the myghty in Israel. They holde swerdes euery one & are expert in warre. Euery man hath his swerde vpō his thygh, because of feare in the nyght. Kynge Salomon hath made him selfe a bedstead of the wood of Libanus, the pilers are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the ground pleasauntly paued for yͭ daughters of Jerusalem.

¶ The church speaking of Christ.

Go forth (O ye daughters of Sion) and beholde Kynge Salomon in the crowne wherwyth his mother crowned him in the day of his marriage, and in the daye of the gladnesse of hys herte.

¶ The .iiii. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

Howe fayre arte thou, my loue, howe fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyen, beside that which lyeth hyd within. Thy heare lockes are lyke a flocke of sheepe that be clipped, which go first vp from the washing place: where euery one beareth two twynes, and not one vnfruteful among them. Thy lyppes are lyke a rose coloured ryboude, thy wordes are louely: thy chekes are like a pece of a pomgranate, beside that which lyeth hyd within. Thy necke is lyke the tower of Dauid buylded with bulwarkes, where vpon there hange a thousaunde shyldes, yea all the weapens of the gyaūtes. Thy two brestes are lyke two twynes of pōgrocs, which fede among the lilies.

¶ The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O that I myght go to the mountayne of Myrre, and to the hyll of franckincense: tyll the day breake, and tyl the shadowes be past awaye.

¶ The voice of Christ speaking to yͭ church.

Thou arte all fayre, O my loue, and no spot is therin the. Come to me from Lybanus, O my spouse, come to me from Libanus come soone the next way from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, frō the lyons dennes & frō the mountayns of yͭ leopardes. Thou hast wounded my hert, O my syster, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert, with one of thyne eyen, & with one cheyne of thy neck. O howe fayre and louely are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaunte then wyne, and the smell of thyne ointmentes passeth al spyces. Thy lyps, O my spouse, drop as the hony combe, yea milche and hony is vnder thy tonge, and the smel of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankincense. Thou arte a well kepte garden, O my syster, my spouse, thou art a well kepte waterspringe, a sealed well.

The

The fruites that spute in the, are like a pery paradyse of pomegranates with swete fruites: as Cypresse, Nardus, Saffrō, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, and all the best spyces. Thou art a well of gardens, a well of lyuyng waters, whyche renne doune from Libanus.

¶ Christ calleth the Heathen.

Up thou Northwynde, come thou southwynde, & blowe vppon my garden, that the smell therof may be caryed on euery syde: yea that my beloued may come into my garden, and eate of the fruites and apples that growe therein.

¶ The.vi.Chapter.

¶ Christ speaketh to the Church.

Come into my garden O my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spyce. I wil eate my hony and my hony combe, I will drinke my wyne and my mylke.

¶ Christ speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, O ye frendes, dyspke & be merry, O ye beloued.

¶ The voyce of the Church.

As I was a slepe, & my hert waked, I herde the voyce of my beloued, when he knocked.

¶ Christ to the Churche.

Open to me (sayde he) O my sister, my loue, my doue, my derlynge: for my heade is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are full of the night droppes.

¶ The voyce of the spouselle.

I haue put of my cote, how can I do it on agayn? I haue washed my fete, how shall I spile them agayn?

¶ The voice of ỹ church speaking of Christ.

But when my loue put in his hand at the hole, my hert was moued toward hym: so ỹ I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrre, & the Myrre ranne doune my fingers vpon the locke. Neuertheles when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone his wape.

Now lyke as afore tyme when he spake, my hert coude not longer refrayne: Euen so now I sought hym, but I coulde not spede hym: I cryed vpō hym, neuertheles he gaue me no answere.

¶ The Churche complayneth of her persecuters.

So the watchmen that wente about the cytye, founde me, smote me, & wounded me: Yea, they that kept the walles, tore away my garment fro me.

¶ The spouselle speaketh to her cōpanyons.

I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, if ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell hym how that I am sycke for loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue above other louers, O thou fayrest among women? Or what can thy loue do, more then other louers, ỹ thou chargest vs so straytely?

¶ The Churche answereth of Christ.

As for my loue, he is white and redde coloured, a singular personne amonge many thousandes: his head is the most fine golde, the lockes of hys heer are bushed, blacke as the rauyng: hys eyes are as the eyes of doues by the water brokes, washē with mylke and remayning in a plentyous place: His cheekes are lyke a garden bed, where in the Apotecaries plante all maner of swete thinges: His lyppes droppe as the flowres of ỹ most principal Myrre, hys handes are full of golde rynges & precious stones. His body is as the pure yuory, decte ouer with Saphires: his legges are as the pyllers of Marbel set vpō sokettes of golde: His face is as Libanus, and as the beuty of the Cedre trees: Hys taste is swete, yea, he is altogether louely. Such one is my loue, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, such one is my loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge speakyng to the Churche.

Whither is thy loue gone then (O thou fayrest amonge women) whither is thy loue departed, that we may seke hym with the?

The.vii.Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the Churche.

My loue is gone doune into hys garde, vnto the swete smelling bedes, that he may refreshe hym self in the garden, and gather flowres. My loue is myne and I am hys, which feedeth among the Lyles.

¶ Christ to the Churche.

Thou art pleasaunt (O my loue) euen as louely as Jerusalem, glorious as an armye of men, with their banners. (Turne awaye thyne eyes fro me, for thei make me to proude.) Thy heery lockes are lyke a flocke of geates vpon ỹ mount of Galaad. Thy teth are like a flocke of sheepe that be clypped, which go out of the washyng place: where euery one beareth twoo ewynes, and not one barayne among the. Thy cheekes are lyke a peece of pomegranate beſydes that which lyeth hyd within. There are thre score Quenes, foure score concubynes, & yong women without number. But one is my doue, my derling. She is the one by beloued of her mother, and deare vnto her ỹ bare her. Whē the daughters sawe her, they prayse, she was blessed: Yea the Quenes and concubynes prayse her.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge.

What is this, that peepeth out as the mornyng? fayre as the moone, excellent as the sunne, glorious as an armye of men with their banners.

¶ Christ to the Synagoge.

I went doune into the nutte garden, to se what grew by ỹ brookes, to loke if ỹ vynes were shotte vp, & if ỹ pomegranates were flowrysh.

¶ The voice of the Synagoge.

Then

Then the charettes of the prynce of my people made me sodenly afrayde.

¶ The voyce of the Churche calling agayn the Synagoge.

Turne agayn, turne agayn, O thou Sulamite, turne agayne, turne agayne, that we may loke vpon the.

¶ The .viii. Chapter.

¶ Christ to the Synagoge.

WHat pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite, than when she daunceth among the men of warre?

¶ Christ to the Church.

O how pleasant are thy treadinges with thy shoes, thou princes daughter? Thy thynges are like a fayre iewel, which is wrought by a cunnyng workemaster: Thy nauell is like a round goblet, which is neuer without drynke: Thy wōbe is like an heap of wheat, set about with Lylies: Thy two brestes are lyke two twynnes of yong roes: Thy necke is as it were a towre of yuory: thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Hesebon, beside the poste of Bathrabbim: thy nose is like the towre of Libanus, which loketh toward Damascus: That head that standeth vpon the is lyke Carmel: the heare of thy head is like the kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre & louely art thou, my dearlyng, in pleasures? Thy stature is like a date tree, and thy brestes like the grapes.

¶ The spouse speakyng of the crosse.

I sayde: I will clymme vp into the date tree, and take holde of hys braunches.

¶ The spouse speaking to the spouselle.

Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes, the smell of thy nostrels lyke the smell of apples, and thy throte like the beste wine. This shalbe pure and cleare for my loue, his lyppes & teth shal haue their pleasure. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall turne hym vnto me.

¶ The Churche speakyng to Christe.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth into the felde, and take oure lodgynge in the vyllages. In the mornyng wyll we ryse vp tymes, and go se the vyneyarde: if it be sprong forth, if the grapes be growne, & if the pome granates be shut out. There wil I geue the my brestes: there shall the Mandragoras geue their smell beside oure doores: there, O my loue, haue I kepte vnto the all maner of fruites, both newe and olde.

The.ix. Chapter.

¶ The voyce of the Patriarches speakynge of Christe.

THat I myght fynde the without, and kysse the, whom I loue as my brother whiche sucked my mothers brestes: and that thou wouldest not be offended, if I toke the, and brought the into my mothers house: that thou mightest teache me, & that I might geue the drinke of spiced wyne and of the swete lycoure of my pomgranates.

His left hand lyeth vnder my head and his right hande embraceth me.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, that ye walke not by my loue, nor touch her, tyll she be content her self.

¶ The Synagoge speakyng of the church.

What is he this, that cōmeth vp frō the wyldernes, and leaneth vpon her loue?

¶ The voyce of the spouse before the spouselle.

I am the same that waked the vp among the apple trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the into ye world.

¶ The church speakinge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne herte, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is mightye as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her coales are of fyre, and a very flamme of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able too quenche loue, neither may ye streames drowne it. Yea, if a mā wolde geue al the good of his house for loue, he should counte it nothinge.

¶ Christ speaking of the church to the Synagoge.

When our loue is tolde our yong syster, whose brestes are not yet growen, what shal we do vnto her?

¶ The answer of Christ for the Church.

If she be a wall, we shall buylde a syluer bulwerke there vpon: if she be a towre, we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree.

¶ The church answereth to the Synagoge.

If I be a wall, & my brestes like towres, then am I as one that hath founde fauoure in hys sight.

¶ The Synagoge speaking to the Church.

Salomon had a vyneyarde at Baal Hamon, the vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that every one for the fruite thereof should geue hym a thousand peces of syluer.

¶ The voyce of Christ.

But my vyneyard, O Salomon, geueth the a thousand, and two hundreth to the kepers of the fruite. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyons may herken to the same.

¶ The voyce of the Church speakyng to Christ.

O get the awaye, my loue, as a roe or a yong hert vnto the swete smellynge mountaynes.

The fyrste Chapter.

Esaye preacheth that the anger of God shall come vpon Ierusalem because of their synnes.

THe vysyon of Esaye the sonne of Amos, whiche he sawe vpon Iuda & Ierusalem in the dayes of Vsiah, Ioatham, Achaz, and Ezechiah kynges of Iuda. Heare O heauē, herken O earth, for the Lord speaketh: I haue norysshed & brought vp children, and they are fallen awaye from me. An oxe knoweth his Lorde, & an Asse his masters stall: but Israel knoweth nothynge, my people hath no vnderstanding. Alas for thys synfull people, whiche are ouer laden with blasphemyes, a frowarde generacyon, wicked children. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backwarde. Wherfore shulde ye be plaged any more? for ye are euer fallyng awaye. The whole head is sick, & the herte is very heauy. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole parte in all youre body: but all are wounded, bruthes, sores, and stripes, whiche can neither be helped, bound vp, mollyfyed, nor eased with any oyntment.

Youre lande lyeth waste, youre cyties are burnt vp, youre enemyes deuoure your lande, and ye muste be layne to stand, and loke vpō it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemyes in a battell. Moreouer, the doughter of Syon is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyard lyke a watche house in tyme of warre, lyke a besieged cyty. And except the Lord of hostes had lefte vs a fewe alyue: we shulde haue ben as Sodoma, and lyke vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde ye rulers of Sodoma, and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifyces vnto me? I am wery of the burntofferynges of rammes and with the fatnesse of fedde beastes. I haue no pleasure in the blonde of bullockes, lambes & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyreth you to treade within my courtes? Offer me no mo oblacyons, yt is but lost labour.

& Juda. labour I abhorre youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre new moones, youre Sabbathes and solempne dayes. Youre fastinges are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holye dayes and fastynges, euē from my very hert. They make me werye, I can not abyde thē. Though ye holde oute your handes, yet turne I myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet heare I nothynge at all, for your handes are full of bloude.

Zech.vii.b. Mat.vi.b Esay.lv.a. † Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euill thoughtes out of my sighte, cease from doynge of euyll and byolence. Lerne to do right, applye youre selues to equite, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to hys ryght, let the wyddowes complaynte come before you. Nowe go to (sayth the Lorde) we will talke together. Ja it not so? Though youre synnes be as reade as scarlet, shal they not be whyther then snowe? And though they were lyke purple, shall they not be lyke white wolle? Ja it not so? If ye be louynge and obedyent, ye shall eate the best thynge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstynate and rebellyous, ye shalbe deuoured vp of the swerde: for thus the Lorde hath promysed wyth hys owne mouthe.

How happeneth it then that ‡ ryghtuous cyte (whyche was full of equite) is be come vnfaythful as an whore? ryghteousnes dwelt in it, but now murtherers. g. Thy syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne myxte wyth water. Thy princes are traytours and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, & folowe rewardes. As for the fatherles, they helpe hym not to hys ryght, neyther wyll they let the wyddowes cause come before them. Therfore speaketh the Lorde God of hostes ‡ myghtye one of Jsrael: Ah, I muste ease me of myne enemyes, and auenge me vpō them. And therfore shall I laye my hande vpō the and burne oute thy dusse from the synne. and purge, and put oute all the leade, and set thy iudges agayne as they were some tyme, and thy Senatours as they were from the begynninge. Then shalte thou be called ‡ ryghtuous cyte, the faythful cyte. But Sion shalbe redemed wyth equite, and her captyuite wyth ryghteousnesse. For the transgressours and vngodlye, and suche as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, muste altogether be vtterlye destroyed.

And except ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherein ye haue so delyted, and of the gardēs that ye haue chosen: ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye, and as a garden that hath no moysture. And as for the stronge of these thynges, it shalbe turned to dyse straw, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shall both burne together, so that no mā shalbe able to quenche them.

The prophet sheweth what ayde comforte & strength & power shall be put from ỹ Iewe, FOrye man can fleche a persone moued in anger, for what doeth he wyselye? Euen so shall the Lorde of Hoostes take awaye frō Jerusalem & Juda, all possessyons and power, al meate and drincke, the captayne & the iudge & the Prophete the wyse and the aged man, the worshipful of syfty peace olde, and the honourable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstandyng: the maysters of craftes and oratours. And I shal geue you chyldren to be your princes (sayeth the Lord) & babes shall haue the rule of you. Ye shall euer be bynge bysolence & wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Ye one shal take a frend of his owne kynred by the bosome and saye vnto. thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be our heade, let thou mayest kepe vs from thys fall and ruyne.

Then shall he sweare and saye: I can not helpe you. Moreouer, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda muste decaye, because that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynste the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of his magestie vnto anger. The chaungynge of their countenaunce bewrayeth them, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto their soules, for they shalbe hyrely rewarded. Then shall they saye. O happye are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of their studyes. But wo be to the vngodlye & vnrighteous for they shall be rewarded after their workes. O my people. ỹ rybaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders deceyue the, and treade oute the waye of the foresteppes. The Lorde is here to comen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement wyth the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason wyth the Senatours and princes of hys people, and thus saye they vnto them: It is ye that haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the robberye of the poore is in your house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of Hoostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus saith the Lorde: Seynge the doughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in with stretched oute neckes, and with wanton eyes: seynge they come in treppynge so ouerly with their fete: Therfore shall the Lorde .c. shaue the heades of the doughters of Syon, and make theyr bewtye bare in that daye. In that daye shall the Lord take awaye the gorgeousnes of theyr apparel & spanges, chaynes, partlettes, and collares, braceletes & hoodes, the goodly floured wide & broderd rayment, buskines & headebandes, ringes and garlandes, holye daye clothes & vales, kerchues & pynnes, glasses & smockes, bonettes and tachen.

And in stede of good smell there shalbe stynche amonge them. And for their girdles there shalbe louse bandes. And for well set heare there shalbe baldnesse. In stede of a stomacher, a sackclothe, and for theyr bewtye wyther power & sunneburninge. Their housbandes and theyr myghtye men shall perysh with the swerde in battell.

The notes.

a. That is, thou arte better apparelled and ryther then we, helpe vs with fode and other thynges necessary. All the curses which ỳ Prophete here recyteth, were fulfylled in the destruccion of Jerusalem.

b. Some rede: exactours or extorcioners. He noteth the couetousnes of prestes & prelates. God here calleth the poore wydowes, the fatherlesse, & all that are destytute of the comforth of thys worlde hys people, whō ỳ Phariseis then appareled: now prestes, & suche as falsly boast thē selues to be spirituall: Iustly he called exactours, in as muche as they requyre their right (as they call it) more by mēnes traditions, then by the worde of God: & do not so seke soules to God, as money for thē selues. Oppresse, ỳ is, spoyle, pyll, & euen shaue, so ỳ they shall leaue oughte. What houle spoyle, or marchaundyse is there, that rendereth them not some what: Whether there be children christened, or marriages made, or men come to the table of the Lorde: whether the sicke be visited or the dead buryed, there is euer somewhat required. Furthermore they are not onely accused to be couetouse, but also to be women, ỳ is, effeminate & womanlye: because they mooste fil theyr & pyrly spende & waste ỳ, whiche they have scraped with niggeling, violence, & moste naughtye fashyons.

c. To shaue the heades of women is to make thē confounded & ashamed, for it is shame to a woman to be shauen. 1. Cor. 11. a. So that the Prophet here by signifyeth, by a borowed speache, that the Lorde shall make the doughters of Syon (by whych vnderstande, the wemē of Jurye) confounded & ashamed, & bryng them to extreme aduersitye & powertye, and euen to nought. Iosephus maketh mencyon that Jerusalem, which was the chefe cytie therof, was ones so famished that a certen woman of the cytie ate her owne childe. Like as, some vnderstand euen here also by ỳ doughters of Syon the townes, villages, & castelles of Syon: as it dothe in dede often signify in ỳ scriptures.

The. iiij. Chapter.

For want of men, by reason of warre, they shall desyre to have of ouermuch.

AT that time shall a. their gates mourne & complayne, and they shall sitte as desolate folck vpō the earth. b. Then shall seuē wymen take holde of one man, and saye: we wil laye all oure rayment and clothing together in comē, only that we may be called thy wymen, & that this shameful reproche may be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the c. braunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull & myghtye, & the frute of the earth shall be sayre & pleasaunte for those Israelites that shall bynge thereof. Then shall the remnaunt in Syon and the remnaunte at Jerusalem be called holye: euen all suche as are wrytten amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what time as the Lorde shall washe awaye the desolacīō of the doughters of Syon, & pourge ỳ blonde out from Jerusalē with the wynde of his smoke & fyre. Moreouer vpō al the dwellynges of ỳ hyl of Syon, and vpon their whole congregacion, shal the Lord prouyde a cloude & smoke by daye, and the shynynge of a flammynge fyre by nyghte: for all their glorye shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man may kepe him for wether and rayne.

The notes.

a. The Gates shall mourne and complayne, because not onelye the soudyars shall perysshe with the swearde, but also the Judges & gouerners of sentence. He taketh the place of iudgement for the iudges: for in the Gates was iudgement wont to be geuen. Ruth. iiij. a. Dyuers the Gates shall be destroyed, and no man shall enter in or go out therat: for the Gates mourne, yf the people be not often seene in thē. b. Then shall. vij. wymen. &c. The meanynge is. The wycked wemen were not contented with their husbandes, but there shal come such a scarcenes of mē, ỳ there shal be scant for euery seuenth woman one man. Suche a slaughter shal there be, that few mē shal remayne, & the wemen shal be brought into captiuite.

The. v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyarde, with an exclamacion of confusion and vnthankfulnes.

NOwe wel then, I wyl synge my beloued frende a songe of hys vineyarde. My beloued frende hath a vineyarde in a very frutefull plentyous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, & plāted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a toure, & made a. a. wyne pulle therin. And afterwarde when he loked that it shulde bringe him grapes, it brought forthe thornes. Iherfore you nowe my cause (O ye Cytezens of Jerusalē & whole Juda:) Iudge I praye you betwixte me, & my vineyarde.

What

What more coulde haue bene done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geue thanies, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, I shall tell you howe I wyll do with my vineyarde: I will take the .b. hedge frō it, that it maye perishe, & breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be twisted nor cut, but beare thornes and briares. I wil also forbyde the cloudes, that they shall not raine vpon it. As for the vineyarde of the Lorde of Hostes it is the house of Israel, & whole Juda his lykyng plantynge. Of these he loked for equyte, but se there is wronge: for righteousnesse, lo, It is but miserye.

That ioyne one house to another.

Wo be vnto you that ioyne one house to another, & bring one land so nyghe vnto another, tyll ye can get no more grounde. Wyll ye dwell vpon the earth alone? The Lorde of Hostes sounded me thus in myne eare: shall not many greater and more goryous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in the? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a Quarte, & xxx. bushels of seede shall geue but that.

That ryse vp early.

Wo be vnto them that ryse vp earlye to vse them selues in dronkennes, & yet at nyght are more superfluous wyth wyne. In their companies are harpes and lutes, tabrettes & pipes and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and consyder not the operacyon of his handes. Therfore commeth my folcke also in captyuite, because they haue no vnderstōdynge. Their glory shalbe myxte with hūger and their pryde shalbe marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth marueylous wyde: that pryde, boastyng & wyl downe, with suche as triumphe therein, may descende into it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shalbe brought lowe, & the hygh lokes of the proude layde downe. But the Lorde of hostes, that holye God shalbe exalted and vntouched, when he shall declare his equyte and righteousnesse after this maner: Then shall the Lābes eate their appointed foder, & shall fede plentyously in the mountaynes. Wo be vnto vayne persones, that drawe wickednes vnto thē, as it were with a coorde: & synne, as it were wt a carte rope. Whiche bie to speake on this maner: let him make haste nowe, & go forthe with his worcke, that we maye se it. Let the counsell of the holye one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that cal euyll good, and good euyll: which make darcknesse lyghte, & lyghte darcknesse, that make sower swete and swete sower. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in their owne syght, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Wo be vnto them, that are stronge men to suppe wyne, and experte to set vp dronkennesse. These geue sentence wyth the vngodlye for rewardes, but condemne the iust cause of the righteous.

Therfore lyke as fyre deuoureth vp the stubble & as the flamme consumeth the drye stubble: Euen so (when their rote is rotē) their blossome shall vanysshe awaye lyke dust or smother: for they despyse the lawe of the Lorde of Hostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holye maker of Israel.

Therfore is the wrath of the Lorde kyndled also against his people, and he stretcheth his hande at them: & he shall smyte so, that the hylles shall tremble. And their carkeises shall lye in the open stretes, lyke mire. After all this, the wrathe of God shall not cease, but he shall stretche his hande vnder. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people, and call vnto them in a farre countreye: and beholde, they shall come hastely wyth spede. There is not one faynte nor feble amonge the, no not a slogysshe nor sleepye persone. There shall not one of them put of his gyrdle from his loynes, nor louse their lachet of his shue. Their arowes are sharpe, and their bowes bent. Their house hooues are lyke flynt, & their cartwheles lyke a stormy wynde. Their roryng is as it were of a lyon, and the roaryng of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shal roare and haunch vp the praye, and no man shal recouer it, nor get it from them. In that day they shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the sea. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shalbe all darcknesse and sorowe. If we loke to heauen: beholde, it shalbe darcke wyth cutchful disperacyon.

a. By the wyne yerde vnderstandeth Esayas Auctem the mayntenaūce of the word of God in the churche.

b. By the hedge and wal is figured the custodye of Aungels, wherewith the people of god (whiche is called the vineyarde of the Lord) was compassed about, and defended.

c. To shake or stretche forth his hand at them is to prouide & make readye to smyte them, & stoutnesse to punyshe them for their synnes. As after in the .ix. & .x. If he stretche forthe his hande, who wyll withdrawe it agayne?

The.vi. Chapter.

Esay sawe the glorye of the Lord, and was sure to comfortes the behalfe of Iury.

In the same yeare that kynge Ozias dyed, I sawe .a. the Lorde syttyng vpō an high & glorious seate, and his traynes fylled the paleis. From about stoode the Seraphins, whereof euery one had sixe wynges. With twayne eche couered his .b. face, with twayne his fete, & with twayne dyd he flye. They cryed also eche one to other on this maner: Holy holy holy, is the Lord of hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glorye. Then the gates and trassholdes moued at their crienge, & the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O woe is me. For I was astonished: for I (which am a man of vncleane lippes and dwell amonge people that hath vncleane lyppes also) shulde se the kynge and ℣ Lorde of hoostes with myne eyes.

Then flue one of the Seraphins vnto me, hauynge a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tounges, and touched my mouthe, and sayde: lo, this hath touched my mouth, and thyne vnrighteousnes is taken awaye, and thy synne forgeuen. After this I heard the voyce of the Lord sayeng: whome shall I sende, & who wylbe oure messenger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde: go, and tell this people: ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande, ye shall se in dede, but ye shall not perceyue. Harden ℣ hart of this people, stoppe their eares, and shutte their eyes, that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstande not with their hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, howe longe? he answered: vntyll the cyties be vtterlye without inhabytours, and the houses wythoute men, tyll the lande be alle desolate, & lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shall lye waste. Nevertheles, the tenthe part shall remayne there in, for it shall conuerte and be frutefull. And lyke wyse as the Terebynthes and Okeetrees bringe forthe their frutes, so shall the holye sede haue frute.

The. vii. Chapter.

The Syrians make battell against Jerusalem. a Virgin shall beare a childe.

A Reg. xvi. a
b. Para. xxviii. a

It happened in the time of Ahaz the sonne of Joathā, whiche was the sonne of Oziah kyng of Juda, that *Rasin the kyng of Syria, and Phaseh the sonne of Romeliah, kyng of Israel wente vp towarde Jerusalem to besege it, but wanne it not. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) hearde worde therof, that Syria and Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yea and the hertes alle of his people) lyke as a tree in the felde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: go meete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Seare Jasub) at the heade of the ouer pole in the fote pathe by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him: Take hede to thy selfe and be styll, but feare not, neyther be faynthearted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrathe and furyousnes of Rasin the Syryan and Romelyes sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim & Romelyes sonne haue wickedlye conspyred agaynst the, sayenge: We wyll go doune into Juda, vexe them, and bryng them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sōne of Taberl. ffor thus sayth the Lorde GOD therto, It shall not so go forthe, neither come to passe: for the head cytye of the Syryans is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rasin. And after fyue and threscore yeare, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the chefe cytye of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shall no promyse be kepte with you.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Ahaz, sayeng: + require a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be towarde the depthe benethe or towarde the heyght aboue. Then sayde Ahaz: I wyll require none, neyther will I tempte the Lorde. The Lord answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you, that ye be grevous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgyn shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and shall call his name. a. Emanuel. Butter and honye shall he eate, that he maye knowe the cyll, and chose the good. But or ever the chylde come to knowledge, to refuse the cyll and chose the good: The lande that thou arte so afrayde for, shalbe desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (suche as never came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assyryans. ffor at the same tyme b. shall the Lorde whistle for the flies that are aboute the water of Egypte, and for the bees in the Assyryans lande. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the valeys, in the bawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shall the Lorde. c. shaue b. the heayre of the heade and the fete and the beerd cleane of, with the. c. rasoure ℣ he shall paye them with all beyonde the water: name lye with the kynge of the Assyryans. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two sheepe. Then because of the aboundance of mylcke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euerye one which remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and honye. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shalbe turned to breares and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all the land be come breares and thornes. And as for all hylles that were ons hewed bowne

natyuite. bouse, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of beares and thornes. But the earth shall be vpon thether, and the sheepe shall fede there.

The notes.

The Egipcians calleth he Apes, because there in Egipt many flies, and the Assirians bees, because there is in Assiria abundance of bees & honye. By the water of Egipt, he signifieth Nilus.
c. That is take cleane awaye.

The.viij. Chapter.

The destruccion of the lande by Emanuel. The time of ellenge, or whyche many thinges shall happen.

MOreouer the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take thee a great leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe and haste him to spoyle. And immediately I called vnto me faythfull witnesses, Vrijah the preest, and Zacharias a sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the Prophetesse, that nowe had conceiued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: gene him this name: Maherelchalal haschbas (that is, a spede robber: an haste (spoyler.) For why, or euer the child shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Imi (that is father and mother) shall the ryches of Damascus, and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye, before the kynge of the Assirians.

The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayenge: for so muche as the people refuseth the stell a. runninge water of Siloe, and put their delyte in Rezin and Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shall bringe mighty and greate floudes of water vpon the: namely the kynge of the Assirians with all his power. Whyche shall poure oute his furiousnesse vpon euery man, and ouer all their borders. And shall breake in vpon Juda, ouerflowe it and ouer, till he get him vp the throte. He shal fyl also the wyde roume of thy lande, O. with his broade wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people, and gather you, beleue it all ye of farre countreyes. Muster you, & gather you: muster you and gather you, take your counsel together, yet shall your counsel come to nought: go in hand with all, yet shall it not A prosperr. For the Lord (that is God) be with me. For the Lord chastised me, & toke me by the hande, and warned me, sayenge vnto me, that I should not walcke in the waye of this people. He sayde moreouer vnto me: Count none of them, whosoeuer saye: a coniured people are they vnder together. Neuerthelesse feare them not, neyther be afraide of the, but sanctify the Lorde of hostes, let him be your feare and dreade. For he is the stone of stomblynge, and stone to stomble at, & the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses, to Israell, and the the inhabitoures of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fall, & be broken vpon them: yea they shalbe snared and taken.

Now lape the witnesse together (sayd the Lorde) and seale the lawe with my disciples. Then I waite vpon the Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I loke vnto him. Beholde, as for me, and the children whyche the Lorde hath geuen me, are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of hostes sake, whyche dwelleth vpon the hill of Sion.

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske counsel at the sothesayers, wyzerers, charmers and clowters, then make them this answere: Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsel at her God, whether it be concerninge the deade, or the lyuynge? Yf any man wante lyght, let him loke vpon the lawe and the testimony; whether they speake not after this meninge: Yf he do not thus, he stombleth & suffereth hunger. And yf he suffer hunger, he is out of patience; and blaspheameth his kynge and his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downewarde to the earthe, and beholde, there is trouble & darkenesse; heraccon is rounde about him: and the cloude of errours. And oute of lothe anguishe, shall he not escape.

The notes.

a. She calleth the kingedome of Dauid, whyche signifieth the kingedome of Christe, the stell rumpyng water of Siloe whyche ryseth very well vnto Christ, that was meeke and lowly of hert, Matth. xi.d. And Zach. ix. Beholde the kynge commeth vnto the poore and lowly, &c. She signifieth in stell & peasable gouernaunce. Siloe is a spronge at the fote of the hyll of Sion, which hath not continually water, but springeth certayne houres & hayes, & commeth with a great sounde by the bothem of the grounde; and ryseth and holes of an hye stoop rocke. The matter of speakinge is borrowed of the behyld ignorance of the waters, whych signifieth the stell stubbornes & pouerte of the children.
b. With his broade wynges, that is, with his pulles of Soudiers. So in Deut. xxviij. is a long tayle bended, by an ayde that hath great wynges.

So that ſome of bothe the houſes ſhall be ſanctifyed, and ſome that ſtoble, but that chefely they of Jeruſalem ſhal be ſnared. Who ſhalbe ſanctified, & who ſhall ſtomble and fal, both S. The. ix. Chapter.

> Of the prophecyeth of Chriſtes natiuite and domynyon.

[I]N Then lyke as in time paſt it hath bene well ſene, that the lande of Zabulon and the land of Nephtali (where thorow the ſea wayeth ouer Jordane into the lād of Galilee) was at the firſt in lytle trouble, but afterwarde ſore vexed.

a Nevertheles the people that have dwelt in darcknelle, ſhall ſe a greate lyght. And for them that dwell in the lande of the ſhadowe of death, vpon them ſhall the lyght ſhyne. Thou multyplye the people, and not increaſe the ioye alſo? They ſhall reioyſe before the even as men make merye in harueſt and as men that have gotten the victorye, when they deale the ſpoyle. For thou ſhalte breake the a. yocke of the peoples burthen, the ſtaffe of his ſhoulder, and the rood of hys oppreſſoure, as in the. b. dayes of Madian.

b Moreouer all temerarioues and ſeditious power (yea where there is but a cote fylled with bloude) ſhalbe burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto vs a chylde ſhalbe borne, and vnto vs a ſonne ſhalbe geuen. Vpon hys ſhoulder ſhall the kyngedome lye, and he ſhalbe called with hys owne name. The wonderous ꝯſeller of counſel, the myghty God, the euerlastinge father, the prynce of peace, he ſhall make no ende to encreaſe the kyngedome and peace, and ſhall ſytte vpon the ſeate of Dauid, and in his kyngedome, to ſet vp the ſame, to eſtablyſhe it with equyte and righteouſneſſe, frō thence forth for euermore. This ſhall the gelouſy of the Lorde of hoſtes bringe to paſſe.

The Lord ſent a word into Jacob, the ſame is come into Iſraell. And the people alſo of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can ſaye with pryde and hye ſtomaches, on this maner: The tyle worcke is fallen doune c but we wyll buylde it with harder ſtones. The Molberry tymbre is broken, but we ſhal ſet it vp againe with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lorde ſhall prepare Rezin the enemy againſt them, and ſo ordre their aduerſaryes, that the Syrians ſhall laye holde vpon them before, & the Philiſtines behinde, and ſo deuoure Iſrael with open mouth.

After all thys, the wrath of the Lord ſhall not ceaſſe, but yet his hande ſhall be ſtretched oute ſtyll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that ſmyteth them, neither do they ſeke the Lorde of hoſtes. Therfore the Lorde ſhal rote oute of Iſrael bothe head & taple, braūch and twigge in one daye.

Vp the heade, is vnderſtande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by the taple, the Prophet that preacheth lyes. For al they whyche enſourme the people that they be in a righte caſe, ſuche be deceyuers. Suche as me thynche alſo to be perfecte amonge theſe, are but raſt a waye.

Therfore ſhall the Lorde have no pleaſure in their ponge men, neyther fauoure their fatherleſſe and wyddowes. For they are all together ypocrytes and wicked, and all their mouthes ſpeake folye. After all this ſhall not the Lordes wrathe ceaſſe, but yet his hande ſhalbe ſtretched oute ſtill. For the vngodlye burne as a fyre in the bryers and thornes, And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood or a tread buſhe, ſo aſcendeth the ſmoke of their pryde.

For this cauſe ſhall the wrath of the Lorde of hoſtes fal vpon the lande, and the people ſhalbe conſumed, as it were with fyre, no man ſhall ſpare his brother. If a man do turne him to the ryght hande, he ſhall famiſhe, or to the lefte hande to eate, he ſhall not have ynough. Euery man ſhall eate the fleſhe of his owne arme. Manaſſes ſhall eat Ephraim and Ephraim Manaſſes, and they both ſhall eate Juda. After al this ſhall not the Lordes wrath ceaſſe, but yet ſhall his hande be ſtretched oute ſtyll.

a. This yocke ſygureth the yoch and burthen of the lawe, whyche ſo oppreſſed the people, that S. Peter coulde laye to the Apoſtles that neyther they nor their fathers were able to bere it. Actuum. xv. b. This yoch hath Chriſt broken, according to this prophecye of Eſay, and vtterly diſcharged the burthe therof. For we know nowe that God is ſatisfyed and reconciled in the bloude of his ſonne Chriſt, and that the many thouſandefolde ꝑpetuall mercyes whyche are due to our ſynnes, are clene pardoned and forgeuen for the merites of the ſame Chriſt. 1. Joannis. ii. a. The Hebrues expounde this of the deſtruccion of the hoſte of Sennacherib, which was done by the Angel of which ye have after in the. xxxvii. g. And call the hoſt of the Aſſirians, the yoch of the peoples burthen, the ſtaffe of the ſhoulder and rode of the oppreſſoure, but it was more grieuous bondage, wherewith the ſpirituall Jeruſalem of who that Aſſirian was a vertayne ſygure and ſhadowe bound be, & from whyche Chriſt hath delyuered vs.

b. By the day at Madiā is meant ye day, wherin Gedeon with thre hundreth men ſlue an innumerable multitude of the Madianites, as ye reade, Judic. vii. c. He cutteth the axe of his owne arme, that taketh awaye the goodes of his ꝓpre kynsmen & robbeth his husman. The meaninge is that one shall robbe and polle another.

The.x. Chapter.

He mutmureth the oppressours of the poore, and ꝓphecyeth against Sennacherib.

A WO be vnto you that make vnrighteous lawes, and deuyse thinges, whiche be to harde for to kepe: where thorow the poore are oppressed on euery syde, & the innocentes of my people are therwyth a. robbed of iudgement: that wyddowes maye be youre praye, and that ye maye robbe the fatherlesse. What will ye do in tyme of the visitacion and destruccion, that shall come from farre? Vnto whome will ye runne for helpe? & to whome will ye geue youre honour that ye maye kepe it: that ye come not among the prisonners, or lye amonge the deade? After all this shall not the wrath of the Lord B cease, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

Wo be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staffe of my wrathe, in whose hande is the rode of my punishement. For I shall send him amõg those ypocrytish people, amonge the people that haue deserued my displeasure shall I send him: that he maye vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and tread them doune lyke the myre in the strete. How be it, his meaninge is not so, neither thinketh his hert of this fashiõ. But he ymagineth onely, how he may ouerthrowe and destroye muche people, for he saythe: are not my princes all kinges? Is not .b. Calno as easye to winne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As we say: I were able to winne the kingdome of the Idolatres and their Goddes, C but not Jerusalem and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ymages?

Wherfore the Lorde saeth: As sone as I haue performed my whole worcke vpon the hyll of Sion and Jerusalem, then will I also .c. vyset the noble and stoute kynge of Assiria, with his wisedom and pryde. For he standeth thus in his owne conceyte. Thus do I throwe the power of myne owne hand, and thorowe my wysedome: For I am wise. I am he that remoue the landes of the people, I robbe the princes, and (lyke one of the worthies) I dispute them frõ their hye seates. My D hande hathe founde out the substãce of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as eggres, that were layde here and there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countreyes. And there is no man, that darre be so bolde, as to touche a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whisper.

But doth the axe boast it selfe, against hym, ꝙ he heweth therwyth, or doth the same make any brackynge, against hym that medleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf the rode dyd exalte it selfe, against him that beareth it: or as though the staffe shoulde magnyfye it selfe, as who saye it were no wode. Therfore shall the Lorde of hoostes sende him poorete in his ryches, and burne vp his power, as it were with a fyre. But the lyght of Israell E shalbe that fyre, and his Sanctuarye shalbe the flamme, and it shal kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and breres in one daye, yee all the glory of his woodes and feldes shalbe consumed with body and soule. As for hym selfe, he shalbe as one chased awaye. The trees also of his felde shalbe of suche a nombre, that a chylde may tell them.

After that daye shall the remnaunt of Israel, & suche as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, leke no more comfort at him that smote them, but shall comforte them selues with faythfulnesse and trueth in the Lorde, the holy one of Israell. The remnaunt, yea and the posterete of Jacob, shall conuerte vnto God F the myghty one. For though thy people (O Israel) be as the sande of the sea, yet shall but the remnaunt of them onely conuerte vnto hym. Perfecte in the iudgement of hym that floweth in righteousnesse, and therfore the Lorde of hoostes shall perfectlye fulfyll the thynge, that he had determyned in the myddest of the whole worlde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: Thou my people that dwellest in Sion, be not afrayed for the king of ꝙ Assirians: he shall wagge his staffe at the, yea and beate the with the rode, as the Egyptians did some tyme. But soone after, shal my wrathe and mine indignacion be fulfilled a gaynst their blasphemies.

Moreouer the Lorde of hoostes shall prepare a scourge for him, lyke as was the punyshement of Madian vpon the mount of Oreb. And he shall lyft vp his rode ouer the sea, as he dyd some tyme ouer the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yocke from thy neck, yea & same yocke shall be cutte of for very fatnesse. He shall come to Aioth, & go thorow to warde Migron. But at Machmas shall he muster his hoste, and go ouer the foorde. a. Gabaah shalbe their restinge place, Ramah shalbe afrayed, Gabaah Saul shall flee awaye. The voyce of the people of thy hoste (O doughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anathoth, which also shalbe inroubled. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cytezens of Gabim are manlye, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shall he lyft vp his hande against the mount of Sion, and against the hyll of Jerusalem. But se the lorde God of hoostes shall take awaye the proude from them with feare. He shall hew doune the proude, and set the hye minded. The thornes of the wood shalbe rotted out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtye fall.

¶ The prophecyeth of the nativite of Christ, & of his people, of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the kyngdo. of the gentyles or Gentiles.

+ A fter this there shall come a rod forth of the kynrede of Jesse, & a blossome oute of his rote. The a Spyryt of the Lorde shall lyghte vpon it, the spyryte of wisedome and vnderstandynge: the spirit of counsell, & strength: the spirite of knowledge, and of the feare of God: and shall make him feruent in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thinge that shall be brought before his eyes, neyther reproue a matter at the fyrst hearing but wyth ryghteousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and with holynes shal he reforme the symple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the .a. worlde .b. wyth the rodde of his mouthe, & with the breathe of his mouth shall he slay the wicked. Ryghteousnesse shalbe y girdle of his loynes, trueth & faythfulnesse, the gyrdynge vp of his raynes. Then shall the wolfe dwell wyth the lambe, and the leoparde shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes, lyons and catel shal kepe company together, so that a lytle childe shall dryue them forthe. The kowe and the Beare shall feede together, & their yonge ones shall lye together. The Lyon shall eate strawe like the oxe, as the kowe. The chylde whyle he sucketh, shal haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hād into the Cockatryces denne. No man shall do euyl to another, no man shall destroye another, in all the .c. hyll of my Sanctuarye. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as thoughe the water of the sea floweth ouer the earth.

Then shal the Gentyles enquyre after the rote of Jesse (whiche shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentyles) for his dwellinge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shal the Lord take in hande agayne, to conquerre the remnaunt of his people (whiche are left alyue.) From the Assirians, Egyptians, Arabians, Moryons, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians, and Ilandes of the sea. And he shal set vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israel, yea and the out caste of Juda from the foure corners of the world. The hatred of Ephraim and the enuyte of Juda shalbe cleane rooted oute. Ephraim shall beare no enuy vyll to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they bothe together shall flye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the West, and spoyle them toge ther that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall lye their hands vpon them, & the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shall vtterly destroye the tonge of the Egyptyans sea, and with a mighty wind shal he lift vp his hande ouer Nilus, & shall smyte hym seuen streames and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall he make a waye for his people, that remayneth from the Assirians, lyke as it happened to the Israelytes, what tyme they departed oute of the lāde of Egypt.

Beholde, God is my health, in whom I trust, & am not afraid. For the Lorde God is my strength and my praise, he also shalbe my refuge. Therefore ye shal haue ioye that ye drawe water out of the .a. welles of the Sauioure, & then shall ye saye: Let vs geue thankes vnto the Lorde, and call vpon his name, & declare his counsell amonge the people, and bryng them in remembraunce for his name is excellent. O synge prayses vnto the Lorde, for he doth great thinges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crye oute, and be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for greate is thy prince, the holy one of Israell.

The notes.

a. The welles of the Sauioure are the worde of God, the doctrine of the Gospell and promises of Christ, wherwyth trembling soules and all fayre consciences are refreshed. Oute of these (sayth he) that they shall drawe water, not oute of menes traditions, whyche are but podelles.

The. xiij. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccion of Babylon, the ruyne of the same, and the comynge ageynst of the people.

THys is the heauy .a. burthen of Babylon, whiche Esai the sonne of Amos dyd se. b. Make some tokens to the hye .c. hilles, call vnto the, hold vp youre handes, that the Princes maye go in at the dore. For I will fynde for my .d. debites & my gaunters (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrath I wil call for suche, as triumphe in my glory.

Wyth

With that, me thought I heard in the mountayns a noyse, like as is hath bene of a great people: a rushynge, as though the kingedomes of all nacions had come together. (And the Lorde of hoostes was the captayne of the whole armye) As they had not come only out of farre countreyes, but also from the endes of the heauens: Euen the Lorde himselfe with the instrumentes of his wrath, to destroye the whole lande. Mourne therfore, for the daye of the Lorde is at hande, & commeth as a destroyer from the Almyghtye. Then shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens hertes shall melt awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon the, and they shal haue payne, as a woman that trauaileth with childe. c. One shal euer be a- b ashamed of another, and their faces. f. shall burne lyke the flamme.

Loo, the daye of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrathe, to make the lande waste, and to rote oute the synne therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen shal not geue their lyght, the sunne shalbe quenched in the rysinge, and the mone shall not shyne with her light. And I will punysh the wickednesse of the. g. worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lorde. The hye stomaches of the proude wyl I take awaye, and will laye downe the boastynge of tyrannes. I wyll make a man dearer then e fyne gould, and a man to be more worthe, then a goulden wedge of Ophyr. Wherfore, I wil so shake the heauen, that the earth shall remoue oute of her place.

Thus shall it go with Babylon in the wrath of the Lorde of hoostes in the daye of his fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shalbe as an hunted roe, chased do, and as a flocke without a shepherde. Euery man shal turne to his own people, and flee eche one into his owne lande. Whoso is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow. And whoso gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swerd. * Their chyldre shalbe slayne Playnrbū. f, before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wyues rauyshed. For lo, I shall bringe d vp the Medes agaynst them, whiche shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of gould. Then shall young mens bowes be knapped a sunder. The Medes shall haue no pytye vpon wemen with chylde, and their eyes shal not spare the chyldren. * And Babylon (that Gene.xix.c. glory of kingedomes and bewtye of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroied, euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shall neuer be more inhabyted, neyther shal there be any more dwellynge there from generacyō to generacyon.

The Arabians shall make no more tentes there, neyther shall the shepardes make their folde there any more: but wild h. beastes shal lye there, & the houses shalbe full of grete Owles. Estriches shall dwel there, and Apes shall dawnce there: the lyttle Owles shall crepe in the palaces, one after another, and Dra- gons shalbe in the pleasaunt parlours. And as for Babylons tyme is at hande, & her dayes maye not be longe absent.

The notes.

a. That is greuous prophetye, combraunce, mischefe, and harde fortune.

b. Some trade: lift vp the banner or standart.

c. Some trade: hyll, and vnderstande them by Babylon which (saye they) is called an hyl, because of the hyghe and exceadynge sumptuous buyldyng therof.

d. He calleth the people of Persia and of Media his dewtye, and his gonners, because he was disposed by them to ouerthrowe the Babylonians.

e. Some trade: Euery man shall be abashed toward his neighbours. That is, they shalbe so astonied & amased and so destitute of counsell, that one shall looke vpon another and be confounded, marueilinge howe they came in suche trouble.

f. That is, they shalbe so sore ashamed that their faces shalbe as redde as fyre.

g. By the worlde here is signifyed Babylon, because of their greatnesse therof.

h. By the dwellynge of their beastes in Babylon both the Prophete meane, that it shal be vtterly destroyed, and become a desolate and a wildernesse: as after in the xxxiiij. c. Pelicanes, Owches, &c shal dwell therin.

The xiij. Chapter.

The returne of the people from captyuyte. The punyshment of the people of Sur, and affirmation of their enemies. The parte of Babylon.

BVt the Lorde wyll be mercyfull vnto Jacob, and wil take vp Jsrael agayne, and set them in their a owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and ioyne them to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carye them home with them. And the house of Jsrael shall haue them in possessiō for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shall take those persones, whose captyues they had bene afore, and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lorde b now shall bringe the to rest from thy trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden with all, then shalte thou vse this mocke vpon the kynge of Babylon, and saye: Howe happeneth it, that the oppressour is ceased of? Is the goulden cytyte come to an ende? Doutcles the Lorde hathe broken the staffe of the vngodlye, and the scepter of the lordly. Whiche when he is wrothe, smyteth the people with dyuerse strokes, and in his wrathe he persecuteth them, and ruleth them continually. b. And therfore the whole worlde is now at reste and quietnesse, and men sing for ioye.

Yea, euen the fyrre trees and Cedres of c Libanus reioyce at thy fall, sayenge: Sence that thou arte layde downe, there come vp no vp to destroye vs. c. Hell all beneath is troubled at thy comynge, it stereth vp all mighty men, and causeth

Moab. of the earth. Steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earth stande vp from their seates, that they may all (one after another) synge & speake vnto the. Art thou wounded also as we? art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pope and thy pryde is gone doune to hell. Mothes shalbe layde vnder the, and woumes shalbe thy courtinge.

How art thou fallen from heauen (o. d. O Lucifer) thou faire morninge childe? shalt thou gotten a fal euen to the ground, thou that (not withstadinge) diddest subdue the people. And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I will clymme vp into heauen, and make my seate aboue the starres of God, I will sit vpon the glorious mount toward the North, I will clymme vp aboue the cloudes, and will be like the highest of all. Yet nathe I say, that thou shalt be brought doune to ỳ depe of hell. They that se the, shal narowly looke vpon the, and thinke in them selues, saynge: Is this the man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngedomes afrayde. Is this he ỳ made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cytyes to the grounde, whyche let not his prisoners go home?

How happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worshippe, and thou art cast out of thy graue, like a vile braunche: like an dead mens raiment that are shot thorow with the swerde: as they that go doune to the stones of the depe, as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buryed with the? Euē because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generation of the wycked shalbe vtterlye out worne for euer. Their shalbe a map be sought to destroye their children, for their fathers wyckednes: they shall not come vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of cyties and townes.

I will stande vp against them (sayeth the Lorde of Hoastes) and rote out the name & generacyon of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and will geue it to the Otters and wyl make watter pooles of it. And I will sweepe them oute with the besome of destruccyon, sayeth the Lorde of Hoastes. The Lorde of Hoastes hathe sworne an othe, sayenge: It shal come to passe as I haue determyned, and shalbe fulfylled as I haue purposed. The Assyrians shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes will I treade them vnder fote. Where thorow hys yocke shall come from you, & hys burthen shalbe taken from youre shoulders.

This doeth God take thorowe the whole worlde, and this is hys hand stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of Hoastes determyne a thynge, who wyl dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth hys hande, who wil holde it backe?

The same yeare that kynge Ahaz dyed, was this spoken by Esay on this maner: Reioyse not (thou whole Palestina) as though the rood of him that beateth the were broken: for out of the serpentes rote, there shall waxe a kockatrice, & the fruite shalbe a fyre worme. But the poore shall fede of the best thynges, and the simple shal dwel in safety. Thy rotes wil I destroye with hunger, and it shall slay thy remnaunt. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cyties, and feare thou (O whole Palestina) for there shall come from the North a smoke, whose power noman may abyde. Who shall then maynteyne the messages of the Gentyles? But the Lorde stablisheth Sion, and the poore of my people shall put their truste in hym.

The notes.

a. By the rodde is vnderstande tirannie, & by the scepter, dominion.

b. Whyle Nabuchodonozor and his children lyued, the people were not onely oppressed, but also kynges and Princes: but when they were ouerridde out of the waye, then was misery and wayminge ended. By the woulde he signifieth the commen stand by sygge trees and cedres, the heades and rulers, as before in the. v. c.

c. That is, turn they that be in hel, will treble when Nabuchodonozor cometh thyther. It is figuratly spoken to the further settinge oute of the mischefe of Nabuchodonozor.

d. He compareth the death of Nabuchodonozor to the fallynge of Lucifer the morninge starre, whiche he calleth the childe of the morninge, because it appeareth onely in the morninge. The meaninge is: No lesse thinge ought to haue happened vnto ỳ, that erreth wyll lyke the morninge starre, whiche no man can take out of heauen: And thou that wast so mighty, that thou destroyedst, whole people thou wouldest, vnto whome it was a pastime to ouerthrowe nacyons, hast receyued such measure as thou broughtest. Such a like thynge is there in Ezechie. xxvij. Against kynge Tyrus.

The. xv. Chapter.

A Prophesy against Moab.

THis is the heauy burthen vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the night season: the walles of Moab perished in the night, and be mated & wepe. They went to Bayth and Dibon in the hie places, for to weepe: Moab dyd mourne from Nebo to Medeba. All their heades were couered, and all their beardes shauen. In their streetes were they girded about with sacke clothe. In al the toppes of their houses and streetes was there nothinge but mourninge and wepinge. Hesebon and Eleale cryed, that their voyce was heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab blearred and cryed for very sorowe of their myndes. Woe is my herte for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the cyty of Zoar, whiche is lyke a faire frutefull hylloche, they went vp to Luhith, weping. The waye toward Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. The waters of Nimrim were dried vp, the grasse was withered, the herbes destroied, and what merelous grene thyng there was beside. In lyke maner the thing that was left them of their substaunce, they carryed it by water to Arabye. The crye wente ouer the whole lande of Moabitorm Eglaim vnto Beer was there nothinge but mournyng. The waters of Dimō were full of bloude, for the enemye hath sent thyther a bonde of men, which as vpon laye awaite for the remnaunt of the lande, and for them that were escaped.

The notes.

a. In tymes past it was a token of mourning to shaue the heade, and to clippe the bearde. and therfore sayth the Prophete, that the Moabites cut away their heares, for sorowe and carefulnesse. Lyke thing haue ye in Jeremye xlvij. Cut of thine heare, and cast it away, &c.

The.xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

Hen sent the Lordes of the lande a man of warre, from the rocke that lyeth toward the desert. a. vnto the hyl of ỹ doughter Sion. (For as for b. the doughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a trebling byrd, that is put oute of hernest, by the ferye of Arnon) whiche mellaunger sayde: gather you counsell, come together. c. ouer vs wyth your shadowe. d. in the middaye, as the nyght doeth hyde the chased, and bewray not them that are fled, let the persecuted Moabites dwel amōg you, be you open refuge against the destroyer: for the adversarye oppresseth vs, the robber vndoeth vs, ỹ the tyraunt driueth vs oute of oure lande. But the throne of youre kyngedome is full of grace, therfore he that sitteth vpon it with faythfulnesse and trueth in the house of Dauid, knowe the thing, and be hys diligence to helpe thestly, according to equite and rygh teousnes. As for Moabs pride (that they answere) it is well knowne. And all thoughe they be excellent, proude, arrogante and hye minded: yet is their strength nothing lyke. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, where for sowe they come all to mourne: and now that they be smytten, they take their desyre beneth by the bychwall, ỹ make their complaynte.

The labarbes also of Hesebon were made waste, ỹ the Princes of the Gentyles hewed downe the vynepardes of Sibma, whyche were planted with noble grapes, and spred vnto Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the desert, whose braunches stretched their selues south beyonde the sea. Therfore I mourned for Jazer, ỹ for the vineyardes of Sibma with great sorowe. I powred my teares vpon Hesebon and Eleale, for all their songes were layde downe, in their harvest and gatheryng of their grapes. Myrth and cheer was gone out of the felde and vyneyardes, in so muche that noman was glad nor songe. There was no treader into the wynepresse, their merye there was layde downe. Wherfore my bely rōbled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake and myne inward membres, for the brickmal les sake. For it happened thus after when Moab sawe that she was turned vpside downe: she went vpon on hye into her Sanctuarie, to make her prayer there, but she might not be helped. This is the deuyce, whyche the Lorde toke in hande at that tyme against Moab. But now the Lorde sayeth thus: In thre yeare shall the power of Moab wyth their pompe (whiche is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunt. And as for the remnaunt of them, they shalbe lefte them a fewe, and not reckened muche worth.

The notes.

a. That is vnto the kyngedome of Israel.
b. That is, townes, cyties and villages.
c. That is, refreshe me that are afraid, and geue vs a place to harbour in.
d. That is in the most grieuous heate of persecucyon. So is the middaye often taken, as in the Psal. xcj. the sunne shal not burne the by daye.

The.xvij. Chapter.

A prophecye against Damascus.

Hus is the heauy burthen vpon Damascus: Behold Damascus shalbe no more a cite, but an heape of brokē stones. The cyties of Aroer shalbe waste: the cattell shal lye there, and noman shal fray the away. Ephraim shal no more be strong, and Damascus shal no more be a kingedom. And as for the glory of the remnaūt of the Syrians it shalbe as the glory of the children of Israel sayeth the Lorde of hoste. At that tyme also shal the glory of Jacob be very poore, and his fatnes leane. It shal happen to them, as when one shereth in harvest, which cutteth his hād full with the sickle, and when one gathereth ỹ eares together in the valley, of. a. Raphaim there remayneth yet some eares ouer: Or as when one shaketh an olyue tre, whyche ỹndeth but two or three olyue beries aboue in the toppe, ỹ foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto his maker, and turne his eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shall not turne to the aulters that are the worcke of his owne handes, neyther shal he loke vpō groues ỹ ymages, which his fingers haue wrought. At the same tyme shall their stronge cities be desolate, lyke as were ones the forsaken plowes ỹ coure, which they forsoke, for feare of the children of Israel.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate because thou hast forgotten God thy Sauyoure, & hast not called to remembraunce the rocke of thy strength. Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plãt, & graffed a straung braūch. D In the day when thou diddest plant it, it was greate, and gaue fone the frute of thy sede. But in the daye of harueſt, thou shalt reape and heape of sorowes and myſeries.

Wo be to the multitude of manye people, that rush in lyke the sea, and to the heape of folke, that runne ouer al lyke greate waters. For thoughe so manye people increase as the flowynge waters, and though they be armed yet they ſle farre of, and vanyſhe awaye lyke the duſt with the winde vpon an hill, and as the whirle winde thorow a storme. Thoughe they be fearfull at night, yet in the morninge it is gone with them. This is their portion, that do vs harme, and heritage of them, that robbe vs.

A prophecye againſt Egypte.

A WO be to the land of fleinge ſhippes, whyche is of thys ſyde the floude of Ethopia: whych ſendeth her meſſage ouer the sea in ſhippes of reedes vpon the water: and ſayeth: go ſone & do youre meſſage vnto a ſtraunge and harde folke, to a fearful people, and to a people that is further then thynke a deſperate and pylled folke, whoſe lande is deuyſeth from vs with riuers of water. Yea, al ye that ſyt in the compaſſe of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earthe, when the token ſhalbe geuen vpō the mountaynes, then lohe vp: & when the horne bloweth, then herken to. for thus hath the Lorde ſayde vnto me. I ſayde me doune, and pondred the matter in my houſe, at the noone day whē it was hote. And there fell a miſtynge ſhower, lyke a dewe, as it happened in Haruest. But the frutes were not yet tyde ryt of, and the grapes were but younge and grene. Then one ſmote of the grapes with an hoke, yea he hewed doune alſo the bowes and the braunches and dyd caſt them awaye. And thus they were layde waſte, for the foules of the mountaynes, and for the beaſtes of the earthe toge ther. So that the foules ſat there vpon, and the beaſtes of the earth wynterred there. Thē ſhall there be a preſent brought vnto the Lord of Hoſtes, euen that harde folke, that fearful folke, and that further is then thys: that deſperate and pylled folke (whoſe lande is deuided from vs with ſtoudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the Lorde of Hoſtes: euē vnto the hyll of Sion.

The. xix. Chapter.

The prophecyeth ryll againſt Egypte.

THis is the heauy burthen vpon Egipt: Beholde, the Lord wyll A ryde vpon a ſwyft cloude, & come into Egipt. And the Goddes of Egypte ſhall tremble at hys commynge, and the herte of Egypt ſhal quake within her. For thus ſayeth the Lord: I wil ſtere vp the Egyptyans one againſte another among them ſelues, ſo that one ſhalbe ever againſt his brother & nyghbour, yea one city againſt another, & one kingdome againſt another. And Egypt ſhalbe choked in her ſelfe. Whē they aſke councel at their goddes, at their prophetes, at their ſothſayers & witches, then will I bringe their councell to naught.

I wil delyuer Egipt alſo into ỹ handes of grieuous rulers, and a cruel king ſhal haue ỹ rule of thē. The water of the ſea ſhalbe drawen out, Nilus ſhal ſincke away, & be dronchē vp. The riuers alſo ſhalbe drawē out, ỹ welles ſhal decrease and dye away. Rede & ruſh ſhal faile, the graſſe by the water ſyde or vpō the riuers banck, yea & whatſoeuer is ſowen by the waters, ſhalbe withered, deſtroyed, & brought to naught. The fiſhers ſhal mourne al ſuche as caſt angles in the water, ſhal complayne, & they that ſpredē their nettes in the water, ſhalbe ſayut harted. Such as labour vpon flax & ſylch, ſhal come to poouerte, and they alſo that weeue ſyne workes. All the pounders of Egypte, all the pollyrye of their Hoastes and dyches ſhall come to naught.

Yea the vndiſcrete Princes of Zoan, the councel of the wiſe Senatoures of Pharao, ſhall turne to folyſhenelle. Thoſe that darre boaſt & ſaye of Pharaos behalfe: I am come of wyſe people, I am come of the olde regall Progeny. But where are now thy wyſe mē? Let them tel the & thewe the, what the Lorde of hoſtes hath taken in hande againſt Egipt. Fooles are theſe Princes of Zoan, & proude are the Princes of Noph: yea they diſceyue Egypte with the nobilitye of their ſtock. For the Lorde hath made Egypte dronchen with the ſpirit of errour, and they ſhal vſe it in al matters, euen lyke as a dronchen man goeth ſpewynge aboute. For Egypte ſhall lacke good councell, ſo that they ſhall not knowe what to do, neyther beginning nor ende, neyther vpon the lande nor water. Then ſhal the Egyptyans be lyke vnto women, afrayde & aſtonied, at the liftynge vp of the hand, which the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhal lyft vp ouer them. The land of Juda alſo ſhall make the Egiptians afrayde, who ſo doeth but ſpeake vpon it, ſhal put them in feare. And that because of the councel, whiche the Lorde of Hoſtes hath deuyſed againſt them. Then ſhall the fyue cyties of Egypte ſpeake with the Canaanytes tonge, and ſwere by the Lorde of Hoſtes, & Heliopolis ſhalbe one of them. At the ſame tyme ſhall the Lorde of Hoſtes haue an aulter in the middeſt of the lande of Egypt, with thys tytle therby: Vnto the Lord. This ſhal-

Moreouer, Egypte shalbe brought vnto the Lorde, and the Egiptians also shal know the Lorde at the same tyme: they shall do him reuerence with peaceofferinges, & with meatofferinges: they shal promyse him offeringes, yea and pay him also. Thus the Lorde shall smyte Egypt, and heale it agayne: and so shal they turne to the Lorde, & he also shall haue mercy vpon them, and saue them. Then shall there be a common waye out of Egypt, into Assiria. The Assirians shal come into Egipt, and the Egipcians into Assiria. The Egipcians also and the Assirians shall bothe haue one Goddes seruyce. Then shal Israel with honour be the thirde to Egypt and Assur, and the Lorde of hostes shall blesse them, saying: Blessed is my people of the Egipcians, Assur is the worcke of my hãdes, but Israel is mine enheritaunce.

The notes.

a. To ryde vpon a swyft cloude is, to vysit and punishe quickly and with expedicion: as the clowdes go swyftly in the ayre from regiõ to regiõ.

b. The water of the sea shalbe drawen out, &c. Egypt (as storyes) shew, neuer yeth no rayne lowth of the ayre, but is ouerflowed with the water Nilus at certayn times. xxvii. cubytes hyghe from the grounde. For yf it increase to anye lesse heyghte, the countreye escapeth not a darth, saith Plinius. And therfore by the scarcenesse and want of water is the desolacion of the lande described. Nilus is here called by dyuers names, some tyme the sea, some tyme riuers, some tyme welles, some time poundes, &c. For that floud ryseth by sundry waies, & it is called & sea, not only because the Hebrues cal all congregations of waters the sea, generally: but also because it was old time a cõstant opinõ after & floures, that it hath his original beginning from the Oceane sea. Perhaps also vnderstande by the dyches of Nilus, that it not ouerflowed & lãd contrary to the old accustomed maner therof. Some had leuer haue this to be Exposityue applyed. As there be certayne waters of the Gospell, whyche the holy ghost giueth, so are there also the troublous waters of Egypt, & is, of worldly doctryne. Therfore when the worde of God is open heard, these waters dye vp. For the holy ghost reproueth the world of sinne, & openeth & declareth the workes of darckenes. In these waters do ryde and rush grow, & is, hypocrite and tryfling workes lyche as are the workes of hypocrites, which after the outwarde shewe & apparaunce seame grene and fresshe, but are within hapne and naught wayth.

The.xx. Chapter.

Egypt and Ethiopia.

In the same yeare that Tharthã came to Asdod, where Sargon the kynge of the Assirians sent him, what tyme as he also besieged Asdod, and wanne it the same season. Then spake the Lorde vnto Esai the sonne of Amos, saynge: go and louse of that sacke clothe from thy loynes: and put of thy shoes from thy fete. And so he did, goyng naked and barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruaunt Esai goeth naked and barefote, it is a token and significacion of the thinge, that after this yeare shall come vpon Egipt and Ethiopia. For euen thus shall the kynge of the Assirians dryue bothe younge & olde, as prisoners naked and barefote, out of Egypte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egipt. They shalbe also at their wittes ende, and ashamed one of another: the Egipcians of the Moriane, and the Moriane of the Egipcians, at the sight of their glorye.

a. Moreouer they that dwell in the Ile shall se euen the same daye: behold, thus is our hope to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we might be holpen from the kynge of the Assirians. How wil we escape?

The notes.

a. Some reade: And he that dwelleth in this Ile, shall, &c. Jerusalem and the lande of Iuda is wont ofte called an Ile, because it was beset rounde about with enemies and wycked nacions, as it had bene with the seas, and therfore ought it to haue trusted to the onely help and ayde of God. The church also is an Ile, that is troubled with diuers stormes, & that by the onely healpe of God is in safety. For he sufferyth not the persecuters to persecute any further, then the church may suffer, or & is profitable for it.

The.xxi. Chapter.

Against Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

The burthen of the a. wylde sea: A grieuous vysion was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of winde & rayne ruslheth in from the wildernesse that terrible land. Who so may disceyue (said the voyce) let him disceyue. Who so may destroye, let him destroye. Vp Elam, besege it O Medai, for I wyll stynt all their gronynges. With this the rayners of my backe were full of payne: Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I hearde it, I was abashed, and when I loked vp, I was afrayde. Myne herte panted, I trembled for feare. b. The darcknesse made me fearfull in in my raynde.

Prepare the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watch, eate & drynke. Vp ye Captaynes, take you to youre shild, for thus the Lorde hath charged me: go thy waye, and set a watche man, & he may tell what he seith. And when he had espyed dyligently, he saw two horsemen: the one ryding vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the

I pondered: Lorde, I haue stande waytynge all the whole daye, and haue kepte my watch all the nyght. Wyth that came there one rydinge vpon a charet, whyche answered, and sayde: Babilon is fallen, she is turned vp syde downe, and al the ymages of her Godes are smytten to the grounde. This (O my felowe threshers and fanners) haue I hearde of the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel, to shewe it vnto you.

D The heauy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watche man what hast thou espyed by nyght, what chemā what hast thou espyed by nyght. The watchman answered: The daye breaketh on, and the nyght is comming: yf youre request be earnest, then aske and come agayne.

For they shal fle away from the weapen, from the drawen sweorde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battel. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: ouer a yeare shall all the power of Kedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyred seruaunt goeth oute. And the remnaunte of the good Archers of Kedar, shalbe very fewe: For the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken it.

a. By the wast sea is vnderstande Babylon. It is so called, because of the exceadynge great cruelnes and tyrannye, wherwyth it exercysed the Jewes. Hereof is there a prouerbe: Babylon is a sea of ruffles, and euen the wast of the sea, that is the most tempestuous and desolate place, and that is leste possible to be kepte thorowe.

A A prophesye against Jerusalem.

A The heauy burthen vpon the .a. valley of vysyons. What haste thou there to do, that thou clymmest vp into the house toppe, O thou cyte of miracles, sedycyous and wylfull syenge, thy slayne men are neyther kylled wyth sweorde, nor deade in battell. For all thy captaynes gat the to their holes from their ordinaunce, yea they are all together ridden awaye, ẏ fled farre of. Whē I perceyued that, I sayde: awaye from me, that I may wepe bitterly. Take no labour for to comforte me, as thoughinge the destruction of my people. For this is the daye of the lord of hostes, wherin he will plage, treade downe, ẏ wede out the valleye of vysions, and breake downe the walles with sorthe a cracke, that it shal geue a sounde in the mountaynes.

B I sawe the Elamites take the quyuers to carte and to horse, and that the walles were bare frō harnesse. Thy goodly valleye were ful of charettes, the horse men made the soure to besege the gates. Then was the couerynge of Juda put from thence, and then was sene the sege of the tymbar house. There shall ye se the cysternes in the walles of the cyte of David, whereof there shalbe many. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole, and trill the houses of Jerusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shal make a pyt betwyxte the two walles of the water of the old pole, and nothing regard him, that toke it in hande, ẏ made it. And at the same tyme shall the Lorde of Hostes call men to wepinge, mournynge, to baldnesse ẏ puttynge on of sacke cloth. But they to fulfil their lust and wilfulnes, slaughter oxen: they kyll shepe, they eate rosty meate, and drincke wyne, *let vs eate and drincke, to morow we shall dye. Neuertheles when the Lorde of Hostes hearde of it, he sayde: yea, yf this wyne hedones of youre shalbe temptted, ye must dye for it. Thus hathe the Lorde of Hostes spoken.

D Sap.ij.b and i.Corin.xv.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes: E Go into the treasury vnto Sobna the gouernoure, ẏ saye vnto him: What hast thou here to do, ẏ from whence comest thou? that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had rayled a rosty tombe of stone to be made for him selfe, ẏ a place to lye into be hewen out of a rocke. Beholde, the Lorde shal cast the out by violence, he wyl derke the of another fashyō, ẏ put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shall carye the into a farre countre, where a ball with hys handes. There shalt thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende: thou dishonour of the house of the Lorde: I wyl shut F the oute of thyne office, and put ẏ from thine estate.

After this wil I cal my seruaunt Eliakim, the soune of Helkiah, ẏ araye with him thy cote ẏ gyrde him with the gyrdle, ẏ I wil geue thy power into his hande. He shalbe a father of ẏ cytesins of Jerusalem and of the kinred of Juda: I will also laye the .b. keye of Dauids house vpon his shoulders, ẏ yf he open, noman shall shut: and yf he do shut, noman shal open. I wyl fastē him to a naple in the place of ẏ moost hye faithfulnesse, and he shalbe vpon G the glorious trone of his fathers house. They shall hange vpon him all the glorie of his fathers house, of the children and childers children, al apparel small and great, al instrumēts of measure ẏ musike. This shal come to passe (sayeth the Lorde of Hostes) when the naple that is fastened to ẏ place of the highest faythfulnesse, shalbe plucke of. And when the weyght that hangeth vpon it, shall fal, be broken, and hewen to peces. For the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

A prophecy against Tyrus, and a promes to reduce it again.

THE heauy burthen vpon Tyrus. Mourne ye shippes of Tarsis, for the is throwen doune to the grounde, and conquered of the that are come frō Cethim. The indwellers of the Ilandes, the marchauntes of Sidon, & they that occupied the sea (of whō thou wast full some tyme) are at a poynt. For by sea were there frutes brought vnto the, & all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen market of all people. Sidon is sorye for it, yea and all the power of the sea complaineth, and sayeth: O that I had neuer trāpled with child, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neither nourished boye, nor brought vp doughter. As sone as Egipte perceyueth it, she wilbe as sorye as Tyrus it selfe. Couer.a. the sea, mourne ye that dwel in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cytye, whiche hath bene of longe antiquitie, whose natiues dwelling farre of, commende her so greatly? Who hath deuysed suche thinges vpon Tyrus the croune of al cities, whose marchauntes and captaines were the highest & principal of the world? Euen the Lord of hoostes hath deuysed it, that he may put doune al pompe, & minish al the glory of the worlde. Go thorowe thy land (O thou doughter of the sea) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a girdle more.

Thus the Lord hath remoueth the kyngedomes, & hathe taken inhande agaynste that mighty Canaan to rote it out: hath stretched oute his hande ouer the.b.sea, and saide: frō henceforth shalt thou make no more mynthe, (O thou doughter of Sidon: for thou shalt be put doune of the Cethens. Stand vp therfore and go where the enemy will carye the, where thou shalt also haue no reste. Beholde (for thine ensample) the Chaldees were suche a people, that no man was like them, Assur buil ded them: he set vp his castels and palaces, & broke thē doune agayn. And therfore mourne (ye shippes of the sea) for youre power shalbe throwne doune.

After that, shall the.lxx.yeares of Tyrus (euen as longe as their kinges lyfe was) be forgotten. And after.lxx.yeares, it shall happen to Tyrus as with an harlot that playeth vpon a lute. Take the lute (saye men to her) and go about the citie, thou art yet an vnknowne whence, make pastyme with thy swete balettes, wherby thou mayest come into acquaintaunce. This shall it happen after lxx.yeares. The Lorde shall visit the cytye of Tyrus, and it shall come agayne to her marchaundyse, and shal occupye with all the kingedomes that be in the worlde. But al her occupyinge and wynninge shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shal they laye vp no thinge behind them, nor vpon heapes: but the marchaundyse of Tyrus shall belong vnto the eatyng of the Lorde, to the feadynge and sufferinge of the hungrye, and to the clothinge of the aged.

The notes.

a. Som trade into Tharsus. He speaketh vnto the marchauntes of Egypte and to the marchauntes of the Iles, that they now get them to Tharsus, because Tyrus is destroyed.
b. He meaneth Tyrus, which stādeth in the sea.

The.xxiiii. Chapter.

A prophecy vpon the mysbehauior that shal fal vpon the worlde, because of pryde.

BEholde, the Lorde shal waste & plage the worlde, he shal make the face of the earthe desolate, & scatre abroade the inhabitoures therof. Then shal the preste be as the people, the mayster as the seruaunt, the dame lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the byer, he that lendeth vpon vsurye, lyke vnto him that borroweth vpon vsury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yea vnmerably shall the worlde be wasted & clean destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determined in him selfe. The earth shalbe drawn & decay. The face of the earth shal perishe & fal away, the proude people of the worlde shal come to naught. For the earth is corrupt of her indwellers.

For why: they haue offended the law, chaunged the ordynaūces, & made the.b. euerlasting testament of none effecte. And therfore shall the curse deuoure the earth: for they that dwel therin haue sinned, wherfore they shal be halt also, and those that remaine shalbe very few. The swete wyne shal mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, and al they that haue bene merye in harte, shall sighe. The myrth of tabrettes shal be layde doune, the cheare of the ioyfull shall cease & the pleasure of lutes shal haue an ende there shal no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beere shalbe bytter to them that dryncke it, the wicked cytyes shalbe broken doune, al houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyst vp a crye because of wine, al mens cheare shall vanyshe away & al ioye of the earth shal passe. Desolacion shal remayne in the cytyes, and the gates shalbe smytten with wastnesse. For it shall happen vnto al landes & to all people, lyke as when a man smyteth doune the olyues, that are left vpon the tree: or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatheryng is oute. And those same (that remayne) shall lyft vp their hope, and be glad, & shal magnifye the glorye of the Lord, euen from the sea, & praise the name of the Lorde God of Israel, in the baleys, and Ilandes. We heare songes sung to the prayse of the righteous, frō al the endes of the worlde. Therefore I must speake: O myne vnfrutefulnesse, O my poouerte. Woo me, all is full of synners, whiche offende of purpose and malice. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hand for the, feare, pyt and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shal fal into the pyt. And yf he come out of the pit, he shalbe taken with the snare. For the windowes above shalbe opened, and the foundacion of the earth shall mour. The earthe shall geue a greate cracke, it shall haue a sore ruyne, & take an horrible fall. The earth shal stacker lyke a dronken man, & be taken awaye like a tente. Her mysdedes shal lie so heauy vpō her, that she must fal, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the Lorde muster together the hye hoaste above, and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as prysoners be, and shalbe shut in one ward and punished innumerable dayes. The Mone and the Sunne shalbe ashamed, when the Lorde of Hostes shall rule them at Jerusalem vpon the mount Sion, before and wyth his excellent counsell.

The notes.

a. Preste doth often synifie every man that ruleth the people, be it kinge, or prynce, or other comen officer. Jere. vi. c. And from the prophete vnto the preste, &c.

b. Some do vnderstande vp the euerlastynge Testament, not onely that whych was made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob: but also the lawe of nature, whych is wrytten in our hertes. Other vnderstande therby the lawe of charitye. For that is no new commaundement but a commaundement from the begynning. The law of charitie is the lawe of ỹ spryt. He that loueth hys neyghboure hath fulfylled the lawe. Rom. xiij. Gal. v.

The. xxv. Chapter.

A thancke'gyuinge to God for his benefites.

O Lorde, thou arte my God, I wil praise the, & magnifie thy name. For thou hast done marueylous thinges to passe, accordinge to thyne olde counceils, truly & stedfastly. Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone, and of head cities, broken walles: The palaces of the wicked destroyest thou out of ỹ cite that they shal neuer be buylded again. Therfore the very rude people must magnifie the, & the cities of the cruel Heathen muste feare the. For thou art the poore mans helpe, a strength for the needful in his necessyte.

Thou art a defence against cyold wether, a shadow agaynst the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art lyke a stronge whyrle wynde, that casteth downe the boastynge of the vngodlye: thou kepest men from heate, as the shadow of the clouden, thou cuttest of the bauntynges of tyrannes.

Moreouer the Lorde of Hostes shall ouer purpare a feaste, for all people vpon the hyll: A plentyous, costly, pleasaunt a feaste, of fat & well fedde beastes, of swete & most pure thinges. Vpon the. b. hil shal he take away the face bale that hangeth before the face of al people and the couerynge wherwith al Gentiles are couered. As for death, he shal vtterly cōsume it. The Lord God shall wype awaye teares frō all faces, & take away the confusion of his people thorow the whole worlde. For the lord hym selfe hath sayde it.

At the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo, thys is oure God in whom we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the Lorde that we haue wayted for. Let vs reioyce and delyte in hys health. For the hand of the Lorde resteth vpon thys hyll. But Moab shalbe thrussten doune vnder him, lyke as the straw is trodē vnder fete in a donge hill. For he shal stretche out his handes vpon him, lyke as a swimmer doth to swimme. And with the power of his handes shal he cast doune his hye pompe. As for his strong holdes and hye walles: he shal bowe thē, that cast them doune, & set them to the grounde into dust.

The notes.

a. By the feaste of fatte & well fedde beastes, and of swete & most pure thynges, is betokened the anger & indignacion of God, as the scripture doth often synysy the same, vnder the name of a cuppe. Zacha. xij. a. Beholde I wil make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet vnto al the people that are rounde about her.

b. By the hyll is meant the hyl of Sion, by whyche is synured the churche. There vpō the Lord iudge, and delyuer vs from all oure enemies. By the bale and couerynge, vnderstande, synne, wherin all man are found gylty. Romano. iij. All men haue synned, &c. From it hath the Lorde delyuered all men which beleue that he hath freely done it, of his only mercy for Christes sake, and not of their deserynges. Rom. iij. d.

The. xxvj. Chapter.

A songe of the deliuerance of the people.

THen shal thys songe be sung in the lande of Juda. We haue a stronge cyty, the walles and the bulwarke shal kepe vs. a. Open the gates, that the good people maye go in, whiche laboureth for the truthe. And thou, whiche art the doar & hast the matter in hand, shalt prouyde for peace, euen the peace that men hope for in the. Hope styl in the lord for in the Lorde God is euerlastynge strength. For why, it is he, that bringeth low the hye mynded citesins, & casteth doune the proude cytyes. He casteth them to the grounde, pulleth into myre that they may be troden vnder the fete of the symple, and wyth the stepes of the poore. Thou (Lorde) ouersyghtest the path of the ryghteous, whether it be ryght, whether the wape of the ryghteous be ryght. Therfore (Lorde) we haue a respecte vnto the b. waye of thy iudgementes, thy name & thy remembraunce stringe thy soule. My soule inclyneth haſteth after the all the nyght longe, and my mynde haſteth freely to the. For as ſoone as thy iudgemente is knowne to the worlde, then the inhabytours of the earth learne righteouſneſſe. But the vngodly (though he haue receyued grace) yet letteth he not ryghteouſneſſe, but in the place where he is punyſhed, he offendeth, & feareth not the glorye of the Lorde.

Lorde, they wyll not ſe thyne hye hande, but they ſhall ſe it, and be confounded: when thou ſhalte deuoure them with the wrathe of the people, & wyth the fyre of thyne enemyes. But vnto vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peace: for thou worcheſt in vs all oure workes. O Lorde oure God thoughe ſuch Lordes haue dominacyon vpon vs as knowe not the: yet graūte that we maye hope onelye in the, and kepe thy name in remembraunce. The malycyous Tyraunte when they dye, are neuer more in lyfe nor in the reſurrectyon, for thou vyſyteſt & rooteſt them oute, and deſtroyeſt all the memoryall of them. Agayne, thou increaſeſt the people, O Lorde, thou increaſeſt the people, thou ſhalte be prayſed and magnyfyed in all the endes of the worlde. The people that ſeke vnto the in trouble, that ſame aduerſite whych they complayne of is vnto them a chaſtenyng before the. Lyke as a wyfe wyth chylde (whē her trauayle commeth vpon her) is aſhamed, cryeth and ſuffreth the payne: Euen ſo are we O Lorde, in thy ſight. We are with chylde, we trauayle, & beare, & with the ſpyrite we bring forth healthe, where thorowe the earth is vnderſtroyed, and the inhabytours of the worlde perysh not.

But as for thy.e.dead men and oures, ſhall be departed, they are in lyfe and reſurrection. They lye in the earthe, they wake, & haue ioye: for thy dewe is a dewe of lyfe and lyght. But the place of the malycyous tyraunte is fallen awaye. Go go now my people into thy chamber, & ſhut the doore to the, and ſuffre nowe the twynckelynge of an eye, tyll the wrathe be overpaſte. For beholde, the Lorde wyll go out of his habytacyon, and vyſyte the wyckednes of them that dwell vpon earthe. He wyll diſcouer the bloud that ſhe hath deuoured, ſhe ſhall neuer hyde them, that ſhe hath murthered.

The prophecyeth that all enemyes ſhalbe deſtroyed thorow the ſo myghty of Chriſt.

In the Lorde with his hye A and great, & longe.a. ſworde ſhall vyſyte Leuyathan that mooſtible ſerpent: that.b. Leuiathan that croked ſerpent & ſhall ſlaye the whalefyſh in the ſea. At the ſame tyme ſhall men ſynge of the vyneyarde of Muſcatel. I the Lorde kepe it, and water it daye by daye. I watche daye and nyght, that no man breake into it. I beare no euyl will in my mynde. Who wyll compell me, that I greatly forgettynge all faythfulneſſe, ſhulde burne it vp at ones B with thornes & buſhes? Or who wyll enforce me to kepe or make peace. It wyll come to thys paſſe, that Jacob ſhalbe rooted agayne, & Iſrael ſhalbe grene, and beare flowres, and they ſhall fyll the whole worlde with theyr frute. Smyteth he not hys ſmyter, as cruell as he is smyten him ſelfe: Deſtroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murthered? Every man C recompenſeth with the meaſure that he receyueth: He muſeth vpon hys foule wounde, as vpō the dayes of extreame heate. And therfor ſhall & iniquite of Jacob be thus recōpyled. And ſo ſhall he take away all the frute of hys ſinnes.

As for ſuche ſtones, he ſhall make them all as ſtones beaten to poulder: the groues & Idols ſhall not ſtande. The ſtronge cytyes ſhalbe deſolate, & the fayre cytyes ſhalbe left lyke a wyldernes. The cattell ſhall fede and lye there, & the ſheepe ſhall eate it vp. Theyr harueſt ſhalbe barre, theyr wyues which were theyr bewyſe when they came forth, ſhalbe deſpyſed. For it is a people wythout vnderſtandynge, & therfore he that created them, ſhall not fauoure them, and he that made them ſhall not be mercyfull to them. In that tyme ſhall the Lorde ſhute frō the ſwyfte water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte. And there ſhal the chyldren be choſen oute one by one. Then ſhall the greate trompette be blowen, ſo that they whiche haue bene deſtroyed in the Aſſyrians lande, and thoſe that be ſcatred abroad in Egypte: ſhall come and worſchippe & Laude at Jeruſalem, vpon the holy mount.

Reproueth the pryde of Ephraim, and agayne hath promiſes and comforteth.

O be to the crowne of pryde, to A
the .a. drouncken Ephraimytes, & to the fayre flowre, to the gloyre of hys pompe, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous

Ephraim. valleye which men be ouerladen with wine.
Beholde, the Lorde hath a mighty and strong one,
which as a tempest of hayle, and a destroying storme,
as a flowinge water of great power, shall cast it downe to the earth with violence. The crowne of pride of the dronken Ephraimites, shall be troden vnder foote. And as for the fadinge flowre, the glory of his pompe, which is vpon the toppe of the fruit-full valley: it shall happen vnto him, as to an vn-timely ripe fruite before the haruest B come. Which as soone as it is seene, is vp and vp deuoured, or euer it come well in a mans hande.

And then shall the Lorde of Hoastes be a.b.
ioyfull crowne, and a glorious garlande vnto
the remnaunt of his people. Vnto the iudge, he shalbe a spirite of iudgement, and vnto the
that driue away the enemyes from the gates he shalbe a spirite of strength. But they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall and stacker because of strong drinke. Yea euen the Priestes and Prophetes them selues go amysse, they are dronken with wyne, they be disparcd thorowe strong drinke. They erre in visyons, and in iudgemente they slyp.
For all tables are so full of vomyte and fyl-C thynes, that no place is cleane. c. What is he amonge them, that can teache, instruct or enfourme the children, whiche are wened from suche as taken from the breastes: of whye other talkyng then: Commaunde that maye be commaunded, byd that maye be bydden, forbidde that maye be forbidden, here bache that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle. And therfore the Lorde also shall speake with lis-pynge lippes and with a straunge language vnto this people to whome he spake afore of his mynde. This shall bringe rest, yf ye refreshe the weerye, ye this shall bringe rest.
But they had no will to heare. And therfore
the Lorde shall answere their stubbournes (Commaunde that maye be cōmaunded, byd that may be bidden, forbid that may be forbid den, here backe that maye be kept backe, here
a lytle, there a lytle) That they maye go forth fall backwarde, be broken, snared and taken.
D Wherfore heare the worde of the Lorde, ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, whiche is at Jerusalem. For ye comforte youre selues thus: Tushe, death & we are at a poynte, and as for hell, we haue made a couenaunt with it,
that though there breake out anye sore plage it shall not come vpon vs. For with diseryte will we escape, and with vnrulenes will we defende oure selues. Therfore saith the Lorde God: Beholde, I will laye a stone in Sion
a great stone, a costly, a corner stone for a sure foundacyon: that who so putteth his truste in him, shall not be confounded. Righteousnes will I set vp against the balaunce, and iud-gement in the weyghte. The tempest of haile shall take away your refuge, that ye haue to E holde you withall, & the ouerflowynge waters shall breake doune youre stronge holdes of dyssimulacion: Thus the appointmente that ye haue made with deathe, shalbe doue away and the conuocion that ye made with hell, shal not stande. When the great destruccyō goeth thorowe, it shal all to treade you. It shal take you quyte away before it. For it shal go forth earlye in the mornynge and rout, nye onelye that daye & that nighte. And the very fearе on ly shall teache you, when ye heare it. For the bedde shall be so narrowe that a man can not lye vpon it: And the couerynge to small, that a man maye not wynde him selfe therein. For the Lorde shall steppe forthe as he dyd vpon

the mosite *Perazim, and shall take on as he F dyd vpon the *dale of Gabaō: that he maye *1. Par. 14.c. bringe forthe his deuyse, c. *his straunge de- 2. Reg. 5.d.
uyse: and fulfyll his worcke, his wonderful Iosu. 7.d.
worcke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that youre captiuite increase not: for I haue hearde the Lorde of Hoastes saye, that there shall come a soden destruccyon & plage vpon the whole earthe. Take hede, and heare my voyce, ponder and marcke my wordes well.
Goeth wot the housbande man euer in due season earnestlye to his lande: he moweth and plowcth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it with fetches or comyn. He soweth the wheate & Bar- G lye in their place. Myllum and Rye also in their place. And that he maye do it ryght, his God teacheth him and therwith him. For he treadeth not the fytches out with a wayne, neyther bringeth he the carte here & there ouer
the comyn, but he tresheth the fitches out with a staffe, and the comyn with a rod. Also for the wheate he grindeth it to make breade therof Ju as muche as he can not bringe it to passe with treadynge oute. For neither the draught that the carte wheles make, nor his beastes can grinde it. This and suche like thynges come of the Lorde of Hoastes whiche is mar-uelous in counsell, and greate in ryghtwoul-nesse.

The.xxix.Chapter.

The destruccyon of Jerusalem. Against the commaundementes of men.

A WO be vnto the O Ariel, thou cyte that Dauid wanne. Take yet some yeares, & let some festes yet passe ouer: then shall Ariel be besieged, so that she shall be heuy and sorowfull, & shall be vnto me euen as a lyon. For I will laye sege to the rounde aboute, & hepe the in with towers, and graue vp dykes against the. And thou shalte be brought lowe, and speake out of the earth and thy wordes shall go humbly out of the grounde. Thy voyce shall come out of the earthe, lyke the voyce of a witch, and thy talkynge shall grone out of the myre. For the multytude of thyne enemyes .a. shalbe lyke measdurste. b. And the nombre of tyrannes shalbe as the dusste that the wynde taketh away sodenlye. Thou shalte be vysyted of the Lorde of hostes with thonder, earthequake, & with a greate crack, with the whyrle wynde, tempeste, & with the flamme of a consumynge fyer. But nowe the multytude of all the people, that wente out against Ariel: the whole B holde, the stronge holdes and sege, is lyke a dreame whiche appeareth in the nyghte. It is lyke as when an hungry man dreameth that he eateth, and when he awaketh, he hath nothynge: lyke as when a thyrsty man dreameth that he is drinckynge, and when he awaketh, he is faynte, and hys soule vnpacyent.

So is the multitude of all people that warre them selues against the hyll of Syon. Wut ye shalbe at youre wyttes ende, ye shall be ashamed, ye shall stacker, and rele to & fro. c. Ye shalbe dronckē, but not of wyne. Ye shall fall, but not through we dronckennes. For the Lorde shall geue you an harde slepynge spyrte, and holde downe youre eyes: namelye D youre Prophetes and heades which should se, them shall he couer. And all vysyons shalbe vnto you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is learned, and sayeth reade vs thys letter. The he answereth: I cannot read it, for it is seale. Wut yf it be geuen to one that is not learned, or sayd vnto him reade thys letter: Then saith he: I can not reade.

Therfor thus sayth the Lorde: For so much as thys people draweth nye me with theyr mouthe, and honoureth me bothe with theyr lyppes (where as their herte neuertheles is farre from me, & the feare which they owe vn to me, that stode they to owre lawes and doctrynes) therfore will I also throwe vnto thys people a marueilous, terrible, and great thing (Namelye thys): I will destroye the wysdo E me of their wyse, & the vnderstandynge of their learned men shall perysshe. Wo be vnto them that seke so hyde their counsele from the Lorde, which reherse their counsels in the darckenes, & saye: who seyth vs, or who knoweth vs? Whiche ymagynacyon of yours is euen as when the potters clay taketh alwaye semynge, as though the worcke myghte saye to the worckemaister: make me not, or as whē an earthen vessell sayeth of the potter: he vnderstandeth not. d. Se ye not that it is harde by, that Lybanus shalbe turned into Charmell, and that Charmell shalbe taken as a F woode? Then shall deafe men vnderstande the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynde shall se without anye cloude or darckenes. The oppressed shall holde a merye fraske in & Lorde, and the poore people shall reioyce in the holye one of Israell.

Then shall the furyous people cease, and the mockers shalbe put awaye, and all they that do wronge shalbe plucked out, suche as labboure to drawe men vnto synne: & that be- G syeger hym, whiche reproueth. e. them in the gate, and such as turne good persones to wanite. And therfore the Lord (euen the defender of Abraham) sayeth thus vnto the house of Jacob: Now shall not Jacob be ashamed, nor hys face confounded, when he seyth amonge hys children (whome my handes haue made) suche as halowe my name amonge them: that they maye sanctyfye the holye one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell: and that they which afore tyme were of an erroneous spirite haue nowe vnderstandynge, and that such as before couldē not speake, are nowe learned in my lawe.

¶ The notes.

a. Shalbe lyke measdurste: that is, shalbe so many, and as vnable to be nombred as measdurste.

b. And the nombre of tyrannes shalbe &c. As who shulde saye: the moste heape and cruell enemyes that wyll be vpon you in a moment & sodenly, myght and yt quickelye be ouercome of the Lorde, as the bull is taken a waye with the wynde, as it happened vnto Sennacherib: Yet shall it not be so then, but as I wyll nowe shewe the: thou shalte be vysyted & punyshed of the Lorde, euen as when all thynges tremble for feare of the thunder, which no man eschewe: and as when the earthequake shaketh all that there is with an horrible & fearful soundes flame & tempest shall ouerthrowe the, and with the flamme of fyer shalt thou be consumed.

c. That is, ye shalbe dronckē that ye shall not wyte what to do, ye shalbe so cleane destitute of counsell, out of the wyne that ye shall drinck, for ye shall suffre extreame thyrst, & the wyne of correccyon and wyth shall ye not taste of. Ye shall be feble, & fall as ye go, ye shalbe vnapaires for the continuall fear, hate & persecucyon of all mennes for disobedience or strange drinche, whiche ye shall want. Some expoun d thys sentence of them that be dronchen in hy-pocresye & dissimulacyon: and of them that be full of theyr owne imaginacions of theyr owne worke.

d. As though he shulde saye: It is not longe to that goodly trees (which are sygnifyed by Lybanus, shalbe turned into playne feldes:
And that the playne feldes (whiche are signi-fyed by Charmel) shall become roughe & full of bushes. The tyme that Christe shulde come is the shorte tyme that he mencyoneth, which the scripture doth oft cal a short tyme. Then shal
the vnfruteful rough and woddye heathenesse (whiche is vnderstande by Lybanus) be turned vnto the relygyon of Christes congregacyon or churche, and vnto the true scripture of the true God (which is vnderstande by Char mel) that fruteful and well tylled felde.

The. xxx. Chapter.

A curse expressyd vpon them that forsake the counsell of God and clyue vnto the counsell of men. He threatneth the rest of the people, which after the destruccion of Jerusalem wente into Egypte.

Alas

WOe be to these shrewde pyage children (sayeth the Lorde) whiche take counsell, but not at me:
whiche take a webbe in hande
but not after my wil: that they may heape one synne vpon another. They go downe into Egypte (and aske me no councell)
to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and ex-poste in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shalbe youre confusyon, & the cōfort in the Egypcyās shadowe shalbe your owne shame. Youre rulers haue bene at Zoā, and youre messaungers came vnto Hanes.
But ye shall all be ashamed of the people that may not helpe you, whiche shall not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confusyon.

Youre beastes haue borne burthens vpon
B theyr backes towarde the South, thorow the way that is full of parell and trouble, because of the lyon & lyonesse, of the Cockatrice & fluynge dragon. Yea the Mules bare youre sub staunce, & the Camels brought your treasure vpon their croked backes, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egipcians helpe shalbe but vayne and lost. Therfore I tolde you also, that your pryde shulde haue an end.
Wherfore go hence, and write them thys in theyr table, & note it in a boke: that it may re mayne by theyr posterite, & be styll kept. For it is an obstynate people, vnfaythful children children that will not heare the lawe of y Lord.

C They darre saye to the Prophetes: Intromytte youre selues with nothynge, and bu-to the Sothsayers: tell vs of nothynge for to come. But speake frendlye wordes vnto vs, & preache vs false thynges. Create out of the waye, go out of the path, turne the holye one of Jsrael from vs. Therfore thus sayeth the holye one of Jsrael: In as muche as ye haue refused of youre brwye, and comforted youre selues with power and vnrighteousnesse, and put youre confidence therin: therfore shal ye haue this myschefe agayne for youre destruccyon and fall, lyke as an hye wall, that falleth because of some ryft (or blast) whose breakynge cometh sodenly.

And youre destruccyon shalbe lyke as an earthen pot, whiche breaketh no mā touching it, yea and breaketh so sore, that a man shall not fynde a sheuer of it to fetche fyre in, or to take water wyth all out of the pyt. For the D Lorde God, euen the holy one of Jsrael hath promysed thus: Wyth styll sytting and rest shall ye be healed, in quyetnesse & hope shall youre strength lye. Notwithstandynge ye re-garde it not, but ye wyll saye: No, for thus are we constrayned to fle vpon horses. And therfore shall ye fle, we muste ryde vpō swift beastes, and therfore youre persecutours shal yet be swyfter. A thousand of you shall fle for one, or at the moste for fyue, whyche do but on ly geue you eyght wordes: but yll ye be dese-late, as a thyng maste vpon an hye mountayne,
and as a beakon vpon an hyll.

Yet standeth the Lorde waytynge, that he maye haue mercye vpon you, and lyfteth
hym selfe vp, y he maye receyue you to grace.
For the Lorde God is righteous. Happy are all they that wayte for him. For thus) O thou E people of Syon and pecitizens of Jerusalem) shalt ye neuer be in heauynes, for doutlesse he wyll haue mercy vpon the. As sone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyl helpe the.
The Lorde geueth you the a bread of aduer-site, and the water of trouble. But thyne instructer sleyth not farre from the, yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer, and thyne eares harken to his worde, that cryeth after the, and sayeth: this is the waye, go this, and turne neyther to the right hande nor to the lefte.

Moreouer yf ye destroye the syluer wor-kes of youre Idoles, and caste awaye the golden coppres that pertayne them wythall (as F Ephraym) & saye get you hence: Then wyll he geue rayne to the sede that ye shall sowe in the earthe, and geue you bread of the encrease of the earthe, so that all shalbe plenteous and aboundaunt. Thy cattel also shall be fede in y brode medowes, yea thyne oxen & Mules that tyll the grounde, shall eate good fodder, which is purged with the fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flowe out of all hye mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towers shall fall, the moue shall shyne as the sunne, and the sunne shyne shal-be seuen folde, and haue as much shyne, as in seuen dayes besyde. Deuter

In that daye shall the Lorde bynde vp the G bruised sores of hys people, and heale theyr wounde. Beholde the glory of the Lord shal come from farre, hys face shal burne, that no man shalbe able to abyde it, hys lyppes shall wagge for verye indignacyon, and hys tonge shalbe as a deuouringe fyre. His breath like a rche-

a behement floude of water, whiche goeth vp to the throte. That he may take awaye the people, whiche haue turned them selues vnto vanite, and the vayne of errour, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as the vse is in ye night of the holy solempnyte. Ye shall reioyse from youre herte, as they that come with the pype, when they go vp to the mounte of the Lorde, vnto the rocke of Israel. The Lorde also shall set vp the power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, wyth hys angry countenaūce yea and the flamme of the consumynge fyre, with earthquake, tempest of wynde, and haile stones. Then shall the Assyrians feare also, because of the voyce of the Lorde, which shall smyte hi with the rodde. And the same rodde which the Lorde wil sende vpon hym, shall moue the whole foundacyon with trompet, with noyse of warre and battell to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynnynge, yea euen for Tyrus also. This hath he made depe & wyde, & nothyng therof is fyre & wonde immeasurable, whiche the breathe of the Lorde kyndleth, as it were a matche of brymstone.

The.xxxi. Chapter.

We ouerlyeth them that forsake God, and seeke for the helpe of men.

A WOe vnto them that go doune vnto Egypte for helpe, and trust in horses, & comforte themselues in charettes, because they be many, & in horse men because they be lusty & strōg. But they regarde not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wicked, and yet goeth not from hys word when he sleyeth forthe, and taketh the victory agaynste the housholde of the frowarde, & agaynste the helpe of euyll doers. Nowe the Egyptyans are men, and not God, and theyr horses flesthe and not spyrite. And as soone as B the Lorde stretcheth oute his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that should haue ben helped, and shall all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Lyke as the lyon or lyons whelpe roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed, though he the multitude of shepardes crye oute vpon hym, neyther abashed for all the heape of C them: So shall the Lord of Hoostes come doune from the mounte of Sion, and defend hys hil. Lyke as the byrdes flotre about theyr nestes, so shall the Lord of Hoostes, hepe saue, defend & deliuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye children of Israel, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exercised in youre goynge backe. For in that daye euerye man shall caste oute hys Idols of syluer and gold, which ye haue made with your synfull hādes. a. Assur also shalbe slayne with D the swerde, not with a mans swerde. A swerd shall deuoure hym, but not a mans swerde. And he shall fle from the slaughter, and hys seruauntes shalbe taken prysoners. He shall go for feare to hys stronge holdes, and hys Princes shal fle from hys badge. Thus hath the Lorde spoken, whose light burneth in Syon, and hys fyre in Jerusalem.

Some (because the Prophete a litle before in the text, moueth the people to forsake Idoles) expound it thus. Not by our Idoles, not by oure strength, not by mannes helpe (which all maye be called ye swerde of man) shall oure spirituall enemye which is synguler by Assur) perysshe: but by the power of God, and the inuysible swerde that cannot be sene: with whiche the Aungell slewe. lxxxv. thousande in one nyght. The vnderstandyng of good rulers and Officers.

BEholde, the kynge shal gouerne A after the rule of ryghtwysnes, & the princes shal rule according to the balaunce of equyte. He shalbe vnto me as a defence for the wynde, & as a refuge for the tempeste, like as a ryuer of water in a thurste place, and the shadowe of a great roche in a drye land. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dymme, & the eares of them that heare, shall take vnderstandynge hede. The herte of the vnwyse, shall attayne to knowledge, & the vnparfyte tong shal speake playnely and distinctely. Then shal ye vngarde be no more called gētle, nor the churle liberal. B But the churle will be churlysh & wonder, & his hert wil worche euil & playe the Ypocrite, & pronayn abhominacyons against God, to make the hungry leane, & to withhold drynke from the thurstie. These are the perilous weapons of the couetous, these be hys shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with disceatfull wrackes, yea euen there as he shulde geue sentence with the poore. But the liberall person imagyneth honest thynges, and cometh vp with honestye.

Vp (ye ryche and welfull cytyes) harke vnto my voyce. Ye careles cytyes, marke my wordes. After yeares & dayes shal ye be brought in feare, O ye careles cytyes. Then ſhall the wyldernesſe be a frutefull felde and the plenteous felde ſhalbe rekened for a wodde. Then ſhall equyte dwell in the deſerte, and rightwiſnesſe in a frutefull land. And the rewarde of rightwiſnesſe ſhalbe peace, and her frute reſte and quyetnesſe for euer. And my people ſhall dwell in the vnnes of peace, in my tabernacle and pleaſure where there is plenty in them all. And whē hayle falleth, it ſhall fal in the wodde and in the cyte. A thretninge ouer the Aſſyrians. A deſcripcion of them that dwell in the Lorde.

WOe vnto the (O robber) ſhalte not thou be robbed alſo? and vnto the that ſpoyleſte wayte, as who ſayt there ſhuld no waste be layde for the: When thou haſte ceaſed the deceit hurte, euen ſo ſhalte thou be hurte alſo. And as thou ſpoyleſt wayte, ſo ſhall waste be layde for the alſo.

Lorde be mercyful vnto vs, we wayte for the. Thyne arme is at a poynte to vyſet vs, but be thou oure health in the tyme of trouble. Straunge that the people may flye at the anger of the hoſte, & that at thyne vprijſinge the Gentyles maye be ſcatered abroade, and that a thyng ſpoyle maye be gathered as the greſſhoppers are commonly gathered togither into the pyt. Stande vp Lorde, thou that dwelleſt on hye: Let Syon be fylled with equyte & righteouſnesſe. Let trueth and ſtedfaſtnesſe be in her tyme: power, health, wiſdome, knowledge and the feare of God are her treaſure. Beholde, thye aungels crye without, & meſſangers of peace wepe bytterly. The ſtretes are waſte, there walketh no man therein, the appoyntment is broken, the cytees are deſpyſed, they are not regarded, the deſolate earthe is in heupnes. Libanus taketh it but for a ſporte, that it is hewen doune: Saron is lyke a wyldernes: Baſan and Charmel are turned vpſyde doune. And therfore ſayeth the Lorde, I wyll vp now wyll I get vp, nowe wil I aryſe b. Ye ſhall conceyue ſtubble, & bear ſtraw, & youre ſpurte ſhall be the fyre, that it maye conſume you: and the people ſhalbe burnt like lyme, and as thornes burne that are hewē of, and caſte in the fyre.

Now herken in, ye that are farre of, howe I do with thē, & conſyder my glorye, ye that be at hande. The ſynners at Syon are afrayd a ſodayne fearfulnesſe is come vpon the hypocrytes. What is he among vs (ſaye they) that wyll dwell by that conſumynge fyre? whyche of vs maye abyde that euerlastinge heate? He that ledeth a godly lyfe (ſaye I) and ſpeaketh the truth: he that abhorreth to do vyolence and oppreſſion: he that kepeth his hande that he touche no rewarde: which ſtoppeth his eares that he heare no counſel againſte the innocent: which holdeth doune his eyes, that he ſe none euyll. He it is, that ſhall dwell on hye: whoſe ſauegarde ſhalbe in the true rocke, to him ſhal be geuen the right wat meate and dauche. His eyes ſhall ſe the kynge in his glorye: and in the wyde warde, and his herte ſhal delyte in the feare of God. What ſhall then become of the ſcribe? of the Senatoure what of hym that tracheth chyldren? There ſhalt thou not ſe a people of a ſtraunge toonge to haue ſo diſtuted a language, that it may not be vnderſtande: neyther ſo ſtraunge a ſpeache but it ſhall be vnderſtanded.

There ſhal Syon be ſeen, the head cytye of oure ſolempne feaſtes. There ſhal thyne eyes ſe Jeruſalem that glorious habytacyon: the tabernacle that neuer ſhal remoue, whoſe nayles ſhall neuer be taken oute worlde without ende, whoſe coardes cuerychone ſhall neuer cumpte: for the glorious Mageſtye of the Lorde ſhall there be preſent amonge vs. In that place, where layre bonade ryuers & ſtreames are, ſhall neyther Galeyrowe, nor great ſhyppe layle. For the Lorde ſhalbe oure captayne, the Lorde ſhalbe oure lawe geuer. The Lorde ſhalbe oure kynge, and he hym ſelfe ſhalbe oure ſauyoure. There are the coardes ſo layde abrode, that they cannot be better: The maſte ſet vp of ſuche a faſhyon, that no banner nor ſayle hangeth therone: but there is dealed great ſpoyle, ye lame men runne after the pray. There lyeth no man that ſayeth I am ſick, but all euyll is taken awaye from the people, that dwell there.

Saye vnto them that are of a fearfull B herte: Be of good cheare, & feare not. Beholde youre God cometh, to take vengeaunce and to reward, God commeth hym owne selfe, & wyll deliuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lyghtened, & the eares of the deafe opened. Then shall the lame man.b* leape as an herte, and the domme mans tunge shall geue thanckes.

In the wyldernesse also there shall welles
springe, and floudes of water in the desert.
The drye grounde shall turne to ryuers, and the thirstye to springes of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shall growe swete C flowres and grene rushes. There shalbe fore pathes and comen stretes, this shalbe called c* the holy waye. No vncleane person shall go thorow it, for the Lorde hym selfe shall go with them that waye, and the ignorant shall not erre. There shalbe no lyon, and no ravy-shynge beast shall come therin, nor be there, but men shall go there fre and safe. And the redemed of ỹ Lorde shall conuerte, and come to Syon with thanckesgeuynge. Euerlastinge D

Hezekiah. * The waye of the lapactes and lapthfull is here called the holye waye.

The .xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is assaged by Sennacherib, in the tyme of kynge of Hezekiah.

IN the .xiiij. yeare of kyng Hezekiah, came Sennacherib kyng of the Assyrians downe, to lape sege vnto all the stronge cyties of Juda. * And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabsaketh from Lachis to warde Jerusalem, against kynge Hezekiah, with a greuous hoste, which set hym by the condute of ỹ ouerpole, in the waye that goeth thorowe the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto hym Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the Presydent, Sobna ỹ Scribe, ỹ Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

IN the .xiiij. yeare of kyng Hezekiah, came Sennacherib kyng of the Assyrians downe, to lape sege vnto all the stronge cyties of Juda. * And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabsaketh from Lachis to warde Jerusalem, against kynge Hezekiah, with a greuous hoste, which set hym by the condute of ỹ ouerpole, in the waye that goeth thorowe the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto hym Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the Presydent, Sobna ỹ Scribe, ỹ Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

And Rabsaketh sayde vnto them: Tell Hezekiah, that the greate kyng of Assyria sayeth thus vnto hym: What presumpcion is this, that thou trustest vnto? Thou thinckest (peraduenture) that thou hast councell and power ynough to maynteine this warre: or els wher to trustest thou, that thou darest thy selfe of fraunce to, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of rede (I meane Egypte) whyche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to hys hande ỹ pearceth hym thorowe. Euen so is Pharao the kyng of Egypt, vnto all the that trust in hym. But yf thou woldest sayc to me: we trust in the Lorde oure God: A goodlye God in deede: whose hye places and aulters Hezekiah toke downe, ỹ commanded Juda ỹ Jerusalē, to worshippe onely before the aulter. Abyde me, thou haste made a condycion with my lorde the kyng of the Assyrians, that he shuld geue the two thousand horses: art thou able to set men ther vpō? Seyng now that thou cānot resiste the power of the smallest prynce, that my Lorde hath, how darrest thou truste in the charettes and horsemen of Egipt: Mo reouer, thinckest thou that I am come downe hether, to destroye thys lande without ỹ Lordes will? The Lord sayde vnto me, go downe in to the lande, that thou mayest destroye it.

Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna ỹ Joah vnto Rabsaketh: Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Syrians language, for we vnderstande it well: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, leste the folcke heare, whych syeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsaketh: Thynche ye, that the kynge sent me to speake this only vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also, that lye vpon the wall? that they be not compelled to eate their owne donge, and drincke theyr owne stale with you?

And Rabsaketh stode styll, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tunge: and sayd: Mow take hede, how the greate kynge of the Assirians geueth you warning. Thus sayeth the kynge: Let not Hezekiah disceyue you, for he shal not be able to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Hezekiah comforte you in the Lorde, when he sayeth: The Lorde without doute shall defende vs, and shall not geue ouer this citie into the hādes of the kynge of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth ỹ kyng of Assyria: optayne my fauoure, enclyne to me: so maye euery mā eniope his vineyardes and fygetrees, and drincke the water of hys cisterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and bringe you into a lande that is like youre owne: wher in is wheate and wyne, wherin is both sowen with sede, and planted with vyneyardes.

Let not Hezekiah dyscreyue you, when he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shall delyuer vs.

Myght the Goddes of the Gentiles kepe euery mās lande, frō the power of the kynge of the Assyrians? Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharnaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hāde? Or which of all ỹ Goddes of the landes, hath delyuered their cōtree out of my power, so ỹ the Lorde shuld delyuer Jerusalem fro my hande? Vnto this Hezekiahs messaungers helde their tunges, ỹ answered not one worde: for the kyng had charged thē, that they shulde geue hym none answere. So came Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the President, Sobna the Scrybe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretarye vnto Hezekiah with rente clothes, and tolde hym the wordes of Rabsaketh.

The .xxxvij. Chapter.

Ezechiah humbleth hym selfe before the Lord. The armye of Sennacherib is slayne of the Aungell of the Lorde. He hym selfe is slayne of hys owne sonne.

WHen Hezekiah hearde that, he A rente his clothes, and put on a sack cloth, ỹ went into the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the Presydēt, Sobna the Scrybe, with the eldest prestes clothed in sacke, vnto the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amoz, ỹ they sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth Hezekiah: This is ỹ daye of trouble, of plage and of wrath: lyke as when a chylde cometh to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bringe it forth. The Lorde thy God (no doute) hath well consydered the wordes of Rabsaketh, whom hys lorde the kynge of the Assyrians hath sent, to defye ỹ blaspheme the lyuynge God: with soch wordes as the Lord thy God hath heard right well. And therfore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kyng Hezekiah came to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answere. Saye B
thus vnto youre lorde: thus sayeth the Lord: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou hast hearde, wherwith the kyng of the Assyrians seruauntes haue blaspheined me. Beholde, I wyll cause a wynde go ouer hym, as sone as he heareth it, he shall go agayne into hys countre, there wyll I destroye hym with the swerde. Now when Rabsaketh returned, he founde the kynge of Assyria lapenge sege the Lobnah, for he had vnderstande, that he was departed departed from Lachis. For there came a rumoure, that Tharhakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre against hym.

And when the kynge of Assyria hearde that, he sent other messaungers to kynge Hezekiah with this cõmaundement: Saye thus to Hezekiah kyng of Juda: Let not thy God deceyue the, in whom thou hopest, & sayeste: Jerusalẽ shall not be geuẽ in to the handes of the kyng of Assyria. For thou knowest well how the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Where the people of the Gentyles (whõ my progenytours cõquered) delyuered at any tyme theyrow their goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the chyldre of Eden, which dwell at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemath, & the kynge of Arphad, & the kyng of the cytye Sephaimaim, Ena and Ava? Nowe when Hezekiah had receyued the letter of the messaungers, and read it, he went vp into the house of the Lorde and opened the letter before the Lord. And Hezekiah prayed before ỹ Lorde on this maner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubyn. Thou art the God, that only is God of all ỹ kyngdomes of the world, for thou only hast created heauen & earth. Enclyne thyne eare Lord & consyder, open thyne eyes, O Lorde, & se, & põder all ỹ wordes of Sennaherib, whiche hath sent hys embage to blaspheme the lyuynge God. It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and landes, and cast their goddes in the fyre. Not wythstandynge those were no goddes but the worckes of mens handes, of wod or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Delyuer vs then, O Lorde oure God, frõ the handes of Sennaherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou only art the Lorde. Then sent Esay the sonne of Amoz vnto Hezekiah, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchyng Sennaherib, thys is the answere, that the Lorde hath geuẽ concernynge hym: Despised art thou, & mocked, a. * O daughter of Syõ, he hath shakẽ his head at the, O doughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennaherib, whõ hast thou defyed & blasphemed? And agaynst whom hast thou lyfted vp thy voyce, & exalted thy proude lokes? euen agaynst the holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruauntes hast blasphemed the Lord, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes, and tydes of Libanus with my horsmen. And there wyll I cut downe the hye Cedre trees & the sayreste fyrre trees. I will vp into the heygth of it, & into the chefest of his symbre woddes. If there be no water, I wyl graue & drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shall dryue them vp wyth the sole of myne foote. Per (sayest thou) hast thou not hearde, what haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of olde tyme? That same wyll I do now also: I waste, destroye, & bringe stronge cities vnto heapes of stones. For theyr inhabitours shal be syke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. They shalbe syke the grasse and grene herbes in the felde, syke the hayr vpon house toppes, that withereth a fore it be growne vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goinge forth and thy cõmyne home, yee & thy madnesse agaynst me. Therfore thy furiousnesse agaynst me, & thy pryde is come before me. I will put. b* a ringe in thy nose, and a bridle byt in thy chawes of the, & turne the aboute, euen the same waye thou comest. I will geue the also thys token (O Hezekiah) this yeare shalt thou eate that is kept in store, & the next yeare such as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yeare ye shall sowe & reape, yee ye shall plante vpe arardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And such of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunt shall take rote beneth, and bringe forth frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Syon.

And this shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes bringe to passe. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde, concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to the cytye, and shall shote no arowe in to it, there shall no shilde hurte it, nether shall they graue aboute it. The same waye that he came, shall he returne, & not come at thys cytie, sayeth the Lorde. And I wyll kepe and saue the cytie (sayeth he) for myne owne, and for my seruaunte Dauids sake.

* Thus the angel went forth, and slewe of the Assyrians hoste, an. clxxxv. thousande. And when men arose vp early (at Jerusalem:) Beholde, all laye full of dead bodyes. So Sennaherib the kynge of the Assyrians brake vp, and dwelt at Ninive. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah hys god, that Adramalech and Sarasar hys owne sonnes slewe hym with ỹ sweard, and fled in to the lande of Ararat. And Asar hadon hys sonne reygned after hym.

Ezechiah is sycke vnto the death, but at the request of the Lorde, and through ỹ. prayer after 15 yeres he is made hole by the ministery of Esay. The sonne of the Babylonyans sende vnto him. Esay prophecyeth vnto him of the captyuite of Babylon.

iiii. Reg. xx.a
2. Par. xxxii.

IN dede long afore thys, was Hezekiah sick vnto the deeth: and the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amoz came vnto hym, & sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thyne house in order: for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then Hezekiah turned hys face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembre (O Lorde) that I have walcked before the in a* treuth and a stedfast herte, and have done the thyng that is pleasaunt to the. And Hezekiah wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Esay: Go and speake vnto Hezekiah: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father heareth thy prayer, and considereth thy teares: beholde I will put fyftene yeares mo vnto thy lyfe, and delyuer the and the cyttie also, from the hande of the kynge of Assiria, for I
B will defende the cyttie. And take the this token of the Lord, that he will do it, as he hath spoken: Beholde, I will returne the shadowe of Ahaz dial, that now is layed out with the Sunne 10 degrees backe warde. So the Sunne turned ten degree backward, the which he was descended afore.

¶ Hezechiahs sycknesse, whiche Hezekiah kynge of Juda wrote, when he had bene sycke, and was recouered.

C b* I thought I shulde have gone to the gates of hell in my best age, and have wanted the residue of my yeares.

I spake with in my selfe: I shall neuer beholde the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken away fro me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: my lyfe in betwen vs, lyke as a weuer cutteth of his webb.

Whyle I was yet takynge my rest, he hewed me of, & made an ende of me in one day.

c* I thought I wolde have lyued vnto the morow, but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, and made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe, and lyke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes into the heyght: O Lorde (sayde I) vyolence is done vnto me, be thou suretye for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he may this do? That I may lyue out all my yeares, D yee in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lorde) men must lyue in bytternesse, & all my life muste I passe ouer therin: For thou takest me vp, and makest me. But lo, I will be well coted with thys bytternes.

Neuerthelesse my charitable hath so pleased the, that thou wouldest not make an ende of my lyfe: so that thou hast cast all my synnes behynde thy back.

d* For hell prayseth not the, death doth not magnifye the.

e* They that go downe into the graue, praise not thy trueth: but the lyuyng, yee the lyuinge acknowledge the, lyke as I do thys daye.

The father telleth hys chyldren of thy faythfulnesse.

Delyuer vs (O Lorde) and we will synge prayses in thy house, all the dayes of oure life.

And Esay sayde: take a playster of fygges, and laye it vpon the sore, so shall it be whole. Then sayd Hezekiah: O what a great thinge is this, that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde.

¶ The notes.

a* Treuth for pureues, as in the Psalm. li. b. But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the trueth. &c. That is, in pureues, in true and perfecte righteousnes.

b* That is, I thought I shuld haue gone to my graue, and haue dyed in my best age. &c. The Hebrue worde signifyeth both hell and a graue, pitte or dytche. That maye ye perceyue in Gene. xlii. g. where Jacob sayeth, that yf any misfortune shulde happen vnto Ben Jamin in his Journey in to Egypt with hys other brethren, hys graye head shulde be brought with sorow vnto hys graue: where the comen translat. readeth hell, for graue. As for Hezekiah, he nether feared hell nor purgatory, as ye may wel se by that he a litel before sayth: Remembre O Lord, that I have walcked before the in trueth and a stedfast herte, and have done the thinge that is pleasant to the: which thynge who so doeth, needeth not to feare any of those two places. Besydes that the dunce men and Sophisters them selues, which were (as moste learned men thincke) the inuentoures and fynders, ye and the very makers of purgatory, saye that before the tyme of Christes commynge, there was no soche place: so that Hezekiah is by their sentence shylled quite of that place: and of hell doth the sentence of the worde of God quite hym whiche sayeth: There is no condemnacyon to them that are in Christe Jesu. Rom. viii. a.

c* I thought I wolde. & &c. But he brosed my bones lyke a lyon. &c. As who shoulde saye: I thought to haue lyued longer: but the Lorde toke me as it had bene a lyon: and feble my bones and strength: and so troubled me with the greuous pangues of my disease, as though he wolde in one daye haue made an ende of me. Soche a greuous sycknes do learned men thincke that Dauid also labourd with, when he sayde: O Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed. Psalm. vi. a. and. xxxviii. a.

d* For hell prayseth not the. &c. The meanynge is. If I now dye, I can not prayse the in thy temple. For the dead and buryed cannot loue and prayse the, with their materiall tonges or herte. Nether cā my breth, nor my buryeng, be at this season for the setting out of thy glorye. For all the godlye will be feared with this thy iudgement: And the wycked wyll

wyll impute my death to the ouerthrowyng of Idolatrye, and to the puttynge downe of the brasen serpent.

c* They that go downe into ỹ graue prayse not thy trueth, that is, hope not in the trueth of thy worldlye promeses, whiche thou hast promesed vnto soche as walcke vnderpredy in thy lawe. Deutero. xxviii. They cannot reioyce of theyr health, when all hope of recouerynge is past. But yf thou graunt a man his lyfe, yf any man recouer his sickues and syne: he shall acknowledge thy goodnes, euē as I now geue thākes vnto ỹ, for ỹ benefyte of my health whiche thou hast restored me.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Ezekiah is reproued of Esay, bycause he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadours of Babylon.

A AT the same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladams sonne kynge of Babylon, sent lettres and presentes to Hezekiah. For he vnderstode how that he had bene sick, and was recouered agayne. And Hezekiah was glad therof, and shewed them the commodytyes of hys treasure, of syluer, B of golde, of spyces and rootes, of precyous oyles, all that was in hys cubbordes ỹ treasure houses. There was not one thing in Hezekiahs house, ỹ so thorow out all hys kyngdome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esay the Prophete of kynge Ezekiah, and sayde vnto hym. What haue ỹ men sayde, ỹ frō whence came they vnto the? Hezekiah answered: they came out of a farre countre vnto me, out of Babylō. Esay sayd: C what haue they loked vpon in thyne house? Hezekiah answered: All ỹ is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothinge in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Esay vnto Hezekiah: Vnderstande the worde of the Lord of hoostes: Beholde the tyme wyll come, that euery thynge which is in thyne house, and al that thy progenytoures haue layde vp in stoare vnto this D daye, shalbe caried to Babylon, ỹ nothinge left behynde. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Yee ỹ parte of thy sonnes, that shall come of the, ỹ whom thou shalt get, shalbe caried hence, ỹ become gelded chamberlaynes in the kynge of Babylons courte: Then sayde Hezekiah to Esay: Now God prospet hys owne counsell, which thou hast told me. He sayde more ouer: So that there be peace and trouthfulnesse in my tyme.

The .xl. Chapter.

The comyng of S. Iohn Baptist. The preachynge of the Apostles. The callynge of the Gentyles.

A BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (sayeth youre God) comforte Jerusalem, and tell her: that a* her trauayle is at an ende that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correccyon for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lorde in the wyldernesse, make streyght the path for oure God in the desert. Let all valleyes be exalted, ỹ euerymountayne ỹ hyll be layed lowe. What so is croked, let it be made streyght, ỹ lett the rough places be made playne felden. b* For the glory of the Lorde shall apeare, ỹ all flesh shall se it, for why, the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Now crye. And I sayde: what shall I crye? Then spake yt: that all flesh is grasse, and that c* all the beautye therof, is as the floure of the felde. When the grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the Lorde bloweth vpon them. Or wetheleese whether the grasse wyther, or the floure fade awaye: Yet the worde of oure God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cried thus: d* Go vp vnto the hyll (O Sion) thou the bringest good tydynges, lyft vp thy voyce with power, O thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp without feare, ỹ saye vnto the cities of Juda: Beholde youre God, beholde the Lorde, euen the Almyghtie shall come with power, and beare rule with hys arme. Beholde, he bringeth his treasure with hym, ỹ hys workes go before hym. He shall fede his flock lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lambes together with his arme, and carie them in hys bosome, and shall hymselfe intreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in hys fyst? Who hath measured heauen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earth of the worlde in the fyngers? Who hath wayed D the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath restourned the mynde of the Lord? Or who is of hys counsell to teach him? At whom hath he asked counsell, to make hym vnderstand, and to lerne hym the waye of iudgment: to teach him sciencesand to instructe hym in the waye of vnderstandynge. Beholde, all people are in comparyson of hym, as a droppe to a boket full, and are counted as the lesse thynge that the balaunce weyeth. Beholde, the Iles are in comparyson of hym, as the shadowe of the sonne beame. Libanus is not sufficyent to mynyster fyre for his offrynge, and all the beastes therof are not ynough to one sacrefyce. All people in comparyson of hym are reckened as nothing, yee bayne vanyte and emptynesse.

To whom then will ye lyke God? or what To whom then wyll. symylitude wyll ye set vp vnto hym? Shall the caruer make hym a carued ymage? and shall the goldsmyth couer hym with golde, or cast hym in to a fourme of syluer plates? Moreouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore man whyche is dysposed, maye haue some thynge to set vp also) seke out ỹ chose a tree, that is not rotten, and carue therout an ymage, that moueth not? Knowe ye not then? F Hearde ye neuer of it? Hath it not bene preached vnto you sence the beginnynge? Haue ye not bene enfourmed of this, sence the foundacyon of the earth was layde: That he sytteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabytours of the worlde are in comparison of him, but as grashoppers: That he spreadeth out the heauens as a courtyne, that he stretcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: That he bryngeth Princes to nothyng, and the iudges of the earth to dust: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, nether theyr stocke rooted agayne in the earth: For as sone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither and fade awaye, lyke the straw in a whyrle wynde.

To whom now will ye lyken me, and whom shall I be lyke, sayeth the holy one? Lyft vp youre eyes on hye, and consydre. Who hath made those thynges, whyche come out by so greate heapes? And he can call them all by their names. For there is nothynge hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strength, and myght. How mayst then Jacob thynche, or how mayst Israel saye: My wayes are hyd from the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knowest thou not, or hast thou not hearde, that the euerlastynge God the Lorde whyche made all the coostes of the earth, is nether weery nor faynt, and that his wysdome can not be comprehended, but that he geueth strength vnto the weery, and power vnto the fayntes? Chyldren are weery and fayne, and the strongest men fall: But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shal strength be encreased, Aegles wynges shall growe vpon the: When they runne they shall not fainte and whē they go, they shal not be weery.

Of the goodnes and mercy of God towarde the people.

Kepe styll (ye Jlandes) and herken vnto me. Be stronge ye people, Come hether, and shewe youre cause, we wyll go to the lawe together. Who rayseth vp the iuste from the ryssynge of the Sunne, and calleth him to go forth? Who calleth downe the people, and subdueth the kynges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the grounde wyth hys swearde, and scatter them lyke stubble with hys bowe? He followeth vpon them, and goeth safely hym selfe, and cometh in no fote path with his fete. Who hath made, created, and called the generacions from the begynnyng? Euen I the Lorde, whyche am the fyrst, and with the last.

Beholde ye Jles that ye maye feare, and ye endes of the earth, that ye maye be abasshed, drawnye, and come hether. Euery man hath exorted hys neyghboure, and brother, and bydden him be stronge. The smyth confoted the moulder, and the Ironsmyth the hammerman, sayenge: It shalbe good, that we fasten this cast worche: and then they fastened it with nayles, that it shulde not be moued. And thou Israell my seruaunte: Jacob my electe sede of Abraham my beloued, whom I led from the endes of the earth by the hande: For I called the from farre, and sayde vnto the: Thou shalt be my seruaunt: I haue chosen the, and will not cast the away: be not afrayd, for I will be with the. Loke not behynde the, for I will be thy God, to strength the, helpe the, and to hepe the with thin right hand of myne. Beholde, all they that resyst the, shall come to confusyon and shame: and thine aduersaries shalbe destroyed and brought to naught. So that who so seketh after the, shall not fynde them. Thy destroyers shall perysh and so shall they that vndertake to make batell agaynst the: For I thy Lorde and God, will strengthen thy ryght hande. Euen I that saye vnto the: Feare not. I will helpe the. Be not afrayde thou lytle worme Jacob, and thou despysed Israell for I will helpe the, sayeth the Lorde, and the holy one of Israel thyne auenger. Beholde, I will make the a treadyng cart and a new flayle, that thou mayest thresshe and grynde the mountaynes, and bryngе the hylles to poulder. Thou shalt fanne them, and the wynde shall carye them awaye, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter the. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delyte in prayssinge the holy one of Israel.

When the thrysty and poore seke water and fynde none, and when their tonge is drye of thyrst: I geue it them sayth the Lorde. I the God of Israel forsake them not. I bringe forth floudes in the hylle, and welles in the playne feldes. I turne the wildernes to riuers, and the drye lāde to condythes of water. I plante in the waste grounde trees of Cedar, Boxe, Myrre and Olyues. And in the drye I set fyrre trees, Elmes, and Hawthornes together. All thys do I, that they altogether may map se & marcke, perceyue with their hertes & consyder, that the hande of the Lorde maketh these thinges, and that the holye one of H Israel bringeth them to passe. Stande at your cause (sayeth the Lorde) & bringe forth your stroungest grounde, counceleth the Kynge of Jacob. Let the goddes come forth & selues, & shewe vs the thynges that are past, what they be: let them declare them vnto vs, that we maye take them to herte, and knowe the hereafter. Ether, let them shewe vs thynges for to come, and tell vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shal we knowe, that they be goddes. Shewe somthing, ether good or bad: so will we both knowledge the same, and tell it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of naught, & your makynge is of naught but abhominacion hath chosen you. Neuertheles I haue waked vp one from the North, and he shall come.
I And another from the East, which shall call vpon my name, & shall come to the Princes, as the Potter to his claye, and as the Potter treadeth downe the myre. Who tolde that afore? So will we counsell and saye, that he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth any thynge, there is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I will first graunte them of Sion and Jerusalem to be Euangelistes. But when I consyder there is not one amonge them that prophecyeth, neither (when I aske hym) that answereth one worde. Lo, wicked are they and vayne, with the thynges also that they take in hande: yee wynde are they, and emptynesse, with their ymages together.

a* I bringe forth floudes in the hilles, &c. In hyghe places that be easy to se, whereunto the Heathen maye sone come, will I prepare, not spryll welles, but great floudes of holy doctryne: and in playne feldes and lowe places, springes and fountaynes: that the same ye slouthfull shall haue no excuse, but that all the thirsty may come to the worde of lyfe.

b* I turne the wyldernes into ryuers. &c. That is: I make the doctrine of truth so generall and so easy to all men, that where as there before waste wyldernesses (by whiche vnderstande the errours of the Heathen wherwith they had made all vnfruitefull: & dry) shall now by the grace of ye holy ghost, be ryuers of the water of lyfe. Where all was full of Idolatrye, of abhominacion and of stynckynge errours: there shall the hertes of the chosen be watered with goodly wysdome, thorow the gospell, and glad tydynges: and shall be indued with sayth, whereby they maye both profet them selues and other: and so shall they be fruiteful. Wyldernes is often thus taken, as before in the. xxxv. a.

The.xlij.Chapter.

The mekenes of Christ and his doctryne.

BEholde now therfore, thys is
A my seruaunte whom I will helpe to my selfe: myne electe, In whom my soule shalbe pacified. I will geue hym my spyrite, that he may shewe forth iudgement & ryghte amonge the Gentyles. He shall not be an outcryer, nor an hye mynded person. Hys voyce shall not be hearde in the stretes. A bruysed rede shall he not breake, and the smokyng flax shall he not quench, but saythfully and truly shall he geue iudgement. He shall neither be ouercome nor hastye, that he maye restore ryghteousnes vnto the earth: and the Gentyles also shall hope his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lord vnto hym (euen he that the made heauens, and spred them abroade & setteth forth the earth with her increase, whych geueth breath vnto the people that is in it, & to them that dwell therin) I the Lorde haue called the in righteousnesse, & led the by the hande. Therfore will I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be a lyght of the Gentyles. That thou mayest
B open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prysoners, & them that syt in darknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lorde, whych geue my power to none other nether myne honoure to the Goddes: shewe now these newe tydynges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thankes geuynge, blowe out his prayse vnto the ende of the world. They that be vpon the sea, and all that is therin, prayse hym, the Iles and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernes with her cities lyft vp her voyce, the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glad that syt vpon rockes of stone, & let them crie downe from the hye mountaynes, & ascribinge almightynes vnto the Lorde, and magnifying hym amonge the Gentyles.
C The Lord shal come forth as a gyaunte, and take a stomache to hym lyke as a fresshe man of warre. He shall roare and crye, and ouercome his enemyes.

I haue longe holden my peace (sayeth the Lorde) shulde I therfore be styll, and kepe sylence for euer? I will crye lyke a trauelynge woma, and ones wyl I destroye, & deuoure. I will make waste both mountayne & hyll, & dry vp euery grene thynge that groweth theron. I will dry vp the floudes of water, and drincke vp the ryuers. I will bringe the blynde into a strete, that they knowe not: & lede them into a fore path, that they are ignorant in. I shall make darcknesse light before them, and the thinge that is croked to be streyght. These thinges will I do, & not forget them. And therfore let them conuerte, and be ashamed earnestlye, that hope in Idoles, and saye to fashioned ymages: ye are oure goddes.

Heare, O ye deaf men, and sharpen your sightes to se (O ye blynde.) But who is blinder, then my seruaunt? Or so deaf, as my a* messaungers, whom I sent vnto the? For D who is so blinde as my people, & they þ haue the rule of the? They are lyke, as yf thou vnderstodest moch, & keptest nothyng: or yf one herde well, but were not obedient. The Lord be mercyfull vnto the for his righteousnesse sake, that his worde myght be magnyfyed & praysed. But it is a myscheuous and wycked people. Their younge men belonge all to the enare, & shalbe shut into prison houses. They shalbe caryed awaye captyue, and no man shall lowse them. They shalbe troden vnder fote, & no man shall laboure to bringe them agayne. But who is he amõge you, that pondreth this in hys mynde, that consyderth it, & taketh it for a warnynge in tyme to come?

Who suffred Jacob to be troddẽ vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? Dyd not the Lorde? Now haue we synned agaynst hym, & haue had no delyte to walcke in his wayes neither bene obedyent vnto his lawe. Therfor hath he poured vpon vs hys wrathfull displeasure, & stronge batell, whiche maketh vs haue to do on euery syde, yet wyll we not vnderstande: he burneth vs vp, yet spyeth it not in to oure hertes.

¶ The notes.

a* Messaungers. He meaneth the hyghe prestes, and those had cure of the people. Those shulde haue taught the other, but they were blyndest of all, as Christ declareth in the gospell. Soch there be at all tymes, and shalbe vnto the worldes ende.

The .xliij. Chapter.

God promyseth to sende his Christ, which shall deliuer his people. He forgyueth Synnes for his owne sake.

A But now, the Lorde that made the O Jacob, & he that fashyoned the O Israel, sayeth thus: Feare not, for I wyll defende the. I haue called the by name thou art myne owne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stronge floudes shuld not pluck the awaye. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shall not kindle vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy Sauyour. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Morians, and the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my sight, and because I set by the, and loued the. I
B applied all men for the, & deliuered vp al people for thy sake, that thou shuldest not feare, for I was wyth the. I wyll bringe thy sede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyll saye to the North, let go. And to þ South, kepe not backe: but bringe me my sonnes from farre, and my daughters from the endes of the worlde: Namelye, all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, fashyoned, and made for myne honoure, Bringe forth that people, whether they haue eyen or be blynde, deafe or haue eares. All nacyons shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge ponder goddes shall declare soche thynges, & tell vs what is to come? Let them bringe theyr wytnesses, so shall they be fre: for then men shall heare it, & saye, it is trueth. But I bring you wytnesses (sayth the Lorde) euen those that are my seruauntes, whom I haue chosen: to the intent that ye myght be certyfyed and geue me faythfull credence: yee & to consyder, that I am he, before whom there was I am he beneuer any God, and that there shalbe none for whom.

after me. I am only the Lorde, and wythout C me is there no Sauyour. I geue warnynge, I am only I make whole, I teach you that there shalbe the Lorde.
be no straunge God amonge you. And thys recorde must ye beare me your selues (sayth the Lorde) that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge, & there is none that can take any thynge out of my handes. And what I do, can no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lorde the holy one of Israel your redemer: For your sake I wyll sende to Babylon, & bringe all the strongest of them from thence: Namely, the Chalders that boost them of their shyppes: Euen I the Lorde your holy one which haue made Israel, and am your kynge. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde (euen he that maketh a waye in the sea, and a foorpath in the myghtye waters: which bringeth forth the charettes and horses, the hoste & the power, that they maye fall a slepe & neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towe is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde nothinge that is past. a* Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thynge, & shortly shall it appeare: ye shall well knowe it, I told it you afore, but I wil tel it you agayne. I wyll make streetes in the desert, & ryuers of water in þ wyldernes. b* The wylde beastes shall worshyppe me: the dragon, and the Estryche. For I shall geue water in the wyldernesse, and streames in the desert: that I may geue dryncke to my people, whom I chose. This people haue I made for my selfe, & they shall c* shewe forth my prayse. For thou Jacob) wouldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnlust towarde me, O Israel. d* Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burntofferynges, nether dydest honoure me with thy sacryfices. Thou boughtest me no deare spice wyth thy money, nether pouredest the fatt of thy sacrifices vpon me. Howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offerynges, nether greuous in incẽse. e* But thou hast lade me wyth thy synnes, and wearied me wyth thyne vngodlynes. f* Where as I yet am euen he onlye, that for myne owne selfes sake do awaye thyne offences, & forget thy synnes: so that I wyll neuer thyncke vpon them. g* Put me now in remembraunce (for we wyll reason together) ther) & shew what thou hast for the, to make the ryght. h* Thy fyrst father offended sore, & thy rulers have synned agaynst me. Therfore I ether suspended, or slue the chefest Princes: I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel into reprofe.

¶ The notes.

a* Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thinge. &c. He meaneth that he wyll forsake the Jewes whiche were his owne people, for their offences: and call the Gentyles that were Idolatrers, whom he vnderstandeth by ỳ desert & wyldernes: as before in the.xxxv.a. and.xli.e.

b* The wilde beastes shall worshyppe me the dragon. &c. Vnder the name of these beastes signifieth he also the Heathen, whiche were wylde, rude and beastly, concernynge godly knowledge. These sayth he that he wyll tame by the preachinge of the gospell (which thing he sygnifieth by waters & streames) so that they shall not hereafter do hurt in the church, but shall put theyr shoulders vnder the yocke of fayth, & be ruled with the law of charitye.

c* To shew forth the prayse of the Lorde, is, to preache the remyssyon of synnes, & the deliuerance from death and hell, and the geftes of euerlastynge lyfe by the mercye of God, for Christes sake. After maner of speakynge vseth Dauid in the Psal.xxii.d. where he bearynge the figure of Christe, sayeth: In the myddest of ỳ congregacyō wyll I prayse the. &c. Thus shulde the Gentyles and Heathen prayse hym, whiche people he chose for hym selfe, as ye maye se in the text: for the Jewes (whiche are signified by Jacob) wolde not do it, but put their confydence in keppynge of the lawe. Thys doth the Prophet vpbraide them with, in the person of God, sayinge: d* Thou gauest me not thy ponge beastes. &c. As who shoulde saye: Saye not that thou haste geuen me manye sacrifices, bothe because thou gauest them not vnto me only, but vnto thy calues and Baalles and other Idoles: and also because I dyd neuer set greatly by them, nor greatly required the. They greued me alwayes, when the sayth & the deuocyon of the geuers was away. The shepe of thy burntofferinges broughtest thou not vnto me, nether dydest thou glorifye me with thy sacrifices, but dydest onely sarfye thyne owne superstycions. I compelled the not to worshyp me with thyne offrynges, but because thou so redely offredest soch thinges vnto Idoles after the maner of the Heathen, I commaunded that they shulde not be offred vnto other goddes, but vnto me, of whose gyfte thou receyuedest them. &c. Now of all these thinges profyted me: in as moche as thou lackest of the thinges whiche I chefye required, righteousnes, sayth, and iudgement. Mat.xxiii. e* Thou hast moche more offended me wyth thy synnes, then that thou canste playse me with all these ceremonyes: which iustyfye not them that do them, but bringe them into my fauoure, in lesse then they fyrste be my beloued throughe fayth.

f* No maner of Idoles, nor the sacrifyces of oxen, sheepe, or goates, nor the wreathes of thy wouches, how precious or good ỳ so euer they be, do put awaye synne: But I I my selfe alone by my onely mercy and grace do pardon them, to all those that beleue that I so do and do not ones remember them, to thintent to punyshe them: Yee, & I sore longe the. Rom.iii.d. I am not bounde vnto the, ỳ hast so often fallē from thy fayth, which I onely regarde. g* Other elles bringe me in remembraunce, reason the matter with me, & shewe me, whether thou haue alwayes more prouoked me vnto anger, or I haue bene ouer moch fauorable vnto the: and whether I haue euer bene readyer to forgeue, then thou to amende. Thou canst surely neuer bringe any thynge for ỳ, wherby thou mayest iustyfye thy cause agaynst me.

h* Thou hast not chosen me, but I haue chosen the. I made thy father Adam. Gene.i.d. which streyght wayes transgressed the commaundemēt. Gene.iii.a.b. And Abraha coulde not be iustyfyed by his workes, but by hys fayth. Roma.iii.a. As no nother man can: whose whole lyfe is full of synne euen from their chyldē hode, yee euen he that lyueth but a daye. Jacob was preferred before Esau, not for hys merites or deserynges, but by electyon. Gen.xxv. Rom.ix.b. Thy rulers, or (as some rede) Interpretoures, Moses, & Aarō, were not founde without offence before me, but synned agaynst me. Numer.xi.e. Therfore not without a cause kylled I thy Princes and Prestes of the Sanctuarye, whiche shoulde offer both for them selues and for the people. Hebr.vii. For no man lyuyng shalbe iustyfyed in my syght. Psal.cxliii. And the Aungels are not cleane before me. Job.iii.d. How moch lesse then wyll I spare this styffe necked & stordye people: But I wyll at tyme conuenient curse ỳ sonnes of Jacob after the flesh, which be out of kynde concernynge the spirite, so that they shalbe a curse amongest the Heathen: where as on the other syde, the true and leafull sonnes of Jacob shalbe the blessynge of all nacyons throwe Christe, in whō all the chosen shalbe blessed. Gene.xii.a Gala.iii.c. Vouchsafe, good reader, to reade the text with all: so shalt thou perceyue to whyche parte of the text, euerye parte of the note belongeth.

The.xlviij. Chapter.

Christ promyseth to restore hys churche, whyche he hath reiected. Idolatry & hardyng before rebuked, is yet confuted.

 O heare now, O Jacob my ser-uaunt, and Israel whom I haue chosen. For thus sayth the Lord that made the: fashioned the, and holpen the, euen from thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayed, O Jacob my seruaunt, thou righteous, whom I haue chosen.

choſen.a* ffor I ſhall poure water vpon the dre grounde and ryuers vpon the thurſtye. I ſhall poure my ſpirite vpon thy ſede, and myne encreaſe vpon thy ſtocke. They ſhall growe together, lyke as the graſſe, and as the Willes by the waters ſyde.b* One wyll ſaye: I am the Lordes. Another will call vnder the name of Jacob. The thyrde ſhall deſcryde wyth hys hande vnto the Lorde, and geue hym ſelfe vnder the name of Iſrael.

Moreouer, thus ſaith the Lorde ſpoken: euen the kynge of Iſrael, and his auenger, the Lorde of Hoſtes: I am ſ^t^ fyrſt & the laſt, and wyth out me is there no God. ffor what is he, that euer was lyke me, which am from euerlastinge? Let hym shewe hys name, and do where thorow he may be likened vnto me. Let him tell you forth planely thinges, that are paſt & for to come: yee and that without any feare or stoppe. ffor haue not I euer tolde you hytherto, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde youre ſelues. Is there any God excepte me? or any maker, that I ſhuld not knowe hym.

Wherfore all caruers of Idoles are but vayne, & their labour loſt. They muſt beare recorde them ſelues, that (ſeyng they came ne ther ſe nor vnderſtande) they ſhalbe confounded. Who ſhulde now make a God, or faſhion an Idole, that is profytable for nothynge? Beholde, all the felowſhippe of the muſt be brought to confuſyon. Let all the workemaſters of them come and ſtande together from amonge men: they muſt be abaſhed and confounded one wyth another. The ſmith taketh yron, and tempereth it with hoate coales, and faſhioneth it with hammers, and maketh it with all the ſtrength of his armes: yee ſometyme he is faynt for very hunger, & ſo thurſtye, that he hath no more power.c* The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh meat of the tymbre: & ſpardeth forth hys lyne: he maketh it with ſome coloure: he playneth it, he raſeth it, & ſquareth it, & maketh it after the ymage of a man, and accordynge to the bewtye of a man: that it maye ſtande in the temple.

Moreouer, he goeth oute to hewe downe Cedre trees: He bryngeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymbre of the wod. Or els the ffyre trees which he planted hym ſelf, & ſoch as the rayne hath ſwelled, wherbe wod ſerueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth him ſelfe with all: he maketh a fyre of it to bake bred. And afterwarde maketh a God there of, to honoure it: & an Idole to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with another he roſteth fleſh, & he maye eate roſte hys belyfull: wyth the thyrde he warmeth hym ſelf, & ſayeth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the reſydue he maketh hym a God, and an Idole for hym ſelfe. He kneleth before it, he worſhyppeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and ſayeth: Delyuer me, for thou art my God.

Yet men nether conſider nor vnderſtande, becauſe their eyes are ſtopped, that they can not ſe: and their hertes, that they cannot perceyue. They ponder not in their mynden, for they haue nether knowledge nor vnderſtandyng, to thynche thus: I haue brent one pece in the fyre: I haue baked bred with the coles there of, I haue roſted fleſh with all, & eaten it: ſhall I now of the reſydue make an abhominacyon, & fall downe before a rotten pece of wodd? The hepping of duſt, and foliſhneſſe of herte hath turned them a ſyde: ſo that none of them can haue a fre conſcience to thynche maye not I erre?

Conſyder this (O Jacob & Iſrael) for thou art my ſeruaunt. I haue made the, that thou myghteſt ſerue me. O Iſrael, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryue them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy ſynnes as the miſt. Turne the agayne vnto me, and I wyl deliuer the.

We glad ye heauens, whom the Lorde hath made, let al that is here beneth vpon ſ^t^ earth, be ioyfull. Reioyſe ye mountaynes & wodden, with all the trees that are in you: for the Lord ſhall redeme Jacob, & ſhewe his glory vpon Iſrael. ffor thus ſayth the Lorde thy redemer euen he that faſhioned the from thy mothers wombe: I am the Lorde, whiche do all thinges my ſelfe alone. I onlye haue ſpred oute the heauens and I only haue layde the foundacyon of the earth. I deſtroye the tokens of witches, and make the ſoth ſayers go wronge. As for the wyſe, I turne them backwarde, and make their connynge fooliſhneſſe.

But I ſet vp the purpoſe of my ſeruauntes, and fulfill.b* the councell of my meſſagers. I ſaye to Jeruſalem: turne agayne: And to the cyties of Juda, be ye buylded agayne: and I repayre their decayed places. I ſaye to the ground: be drie. And I dryе vp thy water floudes. I ſaye to Cyrus: thou art myne herd man: ſo that he ſhall fulfill all thinges after my will. I ſaye to Jeruſalem: be thou buylded, & to the temple: be thou faſt grounded.

The notes.

a* ffor I ſhall poure waters vpon the. & ꝛc. By the water and ryuers, vnderſtande the grace of God: and by the dre grounde and the thurſty, the gentyles and Heathen, which had not bene tylled and watered wyth the worde of God. Soche a lyke ſentẽce is there before in the .xliij.c. I wyll make ſtreates in the deſert. & ꝛc.

b* One wyll ſaye. ꝛc. As who ſhulde ſaye: here & there, and all the worlde ouer are there of the Lordes people, yee euen amonge ſt the Heathen.

c* Let the chylden learne note howe ſpuely the Prophete paynteth oute the vanitie of ymages. ffor it is to be feared that oure ſuperſtycyon, concernynge ſoch thinges, paſſeth and exceadeth the ſuperſticiõ of the Jewes. Ones impdent it is that the Jewes in oure tyme can in no

in no wyse be persuaded to become Christen, so long as we shall bowne & knele before ymages. Their answere is, that they and we both (yf we be of God) shulde in no condicyō do any thing that is openly & in so many places forbydde of god. The Turches & Saracenes also mock vs therfore. The honoure of God (saye they, & truely it is) ought we to seche, and to speke by his worde: & neither to adde therto nor take awaye, neither to swarue to the right hand or to the left: but earnestly to stande by that whych is commaunded, & for sake that which is forbydden. God graunte vs Christē a better trade & conuersacion of liuing, then that we shulde with oure exāple be an offence either to Jew or Saracene, and an occasiō to kepe thē from the fayth of Christe: And geue the symple, eyes to se & perceyue the falsheed of the suttell, whiche for lucre augment their blindnes, and exhort thē to soch superstycyō. So be it.

b* That is their preaching wher with they councell the people.

The .xlv. Chapter.

The deliuerāunce of the people by Cyrus. The ofspryng of Christ and callyng of the Gentyles.

1 THus sayeth the Lorde vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whom he ledeth by the right hande: that the people maye fal downe before hym: I will lowse the girdle of kynges: that they shall open the gates before thy face, & not to shut their doores. I wil go before the, & make the croked streyght I shall breake ỹ brasen doores, & burst ỹ yron barres. 3 I shall geue the the hyd treasure & the thinge which is secretly kepte: ỹ thou maiest knowe that I the God of Israel haue called the by thy name: & that for Jacob my seruauntes sake and for Israel my chosen. ffor I called the by thy name, & ordened the or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lorde, before whom there is none other: for without me, there is no God. I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me that it myght be knowne from the ryssyng of the sunne to the goyng downe of the same, that all is nothing without me. ffor I am the Lord, & there is els none. It is I that created the lyght and darckues, I make peace & trouble per euen I the Lorde do all these thinges. a* The heauens aboue shall droppe downe, & the cloudes shall rayne ryghtuousnes. The earth shall open it self, & bringe forth health, & therby shall ryghtuousnes florishe. Euen I the Lorde shall bringe it to passe.

9 Wo be vnto hym that chydeth with his maker, the potsherde with ỹ potter: Sayeth the clape to the potter: What makest thou? or thy worcke serueth for nothynge: Wo be vnto hym, ỹ sayeth to his father: Why begettest thou? And to hys mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the Lorde, euen the holy one & maker of Israel: Axkenne of thynges for to come, concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce, as touchyng the worckes of my handes: I haue made the earth, & created man vpon it. Wyth myne handes haue I spred forth heauen, and geuen a commaundmēt for all the host therof. I shall make hym by with ryghtuousnesse, & order all hys wayes. He shall buylde my cyte, and lett out my prisoners: and that neither for gyft nor rewardes, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes.

14 The Lord hath sayde moreouer: The occupiers of Egypte, the marchauntes of the Morians and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shalbe thyne, they shall folowe the, & go with chaynes vpon their fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacyon vnto ỹ. ffor God (without whō there is none other God) shall be with the. O how profunde art thou O God, thou God & Sauioure of Israel! Confounded be ye, and put to dishonour: go hence together with shame, all ye ỹ be worckmaysters of errour: (that is worshippers of Idols) But Israell shalbe saued in the Lorde, which is the euerlastinge saluacion: They shall not come to shame nor confusyon, worlde without ende.

17 ffor thus sayeth the Lorde: euen he ỹ created heauē, the God that made the earth, that fashioned it, & sett it forth: I haue not made it for naught, but I made it to be enhabited D Euen I the Lorde, wythout whom there is none other. I haue not spoke secretely, neither in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Jacob: seke me. I am ỹ Lord, which when I speake, declareth the thing that is ryghtuous & true. Let them be gathered and come together, sett them drawe nye hyther, that are escaped of the people: Haue they eny vnderstandynge, that set vp the stockes of their Idols, & praie vnto a God, that cannot helpe the? Let men drawe nye, let them come hyther, & take counsell one at another, and shewe forth: What is he, that tolde this before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynnynge? Haue not I the Lorde done it: wythout whom there is none other God: the true God and Sauioure, and there is els none but I? And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of ỹ earth) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is els none. I sweare by my selfe, out of my mouth commeth the worde of ryghteousnesse, and that maye no man turne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tunges shall sweare by me, sayinge: Verelye in the Lorde is my ryghteousnes and strenght. To hym shall men come: but all they that thynche scorne of hym, shalbe confounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustyfyed, and praysed in the Lorde.

This petycion doth the Lorde promes to per forme, saynge: Lucu. J the Lord shall bryng it to passe.

The .xlvii. Chapter.

Idolatrye is reproued. The bealed that cometh by Christ is prophecyed.

NEuertheles, a* Bell shall fall, and Nabo shalbe broke: whose ymages are a burthen for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make them weery. They shall synche downe, and fall together: for they maye not ease them of their burthen, therfore muste they go in to captyuyte.

Hethen vnto me, O house of Jacob, & all ye that remayne yet of the household of Israel: whom J haue borne frō youre mothers wombe, & brought you vp from your birth, tyll ye weere growen: J J whych shall beare you vnto youre laste age: J haue made you, J wyll also norysshe you, beare you and saue you. Whom wyll ye make me lyke, in fathōd or ymage, that J maye be lyke him? Ye fooles (no doute) wyll take out syluer & golde oute of youre purses, and weye it, and hyre a gold smith to make a God of it, ỳ men maye knele downe & worshippe it. Yet muste he be taken on mens shoulders & borne, & set in hys place that he maye stande and not moue. Alas that men shulde crye vnto hym, which geueth no answere: and delyuereth not the man that calleth vpon hym, from hys trouble.

Consyder this well, & be ashamed. b* Go in to youre owne selues (O ye transgressors.) Remember the thynges which are past, sence the begynnyng of ỳ worlde: that J am God, & that there is els no God, yee & that there is nothynge lyke vnto me. J in the beginning of a thynge, J shewe the ende therof: & J tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my counsell accōplyshed, & fulfylleth all my pleasure. J call a.c* byrde out of the East, & all that J take in hande, out of farre countrees, as soone as J cōmaunde, J bynge it hether: as soone as J thynche to deuyse a thynge, J do it.

Heare me, O ye ỳ are of an hye stomack, but farre frō ryghteousnesse. J shall bringe forth my ryghteousnesse. It is not farre, and my health shall not tarye longe awaye. J wyll laye health in Sion, and geue Israel my glorye.

The notes.

a* Bell and Nabo were Idoles of the Babylonians. These sayth the Prophete shalbe ouerthrowen by the hoste of Cyrus.

b* Go in to them selues, is, to take good aduysement and call to remembraunce.

c* He meaneth Cyrus, whych shulde come sodenly as a byrd flieth and destroye Babylon, and set the Israelytes at lybertye. He shulde fulfyll that whiche the Lorde had deuised & decreed. In him is figured Christe, whyche with the lyght of hys worde purgeth the whole world of errours and Idolatrye, and setteth the consciences at peace & lybertye. He sayth sodenly out of the east, that is, out of heuen: wherupon he is called the daye spryngē from on hye. Luc. i. g.

The .xlvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde against Babylon.

BVt as for the (O daughter thou virgin Babylō). a* Thou shalt sytt in the dust thou shalt sit vpō the grounde, & not in a trone (O thou mayde of Chalden.) Thou shalt no more be called tender and pleasaunt. Thou shalt bringe forth the. b* querne and grynd meele, put downe thy stomacher make bare thy knees & shalt wade thorow ỳ waters ryuers. Thy shame shalbe discouered, & thy reuenges shalbe sene. For J wyll auenge me of the, and no man shall lett me: sayeth oure redemer, which is called the Lorde of hoostes the holy one of Israel.

Sytt styll, holde thy tunge, & get the in to some darcke corner, O daughter Chalden, for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kyngdomes. J was so wroth with my people, ỳ J punished myne enheritaunce, & gaue them in to thy power. Neuertheles, thou shewedeste the no mercy, but euen the very aged men of the, dideste thou oppresse tyghe sore with thy yocke, & thou thoughteste thus. J shalbe lady for euer. And despyse all that, thou hast not regarded these thynges, nether cast, what shuld come after. Heare now therfore, thou wylful, ỳ sittest so carelesse, & speakest thus in thine herte: J am alone, & without me is there none J shall neuer be wydowe, nor desolate agayne. And yet both these thynges shall come to the vpō one daye in ỳ twynchlyng of an eye: Namely wyddowhead, & desolacyon. They shall mightely fall vpō the, for the multitude of thy witches, & for the greate heape of thy conniuers. For thou hast comforted thy selfe in thy dyscreatfulnes, and hast sayde: No man seyth me. Thyne owne wysdome & cunnyng hath deceyued the. Jn that thou hast sayde: J am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpō the, & thou shalt not knowe, from whence it shall aryse. Myschefe shal fall vpō the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodayne myserye shall come vpon the, or euer thou be aware.

Now go to thy conniuers, and to the multitude of thy witches (whom thou haste bene acquainted acquainted withall from thy youthe) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen the. Thou haste hytherto had manye counceils of them, to let the heauengasers & the beholders of starres come on now and delyuer the: yea & let them shewe, when these new thynges shal come vpon the. Beholde, they shalbe lyke strawe, whiche yf it be kindled with fyre, no mā may rydde it for the vehemence of the flame: And yet it geueth no synners to warme a man by, nor cleare fyre to sit by. Euen so shall they be vnto the whome thou haste vsed and occupied from thy youthe. Euery one shall shewe the hys erroneous waye, yet shall none of them delende the.

The notes.

a. To sit in the dust is, to be broughte lowe, to be poorely arayed & decked, to syt without pompe, and to fall from her estate and degre, as it is sayde Jona.iij.c. The Prophete here describeth the destruccion of Babylon vnder the figure of a proude queene: which was delicyously and tenderly brought vp, & after fell into extreame pouertye, myserye, and wretchednes.

b. He vnderstādeth by the queene, or (as some reade) myll: seruple, poore, and lyke estate and condicyon.

The.xlviij. Chapter.

The hypocrysie of the Jewes is reproued. The Lord alone wyll be worshipped, which hath chosen vs, and wroughte fauourably vs for his owne sake.

HEare this, O thou house of Jacob: ye that are called by the name of Jsrael, and are come oute of the stocke with Juda, whiche sweare by the name of the Lorde, & beare wytnesse by the God of Jsrael (but not with trueth & right) whiche are called fre men of the holye citie, as they that lohe for comforte in the God of Jsrael, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thinges that I shewed you ouer sence the beginninge: Haue I not broughte them to passe, immediatly as they came out of my mouthe, & declared them? And they are come. Howebeit I knewe that thou arte obstynate, & that thy neck hath a.an yron veyne, & that thy browe is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence the beginning shewed the of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to passe: that thou shouldest not saye: myne Idoll hathe done it, my carued or calte ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder all these thynges whether it was ye that prophecyed them? But as for me, I tolde the before at the beginning, new and secrete thinges that thou knewest not of. And some done nowe not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer hearedest, before they were broughte to passe, lest thou couldst not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some whereof thou haste neyther hearde nor knowne, neyther haue they be opened vnto thyne eares afore tyme, for I knewe that thou wouldest traitorously offende, therfore haue I called the a transgressour, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names sake, I haue withdrawe my wrath, and for myne honours sake I haue ouersene the, so that I haue not rooted the oute. b. Beholde I haue pourged the, & not for money. I haue chosen the in the fyre of powerte, And that onely for myne owne sake, for I geue myne honourre to none other, lest thou shouldest not despyse me. Herken vnto me O Jacob, and Jsrael whom I haue called I am euen he that is. I am the fyrst & the last. My hande is the foundacyon of the earthe, & my ryghte hande spanneth ouer the heauens. As sone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together, and herken: Whiche of youder goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde wyll no by the kyng of Babylon (whō he loueth & fauoureth) & by the Caldees his arme? I my self alone haue tolde you this before. Yea I shall call him and bringe his youth & geue him a prosperous iourneye. Come nye and heare this, haue I spoken ouye thynge darkelye sence the beginninge: when a thyng begynneth, I am there.

Wherfore the Lorde God with his spyrite hathe sent me, And thus sayeth the Lord God thyne auenger, the holye one of Jsrael: I am the Lorde thy God, whiche teache the profytable thynges, & leade the the waye, that thou shuldest go. Yf thou wilt now regarde my commaundement, thy welthynes shalbe as the water streame, and thy ryghteousnes as the waues flowynge in the sea. Thy sede shalbe lyke as the sande in the sea, and the frute of thy body, lyke the gravel stones therof. Thy name shal not be rooted oute, nor destroyed before me. Ye shall go awaye from Babylon, and escape the Caldees with a merye voyce. This shalbe spoken of, declared abroad, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, for that is sayde: The Lorde hathe delended his seruaunte Jacob, that they suffred no thurste, when they were wayted in the wyldernesse. He clauē the rockes a sonder, and the water gushed out. As for the vngodlye, they haue no peace, sayeth the Lorde.

The notes.

a. By this he meaneth that the people of Jsrael were stubborne, frowarde, rebellyous, vntractable, brutysh and shameles.

b. Some reade: Behold I haue purgyed the: but not as syluer: I haue chosen the oute of the fournesse of affliccion. For myne owne sake, for myne owne sake haue I done this: for lyke whoome wolde they pollute me: truelye I wyll not geue my glorye to anye other. Herken & ceter. The same expounde it thus. I wolde not suffer the wholye to perysshe: for yf I had proued and purgyed the as golde and syluer is proued and purgyed, from whiche all maner of dosse is cleansed, there shoulde nothyng haue remayned in the: verye fewe, ye none shoulde haue ben saued. But I brought the vnder, & proued the in the fourneffe of affliccion, that is, I wrapped the in captyuyte and bondage in Egypt, frō which I afterwarde delyuered the. And thys haue I done for myne owne sake, that is, onely for myne owne name and glorye, of myne owne gentylnes & louynge kyndnes, not for any of thy merytes and deseruynges, whyche were none at all. For how wolde the gentyles and heathen haue polluted, dispised and blaspheamed my name, yf I had rooted oute myne owne people, and to haue made the trueth of the promyses whyche I had determyned to fulfill in Christe, vayne and vntrue. For as wel this people of my trueth, as the glorye of the blessyng promysed in the seade of Abraham and Dauid, wyll I not geue vnto another people or nacyon. The health of the worde shal come of the Jewes. Joh. iiii. from none other. The glad tydinges of health shal the whole world receyue of no nother then of Christ, by the preachynge of the Apostles &c.

The. xlix. Chapter.

Christ shall gather together all nacyons be they neuer so farre of.

+ A Lso. Iles herken vnto me, & take he de ye people frō farre. The Lorde hath called me from my byrth, and made mencion of my name from my mothers wombe: & he hath made my mouth like a sharp swerd vnder the shadowe of hys hande hath he defended me, & hyd me in hys quyuer, as a good arowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou arte my seruaunt Israel, I wyll be honoured in the. Thē answered I: I shall lese my labour, I shall spende my strength in vayne. Neuertheles, I wyll committe my cause and my worcke vnto the Lorde my God. And now sayth he (Lord euen he that fashioned me from my mothers wombe to be his seruaunte, that I may bring Jacob agayne vnto him: howbeit, Israel wil not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose sight I am greate, whyche also is my Lorde my God and my strength. Let it be but a smal thynge, that thou arte my seruaunte, to set vp the kynredes of Jacob, & to restore the destruccyon of Israel: yf I make the not also the light of the Gētiles, that thou mayest be my helthe vnto the ende of the worlde.

‡ Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde the auenger and helper out of Israel, because of the abhorynge and despysynge amonge the Gentyles, concernynge the seruaunte of all them that beare rule: Kynges and princes shall se, and arise and worshippe, because of the Lord that he is sayth full: and because of the holpe one of Israell, which hath chosen the.

And thus sayth the Lorde: * In the tyme ‖ Cor. vi. a. Jerem. xv. a * Esay. xlii. a apointed wyll I be present with the. * And in the houre of healthe wyll I helpe the, and delyuer the. I wyll make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalte helpe vp the earthe agayne, and chalenge agayne the scatred herytages: That thou mayest say to the prisoners: go forth, & to them that are in darknesse: come into the lyght, that they may fede in the hye wayes, and get their lyuynge in all places. There shall neyther hunger nor thyrste, heate nor sunne hurte them. For he that fauoureth them, shall leade them, and geue them drynche of the springe welles. I wyll make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, & my hye pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shall come from farre: lo, some from the north and weste, some from the south. * Reioyce ye heauens, and springe prayse thou earthe: Calle of ioye ye hylles, for God wyll comforte hys people, and haue mercye vpon hys, that be in trouble. D

Esay. xxxvii. c

Then shal Sion say: * God hath forsake me, and the Lorde hath forgotten me. &c. Doth a wyfe forget the chylde of her wombe, & the sonne whom she hath borne? And though she do forget, yet wyll not I forget the. Beholde, I haue written the vp vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my sight. &. They that haue broken the downe, shall make haste to bilde the vp agayne: and they that made the waste, shall dwell in the. Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke aboute the: all these shall gather them together, and come to the. As truly as I lyue (saith the Lorde) thou shalte put them all vpon the, as an apparell, and gyrde them to the, as a bryde doth her Jewels. As for thy lande that lyeth desolate, wasted & destroyed: it shalbe to narowe for them, that shall dwell in it. And they that wolde deuoure the, shalbe farre awaye. &. Then the childe whom the baren shal bringe forth vnto the, shall saye in thyne eare: thys place is to narowe, sprede vs together, that I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thinche by thy self: Who hath begotte me these: seing I am baren & alone, a captyue & an oute cast? And who hath norysshed the vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these? E * Rom. xi. d F

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll stretch out myne hand to the Gentyles, and set vp my token to the people. They shal bring the thy sonnes in their lappes, and carye thy doughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kynges shalbe thy nourysshe fathers, and Quenes shalbe thy nourysshe mothers. They shall fall before the with their faces flat vpon the earth, and lycke vp the duste of thy fete: that thou mayest knowe, how that I am the Lord. * And no lo putteth his trust in me, shal not be confounded. Who spoyleth the gyaunte of hys praye? or who taketh the prisoner frō the mighty? And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: The prysoners shalbe taken from the gyaunte, & the spoyle delyuered from the vyolente: for I wil maintayne thy cause agaynste thyne aduersaryes, and saue thy sonnes. And wyl fede thyne enemyes with their owne flesshe, and make them drynche of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all flesshe shall knowe (O Jacob) that that I am the Lorde thy Sauioure & stronge auenger.

¶ The notes.

a. What Iles signifie, loke before in the .xlv.b

b. He hath made my mouthe like a sharpe swerde, that is. He hath geuen me the spirit of sharp & pithie speache, so that my woordes shall euen cut a sonder (as it were) the heertes of the chosen whiche heare me, and diuide the to repentaunce, and declare the offences of the wicked to be without excuse. This doeth the spirite of prophecye, and of true preaching of the worde. Apoca. xix.c.

c. Doth a wyfe forget the child of her wombe. &c. As who saye, naye: And no more will I do the.

d. That is to saye the Gentyles.

e. Some reade: yet shall the children of thy barrenesse saye in thyne eare &c. The meaning is, when thou arte moste baren, and hast lest of the faythfull in the (that is to saye, the xii. Apostles, and a fewe of theyr disciples, Jewes borne) by and by shalte thou heare a nayse, that there are increased to suche a noumber, that they shall not finde place sufficyent to dwell in. At the fyrste sermon of Peter were there increased thre thousande. Act. ii. g.

The.l. Chapter.

The Jewes are reproued, and old called.

A Thus saieth the Lorde: Where is the bill of your .s. mothers deuorcement, that I sente vnto her or who is the dettour (to whome I solde you? Beholde, for youre owne offences are ye solde: & because of youre transgression, is your mother forsaken. For why wolde no man receyue me, when I came and when I called, no man gaue me answere. Was my hande cleane shorten of, that it might not helpe? or had I not power to deliuer? Lo, B at a worde I driuche vp the sea, and of water flouddes I make drye lande: so that for want of water, the fysh corruppe and dye of thurst. As for heauen, I clothe it with darcknesse, & put a sacke vpon it.

The Lorde God hath geuen me a well learned tunge, so that I can comforte the whiche are troubled, yea & that in due season. He waked myne eare vp by tymes in the mornynge (as the scolemaisters do) that I myght herke. The Lord God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye naye, nor withdrawe my selfe, but I offre my backe vnto the smyters, C & myne cheekes to the noppers. I turne not my face from shame & spittynge, for the Lorde God helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face like a flynt stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusyon. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wyll then go with me to law? Let vs stande one agaynste another: yf there be any D yu wyll reason with me, let him come here faithy to me. Beholde the Lord God standeth by me, what is he that can condempne me? lo, they shalbe all lyke as an olde clothe, whiche the mothes shall eate vp.

Therfore who so feareth the Lorde among you let him heare the voyce of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in darcknesse, and no lyghte shyneth vpon him, let him hope in the Lord, and holde him by his God. But take heede, E ye haue all kindled a fyre, and gyrded youre selues with the flamme: Ye walke in the glistenyng of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kindled. This cometh vnto you from my hande, namely that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

¶ The notes.

A. God was not the cause why the congregation of the Jewes (whiche is vnderstande by mother, and was ouer his spouse) was diuorced and forsaken: but their owne offences dyuorced them, & was the cause why they were solde to the diuell and geuen ouer into the handes of the Gentyles, or Heathen, and sparpled amongest the Medyans, Persians, Babylonians, Grecians, & Romayns.

b. As who saieth youre selues haue kindled the fyre of my vengeaunce, with youre offences: I was no causer therof: ye must therfore suffer the punyshmente therto belongyng. For it commeth of youre owne deserte: that I so laye my hande vpon you and punyth you.

The li. Chapter.

Consolacyon and comforte is promysed vnto the faythfull.

Epist. for the 1. Friday in Aduent.

H Eken vnto me, ye that hold of righteousnes, ye that seke the Lord. Take hede vnto the stone wherout ye are hewen, and to the graue wherevnto ye are digged. Consyder Abraham youre father, & Sara that bare you: how that I called him alone & prospered him well, & encreased him: how the Lorde comforted Sion, and repayred all her decaye: makynge her delycte as a Paradyse, & her wyldernesse as the garden of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye was there, thanckesgeuynge and the voyce of prayse. Haue respecte vnto B me then, O my people, and laye thyne eare to me: for a lawe and an ordynaunce shall go forth from me, to lyghten the Gentyles. It is harde by, that my health & my righteousnesse shall go forthe, and the people shalbe ordered with myne arme.

The Ilandes (that is the Gentyles) shall hope in me, & put theyr trust in myne arme. Lyfte vp youre eyes towarde heauen, & looke vpon the earthe beneth. For the heauens shall vanysshe awaye lyke smoke, & the earthe shall weare lyke a clothe, & they that dwell therin, shall perysshe in lyke maner. But my healthe endureth for euer, & my righteousnes shall not ceasse. Therfore hearken vnto me, ye that C haue pleasure in righteousnes, thou people that beareste my lawe in thyne heart. Feare not the curse of men, be not afrayde of theyr blasphemies & reuylynges: for worme eate mothes that eate them vp lyke cloth and wol. But my ryghteousnesse shall endure for ever, & my sauinge health from generacion to gene racyon. Wake vp, wake vp, and be strong: O thou.a. arme of the Lorde: wake vp, lyke as in tymes paste, euer and sence the worlde beganne.

Arte not thou he, that hast wounded that proude lucyfer, & hewen the dragon in peces? Arte not thou euen he, whiche hast dryed vp the depe of the sea, whiche hast made playne the sea grounde, that the delyuered myght go thorow? That the redemed of the Lord, which turned agayne, myght come with ioye vnto Syon, there to endure for ever? That mirthe and gladnesse might be with them, that sorow & wo myght flee from them? Yea I, I am euē he, that in all thynges geueth you consolacō. What arte thou thē, that feareste a mortal mā, the chylde of man, whiche goeth away as doeth the flowre? And forgetteste the Lord that made the, that spred oute the heauens, & layde the foundacyon of the earthe. But thou arte euer afrayde for the spyght of thyne oppressour which is ready to do harme: Where is the wrath of the oppressour? It commeth on fast & maketh haste to apeare: It shall not perysh, that it shulde not be able to dell rope, neyther shall it lacke for fawte of nourishyng. I am the Lorde thy God, that make the sea to be styll, & to rage: whose name is the Lorde of hoostes. I shall put my worde alsom thy mouth, & defende the with the rurnynge of my hande: that thou mayest plante the heauens, and laye the foundacyons of the earth, and saye vnto Syon: thou arte my people.

Awake, awake, and stande vp, O Jerusalem, thou that from the hande of the Lorde, hast dronchen oute the .b. cuppe of hys wrath, thou that hast supped of, and sucked oute the stombynge cuppe to the bottome. For amōge all the sonnes whome thou hast begotten, there is not one that maye holde the vp: and not one to leade the by the hande, of al the sonnes that thou hast nourished. Both these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sorye for it: Yea, destruccyon, wastynge, hunger, & swerde: but who hath consoled the? Thy sonnes lye comfortles at the heade of euery strete lyke a tabru wrestion, and are full of the terryble wrath of the Lorde, & punyshmente of thy God. And therfore (thou miserable & dronche (thowbe it not with wyne) heare this: Thus sayth thy Lorde, thy Lorde & God, the defender of his people: Beholde, I wyll take the fro hynge cuppe oute of thy hande, euen ye cuppe with the dregges of my wrathe: that fro hence forthe thou shalt neuer dronche it more, & wyll put it in theyr hande that troubled the: whiche haue spoke to thy soule: stoupe downe, that we maye go ouer the: make thy body euen with the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

The notes.

a. The arme of the Lorde here sygnifyeth Christe, and the redempcyon of the worlde and the puttynge awaye of errours, that commeth by hym. For this prayeth the Prophet that it maye come.

The.lij. Chapter.

A consolacyon & comforte to the people of God.

VPon vp, take thy strength vnto the: put on thyne honeste rayment O Jerusalem, thou cite of the holye one. For from thys tyme forthe, there shall no vncyrcumcysed nor vncleane person come in the. Shake the from the dust, aryse and stand vp, O Jerusalem. Plucke oute thy necke frō the bonde, O thou captyue doughter Syon. For thus sayth the Lorde: ye are solde for naught, therfor shal ye be redemed also without auye monaye.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: My people wente downe afore tyme into Egypte, there to be straungers. Afterwarde dyd the kynge of the Assyrians oppresse them, for naughte. And nowe what profyt is it to me (sayeth the Lorde) that my people is frely carped awaye, & brought into heuynes by theyr rulers, and my.a. name euer styll blasphemed? sayth the Lorde. But that my people maye knowe my name, I my selfe will speache in that daye. Behold, here am I. O howe beutyfull are the fete of the Embassyatour, that bryngeth the message from the mountaine, and proclameth peace, that bringeth the good tydynges, and preacheth health, and sayeth vnto Syon. Thy God is the kynge. Thy watchemen shall lyft vp theyr voyce with loude voyce shall they preache of him: for they shall se him parfectly, when the Lorde shall come agayne to Syon.

Be glad, O thou desolate Jerusalem, and reioyce together, for the Lorde wyll comforte hys people, he wyll delyuer Jerusalem. The Lorde wyl make bare.b. hys holye arme, and shewe it forthe in the sight of al the Gentyls, & all the endes of the earthe shall se the sauing healthe of oure God. Awaye, awaye, get you oute from thence, and touche no vncleane thyg. Go oute from amonge suche. And be cleane, ye that beare the.c. vessell of the Lorde. But ye shall not go oute with sedicion, nor make hast as they that fle awaye: for the Lord shall go before you, and the God of Israel shal kepe the watche.

Beholde, my seruaunt shall deale wyselye, therfore shall he be magnyfyed, exalted and greatly honoured. Lyke as the multitude shal wonder vpō hym, because.b. his face shalbe so deformed & not as a mans face, & hys beautye lyke no mans: Euen so shall the multitude of y Gentyles loke vnto hym, & the kinges shall shut theyr mouthes before hym. For they that haue not bene tolde of hym, shall se hym, and they

they that heard nothynge of hym, shall beholde hym.

b. Hys holye arme (for the ayde and help that is done by hys holy worde. It wyll the Lorde make bare, that is ope & declare & geue the beleue therof to all the Gentyles and Heathen, not onelye to the Jewes. Psal.xcviii.a. Some reade: The Lorde hath made bare the arme of hys holy one. & they understande thereby the strength, power and vertu of Christe.

c That is to wete, after the Chald. the vessell that was borne into Babylon and broughte from thence agayne. Some reade Hermes. They understande thereby the lawe, and the goodnes & mercy of God. Howe & what barnes the Christen shulde beare (for vnto vs is it spoken as well as vnto the Jewes) doth S. Paule teache vs in the pistle to the Ephesians the.vi. Chapter.c.

d His face shalbe so deformed & not as a mans face. &c. That is, Hys bylage shalbe more deformed then other mens: and hys beuty shall be more then the beautye of the sonnes of me. The whole sentence meaneth, that many me shalbe astonyed when they shall se Christ ouer layd vpon (which was ordeyned beforsell before all the sonnes of men. Psalm.xlv.a) also wicked ly and spoyleuly intreated of the Jewes: spit vpon, charged, crowned with thorne) and all be bloudyed: yea and greatlyer humbled, contemned and despysed, then euer was any mortall man.

+ Rom.x.c Joan.xii.f

WHo wyll geue credence vnto oure preachynge? Or to whome is the arme of the Lorde knowne? He shall growe before the Lorde lyke as a braunche, and as a rote in a drye grounde, he shall haue neither beautye nor fauoure. When we loke vpō him there shalbe no fayrenesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. He shalbe the most symple, and despysed of all, which yet hath good experience of sorowes & infyrmyties. We shall rekē him so symple and so vyle, that we shall hyde our faces from hym. Howbeit (of a truth) he only taketh away oure infyrmyties, and beareth our payne: Yet we shal iudge him, as though he were plaged & caste doune of God: where as he (notwithstanding) shal be wounded for oure offences, & smytten for oure wickednes. For the payne of oure punyshmente shalbe layde vpon hym, and with hys stripes shall we be healed.

c As for vs, we go all astraye (lyke sheepe) euery one a turneth hys owne waye. But the Lorde hym, the Lorde pardoneth all oure synnes. He shall be payned & troubled, and shall not open his mouth. He shalbe led as a sheepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as styll as a lambe before the shearer, and not open hys mouthe. He shall be had away, hys cause not hearde, & without any iudgement: Whose generacion yet no man maye number, when he shalbe cut of from the b grounde of the lyuynge: Vnto whom punishment shall go vpon him, for the transgression of my people. His graue shalbe geuen hym with the condempned, & hys tombe with the theues. Where as he dyd neuer vyolence nor wrought, neyther had there bene any deceytfulnesse in hys mouth.

Yet hath it pleased the Lorde to smyte him with infirmite, that when he had made hys soule an offrynge for synne, he myght se longe lasting seed. And this desyre of the Lord shall prosper in hys hande. With trauayle and labour of hys soule, shall he obtayne great ryches. Hys righteous seruaunte shall with hys wysdome iustifye & deliuer the multitude, for he shal beare away their synnes. Therfore wyll I geue him the multitude for hys parte, and he shall deuyde the strange spoyle because he shall geue ouer hys soule to death, & shalbe reckened amonge the transgressours, which neuertheles shall take away the synnes of the multytude, and make intercessyon for the mysdoers.

Of the great dominion of Christe. The vnthankfulnesse of God conuerteth not a whole people, but hys mercy is euerlastynge.

REioyce therfore be glad now, thou barē that beareste not. Reioyce, synge, and be merye, thou that arte not with childe. For the desolate hath mo children, then the maried wife sayeth the Lorde. Make thy tente wyder, and spreade out the hangynges of thyne habytacion: spare not, laye forth thy coardes, and make fast thy stakes, for thou shalt breake oute on the ryght syde and on the left, & thy sede shall haue the Gentyles in possessyon, & dwell in the desolate cities. Feare not, for thou shalte not be confounded: Be not ashamed, for thou shalt not come in confusyon. Yea thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remembre the dishonoure of thy widowhode. For he that made the, shalbe thy Lorde & husband (whose name is the Lorde of hoostes) & thyne auenger shalbe euen the holy one of Israel, the Lorde of the whole worlde. The. lvi. Chapter.

An exhortacyon to iudgement & righteousnes, and to the spirituall kepyng of the Sabboth. Against Obstynate that devoure their flock.

THus sayth the Lord Kepe equi- A tye, and do ryght, for my saluing health shal come shortly, & my righteousnes shalbe opened.
Blessed is the man that doth this & the mans chylde which keepeth the same. Se that taketh hede, that he vnhalow not ỹ Sab-both (that is) he that kepeth him self that he do no evyll. Then shall not the straunger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, saye: Alas the Lorde hath shut me cleane oute from his people. Nether shall the gelded man saye lo, I am a dry tre. For thus sayeth the Lorde, vnto the B gelded that kepeth my Sabboth: Namelye: ỹ holdeth greatly of the thynge that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaunte: Vnto them will I geue in my housholde and within my walles, a better herytage' and name then of they had bene called sonnes and doughters. I will geue them an everlastynge name, that shall not perysshe. Agayne, he sayeth vnto the straungers that are disposed to speke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to love hys name: C That they shalbe no bonde men. And all they whyche

whiche kepe them selues, that they wathalowe not the Sabboth, namely that they fulfil my cournaunt. Then will I bringe to my holye mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offeringes & sacrifyces shalbe accepted upon mine aulter, for my house shalbe an house of prayer for all people.

D Thus sayeth the Lorde God whiche gathered together the scatred of Israel: I wil bring yet another congregacion to him. All the beastes of the felde, and all the beastes of the wood shal come to deuoure hym. For hys.a.watchmen are al blind, they haue altogether no vnderstandyng, they are al domme dogges, not beyng able to barcke, they are sleepy: slogish are they, & lye snortynge: they are shameleße dogges, that be neuer satisfyed. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandyng but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnes with all hys power. Come (saye they) I wil fetche wyne, so shall we fyll oure selues, that we maye be dronchen. And to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea and much more.

The notes.

a. By these blynde watchmen, vnderstande the chefe Priestes, the Scribes, and Pharises &c. whyche were the peruerters and depraues of the law of God. These for enyuy lukers take abolished the true seruyce of God: and were the chefe causers of the forsakinge of Israel. They were slouggishe, and sought not that whiche was for the edifycacyon of the people, and for the glorye of God: but that whiche was for their owne priuate profyt & pleasure. They were slouthful to rote out vice and to plante vertue, and disporn in to the profounde and depe steape of ignoraunce, of Idylnesse, of lecherousnesse, and of pryde. As oft as the Prelates of the people, Bysshoppes, Abbates, and they that exaunte them selues, for religyous be suche: there hangeth a great scourg ouer the whole flock of Chryst.

The.lvii. Chapter.

The Iewes are rebuked for their vnkynde dealynge to Christ.

A BVt in the meane season the righteous perysheth, and no man regardeth it in his herte. Good godly people are taken awaye, and woman consyderth it. Same lye: that the righteous is remoued awaye thy rowe the wicked, that he hym selfe myght be in rest, lye quietly vpon his bed, & lyue after his owne pleasure. Come hyther therfore ye charmers children, * ye sonnes of the aduoutrer & the whore: Wherin take ye your pleasure? Vpon whom gape ye with your mouth and blare out your tonge? Are ye not children of aduoutry, and a sede of dissimulacion? Ye take youre pleasure vnder the okes, and vnder all grene trees, the childe beyng slayne in the valleys, and dennes of stone. Thy part shalbe with the stony rocke & by ryuer. Yea euē these shalbe thy part. For there thou hast poured meat and drinke offeringes vnto the. Shoulde I ouerle that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thither, and there hast thou slayne sacrifyces. Behinde the doores and postes, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce.

Ephes.5.d.

When thou haddest discouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wentest downe & made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou hadest caused the ertaynes of yonder Idole, & inwardest their couches, where thou sauerest the. Thou wentest streyght to kinges with oyle & diuerse oyntmentes (that is) thou hast sente thy messaungers farre of, and yet are thou fallen into the pyt therby. Thou hast had trouble for the multitude of thine owne waies, yet sayedest thou neuer: I will leaue of. Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) of thy selfe, & therfore thou beleuest not that thou art sycke. For whē wilt thou be abashed or fear synge: thou hast broken thy promise, and remembrest not me, nether hast me in thyne herte. Thou beholdest, that I also will holde my peace (as a fast tyme) that thou fearest me not? Prayse trip I wil declare thy goodnes and thy workes, but they shal not profyt that when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape deliuer the. But the winde shall take them al away, & carye them into the ayre. Neuertheles, they that put there trust in me, shal inherit the lande, and haue my holy hill in possession.

Thou thinkest to haue lyfe.

Jeremi.5.b. Deut.xxxii.b

D And therfore thus he sayeth: Make ready, make ready, & clense the streete, take vp what ye can out of the waye that leadeth to my people. For thus sayeth the hye and excellent, and he that dwelleth in euerlastinge nesse, whose name is the holy one. * I dwell hye about & in the sanctuary, and with him also, that is of a contrite & humble spirite: that I maye healp a troubled mind, & a contrite herte. For I chyde not euer, & am not wroth without ende. But the blastinge goeth from me, though I make the breath. I am wroth with him for his couetousnes and lust, I smyte him, I hyde me, and am angry, when he turneth him selfe, & so goeth the by the waye of his owne herte. But yf I maye se his right way again, I make hym whole, I lede him and restore him vnto them, whome he maketh ioyfull, and that were large for him. I make the frutes of thankesgiuynge. I geue peace vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nye, sayeth I the Lorde, that make hym whole. But the wycked are lyke the rayenyng sea, that is not rest, whose water foameth with the myre and grauel. And so the wycked haue no peace, saith my God.

Psalm.l.b. Esa.lvii.a. For I chyde not euer.

The.lviii. Chapter.

The Lorde the mouth of the Prophete reproueth the people for two faultes, whereof most rose of hypocrysye.

Cry therfore crye now, as loude as thou canst. Leaue not of, lyft vp thy voyce like a trompet, and shewe my people their offences, Ephes.5.a. Jerem.xxxi.

and the house of Jacob their synnes. For they seke me daylye and wyll knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that did right & had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue with me concerninge right iudgement, and wil plete at the lawe with their God. Wherfore (all we (saye they) and thou seest it not: we put oure sowles to straytnesse, & thou regardest it not?

Beholde, when ye a. fast, your lust remayneth still: for ye do no lesse violence to youre debtours: ye fast to stryfe and debate, and to smite hym with youre fyst that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not (as now tyme) that your voyce might be heard aboue. Thynche ye this fast pleaseth me, that a man shoulde chastyn hym self for a daye, and to wythe his head aboute lyke an hoke in an heayre cloth, and to lye vpon the earth? Shoulde that be called fastyng, or a daye that pleaseth the Lord. But this fastyng pleaseth not me, tyl the tyme be thou louse hym out of bondage, that is my dayinger: that thou brake the ooth of wicked bargennes, that thou let the oppressed go fre and take from them all maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, tyll thou deale thy breade to the hungry, and bringe the poore fatherlesse home into thy house, when thou seyste the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne owne flesshe.

Then shall thy lighte breake forthe as the morninge, and thy healthe florysshe ryghte shortly: thy righteousnesse shall go before the, and the glorye of the Lorde shall embrace the.

Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answere the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye: here I am. Yea, yf thou lyfest awaye thy burthens, and holdest thy fingers, and ceasest from blasphemous talkinge, yf thou hast compassyon vpon thy hongrye, and refreshest the troubled soule: Then shall thy lighte springe vnto in the darcknesse, and thy darknesse shalbe as the noone day. The Lord shal euer be thy gyde, and satisfye the desire of thyne herte, and fyl thy bones with marye. Thou shalt be like a freshe watred garden, and lyke the fountayne of water, that neuer leaueth runninge. Then the places that haue ouer bene waste, shalbe buylded of the: there shalt thou lay a foundacion for many kinredes: thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, and the buylder againe of the waye of the Sabboth.

Yea yf thou turne thy fote from the Sabboth, so that thou do not the thynge whyche pleaseth thy selfe in my holy daye: then shalte thou be called vnto the pleasaunt, holy, & glorious Sabboth of the Lorde, where thou shalt be in honoure: so that thou do not after thyne owne ymagination, neyther lyke thyne owne wyll, nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the lord whyche shal cary the aboue the earthe, & fede the with the herytage of Jacob thy father: for the lordes owne mouthe hathe so promised.

The notes.

a. This fast remayneth yet amonge the Children, for true chastenyng of the body & abstayning frō vice wil we get neyther vnderstande nor heare of: but still thynche with the Jewes bothe that we do God a great pleasure when we fast, and also that we then faste, whē we abstayne from one thing, and fyl oure bellyes with another. And verily in thys thing doth oure superstition expyde the superstycyon of the Jewes. For we neuer reade that they euer toke it for a fast to abstayne from flesh, & eate ether fysshe or whit meate (as they call it.)

The.lix. Chapter.

¶ The Lorde is myghtye to saue, and ready to heare oure requestes.

Beholde, the Lordes hand is not so shortened, that it can not helpe, neyther is his eare so stopped, that it maye not heare. But youre mysdedes haue separated you from youre God, and youre synnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. For your handes are defiled with blood and youre fyngers with vnrygh teousnesse. Youre lippes speake lesynges, and your tong setteth out wickednes. Noman regardeth righteousnes, and noman iudged truely. Euery man hopeth in vayne thinges, and ymagyneth vnryghte, conceyueth wickednesse, and bringeth forth vayne. They a. hatche cockatrice egges, and weue the spyders webbe. b. Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. c. But yf one treade vpon them, there commeth vp a serpēt. d. Their webbe maketh no clothe and they maye not couer them with their labours. e. Their dedes are the dedes of wickednes, and the woork of robbery is in their hāds: Their fete runne to euyll, & they make haste to shed innocent blonde. Their counsels are wycked counsel, harme and destruccion are in their wayes. But the way of peace they know not. In their goinge is no equite, their wayes are so croked, that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth nothinge of peace.

And this is the cause that equyte is so far from vs, and that righteousnes cōmeth not nye vs. We loke for light, but it is darcknesse: for the morninge shyne, lo we walke in the darcke. We grope like the blinde vpon the wal, we grope euen as one y hath none eyes. We stomble at the none daye, as thoughe it were toward night, in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe deade. We roare all lyke Beeres, and mourne still like doues. We loke for equyte, but there is none: for healthe, but it is farre from vs. For oure offences are many before the, and oure synnes testifie against vs. Yea we must confesse y we offende, and knowledge that we do amysse: Namely transgresse and dissemble against the Lorde, and fall awaye from oure God:

vlinge presumptuous and traperous ymagi nacions, and cast puge false matters in oute hertes. And therfore is equite gone a syde, & rghteousnes standeth farre of: truthe is fal len doune in the strete, and the thinge that is playne and open, maye not be shewed. Yea, the truth is layde in parson, and he that re frai neth him selfe from evyl, must be spoyled.

When the Lorde sawe this, it displeased him sore, that there was no where any equite. He sawe also, that there was noman, whiche had pitie therof, or was greved at it. And he helde him by his owne power, and cleved to his owne rghte cousnes. & he put rghteous nes vpon him for a brest plate, and set the helmet of health vpō his heade. He put on wrath steade of clothinge, and tooke gelousye aboute hym for a clobe (sayde he as when a man goeth forth wrothfully to recompence his enemies, and to be auenged of his aduersaryes.) Namely that he might recompence and rewarde the Ilandes, where thoroughe the name of the Lorde might be feared, from the rysynge of the Sonne: and his magesty, vnto the gouge doune of the same.

Esay.lvi.b. 1.Thessa.v.b.

For he shall come as a violent water-streame, whyche the winde of the Lorde hath moued. But vnto Sion there shall come a re-deemer, and vnto them in Jacob that turne frō wyckednesse, sayeth the Lorde. I will make this couenaunt with them (sayeth the Lorde) My spirite that is come vpon the, and the wordes whyche I have put in thy mouthe, shall neuer go out of thy mouthe, nor oute of the mouth of thy childern & childrē, from this tyme forth for euermore.

Psal.cxiii.a. Rom.xi.b.

The notes.

a. To brede cockatrycr eggres, is, to go about that which is mischeuous and wycked. And to weue spyders web, is, to go about vaine and trayflynge thinges, whiche are of no valure: although they frame neuer so excellent vnto the doores.

b. As he that eateth of a cockatryce egge dieth so they that delite in evyl workes, or that consent vnto them, shall perysshe.

c. And yf a man at vnwares treade on their eggesor so passe out the cockatryce & be touched, he shalbe kylled of her: euen so shall the thoughtes of the evyl bring them to deathe.

d. As noman maketh clothes of the spyders webbe, so shall wycked workes eueryche no man, nor profyt him on the daye of iudgement, when we must go in vnto the feaste in the weddynge garment. Matth. xxii. b.

The text sayeth that their deades are the deades of robbery, because they helpe nought vnto their handes. But do rather robbe and begile the poore so are they without charitie, yea so lacke they not what charitie requyreth on the.

The.lx. Chapter.

¶ Christ vpon and comforteth Jerusalem.

ARise therfore get the vp by tymes, for thy lyght cometh, and the glorye of the Lorde shall ryse vp vpon the. For lo, whyle the darcknesse and cloude couered the earth and the people, the Lorde shal shewe the lyght, and his glorye shalbe seene in the. The Gentyles shal come to thy light, & kynges to the brightnes that springeth forth vpō the. Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke rounde aboute the: All these gather them selues, and come to the. Sonnes shal come vnto the from farre, and doughters shal gather them selues to the on every syde. When thou seyst this, thou shalt marueyle exceadingly, and thyne hert shal be opened: when the power of the sea shalbe conuerted vnto the (that is) when the strength of the Gentyles shall come vnto the. The multitude of Camels shall couer the, the dromedaries of Madian and Epha. All they of Saba shal come, bringinge golde and incense, and shewinge the prayse of the Lorde. All the catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, the rammes of Nabaioth shall serue the, to be offred vpon myne aulter, whiche I have chosen, and in the house of my glorye, whiche I have garnysshed. a. But what are these that flie here like the cloudes, and as the doues flynge to their wyndowes?

The Iles also shall gather them vnto me, and specially the shippes of the sea that they may bringe the sonnes from farre, and their syluer and their goulde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holye one of Israel, that hath glorifyed the. Straungers shall buylde vp thy walles, and their kinges shall do thy seruice. For when I am angrie, I smyte the: & when it pleaseth me, I pardon the. The gates shall stande open stil both daye and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the hoste of the Gentyles may come, and that their kinges may be brought vnto the. For euery people & kingedom that serueth not the, shal perysh, and be destroyed with the sworde. The glorye of Libanus shall come vnto the. b. Fyre trees, Boxes and Cedres toge-ther, to garnish the place of my Sanctuarye, for I will glorifie the place of my fete.

Moreouer those shall come lowlinge vnto the, that have vexed the: and all they that despised the, shal fall doune at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cite of the Lorde, the holye Sion of Israel. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated, so that noman went thoroughe the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and ioyfull thoroughe oute all posterities. Thou shalt sucke the mylke of the Gentyles, and kinges breestes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde am thy Sauyour and defender, the mightye one of Jacob. For brasse, will I geue the golde, and for yron syluer: for wood brasse, & for stones yron. I will make peace thy ruler, and rghteousnes thyne officer. Violence and robbery shall neuer be heard of in thy land, neither harme and destruccion within thy borders. The walles shalbe called healthe, and thy gate the prayse of God. * The Sunne shall neuer be thy day light, and the light of the Mone shal neuer shyne vnto the, but the Lorde hym selfe shalbe thyne euerlasting light, and thy God shalbe thy glory.

Apoc.xxi.g.

* Thy Sunne shall neuer go downe, & thy Mone shal not be taken awaye, for the Lorde hym selfe shalbe thy euerlast ynge light, & thy sorowfull dayes shalbe rewarded the. Thy people shalbe all godly, and possesse the land for euer: the floure of my plantinge, y worcke of my handes, wherof I will reioyce. The poungest and leest shall growe into a thousande, and the symplest into a strong people. I the Lorde shall shortly bringe this thinge to passe in hys tyme.

Apoc.xxij.b.

The notes.

a. In these wordes is the readynes and promptenes of them that obeye the worde of God declared. As though he should saye: Turn as fast as the cloudes come & go, and as swyftly as doues flye to their nest so roundly will the faythfull leane all, and couple them selues to the churche, at the voyce of Christ and of his teachers.

b. By the fayre trees and suche lyke are signifyed Princes & rulers that gouerne the people, as before in the .xx. As who shoulde saye: euen y most excellent me shalbe adioyned vnto the churche, and helpe maruche to the fourthe rance therof.

The.lxi. Chapter.

The prophecyeth that Christ shalbe annoynted, and sent to preache.

THe spirite of the Lorde God is with me, for the Lorde hath annoynted me, & sent me, to preache good tydinges vnto the poore, that I myght binde vp the wounded hertes, that I myght preach deliueraunce to the captyue, and open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable yeare of the Lorde, and the daye of the vengeaunce of oure God: that I myght comforte al them that are in heauynesse, that I might geue vnto them that mourne in Sion beawtye in the stede of ashes, ioyful oyntment for sorowing, pleasaunt rayment for an heauy mynde: That they might be called excellente in righteousnesse, a plantinge of the Lorde for hym to reioyce in.

They shal builde the longe roughe wylderues, and set vp the olde desolate. They shal repayre the waste places, & such as haue bene vnpeopled thrown out many generacions. Straungers shall stande and fede your cattel, and the Alyauntes shalbe your plowmen and vynerers. But ye shalbe named the priestes of the lord, & men shall call you the seruauntes of oure God. Ye shall enioye the goodes of the Gentiles and triumphe in their subtilnesse. For your greate reproffe & shame, shall they haue ioy y ye may haue parte with them. For they shall haue double possession in their lande, & euerlastinge ioy shalbe with them. For I the Lorde, whiche loue righte and hate robberye (though it were offred me) shal make their workes of faythfulnes, and make an euerlastinge couenaunt with them.

Their sede also and their generacion shalbe knowne amonge the Gentiles, and amoge the people. All they that se them, shal knowe that they are the hye blessed sede of the Lord.

And therfore I am ioyful in the Lorde, and my soule reioyceth in my God. For he shall put vpon me the.a. garment of healthe, & couere me with the mantle of righteousnes. So shall the Lorde God cause righteousnesse, and the feare of God to flourishe before all the Heathen.

The notes.

a The garment of healthe is sayth that worketh charitie, whiche is called the weddinge garment Matth.xxij.b. This garment (sayth the Prophete) shal Christ put vpō the church. The.xlviij. Chapter.

Of the redemption promysed to the people.

a WHat is he this, that cometh frō Edom, with stayned read clothes of Bosra: (whyche is so costly cloth) and cometh in so nimbly wyth all his strength: I am he that teacheth rygh teousnes, and am of power to helpe. Wherfore then is thy clothinge reade, and thy rayment lyke hym that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue troden the presse my selfe alone, and of al people, there was not one with me. Thus haue I troden doune myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacyon. And their blonde sprange vpon my clothes, and so haue I stayned al my raiment. For the day of vengeaunce that I haue taken in hande, and the yeare of my delyuerance is come. I lohed about me, and there was noman to shewe me any helpe, I fell doune, & no man helde me vp. Then I held me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse sustayned me: and thus haue I troden doune the people in my wrath, and bathed them in my displeasure: In so muche that I haue shed their blonde vpon the earth.

I haue troden the presse.

b I wyl declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the great good that he hath done for Israel: whyche he hath geuen them of his owne fauoure, and accordynge to the multytude of his louynge kyndnesses. For he sayde: They are no doute wylde my people and no vnchrystyan children, and so he was their sauioure. In their troubles he forsoke them not, but the aungel that went forthe frō his presence delyuered them. Of very loue & kindnesse that he had vnto them, redemed he them. He hath bonne them, and carryed them vp euer, sence the worlde begaune. But after c they prouoked him to wrath, and dered his holy mynd, he was their enemye, and fought against them him selfe. Yet remembred he the olde tyme of Moses and his people: How he brought them from the water of the sea, as a shepeide doth wyth his shepe: how he had geuen his holy spyryte amonge them: howe he had led Moses by the ryght hande with his glorious arme: how he had deuided the water before them (whereby he got him selfe an euerlasting name) how he led them in the depe as an horse is led in the playne, that they shoulde not stomble. The spirite of the Lorde led them, as a tame beast goeth in the feide.

Thus (O God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name wyth all.

D * Loke doune then from heauen, and beholde the dwellinge place of thy sanctuary and thy glorye: how is it, that they grudge, thy strength the multitude of thy mercyes, & thy louynge kyndnesse, will not be entreated of hē. Yet art thou oure father: For Abraham knoweth hē not, neither is Israel acquainted with vs. But thou Lorde art oure father and redemer and thy name is euerlastinge. O Lord wherefore hast thou led vs out of thy wayes: wherefore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generacyō of thine heritage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuarye in possession, for oure enemies haue taken it in. And we are become euen as we were from the begynnynge: but thou art not their Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

gaue me answere: when I spake, ye herkened

The. lxv. Chapter.

Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Be-holde, my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue honger. Beholde, my seruauntes shall drynke, but ye shall suffre thurste. Beholde my seruauntes shalbe merry, but ye shalbe

the Lorde shall slay you, and cal his seruaun-earthe shall reioyse in the true God. And newe earthe. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thought vpō, nor kept in minde: but men shalbe glad and ioyfull for euermore, for the thinges, that I shall do.

For why: Beholde, I shal make Jeruſalem ioyfull D & Jerusalem, yea and my selfe wyll reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And the voyce of weppynge and waylynge shall not be heard in her from thence forth.b. There shal neuer be chylde, nor olde man, that haue not their full dayes. But when the childe cometh to an hundreth yeare olde, it shall dye,
b. And yf he that is an hundreth yeare of age do wronge, he shalbe cursed. They shall buylde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plante vynyardes, and eate the frute

possesse: they shall not plante, and another eate. But the lyfe of my people shalbe lyke a tree, and so shall the worcke of their han-des.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shal not labour in vayne, nor beget with trouble, for they that are the lyke blessed sede of the Lord, and their frutes with them. And it shalbe, that or euer they call, I shall answere them.
While they are yet but thynckinge howe to speake, I shal heare them. c. The wolfe and the lambe shall fede togyther, and the lyon shall eate hay lyke the bullocke. d. But earthe shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal nomā hurte nor slaye another, in al my holy hyll, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The notes.

a. God is counted to repent, when the people followeth his minde and wyll, and that he therfore doeth them good, and geueth them his benefytes. A like sayinge haue ye in Jeremi.xxxvi.g. I will haue a lust and pleasure to do them good, &c.

b. There shal neither be childe nor olde man.
&c. The meaninge is: There shal no man be desired in the hoyse hope of this mortal lyfe.
They that be but rype of age, that haue professed faythe and holy workes, and that loue not this present lyfe, shal thynke them selues olde ynough. And that for the contem-placion

they knowe right well shalbe muche better.

c. Some reade: he shalbe counted youngo.

d. And yf he that is an hundreth yeare of age, &c. The Prophete meaneth herby that although he the wicked come to an exceadinge great age, yet thinche they that they haue not liued ynoughe, so shall their damnacion be the greater.

e. The wolfe and the lambe shall feede together, &c. The meaninge is, that the moost wicked and cruell men shall at the commyng of Christ agree with the good and peasable: And that the Gentyles (whyche for their beastlye liuynge, are often signified under the name of beastes) shalbe at vnytie with the faythfull, and the one lyue louingly with the other without stryfe. The very same sayinge haue ye before in the.xi.a. and.b.

f. But earthe shalbe the serpentes meate, that is, with earth shall the serpent be content, and neyther synge man, nor hurte hym with her venome.

The.lxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes handes. He delyteth in prayers done without hipocrysie and faith. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the Gentiles, the Sabboth is continuall.

THus sayeth the Lorde: Heaven is my seat, and the earth is my foote stole. a. Where shal nowe the house stande, that ye wyll buylde vnto me. And where shalbe the place, that I dwell in? As for these thynges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayeth the Lorde. Whyche of them shall I then regarde? Euen hym, that is of a lowly troubled spyryte, and standeth in awe my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me, doth me so great dishonour as he that killeth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me, choketh a dogge. He that bringeth me meate offrynges, offereth swynes bloude. Who so maketh me a memorial of incense, prayseth the thinge that is vnryghte. Yet take they suche wayes in hand, and their soule delyteth in these abhominacions.

b Therfore wyll I also haue pleasure in laughing him to scorne, & the thing y they feare wyll I bringe vpon them. For when I called, no man gaue answere: when I spake, they wolde not heare. But did wickednesse before myne eyes, and chose the thynges that displease me. Heare the worde of God all ye, that feare the thynge whyche he speaketh. Your brethre that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: Let the Lorde magnifye him selfe, that we may see youre gladnesse: and yet they shalbe confounded.

c For as touchinge the cytie and the temple, I heare the voyce of the Lorde, that wyll rewarde, and recompense his enemies, lyke as when a wyfe bringeth forth a man chylde, he euer the latter the payne of the byrth, and auoydeth of the trauaple. Who euer hearde or sawe suche thinges? doth the grounde beare in one hare: or are the people borne all at ones, as Sion beareth her sonnes? For thus sayeth the Lorde: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh baren? sayeth thy God. Reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that loue her. Be ioyful with her, all ye that mourneth for her. For ye d shall suche comforte out of her breastes, and be satysfyed. Ye shall take, and haue delyte in the plentyousnesse of her power. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll let peace into her, lyke a water floude, and the myght of the Heathen lyke a flowinge streame. The shall ye suche, ye shalbe borne vpon her sides and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of hys mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shalbe comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se thys, youre herte shall reioyse, and youre bones shall florysshe lyke an herbe.

e Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge his seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For behold the Lorde shall come with fyre, and hys charet shalbe lyke a whirle winde, that he maye recompence his vengeaunce in his wrath and hys indignacion w the flamme of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesche with the fyre, and with his swearde, & there shalbe a greate nombre slayne of the Lorde. Suche as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swyne flesche, myce, and other abhominacions, shalbe taken awaye together, sayeth the Lorde. For I f wyll come to gather all people and tongues vnto their workes and ymaginacions: these shall come, and se my glory. Vnto the shall I geue a token, and geue a certayne of them (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentyles: vnto Tely cia, Affrica and Lidia (where men can handle bowes) into Italye also and Grecke lande.

g The Iles farre of, that haue not hearde speake of me, and haue not sene my glorye, shall preache my prayse amonge the Gentyles, and shall bringe all youre brethren for an offeryng vnto the Lorde, out of all people vpon horses, charettes and horse litters, vpon Mules and carres to Jerusalem my holy hill (sayeth the Lorde) like as the children of Israel bringe the offeryng in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.

h And I shall take out of them certayne of them for to be Preestes and Leuytes, sayeth the Lorde. For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe earthe whyche I will make, shalbe fast stablyshed by me, (sayeth the Lorde.) So shall youre seade and youre name endure. i. and there shalbe a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, and k all flesche shall come to worshippe, before me(sayeth the Lord.) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carions of them, that have transgressed against me. For their wormes shall not dye, neyther shall their fyre be quenched, and al flesshe shall abhorre them.

The notes.

a. Where shall now the house stande, &c. As we shoulde saye: Whereto make ye me a temple of mannes handy worke, which rule the whole worlde? Hytherto have I suffred ỳ temple, to kepe you Jewes in a certayne maner of subiection, and obedience: and chose you one place for your seruice, to thintent that ye shoulde not fall to the Idoles of the Gentiles. But nowe will I have all Idoles banished, and for Jewrye will I chalenge vnto me the whole worlde, for one people all the dwellers vpon the earthe, whyche shalbe my worshippers in spirite and in truthe. Joh. iiii. I will not be superstitiously worshipped with sacrifices and ceremonies in the temple but with righteousnes, with faith, and with the spirite. The same songe that the Prophete here singeth in the latter ende of hys Prophecye, sange he before in the beginninge, euē in the fyrste Chapter. Let the christen note these two Chapters (I meane the fyrste, and last) well, and then shal they perceyue, howe greatlye God abhorreth suche Ipocrytycall workes done without faith, although they seame and apeare outwardly to be most godlye.

b. That is, there shalbe a perpetuall feaste, and a perpetual reste. They shall not then kepe their Sabboth after the maner of the Jewes, nor make differēce betweue daye and daye, but they shall kepe a continuall Sabboth, & neuer do seruile workes, that is spanes. Then shal they alwaies be in the tēple, that is, alwaies shall they praise God, in spirite and truethe, as well in aduersite as in prosperite. They shal neyther runne vnto Idoles nor any creatures, but shal worshippe the Lorde only.

The boke of the Prophete Jeremye.

The fyrst Chapter.

The boke of Jeremye, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth him selfe and wolde refuse the office of a Prophete, because he is yong and vnexpert. He is taught of the Lorde, and becometh bolde. God openeth vnto him, that the destruccion of the Jewes by the Babilonians, is at hande. Jeremye is commaunded to speake the word of God vnto the Jewes without feare.

Here are the sermons of Jeremye the sonne of Helkiah the preste, one of them that dwelt at Anathoth in the land of Beniamin: whē the Lorde had fyrste spoken with him. a. in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kinge of Juda, in the xiii. yeare of his kingdome, and so during vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, and vntill .xi. yeares of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kinge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, euē in the fyfth Moneth. The worde of the Lord spake thus vnto me: Before I fashioned the in thy mothers wombe, I did know the. And or euer thou wast borne, b. I sanctified the, and ordeyned the, to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am vnmete, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to younge. For thou shalt go to al that I shall sende the vnto, and whatsoeuer I commaund the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wilbe with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hande, and touched my mouthe, and sayde moreouer vnto me. Beholde I put my wordes in thy mouth, & this daye do I set ỳ ouer the people & kingdomes, that thou mayest roote out, breake of, destroye, & make waste: and that thou mayest buylde vp and plante. After thys, the Lorde spake vnto me sayinge: Jeremy, what seyst thou? And I sayde: I se a walkinge a wakinge roade. Then sayde the Lorde: thou hast sene ryght, for I will watch diligentlye vpon my worde, to performe it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me againe, and sayde: What sepst thou? And I sayde: I do se a seethinge pot, lokinge from oute of the North hytherward.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Oute of the Northe shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wil cal all the officers of the kingdomes of the north (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall come, and euery one shall set the seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in al their walles round about and thorowe al the cytyes of Juda. And thorowe them shall I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wyckednesse of those men that haue forsaken me: that haue offered vnto straunge Goddes, and worshipped the workes of their owne handes.

And therfore gyrde vp thy loines, arise, and tell them al, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, I will not haue the to be afrayed of them. For beholde, this daye do I make the a strong fenced towne, an yron pyller, and a wall of stele agaynst the whole lande, against the kinges and myghtye men of Juda, agaynste the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am with the, to helpe the, sayeth the Lord.

The notes.

a. It is a necessarye thinge to the vnderstandynge of the Prophetes, to knowe the Storyes of the tymes, wherin they prophesyed. The Storyes of Jeremyes tyme ye haue in the fourthe of the kynges, from the.xxi. Chapter to the ende of the boke: and in the seconde of the Chronycles, from the .xxiij. chapter to the ende also. He prophesyed aboute.xli. yeares.

b. I sanctified the, &c. That is, I dedicated, chose, appointed, and prepared, and set the a syde, to be a Prophete vnto the people. So in Jhon.x.g. Saye ye then vnto him, whom the father hath sanctyfyed, &c. that is, hathe chosen, &c.

c. For a Prophete or Preacher to gyrde vp hys lopnes, is boldely and constantlye, to resyst the falle opynion, and doctryne of the wycked, and euen to enpugne in them the worde of truth (whyche engendreth hate) whether they wyl or no: and that not ones or twyse, but vntil suche tyme as they ether amende, or elles waxe angrye and furyous with it. Yea, and then to set moare by the commaundement of the Lorde, then by the power and tyrannye of thys worlde: and not to set by the threateninges of rulers, whyche can do nothynge but that whyche God permytteth and suffereth them: therfore are they no to be feared of an obedient and faythfull seruaunt of the Lorde.

The.ij. Chapter.

God reherseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Against Prestes and Prophetes, or preachers that tourne not and helpe God. The Jewes are bothsyed because they forsake God, and because they trust in those yuanytyes of their Idoles.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lord commaunded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre the for a kyndnesse of thy youth, and because of thy fredfast loue: in that thou folowdest me thorowe the wildernesse, in an vntilled lande. Thou Israel wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrst frutes. All they that deuoured Israel, offended: myschefe fell vpō them, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and al the generation of the house of Israell. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaythfulnesse founde youre fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye from me, fallinge to lightenesse, and beynge so vaine? They thought not in their hertes: Where haue we left the Lorde, that broughte vs oute of the lande of Egipte, that led vs thorowe the wildernesse, thorow a desert and roughe lande, thorow a drye and deadly lande, ye a lande that no man had gone thorowe, and wherin noman had dwelt. And when I had broughte you into a pleasaunt welbuilded lande, that ye might enioye the frutes and all the commodities of the same: ye went forth, and defyled my lande, and broughte myne heritage to abhominacion.

The prestes them selues sayde not ouer where is the Lorde? They that haue the lawe in their handes, knowe me not. The shepardes offende against me. The Prophetes do seruice vnto Baal, and folowe suche thinges as shall bringe them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the Lorde) to make my complaynte vpon yo: vpon youre chyldren. Go into the Iles of Cethim, and loke well: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede, and se, whether suche thinges be done there, whether the Gentiles the selues deale so falsly and vntruly with their goddes (whiche yet are no Goddes in dede.) But my people hath geuen ouer their fyre honoure, for a thinge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonished (O ye heauens) be afrayde and abashed at soche thinge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath done two euyls. They haue forsaken me the well of the water of life and dygged them pyttes, yea byle & brokē pittes, that holde no water. Is Israell a bond seruaunt, or one of the houshold? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare, and crye then vpon him, as a lyon? They haue made his lande waste, his cities are so burnt vp, that there is noman dwellynge in them. Yea the chyldren of.a. Noph and Taphnes haue defyled thy neck.

Commeth not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye. And what hast thou nowe to do in the strete of Egipte: to drynke foule water? Ether, what makest thou in the way to Assiria? To drincke water of ♄ flood? Thyne owne wickednesse shall reprove the, and thy turninge awaye shal condemne the: that thou maiest know and understand, how cruel and hurtful a thinge it is, that thou hast forsaken thy Lorde thy God, and not feared him, sayeth the Lorde God of Hostes.

J haue euer broken thy yocke of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayest thou: J will no more serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hilles, and amonge all grene trees, where as J plãted the out of noble grapes & good rotes. How art thou turned the into a bitter, vnfrutefull, and straunge grape? Yea, & that so sore: that thoughe thou wasshe the with .b. Nitrus, and make thy self to sauoure with that swete smelling herbe of Worth: yet in my sight thou art stayned with thy wyckednesse, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

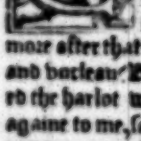
Saye not nowe J am not vncleane, and J haue not folowed the Goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woddes, valleyes and dennes, so shalt thou knowe, what thou hast done. Thou art lyke a swyft Dromedary, that goeth easely in his waye: and thy wãtonnes is like a wilde Asse, that vseth the wil dernesse, and that snoffeth and blowseth at his will. Who can tame the? All they that seke the, shal not saple, but finde the in thyne owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy fote from nakednes, and thy throte from thyrste, and thynkest thus in thy selfe: nothe, J will take no sorow, J will loue the straunge Goddes, and hang vpon them.

Lyke as a thefe that is taken with the dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Jsrael come to confusion, the comen people their kynges and rulers, their preestes & prophetes. For they saye to a stocke: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotten me, yea they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face. But in the tyme of their trouble, when they sayest stande vp, and helpe vs, J shal answere them: Where are now thy Goddes, that thou hast made the? Lyft them stande vp, & helpe the in the time of nede? For loke how many cityes thou hast (O Juda) so many Goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then will ye go to lawe with me, seynge ye are all synners agaynste me, sayeth the Lorde? Jt is but lost laboure, that J smyte youre children, for they receyue not my correccyon. Youre owne swearde deuoureth youre Prophetes, lyke a deuourynge lyon. Ye ye bestie people of the Lorde, then her hen vnto this worde: Am J then become a wyldernesse vnto the people of Jsrael: or a lande that hath no light? Wherfore sayeth my people then: we are fallen of, and we wyl come no more vnto the? Doth a mayden forget her rayment, or a bryde her stomacher? And doth my people forget me so lõg? Why boastest thou thy wayes to hyre (to obtayne fauoure there thorowe) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemyes?

Vpon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onlye, but openly in all these places. Yet darest thou saye: J am guiltlesse: Tushe, his wrath can not come vpõ me. Beholde, J will reason with the because thou darest saye: J haue not offended. O how euill wilt it before the, to abyde it, when it shalbe knowne, how oft thou hast gone backwarde? For thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egipte, as of the Assirias: yea thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy heade. Because the Lorde shall brynge that confydence and hope of thyne to naught, and thou shalt not prospere with all.

Deut. xxiij. Jerem. xxij. Ezech. xxij.



The notes.

a. Noph and Taphnes were two of the chefe cytyes of Egipte, wherin the Hebrues put their trust, but in vayne.

b. Nitrus is a kynd of salte good to washe clothes in, and the bodye also.

The. iij. Chapter.

God beyng mercyful calleth vnto repentaunce his people: whiche he had forsaken for their wyckednesse with Idolos. He exhorteth Jsrael vnto repentaunce prophesyinge the destruccyon that should come the true knowledge of God. The returne of Jsrael vnto God, confessynge their offence.

Omenlye, when a man putteth awaye his wife, and she goeth from him, and marieth with a. another, then the question is: should he resorte vnto her any more after that? Is not this selde then defiled and vncleane? But as for the, a thou hast playd the harlot with many louers, yet turne againe to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyft vp thine eyes on euery syde, and loke, yf thou be not defyled. Thou hast wayted for them in stretes, and as a murtherer in the wildernesse, Thorowe thy whordome and shameful blasphemies, is the lande defyled. b

Thus is the cause, that the rayne and euenynge dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores forheade, and canst not be ashamed. Is it wouldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, and led me from my youth. Wilt thou then put me awaye, and cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane frõ me? Neuertheles, thou spekest suche wordes, but thou art euer doynge worse and worse.

c The Lord sayd also vnto me in the time of Josiah the kinge, hast thou sene what that shrinkinge Jsrael hath done? howe she hathe runne vp vpon all the hilles, and amonge all thicke trees, and there playeth the harlot? hast thou sene also (when she had done all this) how J sayde vnto her: that she shoulde turne againe vnto me, and yet she is not returned? Juda that vnfaythfull systter of hers also sawe this: Namely, that after J had well sene the abusurpe of the shrynkynge harlot Jsrael.

Jeremi. i. d. Jerem. ij. d. iij. Ezech. xxij.

J put

I put her awaye, and gaue her a byl of deuorcement.

For al this, her vnfaithfull syster Juda was not ashamed, but went backe and plaied the whore also. Yea and the noise of her whordome that defyled the whole lande. For she hath committed her aduoutrye with stones and stocke.

Neuertheles, her vnfaithfull syster Juda is not turned vnto me again with ther whole herte, but fayndly, sayeth the Lorde. And the Lorde sayde vnto me. The backsyder Israel is more righteous, then the vnfaithfull Juda: and therfore go preache these wordes towarde the North, and saye: Thou shrinkinge Israel, turne againe (sayeth the Lord) and I wyll not turne my face from you, for I am mercyfull, sayeth the Lorde, and I will not alwaye beare displeasure againste the: but on this condicion, that thou knowe thy greate blasphemy: Namely, that thou hast vnfaithful forsaken the Lorde thy God, and hast made thy selfe partaker of straunge goddes vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wil to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lorde.

O ye shrinkinge children, turne againe, sayeth the Lorde: and I wilbe maried wyth you. For I will take one out of the citie, and two out of one generacion from amonge you, and bring you out of Sion: and wil geue you herdmen, after mine owne mynd, which shal feede you with learninge and wysedome. Moreouer, when ye be increased and multiplied in the land, then (sayeth the Lorde) there shall no more boost be made of the arche of the Lordes Testament: No man shal thinche vpon it, neyther shall any man make mencion of it: for from thence forth it shall neyther be visited, nor honoured with gyftes.

Then shal Jerusalem be called the Lordes seate, and all Heathen shalbe gathered vnto it, for the name of the Lordes sake, whyche shalbe set vp at Jerusalem. And from that tyme forth, they shal folow no more the ymaginacion of their owne frowarde herte.

Then shall they that be of the house of Juda, shal go vnto the house of Israel, and they shal come together out of the North, into the same land, that I haue geuen youre fathers. I haue shewed also, howe I toke the vpberinge but a shylde, & gaue the a pleasaunt lande for thyne heretage, yea & a goodly flocke of the heathe: Matth.xxiij.c & how I commaunded the, that thou shouldest * cal me father only, & not to shrynck from me.

But syke as a woman sayeth her louer, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. And therfore the voyce of the children of Israel was heard in euery syde, weping & waylinge: for they haue defyled their waye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

O ye shrinkynge children, turne againe, (sayinge: lo, we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde oure God:) And so shall I heale your backsydynges. The hylles say, and al the hye pyde of the mountaynes, but the healthe of Israel standeth onely vpon God oure Lorde.

Confusion hath deuoured oure fathers labour from our youth vp: yea their shepe and bullockes, their sonnes and doughters. So do we also slepe in oure confusion, and shame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers from oure youth vp vnto this daye haue sinned against the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord oure God.

The notes.

a. That is, thou hast loued, worshipped, and serued many Idoles of the Gentiles, in holes, wodes, valleyes, fyldes, and in many other places as we often reade in the Bible: and hast forsaken me thy husbande, contrary to the maner of honest maryed women, wherfore thou art worthy to be dishonored: yet turne and repente and forthinche the carnall lyf, and I will not spche to reuenge me against.

The.iiij. Chapter.

The true repentaunce or returning to God. He exhorteth to the circumcision of the herte. The destruccion of Jerusalem is prophecied, for the malice of their hertes.

IF Israel, yf thou wylt turne the, then turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. And yf thou wilt put awaye thine abhominacions out of my sight, thou shalt not be moued. And shalt sweare: The Lorde liueth: in truthe, in equyte and ryghteousnesse: and al people shalbe fortunate and ioyful in him. For thus sayeth the Lorde, to al Juda and Jerusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not amonge the thornes.

Be circumcised in the Lorde, and cut away the foreskinne of youre hertes, all ye of Juda and all the indwellers of Jerusalem: that my indignacion breake not oute like fyre & kindle so that no man may quenche it, because of the wickednes of youre ymaginacions.

Preache in Juda and Jerusalem, crye out and speake: blow the trompettes in the land, crie that euery man may heare, and saye: Gather you together, and we will go into stronge cyties. Set vp the token in Sion, spede you, and make no tarynge: for I will bringe a greate plage, and a greate destruccion from the north. For the spoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that he may make the land waste, and destroye the cities, so that no man may dwell therin. Wherfore girde youre selues about with sacke cloth, & mourne and wepe for the fearfull wrath of the Lorde shall not be withdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the hert of the kinge and of the Peeres shalbe gone, the preestes shalbe astonished, and the prophetes shalbe sore afraied. Then sayde I: O Lord God, hast thou disceyued then this people and Jerusalem, saienge: ye shall haue peace, & now the swerde goeth thorowe their lyue? Then ſhall it be ſayde to the people & to Jeruſalē.b. There commeth a warm wind from the North-thorow the waye of my people, but nether to fanne, nor to cleanſe.

D c. After that ſhall there come vnto me a ſtrōg winde, and then will I alſo geue ſentence vpon them. For lo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charettes are lyke a ſtormye winde: his horſemen are ſwifter then the Aegle. Wo vnto vs, for we are deſtroyed.
O Jeruſalem waſh thine herte from wycked

For a voice from Dan and from the hil of Ephraim ſpeaketh out, and telleth of a deſtruccion. Beholde, the Heathen geue Jeruſalem warninge, and preache vnto her, that her deſtroyers are comming from farre coil

E alſo, they ſhal geue him warninge in euery place, lyke as the watchmen in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrath, ſayeth the Lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue wickednesse and diſobedience, that hath poſſeſſed thine herte: Ah my helpe, ah my helpe, (I ſhal crye) how is my herte ſo ſore? my herte paineth within me, I can not be ſtyl, for I haue heard the crying of the trompetters and peales of warre.

They crye murthur vpon murthur, the whole lande ſhall periſhe. Immediatly my tentes were deſtroyed, and my hangynges, in the twynchelinge of an eye. Howe longe ſhall
I ſe the tokens of warre, and heare the noyſe of the trompetters.

Neuertheles thus ſhal come vpon them,
F becauſe my people is become folyſh, and hath Plate.v.d. Baruch.iii.d vtterly no vnderſtandynge. They are the children of folyſhnes, and without any diſcre loked vpon the earth, and ſe it is waſte, and voyde. I loked toward heauen, and it had no ſhyne.

I beheld the mountaynes, and they trem bled, and all the hilles were in a feare. I loked about me, and there was no body, and all the birdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waſte:
yea all their cytyes were broken downe, at the preſence of the Lorde, and indignacyon of his wrath.

For thus hath the Lorde ſayde: The whole
G lande ſhalbe deſolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therfore let the earth mourne and let the heauen be ſory about: for the thing that I haue purpoſed and taken vpon me to do, ſhall not repente me, and I wil not go frō
it. The whole lande ſhall flē, for the noyſe of the horſmen and bowmen, they ſhal runne into denues into woodes, and climme vp the ſtony rockes. All the cyties ſhalbe voyde, and noman dwellinge therin.

What wilt thou now do, for thou beynge deſtroyed? For though thou clotheſt thy ſelfe Jeremi.iiij.
with ſcarlet, and dreſſeſt the wyth goulde:
though thou paynteſt thy face with colours
yet ſhalt thou trymme thy ſelfe in vayne.

For thoſe that hytherto haue bene thy great fauourers, ſhall abhorre the, and go about to ſlaye the. For (me thinke) I heare a noyſe lyke as it were of a woman trauaylyng, or one laboringe of her fyrſte chylde. Euen the voyce of the doughter of Syon, that calleth out her armes, and ſoureth, ſayenge: Ah wo is me, how ſore verred and ſayntē is my herte
for them? that are ſlayne.

*No Iewes is there no righteouſnes or faythfull man

Lorde.) For though they can ſaye: the Lorde

Thou haſt ſcourged them, but they take no repentaunce: thou haſt correcte them for

They made their fared harder then a ſtone, and woulde not amende. B

Therfore I thought in my ſelfe: peraduen

vnderſtande nothinge of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therfore wil
I go vnto their heades and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the lord and the iudgementes of oure God. But theſe

b. Whether a lyon out of the wood ſhall hurte them, and a wolfe in the euenyng shall destroy them. The cat of the mountayne shal lye lurking by their cities, to teare in peces al them, that come thereoute. For their offences are manye, and their departynge awaye is greate. Shulde I then for al thys haue mercy vpon the? Thy children haue forsaken me, & swome by them that are no Goddes. And al be it they were bounde to me in marryage, yet they fell to aduoutrye, and haunted harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclenly lust they are become lyke the stoned horse, euery man neyeth at hys neyghbours wyfe: Shulde I not correcte thys, sayeth the Lorde.

Shulde I not be auenged of euerye people that is lyke vnto this? Clymme vp vpō their walles, beate them doune, but destroye them not vtterlye, e. cut of their braunches, because they are not ỳ Lordes. For vnfaythfully hath the house of Israell and Juda forsaken me, (sayth the Lorde). They haue denyed ỳ Lord, & sayde it is not he. Euyll, there shall no mysfortune come vpō vs, we shall se neither sword nor hunger. As for the warnynge of the Prophetes, they take it but for wynde, yea there is none of these, which wyll tell them, ỳ suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lord thy God of Hostes: because ye speake suche wordes, beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre, & make the people to be wood, that it maye consume them.

Lo, I wyll bryng a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayeth the Lorde) a myghtye people, and olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neyther vnderstandest what they saye. Their arowes are lyke an open graue, they them selues be very gyaslites. Thys people shall eate vp thy fruite & thy meate, yea they shall deuoure thy sonnes and thy doughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes & figgres. As for thy stronge and well fensed cytes, wherein thou dyddest trust, they shal destroy them with the swerde. Neuertheles I wyll not then haue done with you, saith the Lorde. But yf they saye: wherfore doeth the Lord our God all this vnto vs?

Then answere thē: because, that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, & serued straūge goddes in your owne lande, euen so shall ye serue other Goddes also in a straunge lande. Preach this vnto the house of Jacob, and crye it oute in Juda (and saye thus: Heare thys (thou folyshe and vndiscrete people) *ye haue eyes, but ye se not, eares haue ye, but ye heare not. Feare ye not me, sayeth the Lorde? Are ye not ashamed, to lyke me in the face? which haue set the sea with the sande, so that it can not passe hys bounde: For though he it rage, yet can it do nothynge, and though the waues thereof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

nature herte, they are departed & gone awaye from me. They thincke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the Lorde our God, that geueth vs rayne, both early and late, whē ỳ tyme is, which kepeth vnto vs ỳ yll the harueste fruytfull yeare.

Neuertheles your wyckednes haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you therof. For among my people are founde wicked persones, that payre lye snares & wayte for men, to take them & destroye the. And lyke as a net is ful of birdes, so are their houses full of that which they haue gotten vnfaithfully and deceyte. Therof commeth their greate substaunce and ryches, therof are they fat and welthy, and are ryme awaye from me wyth shameful blasphemyes. They myniştre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause, they iudge not the poore righteously to equite.

Shulde I not punyshe these thynges, saith the Lorde? shulde I not be auenged of al suche people, as these be? Horryble and greuous thinges are done in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falsely, and the priestes folowe them, and my people hath pleasure therein. What wyll come therof at the laste.

The. vi. Chapter.

The tyranny for which Jerusalem is afflicted. Their vnrighteousnes. Their wickednes. The Lorde threatneth the destruction of the Jewes. The messengage of the Babylonians is prophecied against.

Come out of Jerusalē, ye frōg children of Ben Jamin: blowe vp the trompettes ye Tekoites, set vp a token vnto Bethacerem, for a plage and a greate myserye appeareth oute from the North.

I wyll liken the doughter Sion to a fayre and tender woman, and to her shall come the shepeherdes with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pytch rounde about her, and euery one shall fede *them that are vnder his hande. Make battell against her (shall they say) Arise, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, & the nyghtes shadowes fal doune: Arise, let vs go vp by nyght, and destroye her stronge holdes, for thus hath the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Hewe doune her trees, and set vp bulwarkes against Jerusalem. Thys is the cytye that must be punyshed, for in her is all maner oppressyon. Lyke as a condupte abounderh in water, euen so thys cytye abounderh in wyckednes. Robberye and vnrighteousnesse is heard

a. The residue of Jsrael shalbe gathered, as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, like the grape gatherer. But unto whome shall I speake, whome shall I warne that he maye take hede? Their eares are so uncircumcysed, ♀ they maye not heare. Beholde, they take the worde of God but for a scorne, ♀ have no lust therto. And therfore
b. I am so ful of thyne indignacyon (O Lorde) that I maye suffre no longer. Shede oute thy wraith upon the childre that are without, and upon all yonge men. Yea the man must be taken personer with the wife, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses with their landes and woures shall be turned unto straūgers, when I stretche oute myne hande upon the inhabitours of this land, sayeth the Lord. For from the leaste unto the moost, they hang all upon couetousnes: ♀ from the Prophet unto the preste, they go all about with falshed and lyes.

D And besyde that: they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayinge: peace peace, when there is no peace at all. Therfore they must be ashamed, for they have committed abhominacyon. But howe shulde they be ashamed, when they knowe no thinge, neither of shame nor good maūrours? And therfore they shall fall amonge the slayne, and in the houre when I shall upsit them, they shall be brought doume, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: go into the streates consider and make inquisicion for the old way and yf it be the good and right waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they sayde: we will not walcke therin and I wil set watchemen over you, ♀ therfore
E take ye hede unto the voyce of the trompet. But they sayde: we will not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacō shalt knowe, what I have devised for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, I will cause a plage come upon this people, even the frute of their owne imaginacions.

For they have not bene obedyente unto my wordes and so my lawe, but abhorred them.

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde I will make this people fall, ♀ there shall fall from amonge them the father with the children, one neyghboure shall perysshe with another.

F Moreover thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, and a greate people shall aryse from the endes of the earthe, with bowes ♀ with dartes shall they be weapened: It is a roughe ♀ fearce people, an unmercyfull people: their voyce roareth lyke the sea, they ryde upon horses wel appointed to ♀ battel against the (O doughter Sion. For they are al unlaythfull and fallen awaye, they hange upon lyinge lyppes, they are cleane brasse ♀ yron for they hurte and destroye every man. The bellous are burnt in the fyre, the lead is consumed, the melter melteth in vayne, for the evyll is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shal they be called naughtye syluer, because the Lorde hath caste them oute.

The.vij. Chapter.

Jeremye is commaunded to declare unto the people the worde of God, which resteth in the outwarde seruyce of the temple, that beleyth nothinge. The ruyne that shall happen to the Jewes for the despysinge of their Prophetes. Sacrifyce doth not the Lorde chefelye require of the Jewes, but that they shulde obeye his worde. Euphues.

L Leui.xix.b. * What thinche you this house & heareth my name, is a denne of theues? And these thinges are not done priuelye, but before myne eyes sayeth the Lorde. Go to my place in Job.xi.b Mat.xxi.b Jere.xxxii.f Josue.xviii.a Jere.xxvi.a 3.Reg.xi. iiij. b.vi. * Siloh, whereunto I gaue my name afore tyme, & loke wel what I did to the same place for the wickednes of my people of Jtraell. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (sayeth the Lorde) & I my selfe rose vp euer by tymes to warne you & to comen with you yet wolde ye not heare me: I called, ye wolde not answere. And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Siloh, so wil I do to this house, & my name is geuen vnto (and that ye put youre trust in) ye vnto the place that I haue geuen to you & youre fathers. And I shal thrust you of my sight, as I haue cast out all youre brethren the whole sede of a.* Ephraim.

M Therfore thou shalt not praye for this people, thou shalt neither geue thankes, nor bid prayer for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for the for in no wyse wil I heare the. Sepst thou not what they do in the cyties of Juda, and without Jerusalem? The children gather sticks, the fathers kindle & fyre, the mothers breade the doughe, to bake cakes for the queue of heauen,

They poure out drinche offrynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath: Howe be it they hurte not me (sayth the Lord) but rather confounde, and shame themselues.

And therfore thus saith the Lorde God: behold, my wrath and my indignacion shalbe poured out vpon this place, vpon men & cattel vpon the trees in the felde & all fruite of the lande, and it shall burne so, that no man maye quenche it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, the God of Jtrael. Ye heape vp your burntofferinges with youre sacrifyces, & eate the flesshe. But when I brought youre fathers out of Egipt I spake no worde vnto them of burntofferynges & sacrifyces: but this I commaunded them, saying: herken & obeye my voyce, & I shalbe youre God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walcheu all the wayes, whiche I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prosper.

But they were not obedyent, they inclined not their eare a tytle vnto, but wente after their owne ymaginacyons and after the motions of their owne wicked herte, & so turned them selues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And thus haue they done, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypte, vnto this daye.

N Neuertheles, I sente vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes I rose vp early & sente them worde, yet wolde they not herken, nor offre me their eares, but were obstynate and worse then their fathers. And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: thou shalte crye vpon them but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalte thou saye vnto them: This is the people that neyther heareth the voyce of the Lord their God, nor receyueth his correccion. Faithfulnes & truethe is cleane rooted oute of their mouth. O

Wherfore cut of thyne heare, and cast it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole hyre for the Lorde hath caste awaye, and forsake the people, that he is displeased withall. For the children of Juda haue done euyll in my sight sayeth the Lord. They haue set vp their abhominacions in the house that hath my name, & haue defyled it. They haue also buylded an aulter at.b Topheth, which is in the valley of the children of Hennom: that they might burne their sonnes and doughters, whiche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought. And therfore behold, the dayes shall come (sayeth the Lorde) that it shall no more be called Topheth, or the valleye of the children of Hennom, but the valleye of the slayne, for in Topheth, they shall be buryed because they shall els haue no roume. Yea the dead bodyes of this people shall be eaten vp of the foules of the ayre & wylde beastes of the earth, and no man shall fraye them awaye. And as for the voyce of myrth and gladnesse of the cyties of Juda, and Jerusalem, the voyce of the bridegrome & of the bryde I wil make them cease, for the lande shall be desolate.

The.viij. Chapter.

The destruccion of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amendement, enforcing by their causes the reprehension of their wyng hardenes of the Prophetes and Scribes, and their abominable idolatry.

AT the same tyme sayeth the Lord the bones of the kinges of Juda, the bones of his princes, & bones of the priestes & prophetes, yea & the bones of the citizens of Jerusalem, shalbe brought oute of their graues & layed against the sunne, the Moone and all the heauenlye hoste, whom they loued, whome they serued whome they rane after, whome they sought & worshipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buryed, but shall lye vpon the earthe, to their shame and despytynge.

Thus shalte thou saye vnto them also: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Do men fall so, that they awaye, that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so Jerem.viii.d farre backe, that they turne not agayne. They are euer the longer the more obstynate, ¶ wyl not be conuerted.

For I haue loked, ¶ considered: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for hys

for lo, they haue caste out the worde of the Wherfore I will geue their wyues vnto alie-

there is no peace at all.

Aye for shame, how abhominable thinges do they? and yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their vysytation

the Lorde.

A. Moreouer I wyll gather them in (sayth the Lorde) so that there shall not be one gra-folysshe straunge fashyons? The haruest is gone, the Sommer hath an ende, and we are not holped. I am sore vexed, because of ¶ hurte of my people: I am heuye and abashed, for there is no more Tryacle at Galaad, ¶ there is no Physycyen, that can heale the hurte of my people.

A. Moreouer I wyll gather them in.&c. The meaning is: I wyll gather the Jewes frō all shall no kynge, grape, or other fruite remayne

The .ix. Chapter.

The complaynte ¶ bewayling of the Prophete, for the wyckednesse of the people. In the knowledge of God ought the cause to stande. The vnfruytfulnesse of the lande.

O Who wyl geue my heade water enough, and a well of teares for myne eyen: that I may wepe
nyght and day, for the slaughter of my people? Wold God that I had a cottage some where farre from folcke that I myght leaue my people, ¶ go frō them for they be all aduouterers and a thornyhynge sorte. They bende their tunges lyke bowes, to shute out lyes. As for the truth, they may nothynge awaye with all in the worlde. For they go frō one wyckednes to another, ¶ hold nothynge of me, sayeth the Lorde.

Yea one must kepe him selfe frō another
no man maye safely trust his owne brother:
for one brother vndermyneth another, ¶ one neyghboure beguyleth another. Yea one dyssembleth wyth another, ¶ they deale wyth no truth. They haue practyced their tunges to lye, and taken great payne to do mischefe.
They haue set their stole in the myddest of dy
scrypte, and for very dyssemblynge falsehede
they wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes:
beholde, I wyll melte them, and trye them, for what shulde I els do to my people? Their tunges are lyke sharpe arowes, so speake discrypte. Wyth their mouthe they speake peaceably

trable ye to their neyghboure, but priuely they laye wayte for hym. Shulde I not punyshe them for these thynges, sayeth the Lorde? Or shulde I not be auenged of any suche people as these? Vpon the mountaynes wyl I take vp a lamentacyon and sorowfull crye, and a mournynge vpon the layre playnes of the wyldernes: Namely, howe they are so burnte vp, that no man goeth there anye more. Yea a man shall not heare one beaste crye there.

D Byrdes and catell are al gone from thence. Pol.lxvij.a. Hyb.xlij.c I wyll make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyll make the cyties of Juda so wast, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstaunde this? Or to whome hath the Lorde spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this, and saye: O thou lande, why perysheth thou so? Wherfor art thou so burnt vp (e lyke a wyldernesse, that no man goeth thorowe? Yea the Lorde hymselfe tolde the same vnto them, that forsoke hys lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaundement, neither ipured thereafter: but folowed the wyckednes of their owne hertes, and serued straūge Goddes, as their fathers taught them. Ier.xxv.b. Jere.xxiij.c

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Beholde, I wyll feede this people with wormewood, and geue them gal to drinche. I wyll skatter them also among the Heathen, whome neyther they nor their fathers haue knowen: & I will sende a swearde amongst them, to persecute them, but yet I byd them to naught. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: Loke that ye call for mournynge wyues, and send for wyse women: that they come shortly, & synge a mournyng song of you: that the teares maye fall oute of oure eyes, and that oure eye lydds maye gushe oute of water. Deut.xxviij.c Jere.xxiij.c

F For there is a lamentable noyse heard of Sion: O how are we so sore destroyed? O howe are we so pitefully cōfounded? We muste forsake oure owne naturall countreye, & we are throte out of oure owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women) and let youre eares regard the wordes of hys mouth: that ye may learne your doughters to mourne, and that euerye one maye teache her neighboure, to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is clymminge vp in at oure windowes he is come into oure houses, to destroye the chylde before the doore, and the younge man in the streete.

But tell thou plainelye, thus sayeth the Lorde: The dead bodyes of men shall lye vpō G the grounde, as the dong vpon the felde, and as the heye after the mower, and there shalbe no man to take them vp. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wisdome, nor the stronge man in hys strēgth, neyther the ryche man in hys ryches: But who so wyl reioyse, let hym reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth Let not the wyse man reioyse.

mersor I am the Lorde, which do mercy, iudgement, and ryghteousnes vpon the earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thynges, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I will vyset a. all them, whose foreskinne is vncircumcysed. The Egyptias, the Jewes, the Edomytes, the Ammonytes, the Moabites, and the shauen Haboryters, that dwell in the wildernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcysed in the fleshe, but all the house of Israell are vncircumcysed in the herte.

¶ The notes.

a. All, that is (as well the Jewes as the Gentyles: for the one is as fre as the other. The Jewes are cyrcumcysed as well as the Heathen, as touchynge the herte, although they be circumcysed, as touchyng the fleshe. Therfore are they here reckened amonge the vncircumcysed.

The.x. Chapter.

The conuersacyons of the Gentyles are not to be fearyd. Of the madnesse of Idols, and of the power of God. Of myne enemyes.

HEare the worde of the Lorde, & A he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Ye shall not learne after the maner of the Heathē, & ye shall not be afrayed for the tokens of heauen: for the Heathen are afrayed of suche: yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentiles are nothinge, but vanite. They hewe downe a tree in the wood with the handes of the workeman, and fasthon it with the axe: they couer it ouer with gold or syluer, they fasten it with nayles and hammers, that it wyll not. It stādeth as styfe as the palmetree, it can not neyther speake nor go, but must be borne. Be not ye afrayed of suche, for they can do neyther good nor euill. But there is none lyke vnto thē, O Lorde, & great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? Or what kynge of the Gentyles wolde not obeye the. Leuy.xix.d. Leuy.xxvi.d. Barue.vi. iiij.Re.xvij.g Judi.vi.b

For amonge all the wyse men of the Gentyles, & in all their kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all together vnlearned and vnwyse. All the preaūnge is but vanyte: namelye, woode, syluer, whiche is brought oute of Tharsis, and beate to plates: and golde from Ophir, a worke that is made with the handes of the craftesmen and the caster, clothed with yelowe sylke & scarlet: euen so is the worke of their wyse men al together. But the Lorde is a true God, a lyuynge God, and an euerlastinge kyng. If he be wroth, the earthe shaketh: all the Gentiles maye not abyde his indygnacyon. B

* As for their Goddes, it maye well be sayde of them: they are Goddes, that made neyther heauen nor earthe: therfore shall they perysche from the earthe & frō al thynges vnder heauē. But (as for oure God) he made the earth with his power, and with hys wysdom hath he sprēded the whole cyrcle of the worlde, with his discression hath he spred oute the heauens. * This lettle is written in Chalde to Jewes to the Gentyles of Chalde to confusion.

c At the voyce the waters gather together in the aire, he draweth vp the clouddes from the vttermoste partes of the earth: he turneth lyghtenynge to rayne, & bringeth forth the windes out of their treasures: Gods wysdom maketh all men fooles. And confounded be all caruers of ymages, for that their craft, is but a vayne thynge, and hath no lyfe. The vayne craftesmen with their workes, that they in their idolatrie haue made, shall perysshe one with another in the tyme of vysitacyon. Neuertheles, Jacobs porcyon is not suche: but it is he, that hath made all thynges, and Jsrael is the rode of his enherytaunce: The Lorde of hoostes is his name. Put awaye thyne vncleanesse oute of the lande, thou that arte in the stronge cyties. For thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll throwe thruste oute the inhabitours of this lande a greate waye of, and trouble them of suche a fashyon, that they shall no more be founde.

Alas how am I hurte? Alas, howe paynefull are my scourges vnto me? For I consyder this sorowe by my selfe, & I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my coardes are brokē. My children are gone fro me, & can no where be found. Nowe haue I none to spreade oute my tente, or to set vp my hangynges. For the herdmen haue done folyshly, that they haue not soughte the Lorde. Therfor haue they dealt vnwyselye with their cattell, and all are scatred abroade. Beholde, a noyse is harde at hande, and greate tydynges out of the northe to make the cyties of Juda a wyldernesse, and a dwellynge place for Dragōs. Now I knowe (O Lorde) that it is not in mans power to ordre hys owne wayes, or to rule hys owne steppes and goinges. Therfor chastē thou vs, O Lorde, but wyth fauoure and not in thy wrath, leynge vs not vtterlye to naught. Poure oute thyne indygnacion vpō them vpon the Gentyles, that knowe the not, and vpon the people that call not on thy name: And that bycause they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Jacob, and haue roted out hys glorye.

The .xi. Chapter.

A rehersall of them that obeye not the voyce of Gods worde. The people of Juda forsakynge the doctryne of their fathers worshippeth straunge Godes. The Lorde sayeth that he will not heare the Jewes, & forbiddeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

A GAin is another Sermon, which the Lorde commaundeth Jeremy for to preache, sayeng: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt, & speake vnto all Juda, and to all them that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Jsrael. Curssed be cursye oute that is not obedient vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: whiche I commaunded vnto youre fathers, what tyme as I brought them oute of Egypte, from the yron fornace, sayenge: Be obedient vnto my voyce, & do accordynge to all that I cōmaund you: so shall ye be my people, & I wilbe youre God, and will kepe my promyse, that I haue swoorne vnto youre fathers: Namelye, that I wolde geue them a lande which flowerth with mylcke and honye, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I, and sayd: Amen. It is euen so Lorde, as thou sayest.

Then the Lorde sayde vnto me: Crye agaynst B all these thinges in the cyties of Juda & rounde about Jerusalem, & saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exorted youre fathers, euer synce the tyme that I brought them oute of the lande of Egipte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge by tymes, sayenge: Herken vnto my voyce: Neuertheles, they wolde not obeye me nor enclyne their eares vnto me, but folowed the wicked ymaginacions of their owne hertes. And therfore haue I caused them all to fall, accordynge to all the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, whiche they (not with vnderstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is solde oute, that whole Jsrael and all their citesens of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of their forefathers, whyche had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge Goddes, and worshypped the. The house of Jsrael and Juda haue broken my couenaunt, whiche I made wyth their fathers.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, C
I wyll sende a plage amonge you, whiche ye shall not be able to escape: and though ye crye vnto me, I wyll not heare you. Then shall the cyties of Juda and the cytesyns of Jerusalē go, and call vpon their Goddes, vnto whom they made their oblacyons: but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cyties as thou hast, O Juda, so many Goddes hast thou also: And loke how many stretes there be in the (O Jerusalem) so manye shamefull autres haue ye set vp, to offre vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not thou for thys people, bid neyther prayse nor prayer for them, for though they crye vnto me in their trouble, yet wyl I not heare them.

b. O thou beloued, why dooest thou so shamefull greate blasphemyes in my house, sith as though that holy flesh myght abolysshe the, specially when thou hast made thy boaste of thy wickednes. The Lorde called the a greue olyue tree, a fayre one, a fruteful one, a goodly one, but nowe that there is a contrarye reporte of the abroade, he wyl burne the vp, & destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hoostes that planted the, hath decreed a plage for the, (O thou house of Jsrael and Juda) for the euyll that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrath, in that ye hys seruyce vnto Baal.

Thus (O Lord) haue I learned of the, and vnderstand it, for thou hast shewed me their ymaginacions. But I (as a meke lambe, whō D assayed

cuted awaye to be slayne: not knowing, that they had deuised soche a councell agaynst me sayenge: We wyll destroye hys mynde wyth c* woord, & depue hym out of the. d* lande of the lyuyng: þ his name shall neuer be thought vpon. Therfore I wyll beseche the now (O Lord of hoostes) thou rightuous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: lett me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I cõmitted my cause. The Lord therfore spake thus of þ citezyns of Anothoth, that sought to slaye me, sayenge: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lord, or els thou shalt dye of oure handes. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I will visit you. Youre yonge men shall perysshe wyth the swearde, your sonnes & youre daughters shall perisshe dye of hunger, so that none shall remayne. For vpõ þ citezyns of Anothoth wil I bring a plage, the yeare of their visitacion.

The. xii. Chapter.

The Prophete marueileth greatly at the prosperyte of the wycked, although he confesse God to be rightuous. The Iewes are shadowed of the Leete. He complayneth against Tyrantes and persecuters of Gods people. The Lorde answereth vnkyndenesse vnto the enemyes that blaspheme vpon Jewrye, wherby trouble is ordayned.

I Lorde, thou art more rightuous then that I shulde dyspute wyth the: Neuertheles, lett me talke wyth the in thynges reasonable. *Howe happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodlye is so prosperous: and that it goeth so well with them, which (vnto oure shame) offende and lyue in wyckednesse? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, and bringe fouth fruite: They boaste much of the, yet dorst thou not punish them. But thou Lorde (to whõ I am well knowne) thou that hast sene, and proued my herte, take them awaye, lyke as a flocke is carped to the slaughter house, & apoynte them for the daye of slaughter.

*Job. xxi. a. Psal. l. b.

How longe shall the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde perysh, for the wyckednes of them that dwell therin?

The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet saye they: tushe, God wyll not destroye vs vtterly. D a* Seing thou art weery in runnynge wyth þ fote men, how wilt thou then runne wyth horses? In a peaceable lande thou mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the swpous pryde of Jordane? For thy brethren and thy kynred haue all together despised the, & cried out vpon the in thine absence. Beleue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellyng place, & left myne heritage. My life also that I loue so well, haue I geue in to the handes of myne enemyes. Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon, in the wod. It cried out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse colloures is vpon it. Go hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp.

Dyuerse herdmen haue broke downe my vyneyarde, and troden vpon my porcyõ. Of E my pleasaunt porcyõ, they haue made a wyldernes & desert. They haue layed it waste: and now that it is waste, it sygheth vnto me. Yee the whole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heth euery waye, for the swearde of þ Lorde shall consume from the one ende of the lande to the other, & no flesh shall haue rest. They shall sowe wheate, and reape thornes. They shall take herytage in possession, but it shall do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre owne reuenuges, because of the greate wrath of the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euell neyboures, that laye hande on myne he- D ritage, whiche I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I will plucke them (namely Israel) out of their lande, & put out the house of Juda from amõge the. And when I haue rooted them out, I wyll be at one wyth them agayne, and wyll haue mercye vpon them: & bringe the agayne, euery man to hys owne heritage, and in to his land. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lorde liueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be reckened amõge my people. But yf they will no obeye then wyll I roote out the same folke & destroy them, sayeth the Lorde.

The notes.

a* Thus spake the wicked of the Prophete by the waye of rebuke. As though they had sayde by a parable. When thou wast but in a spiell towne, thou couldest not beare the persecucyon of thyne owne cyrcumstant & howsholde folcken: How wilt thou then beare the powers and chefe rulers of Juda, and the Nobles of Jerusalem? And after, by the possible sure lande is vnderstande Anathoth and Jewrye. by the ryuer of Jordan Jerusalem. The lytel ryuer of Anathoth is not to be compared to the greate flowynge streames of Jordan. If he were dispoyled of hys owne auditoures, how shalbe he be heared of other, and those greater and excellenter.

The.xiij. Chapter.

The destruccyon of the Jewes is prefigured, and their vnrighteous abuse. Why Israell was ordeyned to be the people of God, and wherfor they were forsaken.

Moreouer, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: go thy waye, a* and gett the a lynnen girdle, and gyrde it about thy lopnes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a girdle, accordynge to the commaundement of the Lorde, and put it about my lopnes. After this, the Lord spake vnto me agayn: Take the girdle that thou hast prepared and put about the, and gett the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rock. So went I, and hyde it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me: Vp, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the girdle from thece, which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke the girdle from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the girdle was corrupt, so that it was vnprofytable for nothinge.

a* A people dyd by an outward sygne, as it is layd in iij Reg. xi. e. f.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Euen so will I corrupte the pryde of Juda, and the hye pryde of Jerusalē. This people is a wycked people, they will not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacyons of their owne herte, and hange vpon straunge Goddes, them haue they serued and worshypped: and therfore they shalbe as this girdle, that serueth for nothynge. For as strayterlye as a girdle sytteth vpon a mans lopnes, so straytly dyd I bynde vnto me the whole house of Israell, and the whole house of Juda vnto me, sayeth the Lorde: that they myght be my people, and they myght haue a glorious name: and they myght be in honoure: but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore saye thys vnto them, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shall saye: thynckest thou we knowe not, that euery pot shalbe fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde: I shall fyll all the inhabytours of this lande with dronckēnes, the kynges that sytt vpon Dauids stole, the Prestes and Prophetes, with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I will dasshe them one agaynst another, yee the fathers agaynst the sonnes, sayeth the Lorde.

I will not pardon them, I will not spare them, nor haue pytye vpō them: but destroye them. Be obedyēt, geue eare, take no dysdayne at it, for it is the Lorde hym selfe that speaketh. Honoure the Lorde youre God herein, or he take hys lyght from you, and or euer youre fete stomble in darcknesse at the hylls: lest when ye loke for the lyght, he turne it in to the shadowe and darcknesse of death. But if ye will not heare me, that geue you secrete warnyng, I will mourne fro my whole hert for youre stubburnesse. Oh trouble will I wepe, and the teares shall gushe out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be caryed awaye captyue. Tell the kynge and the rulers: Humble youre selues, sett you downe lowe, for the crowne of youre glory shall fall from your head. The cities towarde the south shalbe shut vp, and no man shall open them. All Juda shalbe caried awap captyue, so that none shall remayne.

Jere. xxxij. d. Then. i. d.

Lyft vp youre eyes, and beholde the, that come from the North: Lyke a fat flocke shall they fall vpō the. To whom wylt thou make thy mone, when they come vpō the? for thou hast taught them thy selfe, and made them maysters ouer the. Shall not sorowe come vpon the, as on a woman trauaylinge with childe: And if thou wolde say the in thyne herte: Wherfore come these thynges vpō me? Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemyes, shall thy hinder partes and thy fete be discouered. For lyke as the man of Jude maye chaunge hys shyne, and the cat of the mountayne her spottes: so maye ye that be exercysed in euell, do good. Therfore will I scatte you, lyke as the stobble that is taken awaye with the south wynde. This shall be youre porcyon, and the porcyon of youre measure, wherwith ye shal be rewarded of me, sayeth the Lorde: because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre trust in disceptfull thynges. Therfore shall I turne thy clothes ouer thy head, and discouer thy thyghes, that thy pryuities maye be seene, thy aduoutrye, thy deedly malice, thy beastlinesse and thy shamefull whordome. For vpon the fyldes and hylles I haue seene thy abhominacions. Woe be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wylt thou euer be clensed emp more?

The.xiiij. Chapter.

Of the derth that shulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people wythoute mercy of the Lorde. The vnthryftfull people are not heared. Of prayer, fastinge and of false prophetes that deceaue the people.

The worde of the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremye, concernynge the derth of the fruites. Juda shal mourne, men shall not go moch more thorow hys gates: the lande shalbe no more had in reputacyon, and the crie of Jerusalem shall breake out. The Lordes shall sende their seruauntes to fetch water, and when they come to the welles, they shall fynde no watre, but shall cary their vessels home empeye. They shall be ashamed and confounded, and shall couer their heades. For the grounde shalbe dried vp, because there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also shalbe ashamed, and shall couer their heades. The hynde shall forsake the Jewrye. ponge fawne, that he bringeth forth in the felde because there shalbe no grasse. The wylde Asses shall stande in the Molle, and drawe in their wynde lyke ỹ Dragons, their eyes shall faple for want of grasse.

B Doutles oure owne wickednesse reward vs: But Lorde do thou accordinge to thy name, though oure transgressyons and synnes be many. For thou art the comforte & helpe of Israel in ỹ tyme of trouble. a* Why wilt thou be as a straunger in the Lande, and as one that goeth ouer the felde, and commeth in onely to remayne for a nyght? Why wilt thou make thy self a cowarde, and as it were a gyaunte that yet maye not helpe? b* For thou art oure (O Lorde) and we beare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lorde, concernynge this people that haue pleasure to go so vnrulye with their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displease the Lorde: in so moch, that he wyll now bringe agayne to remembraunce al their myssededes, and punysh all their synnes. Yee euen thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalt not praye to do this people good. For though they fast, I wyll not heare their prayers. And though they offre burntoffringes & sacrifices, yet wyll not I accepte them. For I wil destroye them with ỹ swearde, honger and pestilence. Then answerede I: O Lorde God, the prophetes saye vnto them: Tush, ye shal se no swearde, and no honger shall come vpon you, but the Lorde shall geue you contynuall rest in this place.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: The prophetes preach lyes vnto them in my name. I haue not spoken with them, neither gaue I them eny charge, neither dyd I sende the: yet they preach vnto you false visions, charmynge wayne, & disceytfulnesse of their owne herte. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde: As for those prophetes that preache in my name) whom I neuertheles haue not sent) and that saye: Tush, there shall neither batell ner honger be in this lande: With swearde and with honger shall those prophetes perish, and the people to whom they haue preached shalbe cast out of Jerusalem, dye of honger, and be slayne with the swearde (and there shallbe no man to burye them) both they and their wyues, their sonnes and their daughters. For thus will I poure their wyckednes vpon them. This shalt thou saye also vnto them: Myne D eyes shall wepe without ceassynge daye and nyght. For my people shalbe destroyed with great harme, and shall perish with a great plage. For yf I go in to the felde, lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men. If I come in to the cyte, lo, they be all famished of honger.

Yee their prophetes also and preistes shall be led in to an vnknowne lande.

Hast thou then vtterlye forsaken Juda? (sayde I) Doeth thy soule abhorre Syon? Or hast thou so plaged vs, that we can be healed nomore? We loked for peace, and there commeth no good: for the tyme of health, and lo, here is nothynge but trouble: We knowlege (O Lorde) all oure vngodlynes, & the synnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended ỹ. Be not displeased (O Lorde) for thy names sake, forgeit not thy louynge kyndnes: Remẽbre the trone of thyne honoure, breake not the couenaunt, that thou hast made with vs. Are there eny amonge the goddes of the Gentiles that sende rayne or geue the showers of heauen? Doest not thou it O Lorde oure God, in whom we trust? Yee Lorde, thou doest all these thinges.

¶ The notes.

a* Why wilt thou be as a straunger. &c. As who saye. Thou behauest thy selfe vnto vs as a straunger, or as a wayefarynge man: for thou settest not by vs, ner dyspleasest thy strengthes to helpe vs.

b* Some reade, but thou, O Lord, art in the myddest of vs: and thy name is called on, of vs.

¶ The.xiiv.Chapter.

The Lorde will not heare Moses or Samuel, yf they praye for the people, but will wrappe them in many myseryes. The cause of soche greate myseryes.

THen spake the Lorde vnto me, & sayde: Though Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to thys people. Dryue them awaye, that they maye go out of my syght. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we go? Then tell them: The Lorde geueth you thys answere: Some vnto death, some to the swearde, some to honger, some in to captyuyte. For I will bryng soure plages vpon them sayeth the Lorde. The swearde shall strangle them, the dogges shal deuoure them, the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth shall eate them vp, and destroye them. I wyll scatter them aboute also in all kyngdomes and landes to be plaged, because of Manasseh the sonne of Ezechias kynge of Juda, for the thynges that he dyd in Jerusalem. A Jere.xvi.b. xi.c.xiiii.b. & Ezech.xiiii.c

Who shall then haue ppte vpon the O Jerusalē? Who shall be sory for the? Or who B shall make intercessyon, to optayne peace for the? Synce thou goest fro me, & turnest backwarde, saieth the Lorde? Therfore I will stretch out myne hand agaynst the, to destroye the, and I wyll not be intreated. I will scatter the abrode with fanne no euery syde of the lande: I wyll waste my people and destroye them, for they haue had no lust to turne from their owne wayes. I wyll make their wyddowes mo in nombre, then the sandes of the sea. Vpon the mothers of their chyldren, I shall bryng a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodenlye & vnawarres, shall I sende a feare vpon their cyties. She that hath borne.vii. chyldren, shall haue none, here herte shal be full of sorowe.

The Sunne shall sayle her in the cleare daye, when she shalbe cõfounded and sayne for wery heupnesse. As for those ꝑ remayne, J wyll deliuer the vnto the swearde of their enemyes, sayeth the Lorde. O mother, alas that euer thou dyddest beare me, an enemye and hated of the whole lande: Though J neuer lente nor receyued vpon vsury, yet all me speake euell vpon me. And the Lorde answered me: Lorde not J ꝑ then vnto good? Come not J to the, when thou artest trouble? helpe the, when thyne enemye oppresseth the? Doth one vpon hurte another, or one metall that cõmeth from the South, another? As for youre riches and treasure, J wyll geue them out in to a praye, not for ony money, but because of all youre synnes, that ye haue done in all youre coastes. And J wyll bringe you with youre enemyes in to a lande, that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kyndled in my indignacyon, shall burne you vp.

O Lorde (sayde J then) thou knowest all thynges, therfore remembre me, ꝙ vysyt me, deliuer me fro my persecuters: Receyue not my cause in thy longe wrath, yet thou knowest, ꝑ for thy sake J suffre rebuke. When J had founde thy wordes, J ate them vp greedely: they haue made my hertte ioyfull ꝙ glad. For J call vpon thy name, O Lorde God of Hoostes. J dwell not amõge the scorners, neyther is my delyte therin: but J dwell only in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast fylled me with bytternes. Shall my heuynes endure for euer? Are my plages so greate, that they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water, that falleth, and can not continue? Vpon these wordes, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: If thou wylt turne agayne, J shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylt take out the thynge that is precious from the vile, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. They shall conuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them ꝙ so shall J make the a stronge wall of stele agaynst this people. They shall fyght agaynst the, but they shall not preuayle. For J my selfe will be with the, to helpe the, and deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde. And J wyll rydde the out of the handes of the wycked, and delyuer the out of the hande of Tyrauntes.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The prophesyeth the myserye of the Jewes. The thynge that the worshyppynge of Idoles ꝙ the contempt of Gods lawe, is the cause of their myserie. The prophesyeth the captyuyte of Babylon, and their deliuerance fro those agayne. The callyng of the Gentyles.

AGayne, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalt take ꝑ no wyfe, nor beget chyldre in this place. For of the chyldren ꝑ are borne in this place, of their mother ꝑ haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten the in this lande, thus sayeth the Lorde: They shal dye an horrible deeth, no man shall mourne for them, nor burye them, but they shall lye as dounge vpõ the earth. They shall perisshe thorow the swearde and honger, and their bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, ꝙ beastes of the earth. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde: Go not vnto them, that come together, for to mourne and wepe: for J haue taken my peace from this people (sayeth the Lorde) yee my fauoure ꝙ my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buryed: no man shall bewepe them, no mã shall clyppe or shaue hym selfe for them.

Psal. lxxix. Jer. xlv.a.

There shal not one visit another, to mourne with the for their deed, or to cõforte them. One shall not offre another the cuppe of consolacyon, to forget their heuynes for father ꝙ mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feaste house, to syt downe, moche lesse to eate or drincke with the. For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Jsraell: a* Beholde, J shall take awaye out of this place, the voyce of myrth and gladnesse, the voyce of the bredegrome and of the bryde: yee ꝙ that in youre dayes, that ye maye se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they saye vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lorde deuysed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence ꝙ synne, ꝑ we haue done agaynst the Lord oure God? Then make thou the this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth ꝑ Lord) and haue cleued vnto straunge goddes, whõ they haue honoured and worshypped: but me haue they forsaken, ꝙ haue not kepte my lawe. And ye with youre shamefull blasphemyes, haue exceaded the wyckednes of youre fathers. For euery one of you folowyth the frowarde and euell ymagynacyon of his owne herte, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therfore wyll J cast you oute of this lande, in to a lande that ye and youre fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue straunge goddes daye and nyght, there wyll J shewe you no fauoure. Beholde therfore (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall no more be sayed: The Lorde lyueth, whyche brought the chyldren of Jsraell out of the lande of Egypte: but, it shall be sayde, ꝑ Lord lyueth, that brought the chyldren of Jsraell from the North, and from all landes where J had scatred them. For J wyll bringe them agayne in to the lande, that J gaue vnto their fathers.

Deu. xxviii. Jer. xxiii.b.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) J wyll sende out many b* fyshers to take them, ꝙ after ꝑ wyll J sende out many hunters to hunte the out, from all mountaynes and hylles ꝙ out of ꝑ caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, nether can their wycked dedes be kepte close out of my syght. But fyrste wyll J sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemies and synnes, wherwyth they haue defyled my lande: Namely, wyth their stynkyng Idols and abhominacions, wherwith they haue fylled myne heritage. O Lorde, my my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto ỹ from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verely our fathers haue cleued vnto lyes, their Idols are but vayne ỹ vnprofitable. How cā a man make vnto his goddes, which are not able to be goddes. And therfore I wyll ones teach them, saieth the Lorde, I wyll shewe them my hande ỹ my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put their confidence in man, & those blessed that trust to God. Manners hert to wretched. God is the searcher of the hert. The kyngs waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commanded.

a THe Jnne of Juda) is written in the table of youre hertes, and grauen so vpon the edges of your aulters with a penne of yron and with an adamant clawe: that youre chyldren also maye thinche vpon youre aulters, woddes, thicke trees, hye hylles, mountaynes ỹ feldes. Wherfore, I will make all youre substaunce ỹ treasure be spoyled, for the great synne that ye haue done vpon your hye places thorow out all the coastes of youre lande. Ye shall be cast out also from the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the seruy bondage of youre enemyes, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue myngled fyre to my indignacyon, whyche shall burne euermore. Thus saieth the Lorde: Cursed be the b man that putteth his trust in man, & a* that taketh flesh for hys armeand he, whose herte departeth from the Lorde. He shall be lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wildernes. As for the good thing that is for to come, he shal not se it: but dwell in a drye place of the wildernes, in a salt and vnoccupied lande. * Blessed is the man, that putteth hys trust in the Lorde, and whose hope in the Lorde hym selfe.* For he shalbe as a tre, that is planted by the water syde: which spreadeth out hys rote vnto moystnesse, whom the heate can not harme, when it cōmeth, but his leaues are grene. And though there growe but lytle fruite because of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth fruite. Amonge all thynges lyuinge, man hath the moste discreptfull and vnsercheable herte.

Who shall then knowe it? Euen I the Lorde searche out the grounde of the herte, ỹ trye the reynes, and rewarde euery man accordinge to hys wayes, and accordinge to the fruyte of his councels.

The discreptfull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no ponge. He commeth by ryches, but not ryghteously. In ỹ middest of his life must he leaue them behinde hym, and at the last he foūde a very foole. But thou (O Lord) whose trone is moste glorious, excellent and of moste antiquite, whych dwellest in the place of oure holye reste: Thou art the comforte of Jsraell. All they that forsake the, shal + be confounded: all they that departe from the, shalbe written in earth, for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lord, and I shall be whole: saue thou me, and I shalbe saued, for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of ỹ Lord: Lett it come. Where as I neuertheles lefte nge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. For I neuer despred eny mans deeth, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not now terrible c vnto me, O Lorde, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in parell. Let my persecuters be cōfounded, but not me: let them be afraied, and not me. Thou shalt bringe vpō them the tyme of their plage, and shalt destroye them right sore. +

Agayne, thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder the gate, where thorow the people and the kynges of Juda goo in and out, yee vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and saye vnto them: Heare ỹ worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Juda, and all ye cytesyns of Jerusalem, that go thorowe thys gate: This the Lorde commaundeth: Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorowe the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of youre houses in the Sabboth. b* Ye shall do no labour therin, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded youre fathers. Yow be it they obeyed me not, neither herkened they vnto me: but were obstynate ỹ stubburne, ỹ neither obeyed me, nor receyued my correccyon. Neuertheles, yf ye will heare me (saieth ỹ Lord) ỹ beare no burthē in to ỹ cytie thorow this gate vpon the Sabboth: If ye d will halowe the Sabboth, so that ye do no worcke therin: then shall there go thorowe the gates of this cytie, kynges and princes, that shall syt vpon the stole of Dauid: They shall be caried vpon charettes, and ryde vpō horses, both they and their princes. Yee whole Juda and all the cytesyns of Jerusalem shall goo here thorowe, and this cytye shall euer be the more and more inhabyted. There shall come men also from the cyties of Juda, from aboute Jerusalem, & from the lande of Ben Jamin, from the playne fyldes, from the mountaynes and from the wyldernesse: whiche shall bryng burntoffrynges, sacrifyces, oblacions, and incense, and offre vp thanckesgyuyng in the house of the Lord. But yf ye wyll not be obedyent vnto me, to halow the Sabboth, so & ye will beare youre burthens thorow the gates of Jerusal. vpon the Sabboth: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the houses of Jerusalem, and no man shall be able to quench it.

a* That taketh fleshe for his arme, that is, that putteth his truste in anye thynge but in the Lorde.

b* Ye shall do no labour ther in, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded youre fathers. &c. The foundacyon of the sayth, is to beleue Goddes promeses, and that made the whole worlde, and doeth also gouerne it: and further that he knoweth and will iudge all thinges. &c. These thynges dyd the lawe requyre in kepynge of the Sabboth, to confesse bothe wyth worde and spyrit: and to geue vp lyngerynge heade to the hearyng & interpretynge of the lawe, to thynche of the glorye of God, and to refreine the faythfull soule with the foode of the worde, to mynyster occasion also vnto the symple that they lykewise might attempte suche thinges in their houses amongest their housholde folkes, to be prayfull ouer the werynes of suche nepghboures as labored soare all the weke longe, and releace the, to attende and geue hede to the exercyses of the spirite and to the consolacyon and comforte of their nepghboures: not onlye to abstayne from outwarde workes, and fulfyll their appetytes and lustes, for that dyd the Lord forbyd. The Sabboth shuld be applyed to the lefull seruynge of God, not to synfulnes and wantonnesse. It is commaunded to be sanctyfyed, not to be polluted and defyled wyth naughtynesse. To God alone must we also hepe it, and call on his name: other Godes or goddes felowes ought we not to enquyre of, nor fall downe vnto them. But whē suche occasyons come as turne oure treast in to occupacyon and labour, then ought we to remembre that the Sabboth was ordeyned for man, not man for the Sabboth. Mar.ij.d. so that in the meane season, the feare of God and the charitye towarde oute nepghboure (which are the cheafe and principall thynges in the obseruacyō of the Sabboth) be not lyghtely regarded.

The.xviij.Chapter.

God threteneth by the exaumple of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the kyngdoms of the worlde, and to helpe them agayne when they amend. The conspiracye of the Jewes against Jeremye. Hys prayer against his aduersaryes

THis is another communicacyō, A that God had with Jeremye, saying: Aryse, and go downe in to the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Now when I came to the Potters house, I founde hym makynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessell & the Potter made of claye, brake amonge hys handes: So he he ganne a new, and made another vessell, accordynge to hys mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Jsrael, sayeth the Lord? Beholde, ye house of Jsrael: ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the Potters hande.

When I take in hande to rote out, to de- B stroye, or to waste awaye eny people or kingdome: yf that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuysed) conuerte from their wickednes: Immediatly, I a* repente of the plage, that I deuysed to bryng vpon the. Speake now therfore vnto whole Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuysynge a plage for you, and am takynge a thynge in hande agaynst you.

Therfore let euery man turne from hys C euell waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do ryght. But they saye: No more of this, we wyll folowe oure owne ymaginacyons, and do euery man accordyng to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayeth & Lord: Aske amōge the Heathē, yf eny man hath hearde soch horryble thynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpō the stony rockes of Libanus) wasshen the feldes? Or maye the sprynges of waters be so drawen awaye, that they runne no more, geue wasshynesse, nor make fruitefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifyce vnto vayne Goddes. And whyle they folowed their owne wayes they are come out of the hye streete, & gone in to a fote waye not vsed to betroden. Where thorowe they haue brought their lande in to an euerla stynge wyldernesse and scorne: So that whosoeuer trauapleth therby: shalbe abashed, and wagge their heades. With an East wynde will I scatre them, before their enemyes. And when their destruccion cōmeth, I wyll turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagyn smothynge agaynst this Jeremy. Per thys dyd euen the Jere.xi.d. prestes, to whom the lawe was committed: the Senatours, that were the wysest, and the prophetes, whiche wanted not the worde of God. Come (sayde they) lett vs cut out hys D tunge, & let vs not regarde his wordes. Con-

The.xix.Chapter.

We prophesyeth the destruccyon of Jerusalem, for the contempt and dispysynge of the woorde of God.

A MOreouer, thus sayde the Lorde vnto Jeremy: Go thy waye, and bye the an earthen pytcher, & bringe forthe the Senatours, & chefe prestes in to the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, which lieth before the porte that is made of bryck, & shewe them there the woordes, that I shall tell the, & saye thus vnto them: Heare the woorde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and ye cytesyns of Jerusalem: *Thus sayeth the Lord of Ho-
*iii.Re.xxi. Jer.vii.c. stes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bring soche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it, shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed this place, and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neither they, their fathers, nor the kynges of Juda haue knowne.
B They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes, for they haue sett vp an aulter vnto Baall, to burne their children for a burntoffrynge vnto Baall, which I neither cõmaunded, nor charged the, neither thought ones there vpon.

Beholde therfore, the time cõmeth (saieth the Lorde) that this place shall nomore be cal
a Of Topheth ye haue before in the.vij.g. led. a Topheth, nor the valley of the childre of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter. For in thys place wyll I slaye the Senatours of Juda and Jerusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of their enemyes and of them that seke their lyues. And their dred carcases wyll I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde.
C And I wyll make this cytie so desolate, and despysed, that who so goeth ther by, shall be abashed and wast vpon her, because of al her plages.

*I wyll fede them also with the fleshe of *Therm.iiij. Deu.xxviij. their sonnes and their daughters. Yee euery one shall eate vp another in the besegynge & straytnesse, wherwith their enemyes (yͤ seke their lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pytcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the me, that shalbe with the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: Euen so wyll I destroye thys people and cytie: as a Potter breaketh a vessell, that can not be ma de whole agayne.

Jn Topheth shall they be buried, for they
D shall haue none other place. Thus wyll I do vnto this place, also sayeth the Lorde, and to iiij.Re.xxiij. them that dwell therin: yee I wyl do to thys cytie as vnto Topheth. (For the houses of Je rusalem & the houses of the kynges of Juda are defyled, lyke as Topheth) because of all yͤ houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacrifyce vnto all the hoost of heauen and poured out drinche offrynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremye came from Topheth, where the Lorde had sent hym to prophecye, and stode in the courte of the house of the Lorde, and spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes the God of Jsrael: Beholde, I will bringe vpon this cytie and vpon euery towne aboute it, all the plages that I haue deuysed against them: for they haue bene obstinate, & wolde not obeye my warnynges.

The.xx.Chapter.

Jeremye is smytten and cast in to prison, for preachyng of the woorde of God. He prophesyeth the captiuite of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mocked gasse, for the worde of God. He is compelled by the spirite to preache the woorde, wyll he wyll he not.

WHen.a* Phashur the preacte, the sonne of Emer, chefe in the
A house of the Lorde, harde Jeremy preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremye, & put hym in the stockes, that are by the hye gate of Ben-Jamim, in the house of the Lorde. The nexte daye folowynge Phashur brought Jeremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremy vnto hym: The Lorde shall call the nomore Phashur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearfull and afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll make the afrayed, the thy selfe, and all that fauoure the: which shall ye rysse wyth the swearde of their enemyes, euen before thy face.

And I wyll geue whole Juda vnder the B power of the kynge of Babylon, which shall carie some vnto Babylon personers, & slaye some with the swearde. Moreouer, all the substaunce of this lande, all their precyous and gorgeous workes, all costlynesse, & all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I geue in to yͤ handes of their enemyes, which shall spoyle them, and carie them vnto Babylon. But as for ỹ (O Phashur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babylon with all thine housholde, & to Babylon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye, and be buried: thou & all thy louers, to whom thou hast preached lyes. O Lorde, thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, & makest me stronge agayne. All the daye longe am ỹ despysed, & laughed to scorne of every man: because I haue now preached loge agaynst malycious Tyranny, & shewed them of destruccion. For the which cause they call the worde of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me vere to the worst.

Wherfore, I thought from hence forth, not to speake of hym, nor to preach eny more in hys name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my herte and in my bones, which whe I wolde haue stopped I might not. For why, I herde so many derisyons and blasphemues, per zeuen of myne owne companions, and of soch as were conuersaunte with me: whiche wente aboute, to make me afrayed, sayinge, vpon hym, let vs go vpon him to feare hym and make hym holde his tonge: ỹ we maye ouer come hym, and be auenged of hym.

But the Lorde stode by me, lyke a myghtie giaunte: therfore my persecuters fell, and coulde do nothing. They shall be sore cõfoumded, for they haue done vnwyselp, they shall haue an euerlastynge shame. And now, O Lorde of hoostes, thou ryghteous sercher (which knowest the reynes and the very herte:) let me se them punished, for vnto the I committe my cause.

P Synge vnto the Lorde, and prayse hym, for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hande of the violent. b* Cursed be the daye, wher in I was borne: vnhappye be the daye, wherin my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father ỹ tydynges, to make hym glad, sayinge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Lett it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties whyche the Lorde turned vp syde downe (when he had hearde longe the wicked rumoure of the) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe, & because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrth myghte not haue come out, but remayned styll in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mother wõbe? To haue experience of all laboure & sorowe, & to leade my lyfe wyth shame?

¶ The notes.

a* Thys Phashur was the hye bysshop of the temple, the rynge leader of false Prophetes, the cheyfe heretike taker, that is, the ouerthrower of true godlynesse. The dignite of preestlode geue vnto him he abused. For he taught not and reproued by the worde, but feared the godly with cruelye. He is not the greatest mã that striketh, but he is the stroger that is stryken. He not onelye stroche but also parsoned hym that with stode hym not, but patientlye loked for the helpe of God. It is no newe thyng (pe may se) for Bysshoppes to persecute the Prophetes of the Lorde, for their preachyng of the trueth and constancye.

b* What is sygnyfyed by cursinge of the daye is shewed in Job. iij. a. Thys sentence and other lyke are not to be take as examples of impacyence in holy men, but as the confession of the frayltye of man, complaynynge thus vnto hym that onelye can helpe and cõfort the.

The xxi. Chapter.

The prophecyed that Zedekiah shall be taken, & the cyte burned.

THese are ỹ wordes that ỹ Lord spake vnto Jeremye what time as kynge Zedekiah sent vnto hym Pashur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah preaste, sayinge: Aske counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon besegeth vs, yf the Lorde (peraduenture) wyll deale wyth vs, accordynge to his marueylous power, and take hym from vs. H

Then spake Jeremy. Geue Zedekiah this answere. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell, beholde, I wyll turne backe the weapens, that ye haue in youre handes, wherwith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, whyche besege you rounde aboute the walles, and I wyl bynge them together in to the myddest of this cyte and I my selfe wyll fight agaynst you, with an outstretched hande, and with a myghtye arme, in great displeasure and terrible wrath and wyll smyte them, that dwell in this cyte: per both men and catell shall dye of the pestilence.

And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shall delyuer Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, & hys seruauntes, hys people (& soch as are escaped in the cyte, from the pestilence, swearde, and honger) in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon: yee in to the handes of their enemyes, in to the handes of those that folowe vpon their fyres, whiche shall smyte them with the swearde: they shall not spare them, they shall not haue no mercye vpon them. I

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde:* beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and death. Who so abydeth in this cyte, shall perish: ether wt ỹ swearde, with honger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, ỹ besege it, he shall saue hys lyfe, and, a* shall wynne hys soule for a praye. For I haue sett my face agaynst this cyte (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It muste be geuen in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, and be burnt with fyre. L Deu. xxx. a. Jer. xxxviii. Jere. xxxix. a

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda, saye thus: Heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayeth ỹ Lorde

My mastre

myniſtre ryghtwouſines, and that ſoone, de-D lyuer the oppreſſed from vyolent power: or euer my terrible wrath breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne ſo, that no man maye quench
it, because of the wyckednes of youre ymagynacions. Beholde (ſayeth the Lorde) I will come vpō you, that dwell in the valleyes, roc-kes & feldes, & ſaye: Tush, who will make vs
afrayed? or who will come into oure houſes?
For I wyll vyſet you (ſayeth the Lorde) becauſe of the wickednes of youre inuencions and wyll kyndle ſuch a fyre in youre wod, as ſhall conſume all, that is aboute you.

The.xxij.Chapter.

He exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghtwouſines. VVo vpō Jeruſalem is prouyded into cap-tyuytye. The death of Selum the ſonne of Joſias is propheſyed.

A Thus ſayde the Lorde alſo: Goo

commaundeth: kepe equyte and ryghtwouſ-

of the violent: do not greue ner oppreſſe

B And yf ye kepe theſe thinges faythfully,
then ſhall there come in at the dore of thys houſe kynges, to ſyt vpō Dauids ſeate: they ſhall be caryed in Charettes and ryde vpon horſes, both they & their ſeruauntes, & their people: But yf ye wyll not be obedient vnto theſe commaundementes, I ſweare by myne owne ſelfe (ſayeth the Lorde) this houſe ſhall

the kynges houſe of Juda: Thou art the head

I will prepare a deſtroyer with his weapens

Dyd not thy father eate and drincke, and oppreſſed and poore to their ryght then pro-ſpered he well.

For wherof came this, but onlye becauſe
he had me before hys eyes, ſayeth the Lorde.

They ſhall not mourne for hym (as they vſe E

they ſaye vnto hym: Alas ſyre, alas for that noble prynce. But as an Aſſe ſhall he be buried, corrupte and be caſt without the gates

Clymme vp the hyll of Libanus (O thou

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare ye worde of the Lorde: Write this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperite shall this mã haue all hys lyfe longe. Neither shall eny of his sede be so happie, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Juda.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

He speaketh against euell Curates that make hauock of the flock of the Lord. Of the conuersacyon of the remnaunt of the Jewes to the Lord. The comynge of the true shepherde Christe is prophecyed. Against false prophetes. Whose prophesi gouerneth the wordes of God, God commyttyth the secrets of the hearers. Against Prophetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myracles of false Prophetes.

a Eyze. xxxiiij.

WO be vnto the shepherdes, that destroye, and scatre my flocke, sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore, thys is the commaundemẽt of the Lorde God of Jsrael, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, & loke not vpõ thẽ. Therfore now will I vyset the wickednes of youre ymaginacyons, sayeth the Lorde: And will gather together the. a* remnaunt of my flocke, from all landes that I had dryuen them vnto, & will bringe them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increase. I will set shepherdes also ouer them whiche shall fede them. They shall no more feare and dreade, for there shall none of them be losse, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme b comneth, sayeth the Lorde, that I will rayse vp the ryghtuous braunche of Dauid, which Jere. xxxiij. c shall beare rule, and discusse matters wyth wysdome, & shall sett vp equyte & rightuousnes agayne in the earth. Esay. xi. a.

In hys tyme shall Juda be saued and Jsrael shall dwell without feare. And thys is Deu. xxxiij.
the name that they shall call hym: euen the Lorde oure ryghtuous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme cõmeth, sayeth the Lorde, i. Cozin. i. d.
that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Jsrael Jere. xvi. c.
out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, and led the sede of the house of Jsrael, out of the North lande, and from all countrees where I had scatred them, & they shall dwell in their owne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my bodye because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronchen man (that by the reason of wyne can take no reste) for verye feare of the Lorde, and of hys holy wordes: Jere. viij. a.
Because the lãde is full of aduouterers, where thoow it is destroyed and mourneth, and the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yee the waye that men take, is wycked, c and their gouernaunce is nothinge lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For the prophetes & the prestes them selues are poluted ppocrytes, and their wyckednes haue I founde in my house, sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore, their waye shall be slypperye in the darcknesse, where in they maye stacker and fall. For I wyll bringe a plage vpon thẽ, euen the yeare of their visytacyon, sayeth the Lorde. I haue sene folye amonge the Prophetes of Samaria that they preached for Baal, & disceyued my people of Jsrael.

I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduouterye, and presumptuous lyes. They take the moste shamefull men by the handes, flatryng them, so that they can not returne from their wickednes. All these wyth their cytesyns are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes concernynge the prophetes: Beholde, I wyll Jere. xj. b.
fede them with wormwod, and make them dryncke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is the sprõge of ppocrisye come in to all the lande.

And therfore the Lorde of Hostes gruetly D
pou this warnynge: Heare not the wordes of Jere. xxvij. & xxviij. b.
the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and disceyue you: for they speake the meanynge of their owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde. They saye vnto them, that dispyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tusshe, ye shall Jeremi. xiij.
prosperr ryght well. And vnto all them, that Sophon. i. c. walcke after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tushe, there shall no misfortune happen you. For who hath spoken in the counsell of the Lord, that he hath hearde and vnderstande, what he is about to do? Who hath

hath marched hys deuyce, and herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is his indignacyon) shall go forth, and shall fal downe vpon the head of the vngodlye. And ℣ wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, vntyll he perfourme and fulfull ℣ thoughte of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayeth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But yf they had continued in my councell and Jerr.xiiij.b. herdemy wordes: they had turned my people from their euell wayes and wycked ymaginacyons. Am I then God that seyth but the thynge, whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farre of? sayeth the Lorde. Maye eny man hyde hym self so, that I shal not se him? sayeth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth? sayeth the Lorde. I haue herde well ynough, what the prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll this continue in the prophetes hertes, to tell lyes, and to preach ℣ craftye sotyltes of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (wyth the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forgete my name, as their forefathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let hym tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my worde, lett hym shewe it faythfully.

ℱ For what hath chaffe and wheate to do to gether? sayeth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the prophetes, b* that steale my worde priuely from euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst the prophetes, that take vpon their tunges to speake: The Lorde hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst those prophetes, that darre prophecye lyes, and dyscerue my people with their vanities, and myracles, whom I neuer sent, nor commaunded them. They shall do thys people greate harme, sayeth the Lorde.

If this people, ether eny prophet or preste aske the, and saye: what is the. c* burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto the: What burthen? Therfore wyll I cast you fro me (sayeth the Lord) because ye youre selues are a burthen. And the prophet, preste or people that vseth this terme (the burthe of the Lord) hym wyll I visit, and hys house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another: What answere hath the Lorde geuen? or, what is the Lordes commaundement? ℭ And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shall speake nomore of it: for euery mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of Hostes oure God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the Prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen the? Or, what sayeth the Lord? And not ones to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: ffor so moch as ye haue vsed thys terme (the burthen of the Lorde) where as I not withstandinge sent vnto you and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayse you as a burthen, ℣ will cast you out of my presence: ye and the cytie also, that I gaue you and youre fathers: ℣ will bringe you to an euerlastynge confusyon, and in to soch a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

The vision of the .ij. gaskets of figges. The first betokeneth that parte of the people shuld be brought agayne fro captiuite. The seconde, that Zedekiah and the reste of the people shuld be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a vysion: Beholde, there stode two mannes of figges before the temple of the Lord, after that Nabucho donosor kynge of Babylon had led awaye captyue Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda, the myghtie men also of Juda, with the workemaysters, and coumpuge men of Jerusalem, vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were verye good figes, euen lyke as those that be fyrst ripe. In the other maunde were verye naughtye figes, which might not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me, what seyste thou Jeremy? I sayde: figes, wherof some be verye good, and some so euell, that no man maye eate them. iiij.Re.xxiiij

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good figes, so shall I knowe the men led awaye, whom I haue sent out of thys place in to the lande of the Caldees, for their profyte: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon them for the best, for I will bringe them agayne in to this lande: I wyll buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plante them, and not rote them out. And I wyll geue them an herte, to knowe, how that I am the Lorde. They shalbe my people, and I wyll be their God, for they shall returne vnto me with their whole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye figes, whyche maye not be eaten, they are so euell: Euen so wyll I (sayeth the Lorde) lett Zedekiah the kynge of Juda (ye and all hys

P mayne ouer in this lande, and them also that dwell in Egypte, to be vexed & plaged in all kyngdomes & landes. And wyll make them to be a reproue, a comen by worde, a laughinge stocke and shame, in all the places, where I shall scatre them. I wyll sende the swearde, honger & pestilence amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

The .xxv. Chapter.

Jeremye prophecyeth that they shall be in captyuyte lxx yeares, because they contemned and despised the worde of God. He threteth that after lxx yeares the Babylonians shalbe destroyed. The destruccion of al nacyons is prophecyed. He meaneth the Iewes of the ensuynge to wayting.

A THe sermon that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda: In the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, that was, in the fyrste yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, Which sermon, Jeremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jerusalem, on thys maner.

From the .xiij. yeare of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this present daye (that is euen .xxiij. yeare) the worde of the Lorde hath bene comynge vnto me. And so I haue spoke to you, I haue rysen vp early & haue geuen you warnynge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. Though the Lorde hath sent his seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wol be not enclyne youre eares to heare.

B He sayde: turne agayne euery man from hys euell waye, & from your wicked ymaginacions, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promysed you & youre forefathers: And go not after straunge goddes serue them not, worshipe them not, and angre me not wyth the workes of youre handes: then wyll not I punish you. Neuertheles, ye wolde not heare me (sayeth ỹ Lorde) but haue defyed me with the workes of youre hãdes, to youre owne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayeth ỹ Lorde of hoostes: Because, ye haue not herkened vnto my worde, lo, I wyll sende out, call for all the people, that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lorde, and will prepayre Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, and will bringe them vpon this lande, & vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, & will vtterly rote them oute. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse, a mockage and a continuall desarte.

C Moreouer, I will take frõ the .a. voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bredegrom & ỹ bryde, the voyce of ỹ anoynted, wyth the crelshettes: and this whole lande shall become a wyldernes, & they shall serue ỹ captyue people & the kynge of Babylon, thre score yeares and ten. When the .lxx. yeares
D are expyred, I wyll vysyt also the wickednesse of the kynge of Babylon & hys people sayeth the Lorde: ye and the land of the Caldees, and wyll make it a perpetuall wyldernes, and will fulfyl al my wordes vpon that land, which I haue deuysed against it: ye all that is wrytten in this boke, whyche Jeremy hath prophecyed of al people: so that they also shal be subdued vnto diuerse nacyons and greate kinges, for I wil recompense them, ac- Job. xxxiiij.
cordyng to theyr dedes and workes of their owne handes.

E For thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this * wyne cuppe of in- Esay. li.d. & Psal. lxxv.d
dignacion fro my hande, that thou mayest cause al the people, to whom I sende the, for to drinche of it: that when they haue dronckē therof, they may be mad, and out of their wyttes, when the swearde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all the people drynche therof, vnto whom the Lorde had sent me.

F But fyrst the cytie of Jerusalem, and all the cytyes of Juda, theyr kinges and princes to make them desolate, waste, despised & cursed according as it is come to passe this day. Pe & Pharao the kinge of Egipt, his seruauntes, his princes & hys people altogether one wyth another & al kinges of the land of Hus, al kinges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron & the remnaunt of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites & the Ammonites: al the kinges of Tirus & Sidon: the kynges of the Iles, that are beyonde the se: Dedan, Thema, Buz and the shauen Ismaelites: all the kynges of Araby, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the desarte: all the kynges of Zamri, al the kinges of Elam, all the kynges of the Medes, all kynges towarde the North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one wyth his neyghboures: Pe and all the kyngdomes that are vpon the whole earth. The kynge of Sezach, sayde he, shal drinche with them also.

G And saye thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Drinche and be dronckē, spewe & fall, that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the swearde, whyche I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they wyl not receyue the cuppe of thy hande, and drinche it, then tell them: Thus Jere. xlix.b. Lyrch. ij.b. i. Petri. iiij.c
doeth the Lord of hoostes threate you: drinck it ye shal, and that shortly. For lo, I begynne to plage the cyty, that my name is geuen vnto: thynke ye then, that I will leaue you vnpunyshed: Ye shal not go quyte. For why, I call for a swearde vpon al the inhabitours of the earth, sayeth the Lord of hoostes.

H Therfore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let hys voyce be hearde from his holy habitacion. Wyth a greate noyse shall he crye from his courte regall. He shall geue a greate voyce (like the grape gatherers) and Joel. iij.c. Amos. i.a.

the

the sounde thereof shalbe heard vnto ỹ endes of the worlde. For the Lorde had a iudgement to geue vpon all people, and will holde hys courte of iustice with all flesshe and punysshe the vngodly, sayeth the Lorde.

Jerm. xxv. b

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, a miserable plage shall go from one people to another, and a greate stompe water shall aryse from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde hym selfe slaye them, from one ende of the earth to another. There shall no mone be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as donge vpon the grounde.

Mourne (O ye shepherdes) & crie: sprinkle youre selues wyth ashes, O ye rammes of ỹ flocke: for the tyme of youre slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall lyke vessels cunningly made for pleasure.

Polychro.

The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flie, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horrybly, & the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde shall consume theyr pasture, & theyr best feldes shall lye dead because of the horryble wrath of the Lorde. They shall forsake theyr folded lyke as a lyon: for theyr landes shalbe waste, because of the wrathe of the destroyer, and because of hys fearefull indygnacyon.

The .xxvi. Chapter.

¶ Jeremye warneth the people to amendemẽt. He is taken of the Prophetes and preistes, & brought to iudgement. He depenge accused before the Princes and Rulers, that he had preached onely the wordes of god. The rulers and the people delyuer Jeremye, against the wyll of the Preistes and Prophetes after the ensample of Vryhah, whiche had deliuered Ieremye, that had preached the same thynges that Jeremye had preached. Vrijah the Prophete in hyde of Jehoiakim, conueyed to the well of God.

A

In the begynninge of the raygne of Jehoiakim the sonne of Josiah kinge of Juda, came thys worde from the Lorde, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (oute of the cyties of Juda) come to do worshyppe in ỹ Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Lake that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they wyll herken, and turne euerye man from hys wycked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I haue determed to bringe vpon them, because of theyr wycked inuencyons.

And after thys maner shalte thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye will not obeye me, to walcke in my lawes, whiche I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome I sende vnto you, rysynge vp tymelye, and sendyng: If ye will not folowe them (I saye) then will I do to thys house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and will make thys cytie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preistes the Prophetes and all the people hearde Jeremye preache these wordes, in the house of ỹ Lorde.

Nowe when he had spoken vnto all ỹ wordes, that the Lorde commaunded hym to preach vnto all the people, then the Preistes, ỹ Prophetes, and all the people tooke holde vpon hi, and sayde: thou shalte dye. Howe darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde it shall happen to thys house as it dyd vnto Silo? and thys cytie shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therein? C

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda hearde of this rumoure and they came fone oute of the kynges palace, vnto the house of the Lorde, and sat them doune before the newe dore of the Lorde. Then spake the preistes and the Prophetes vnto ỹ rulers, & to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynste this cite, as ye youre selues haue hearde with youre eares. 1ẽ. Reg. xb. g Jer. xxxvi. b D John. xix. a.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sente me to preache agaynste thys house and agaynst thys cytie all the wordes that ye haue hearde. Therfore amende youre wayes and youre adupleme̅tes, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he hath decreed against you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, do wyth me, as ye thynche expedyent & good. But thys shal ye know: yf ye put me to death ye shall make youre selues, thys cytie and all the inhabytours thereof, guylty of innocente blonde. For thys is of a treuth: that the Lorde hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in youre eares. E Mat. xxvii. a

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the preistes and Prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The Elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayde thus vnto all the people: Micheah the Morasthite, which was a Prophet vnder Ezechiah kynge of Juda, spake to all ỹ people of Juda: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes: Sion shalbe plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wood. Dyd Ezechiah the kyng of Juda, & the people of Juda put hym to death for this? No, verely but rather feared the Lord, & made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the whiche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage, ỹ he had decreed agaynst them. Shulde we then do suche a greuous dede agaynst oure soules? There was a Prophete also, that preached lykewyse in ỹ name of the Lorde, called Vrijah the sonne F Micha. iii. a of Semeiah of Lariathiarim: this man preached also against thys cyttye and against this lande, accordynge to all as Jeremye sayeth.

Nowe when Jehoakim the kyng with all the 16.Reg.xxiv.d estate and princes had hearde his wordes, the kynge went about to slaye hym. Whē Uriah perceyued that, he was afrayed, & fled, and departed into Egypte.

6.Reg.xix.a Mat.6.c. Then Jehoakim the kinge sente seruauntes into the lande of Egypte. Namely, Elnathan the sonne of Achabor and certayne men with hym into Egipte, whiche fetched Uriah oute of Egypte, and brought hym vnto kyng Jehoakim that slewe hym with the sweard, and caste hys dead bodye into the comon peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremye, that he came not into the hādes of the people to be slayne.

Jeremye, at the commaundement of the Lorde, sendeth bondes to the kynge of Juda, and to the other kynges that were repayred vnto him, whereby they are monyshed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not false Prophetes.

21 In the beginninge of the raigne of Jehoakim the sōne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde vnto Jeremye from the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes & chaynes, & put them about thy necke, & sende them to the kynge of Edō, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Ammon, the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sydō: and that by the messaungers, whiche shall come to Jerusalem vnto Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, and byd them saye vnto theyr maysters Thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell, speake thus vnto youre maysters: I am he that made the earthe, the men, & the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my great power and outstretched arme, & haue geuen it vnto whome it pleased me. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the poche of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym, those I will let remayne styll in theyr owne lande (sayeth the Lorde) and they shall occupye it, and dwell therein.

Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye maye lyue. Wherfore will ye make this citie to be destroyed? b. But yf they be true Prophetes in deede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be cō mytted vnto them, then let them praye ỹ Lord of Hoostes, that the remnaunte of the ornamē tes (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kyng of Juda and at Jerusalem) be not carryed to Babylon also. For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoke concerning the pyllers, the lauer, the seate and the residue of the ornamētes that yet remaine in this citie, which Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon toke not, when he caryed awaye Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda, with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, captyue.

Yea thus hath the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell spoken, as touchynge the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house of the kynge of Judahs house, and of Jerusalem: They shalbe caryed vnto Babylon, & there they shall remayne, vntyll I vyset them sayeth the Lorde. Then will I bringe them hyther agayne. And thus was done in the same peare: euen in the begynnynge of the raygne of Zedekiah kynge of Juda.

The.xxviii.Chapter.

The false Prophecye of Hananiah the Prophete. Jeremye sheweth that his Prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the exaple of the other Prophetes. He brynge inspyred of the Lorde reproueth Hananiah, prophecyinge lyes vnto them.

BVt in the fourthe yeare of the raygne of Zedekiah kyng of Juda, in the fyfth moneth, It happened, ỹ Hananiah ỹ sonne of Assur ỹ Prophet of Gabaō, spake to me in ỹ house of the Lord, in the presence of the prestes & of all the people, & sayd. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Jsrael: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and after two yeare wyll I bryng againe into thys place, all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon caryed awaye from thys place vnto Babylon. Yea, I wyll bryngе againe Jechonias the sonne of Jehoahim the kynge of Juda hym selfe, with all the prysonners of Juda (ỹ are caryed vnto Babylon) euē into this place sayeth the Lorde, for I wyll breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the Prophet Jeremye gaue answere vnto ỹ Prophete Hananiah, before the prestes and before all the people that were presente in the house of the Lorde. And the Prophet Jeremye sayd: Amen: the Lord do that, & graūt the thynge, whyche thou hast prophecyed: that he maye bryngе againe all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the prysonners from Babylon into the place. Neuertheles, herken thou also, what I wyll saye, that thou and all the people maye heare: The Prophetes that were before vs in tymes paste, whyche prophecyed of warre, or trouble, or pestilence, eyther of peace, vpon many countreys and greate kyngedomes, were proued by this yt God had sende them in very dede) when ỹ thynge came to passe, whyche that Prophete tolde before.

L And Hananiah the Prophete toke ỹ chaine Deut.xxiii.d Jere.xxvii.a. from the Prophet Jeremies neck, and brake it and with that sayde Hananiah, that all the people myghte heare: Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyll I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, frō the necke of all nacyons, yea & that within thys two yeare. And so the Prophete Jeremye went hys waye. Now after that Hananiah the prophet had taken the chayne from the Prophete Jeremyes necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lord came vnto the Prophete Jeremye saynge: Go, and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Thou hast broke the D chayne of wode, but in steade of woode thou shalte make chaynes of yron. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Jsrael: I will put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all thys people, ỹ they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, yea & so shal they do. And I wyll geue him the beastes in the felde. Jere.xxix.a.

Then sayde the Prophete Jeremye vnto the prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye the) Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people into a false beleife. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll sende the out of the land, & within a yeare thou shalte dye because thou hast falsely spoken agaynste the Lord. So Hananiah the Prophete dyed the same yeare in the seuenth moneth.

The.xxix.Chapter.

The pystle of Jeremye, sent vnto them that were in captyuyte in Babylon. He prophecyeth their returne from captyuyte after.lxx. yeares. He prophecyeth the destruccyon of the Kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusalem. He reproueth false Prophetes that deceaued the people. The death of Semeias the Nehelamyte is prophecyed.

THis is the copye of the letter, ỹ A Jeremye the Prophete sent frō Jerusalem vnto the prysoners: the Senatours, prestes, prophetes, and all the people, whome Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babylon after ỹ tyme that kynge Jechonias, and his Mother, hys chamberlaynes the princes of Juda & Jerusalem the workemaysters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. Whiche letter Elasah the sonne of Saphā and Gamariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whome Zedekiah the kynge of Juda sente vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes letter.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God B of Jsrael, I spoken vnto all the prysonners, that were led from Jerusalē vnto Babylon: buylde you houses to dwell therein: plante you gardens, that ye maye eniope the frutes therof: take you wyues, to beare you sonnes & doughters: prouyde wyues for youre sonnes, and husbandes for youre doughters, ỹ they maye get sonnes and doughters, and that ye maye multyplye there. Labour not to be frwe, but seke after peace & prosperite of the citie, where in ye be prysoners, and praye vnto God for it: For in the peace therof, shall youre peace be. C For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Jsrael: Let not those prophetes and sothsayers that be amonge you deceyue you: and beleue not youre owne dreames. For why, they preach you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayeth the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfylled.lxx. yeares at Babylon, I wyl bring you home, & of myne owne goodnes I wyll cause you hyther agayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue deuysed for you sayeth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (whiche I geue you all redye) & ỹ ye might haue hope agayn. Ye shal crye vnto me, ye shall go & call vpon me, & I shall heare you. Ye shall seke me & fynde me,

The captyupte of Israel.

The Prophecye of Jeremye.

Yea, yf so be that ye seke me with your whole herte, I wyll be founde of you (sayeth ỹ Lord) & wil delyuer you out of prison, & gather you together agayne oute of all places, wherein I haue scatred you, sayeth the Lord: & wil bring you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caryed awaye captyue.

But wherr as ye say, that a. God hath raysed you vp Prophetes at Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernyng the kyng that sytteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the people that dwell in this cyte, youre brethre that are not gone with you into captyuyte. Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde I wyll sende a swearde, honger and pestilence vpon them, and wyll make them like vnsauerye figes, that maye not be eaten for bytternes. And I wyll persecute the wyth the swearde, with honger and death.

I wyll delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngedomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whome I haue scatred them: and that because they haue not bene obedyent vnto my commaundementes (sayeth the Lorde) whyche I sente vnto them by my seruauntes the prophetes. I rose vp earlye, and sent vn to them, but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prisonners, whome I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell spoken, of Ahab the sonne of Colaiah, and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, whyche prophecye lyes vn to you in my name: Beholde I wyll delyuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before youre eyes. And all the prisonners of Juda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this terme of cursynge, and saye: Now God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto Zedekiah & Ahab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they sponed shamefullye in Israell.

For they haue not only defyled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyenge worldes in my name, whyche I haue not commaunded them. This I testifye, and allure, sayeth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamyte thou shalte speake vnto hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Because thou haste sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophonyah the sonne of Maasiah the prest, yea and vnto them to al the prestes: whe in thou wrytest thus vnto hym: The Lorde hath ordened the to be preste in stede of Jehoiada the preste, that thou shuldest be the chefe in the house of the Lorde about all Prophetes and preachers, and that thou myghtest put them in prison, or in the stockes. How happeneth it then, that thou halte not reproued Jeremye of Anathoth, whyche vnder leaueth of hys prophecyenge, And besyde all this, he hath sente vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnelye, that oure captyuyte shall longe endure? that we shuld buylde vs houses to dwell there in, and to plante vs gardens, that we might eniope the frutes therof. Whyche letter Sophonyah the preste dyd rede, and let Jeremye the Prophet heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayenge: Sende worde to all them that be in captiuite, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concernyng Semeiah the Nehelamyte: Because that Semeiah hath prophecyed vnto you wythoute my commyssyon, & broughte you into a false hope, therfor thus the Lorde doeth certyfye you: Beholde, I wyll vysyte Semeiah the Nehelamite, and his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge this people, and none of them shall se the good, that I wyl do for this people, sayth the Lorde, For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

The notes.

a. Such prophetes as preached vnto them the thynges whyche they were desyrous of, dyd they gretlye alowe: yea euen after they came to Babylon. In them they reioyced, as though they had bene sent of the Lorde, and yet were they in deade false Prophetes. But Ezechiel the true Prophete of the Lorde, whyche preached them contrarye, dyd they persecute. By the false Prophetes they sayde: God hathe sente vs Prophetes: and they: doctrine dyd they heare and folowe. But the true Prophete dyd they mocke and laughe to scorne: and wolde neyther brieue his doctrine, nor geue eare vnto it.

The .xxx. Chapter.

The restoure of the people from Babylon. God by his chastenynge: Betweth that the people is ynstull. The destruccyon of the enemyes of Israell.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremye, sayenge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell: Wryte vp dylygentlye al the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a boke. For lo, ỹ time commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyl brynge agayne the prisonners of my people of Israel and Juda, sayeth the Lord: For I wyl restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possessyon.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde, concernyng Israell and Juda: Thus sayeth the Lord: We heare a terrible crye, feare & disquietnesse. For what els doth this signifye, that I se Manelye, that al strong men smyte, euerye man his hande vpon his loynes, as a woman in the payne of her trauayle. Who euer sawe a man trauayle wyth chylde? Enquyre therafter, and se. Yea al their faces are maruelous pale:

Alas for this daye, whyche is so vnderfull, that none maye be lykened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the whyche he shall yet be delyuered. For in that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll take his yoche from from of thy necke, & breake thy bondes. They shall no more serue straunge Goddes vnder hym, but they shall do seruice vnto God their Lorde, and to Dauid their kynge, whome I will raise vp vnto them. * And as for the, O my seruaunt Jacob, feare not (saith the Lord) and be not afrayed, O Israell. For lo, I will helpe the also from farre, & thy seed from the lande of their captiuite.

Leui.xxvi.d. Ezec.xxxiiii.d. Jere.xlvi.g

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shalbe in rest, and haue a prosperous ydle, and no man shal make hym afrayed. For I am with the, to helpe the, saieth the Lorde. And though I shall destroye all the people, amonge whome I haue scatred the, yet will I not destroy the but correcte the, and that with discretion. For I knowe, that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde: I am sory for thy hurte and wounde. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

Jere.x.d. Ezec.xxxiii.a Lamen.i.a

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothynge for the. For I haue geuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdedes, for thy synnes haue had the ouer hande. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? My selfe haue pyte of thy sorowe, but for the multytude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue done this vnto the.

Jere.xvi.d

And therfore all they that deuoure the, shalbe deuoured, and all thyne enemyes shall be led into captiuite. All they that make the waste, shalbe wasted them selues: and all those that robbe the, wyll I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy healthe agayne, and make thy woundes whole, saieth the Lorde, because they reuyled the, as one caste awaye, and despysed, O Syon.

Jere.xxxiii.a

For thus saieth the Lorde: Beholde, I will set vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende his dwellynge place. The cyte shalbe buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their rygh te foundacyon. And out of them shall go thankesgeuynge, and the voyce of ioye.

I will multyplye them, and they shall not mynishe: I shall endue them with honoure, and no man shall subdue them. Their children shalbe as afore tyme, and their congregacyon shall continue in my syght. And all those that vexe them, will I vysit.

A captayne also shall come of them, and a prince shall spynge out from the myddest of them: hym will I chalenge to my self, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that geueth ouer his herte to come vnto me, saieth the Lorde. Ye shalbe my people also, and I will be youre GOD. Beholde, ye the other syde shall the wrathe of the Lorde breake out as a stormye water, as a myghtye whyrle wynde: and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

Ose.i.b Jere.l.b Jere.xxiii.f Jere.xxiii.c & xxx.b

The terrible displeasure of the Lorde shall not leaue of, vntyll he haue done, and performed the intente of his herte, which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. After those and the same tyme (saieth the Lorde) shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israel, and they shalbe my people.

Of the latter dayes what thynges they haue in Hoseae.i.a

The.xxxi. Chapter.

The prophecyeth vnto the people of Israell shalbe restored againe vnto their possessyons. To be turned from trouble to the ioye of God. The mercie of God to prophecyed. All the wicked shall not be there hurte. The newe Testamente and couenaunte is prophecyed. The Churche are taught and comforted of the Lorde. Ouer Iewes shall be restored that they shall not ouer be rooted out. God promyseth that he will call of the Iewes. The hatred against Israell.

Thus saieth the Lorde: The people of Israel which escaped in the wyldernes from the swearde, founde grace to come into their rest. Euen so shall the Lorde worke also agayne vnto me from farre, & saye: I haue ye with an euerlasting loue, therfore do I sparde my mercye before the. I will repayre the agayne (O thou doughter of Israel) that thou mayest be faste and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, and go forth with them, that lede the daunce.

Ose.xiii.b Ezech.xxxvi.b

Thou shalte plante vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and synge.

And when it is tyme, the watche men vpon the mounte of Ephraim shall crye: Aryse, let vs go vp vnto Syon to oure Lorde God, for thus saieth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the heade of the Gentyles: speake out, synge, and laye: The Lorde shall helpe his people, the remnaunte of Israell, and make them whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the wemen that be greate with childe, and suche as be also nere vnderstand the compasse of them that come agayne, shall be great.

Esay.xl.b Ose.xi.b

They departed from hence in heuynes, but with ioye will I bringe them hyther agayne. I will lede them by the ryuers of waters in a straighte waye, where they shall not stomble: for I will be Israels father, and Ephraim shalbe my fyrstborne.

Deut.xxiii.b Gen.xlviii.b

Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentyles, preache in the Iles that lye farre of, & saye: he that hath scatred Israell, shall gather hym together agayne, and shall kepe hym as a shepeherde doth his flocke. For the Lorde shall redeme Jacob, and ryde hym from the hand of the byolente. And they shal come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Syon, and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde shall geue them: Corne, wheate, wyne, oyle, younge sheepe & calues. And their conscience shalbe as a well watered garden, so they shal no more be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, both younge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and will comforte them, and make them ioyfull, euen from their borders. I will poure plenteousnes vpon the bodies of the Preestes, and my people shalbe satisfyed with good thinges, saith the Lorde.

Thus saith the Lorde: The voyce of heuynes, wepinge and lamentacion came vp into heauen: euen of Rachell mournynge for her children, and wolde not be comforted, because they were awaye.

But now saith the Lorde: leaue of from wepynge and crienge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shalbe rewarded saith the Lorde. And they shall come againe oute of the lande of their enemyes: Yea euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in thys, (saith the Lorde) that thy children shall come againe into their owne lande.

Moreouer I hearde Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne on this maner: O Lorde, thou haste corrected me, and thy chastening haue I receyued, as an vntamed calfe. Conuerte thou me, and I shalbe conuerted, for thou arte my Lorde God: Yea as sone as thou turnest me, I shall repente me my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shall a. smyte vpon my thyghe. For verelye I haue committed shamefull thinges: O let my youth beare this reproche and confusion.

Vpon this complaynte, I thoughte thus by my selfe: is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all my pastyme? For sence the tyme that I spake commened with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: therfore my bowels are moued vnto him, gladly and louyngly will I haue mercy vpon him, saith the Lorde. Set the watchemen, prouyde teachers for the set thyne herte vpon the right waye, that thou shuldest walcke, and turne againe (O thou doughter of Jsrael) turne againe to these cyties of thyne. Howe longe wilte thou go astraye, O thou vnthankinge doughter? For the Lorde wil worke a newe thynge vpon earthe: b. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Jsrael: Jt wil come theito, that whē I haue brought Juda oute of captiuyte, these wordes shalbe hearde in the lande and in his cities: The Lorde, whiche is the faire habitacion of righteousnesse, make the frutefull O thou holy hyll: And there shall dwell Juda, and all her cities, the shepeherdes and husbandmen. For I shall fede the hongry soule, and refreshe all faint hertes. When I heard this I came againe to my selfe, and mused, like as I had bene waked oute of a swete slepe.

Beholde (saith the Lorde) the dayes come, that I will sowe the house of Jsrael and the house of Juda, with mē & with catell. Yea it shall come theito, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes paste to rote them out, to scatre them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chastē them: Euen so will I also go aboute to buylde them vp againe and to plante them, saith the Lorde.

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the childrens teeth are set on edge: for euerye one shall dye for his owne misdede, so that who so eateth a sower grape, his teeth shalbe set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come (saith the Lord) that I wil make A newe couenaunt with the house of Jsrael & with the house of Juda: not after the couenaunte that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande, and led them oute of the lande of Egypte: whiche couenaunte they brake, wherfore I punyshed them sore, saith the Lorde: But this shall be the couenaunte that I will make with the house of Jsrael after those dayes, saith the Lorde: I will plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, & write it in their hertes, and will be their God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thence forth shall no man teache his neyghboure or his brother, and say: know the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me, from the loweste vnto the hyeste, saith the Lorde. For I will forgeue their misdedes, and wil neuer remembre their sinnes any more. Thus saith the Lorde which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the mone and starres to shyne in the night: whiche moueth the sea, so that the floodes thereof waxe fearce: his name is the Lorde of hostes. Lyke as this ordynaunce shal neuer be taken out of my sight saith the Lorde: So shall the sede of Jsrael neuer ceasse, but all waye be a people before me.

Moreouer, thus saith the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue can not be measured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth may not be sought oute: So will I also not caste oute the whole sede of Jsrael, for that they haue cō mitted (saith the Lorde). Beholde the dayes come saith the Lorde, that the cyte of ſ Lord shalbe enlarged from the toure of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. Frō thence shall the righte measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Gareb, and shall come about Goath, and the whole vallepe of the dead barcases, and of the ashes, and all Kedromoth vnto the broke of Kedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsgate toward the Easte, where as the Sanctuarye of the Lorde also shall be set. And when it is newe buylded, and set vp of this fashyon it shall neuer be broken, nor caste downe any more.

Jeremye in ward unto goston, because he prophesyed that the cyte shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the lyne that Jeremye bought of the comaundement of the Lorde, to signifye, that the people shoulde come againe to their owne possession. The people of God are bpo stronnesse, and he to shew Lord. To trust God in Gospell gyft, to repente that synnes maye be forgyuen.

THese wordes spake the Lord vnto Jeremye, in the tenthe yeare of Zedekiah kynge of Juda, whyche was the.xviij yeare of Nabuchodonozor, what tyme as the hinge of Babylons hoste laied seage vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremye the Prophete laye bounde in the courte of the prison, whiche was in the kinge of Judaes house: where Zedekiah the king of Juda cauled hym to be layed, because he had prophecyed of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wil delyuer this cytye into the handes of the kyng of Babylon, which shall take it. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees, but surely he shal come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon: whiche shal speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shal loke another in the face. And Zedekiah shalbe carped vnto Babylon, and there shall he be, vnto the tyme that I vysit him, sayeth the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hand to fight against the Caldees, thou shalt not prosperr.

Jer.xxxiij. b xxxvij.a. xxxix.a.

And Jeremye sayde. Thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hanameel ꝑ sonne of Selum, thyne Uncles sonne shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the lande, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of kinred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

And so Hanameel myne Uncles sonne came to me in the courte of the prison (according to the worde of the Lorde) and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I praye the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the countreye of Beniamin: for by heritage thou hast right to lowse it oute for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued, that this was the commaundement of ꝑ lord, and so I lowsed the lande from Hanameel of Anathoth, myne Uncles sonne, and weyed him there the money: euen seuen syckles, and ten syluer penis.

Jer.xxxij.b Ru.xxvij.a. xxxiij.a. Ruth.iij.a.

I cauled him also to make me a writtinge and to seale it, and called recaude therby, and weyed him there the money vpon the waighes. So I toke the euydence with the copye (when it was orderly sealed and redd ouer) and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah in the sight of Hanameel my cosen, and in the presence of the witnesses, that he named in the euydence, and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, sayinge: The Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take his sealed euydence & the copie, & to lay it in an earthen vessel, that it may longe endure.

For the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell hath determined, that houses, feldes and vynyardes shalbe possessed agayne in thys lande.

Now when I had delyuered the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lorde, sayinge: O Lorde God, it is thou that hast made heauen and earthe with thy greate power, and hye arme, and there is nothinge to harde for the. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the children, that come after them.

D Ps.xxxiij.a.

Thou art the greate and mighty God, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes, greate in counsel, and infinite in thought. Thine eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens children, Roma.ij.b. to rewarde euery one after his waye, and according to the frutes of his inuentyons. Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the Exod.vij. lande of Egypt (as we se this daye) vpon the to the.xij. people of Israel, and vpō those men: to make Chapter. thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye. Thou hast brought thy people Israell out of the land of Egipt, with tokens, & wonders, with a mighty hande, with a stretched out arme, and with greate terribleness: & hast geuen them this lande, lyke as thou hast promysed vnto their fathers: Namely, that thou wouldest geue them a land, that floweth with mylche and honye.

Now when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy law: but all that thou commaundedest the to do, that have they not done, & therfore come all these plages vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwarkes made now against the citie, to take it: and it shalbe wōne of the Caldees that beleage it, with swerde, & honger and death, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the: Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lord God) and commaundest me, that I shal lowse a pece of land vnto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the citie is delyuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me sayinge. Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all flesshe, is there any thynge then to harde for me. Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: beholde, I shall delyuer this cytie into the power of the Caldees, and into the power of Nabuche- Jere.xx.b.d & donozor the kynge of Babylon, they shal take xxij.b. it in. For the Caldees shal come, and wynne this citie, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, & the gaynous houses, in whose parietes they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drinckoffrynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For sythens the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Juda haue wrought wickednes before me ever from their youth vp, what have they els done, but provoked me with the workes of their owne handes? saieth the Lorde.

Or what hath this ppl here els, but a provokinge of my wrath, ever sence the day that I buylded it, vnto this houre? Wherin I cast it out of my sight, because of the great blasphemies of the children of Israell, and Juda, whiche they have done to provoke me: yea, they, their kinges, their princes, their priestes their prophetes, whole Juda, and all the cytesins of Jerusalem.

ff When I stode vp earlye, and taught them Jeremye. ii. d and instructe them, they turned their backes to me, and not their faces. They wouldē not heare, to be reformed and corrected. They have set their Goddes into the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. Jere. vii. a. d. They have buylded hye places for Baal in the valeye of the children of Hennom, to bowe their sonnes and doughters vnto Moloch: whiche I never commaunded them, neyther came it ever in my thought, to make Juda sinne with suche abominacion.

Moreover thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concerninge this cytie, whiche (as ye moute selues confesse) shalbe delyuered into the handes of the kinge of Babylon, whē Deute. xxx. a. it is wonne with the swearde, with hunger, and with pestilence. Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wherin I have scatred them in my wrath, in my fearfull, and greate displeasure: and will bringe them agayne vnto this place, where they shal dwell safely. And they shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God.

g And I will geue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes Psalm. xxxvi. a of their lyfe, that they and their children after them maye prosper. And I will set vp an everlastinge covenaunt with them, Namely, that I will never cease to do them good, and th t I will put my feare in their hertes, so that h they shall not ronne awaye from me.

Yea I will have a lust and pleasure to do them good, and faythfully to plante them in this lande, with my whole herte, and with al my soule.

For thus saieth the Lorde: lyke as I have brought all this great plage vpon this people: so will I also bringe vpon them all the good, that I have promysed them. And men shall have their possessions in this lande, whereof ye saye now, that it shall neyther be inhabited of people nor of catell, but be delyuered into the handes of the Caldees: Yea lande shalbe bought for money, & euidences made therupon and sealed before witnesses in the countre of Beniamin, and round about Jerusalem, in the cytes of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea and in the cytyes that are in the desert. For I will bringe their possessiōs hyther agayne, saieth the Lorde.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

The Prophete is monished of the Lorde, to praye for the deliueraunce of the people, whiche the Lorde promyseth. God threateneth Juda and bydde prayer vnto the people, for his owne truethe. Of the birth of Christ. The kingdom of Christ in the church shall never be ended.

A Moreover the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye on this maner, when he was yet bound in Jeremy. xxxii. a. the courte of the prison. Thus saieth the Lorde, whiche fulfilleth the thynge that he speaketh, the Lorde whyche performeth the thynge that he taketh in hande: euen he, whose name is the lorde thou hast * cryed vnto me, and I have heardē ther: I have shewed greate and hye thinges, * Exod. xiii. b. i. Reg. viii. b. whiche were vnknowen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concerninge the houses of this cite, and the houses of the kinges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorow the ordynaunce & weapens, when the Caldees come to besege them & they shalbe filled wt ye dead karkases of me, whom I will slaye in my wrath and displeasure: when I turne my face from this cytye, because of all her wickednes. Beholde (saieth the Lorde) I will heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the treasure of peace and truethe.

And I will returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israell, and I will set them vp agayne, as they were afore. ffrō all misdedes (wherein they have offended against me) I will clēse them. And al their blasphemies whiche they have done against me, when they regarded me not, I will forgeue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse and B honoure, amonge all people of the earthe, whiche shall heare al the good, that I will shewe vnto them: yea they shalbe afrayed and astonyed at all the good deedes and benefytes, that I will do for them. Moreouer thus saieth the Lorde: In this place, whereof ye saye that it shalbe a wyldernesse, wherein neyther people nor catell shall dwell: in lyke maner in the cytes of Juda and wythoute Jerusalem (whyche also shalbe voyde, that neyther people nor catell shal dwell there.) Shall the voice of gladnesse be hearde agayne, the voyce of the Bydegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall synge. Prayse the Lorde of hoostes, for he is louinge and his mercy endureth for ever) and the voyce of thē that shall offer vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I will restore the captyuite of this lande, as it was afore, saieth the Lord. Thus saieth the Lorde of Hoostes: It shall come yet therto, that in this lande, whiche is voyde frō men and catel, and in al the cytes of the land, there shalbe set vp sheperdes cotages: in the cytyes vpon the mountaynes, and in the cyties that lye vpon the plaine, and in the desert.

In the lande of Beniamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cytes of Juda, shall the shepe be nombred agayn, vnder the hand of him of him, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde.

+ Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lorde
Jerem.xiij.a that I wil performe that good thing, which I have promysed vnto the house of Israell & to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at the same tyme, I wil bringe forthe vnto Dauid, the braunche of righteousnes, and he shal do equite and ryghteousnesse in the lande. In those dayes shal Juda be holped, and Jerusalem shall dwel safe, and he that shal call her, is euen God our ryghteous maker. For thus the Lorde promyseth: Dauid shal neuer want one, to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israell: nether shal the preestes and Leuites wat one to offre alwaye before me burntofferinges, to handle the meatofferynges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

D And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Je Gene.viij.b. remy after this maner. Thus sayeth the lorde: Nay the couenaunt whiche I have made vp dayes and nyght be broken, that there shoulde not be day and nyght in due season: Then Gene.xvij.a & xxvj.c. may my couenaunt also be broken, whyche I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to have a sonne to reygne in hys Trone. So shall also the Preestes and Leuites neuer kepe, but serue me. For lyke as the starres of heauen may not be nombred, neither the sand of the sea measured: so will I multyplie the seade of Dauid my seruaunt, and of the Leuites my mynysters.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremy saying: Considerest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kindredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast awaye: for so farre is my people come, that they have no hope to come to gether any more, and to be one people again. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde: Yf I have made no couenaunt with day and nyght, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt: so that I will take no rulers out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will turne again their captiuite, and be mercyfull vnto them.

The.xxxiiij.Chapter.

The treatement that the cyte, and kinge Zedekiah also, shulde geuen into the handes of the kinge of Babylon. The kindnesse shewed vnto certayne Iewes, that were purposed to go as exyles into Egypte.

THese are the wordes whiche the
A Lord spake vnto Jeremy, what tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babylon, and all hys Hoste, (out of all the kingedomes that were vnder hys power) and all his people, fought agaynste Jerusalem, and all the cytyes therof. Thus saieth the Lord God of Israel: Go, & speake to Zedekiah the kinge of Juda, and tell him: The Lorde sendeth the this worde: Beholde, I will delyuer this cyte into the handes of the kinge of Babylon, he shal burne it, and thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, and delyuered into hys power. Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babylon in the face, and he shal speake to ỹ mouth to mouth, & the shalt thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O Zedekiah thou kynge of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swerde, but shalt dye in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges thy pangentfours, were burnte, so shalt thou be burnt also, & in the mourninge they shall saye: Oh Lorde. For thus have I determined sayeth the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremy the Prophet all these B wordes vnto Zedekiah kinge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kinge of Babylons hoste besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunt of the cytyes: Namely, Lachis, and Azecah, whiche yet remayned of the stronge defenced cities of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy the Prophete, when Zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shoulde be proclamed a libertie, so that euery man shoulde let his seruaunt and handmayde go free, Hebrue and Hebrueße, & no Jewe to holde his brother as a bond man. Now as they had consented, euē so they were obedient, and let them go free. But afterward they repented, & toke agayne the seruaunts and handemaydens, whome they had let go free, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lord C came vnto Jeremy from the Lorde hym selfe, saying. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: * I made a couenaunt with youre fathers Deuter.xv.a & Exod.xxi.a when I brought them oute of Egypte, (that they shoulde no more be bondmen) saying: When seuen yeares are oute, euery man shall let his bought seruaunte an Hebrue go free, yf he have serued him syx yeares. But youre fathers obeyed me not, and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned, & dyd ryght before me, in that ye proclamed, euery man to let his neyghboure go free, & in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the temple that beareth my name. But yet ye have turned youre selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this, that euery man hath required hys seruaunte and handmayden againe whom ye had let go quite and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be youre bondmen. And therfore thus sayeth the lorde: D ye have not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fredom vnto his brother and neighbour: wherfore I wil call you vnto a fredome, sayeth the Lorde, euen vnto the swerde, to the pestilence, & to hunger, & will make you to be plaged in all the kingedomes of the earthe. Yea those men that have broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the wordes of the appointment, which they made before me: whē they hewed the calfe in two, and when there Gene.xv.b. were throwne the two halfes therof. The Princes of Juda, the Princes of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the preestes and all the people of the lande, whiche wente thorowe the two syden of the calte. Those men will I gene into the power of their enemies, & vnto the hãdes of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

And their dead bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda and his Princes, I wil delyuer them into the power of their enemies, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoste, a. whyche now is departed from you. But thorowe my commaundement (sayeth the Lord) they shall come again before this cytye, they shall fyght agaynste it, winne it, and burne it. Moreouer I will laye the cities of Juda so waste, that no man shal dwell therin.

The notes.

a. The Babylonians were departed from them to go agaynste the Egyptians, whom when they had vanquyshed, they returned to fyght agaynste Jerusalem.

The .xxxv. Chapter.

The propounder the obedience of the Rechabites, & thereby confoundeth the myne of the Jewes. The commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. The ouerthrowe gyuen vnto the rebellious Jewes. The promyses prosperite vnto the Rechabites for their obedience vnto their father.

A THe wordes, whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, in ye raigne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, are these: Go
4. Reg. 23. c. vnto the house of the Rechabites, and call them out, and bringe them to the house of the Lorde into some commodyous place, and gene them wyne to drynche. Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazinjah, and his brethren and all his sonnes, and the whole housholde of the Rechabites, and brought them to the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the children of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: which was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne B of Sellum, whyche is the chefe of the treasorye. And before the sonnes of the hyneed of the Rechabites I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Drynche wyne. Jere. xxix. b. But they sayde: we drynche no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father cõmaunded vs sayenge: yea and youre sonnes shall neuer drynche wyne, bylde no houses, sowe no sede, plaute no vynes, yea ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwel in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father, in al that he hath charged vs, & so we drynche no wyne all oure lyue longe: we nor oure wiues, oure sonnes and oure doughters. Neyther bylde we any houle to dwell therin we haue also amonge vs neither vyneyardes nor corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accordynge vnto all, that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon came vp into the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye C escape the Hoste of the Caldees and the Assirians, and so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem. Then came the word of the lord vnto Jeremy sayenge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda & al the enhabitours of Jerusalem: Wil ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes? sayeth the Lord. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shoulde drynche no wine, are fall and surely kept: for vnto this day they drinche no wine, but obeye their fathers commaundemente. But as for me, I haue stand vp early, I haue Jere. xxv. a. spoken vnto you, and genen you earnest war xxvi. a. nynge, and yet haue ye not bene obedient vn to me. Yea, I haue sent my seruauntes, al the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, and sent you worde, sayenge: O turne you, euery mã from his wicked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge Goddes, to worshippe thẽ, that ye may contynue in the land which I haue genen vnto you & your fathers but ye would neither heare me, nor folow my.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne D haue stedfastly kept their fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus saieth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Beholde I will bringe vpon Juda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalẽ, al ye trouble that I haue denyded against them. For I Power. 1.c. haue spoken vnto them, but they wouldo not Esaye. 65.b. folowe. I haue called vnto them, neuertheles Jerem. 29.b. they wouldo gene me no answere. Jeremye also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabiten: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the god of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab youre father, & kept all his preceptes, and done accordynge vnto all that he hath bidden you: Therfore Jere. xxxv. d. thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israell: Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one of his stocke, to stand alwaye before me.

The .xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch writeth an Jeremye counsayle the boke of the curssio against Juda & Israel. He so sent wryte the boke vnto the people, & readeth it before them al. He is called before the rulers, & readeth it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a lyttel of it, & castech it in the fyre. There is another written at the commaundement of the Lorde.

IN the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye sayenge: Take A a boke, & wryte therin all the wor- Jerem. xxx. a. des, that I haue spoken vnto the, to Israel, to Juda, and to all the people, from the tyme that I began to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage whyche whych I have devised for them, they may preadventure turne, every man from his wicked Jere.xviij.a. waye, that I maye forgeve their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremye, al the wordes of the Jer.xlv.a. Lorde, whiche he had spoken unto him. And Jeremye commaunded Baruch, sayinge: I am in prison, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go you thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast written at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde, and reade them in the Lordes house upon the fastynge daye: that the people, whole Juda, and al they that come out of the cyties, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye mekely before the face of the Lord, and turne every one from his wicked waie. For greate is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken against this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd, accordynge unto all that Jeremy the Prophete cõmaunded him, readynge the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfth yeare of Jehoakim, the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, in the.ix. moneth when it was commaunded Jere.xlvi.a. that all the people of Jerusalem shoulde fast before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cyties of Juda unto Jerusalem.

Then read Baruch the wordes of Jeremye out of the boke within the house of the lorde,
L out of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne
Jer.xxxvi.d. of Saphan the Scrybe, whiche is beside the hyer lofte of the new dore of the lordes house: that al the people myght heare. Nowe when Michaeh the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had heard all the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke, he wente downe to the Kynges palace unto the Scrybes chamber, for there al the Princes were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Acabor, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, Zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the Princes. And Michaeh tolde them all the wordes, that he harde Baruch reade out of the boke before the people.

Then all the Princes sent Jehudi the sonne
M of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, unto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thyne hande the boke, wherout thou hast read before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hande, & came unto them. And they sayde unto him: Sit doune, and read the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch reade, that they might heare. Now when they had heard all the wordes, they were abashed one upon another, and sayde unto Baruch: we wyl certifie the kynge of all these wordes. And they N demaunded Baruch, saying: tell us, howe didest thou write all these wordes out of his mouth. Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes unto me with his mouth and I alone was with him, and wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde the Princes unto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde thy with Jeremye, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kynge to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the scribe and tolde the kynge all the wordes that he myghte heare. So the kynge sent Jehudi to fetch hym the boke, whiche he brought out of Elisama the Scribes chambre. And Jehudi read it, that the king & al the Princes, whiche were about hym, might heare. Now the king sat in the winter-house, for it was in the ninth Moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And when Jehudi had read three or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a Acto.xix.b. penne knyfe, and cast it into the fyre upon the herth, until the boke was al burnte in the fyre upon the herth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente his clothes: neyther the kinge him selfe, nor his seruauntes, though they heard all these
P wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besought the kynge, that he Q woulde not burne the boke: notwithstanding the kinge woulde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah the sonne of Ezriel and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes upon Baruch the Scrybe, and upon Jeremy the Prophete: but the lord hepte them out of the sight. After now that the kyng hath burnt the boke and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouthe of Jeremye: The worde of the Lord came unto Jeremye, sayinge: Take another boke, and wryte in it al the forsayde sermons, that were written in the fyrste boke, whyche Jehoakim the kinge of Juda hath burnte.

And tell Jehoakim the kinge of Juda: thus
R sayeth the Lorde: thou hast burnte the boke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou written therin, that the kynge of Babilõ shall come, and make this land waste, so that he shall make bothe people and catell to be fro. Regum out of it. Therfore thus the Lord sayeth of xxiiij.b. Jehoakim the king of Juda. There shal none of hys generacyõ sit upon the throne of David. His dead corse shalbe cast oute, that the Jere.xxij.c. heate of the daye, and the frost of the nyghte may come upon him. And I wil visyte the wickednes of him, of his seede, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euyll that I have promysed them (though they heard me not) wil I bringe upon them, upon the inhabytoures of Jerusalem, and upon al Juda. Then toke Jeremye another boke, and gaue it Baruch the Scrybe, the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremye: all the sermons that were in the fyrst boke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added unto the many mo sermons, then before.

The.xxxbiij. Chapter.

Jeremiah foreshoweth Sedechiah. He forbyddeth many Jewes to goo into Egypte. Jeremy goyng out the lite of Iuda

*Of Jeremias to whom he is beaten, & put in prison. & is delyuered by kynge Zedekiah.

ZEdekiah the sonne of Josiah, whome was made kyng thorow Nabuchodonozor kinge of Babylon, reygned in the lande of Juda in the stead of Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But neyther he, nor hys seruauntes, nor the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lord, whych he spake by the Prophet Jeremye. Neuertheles Zedekiah the kynge sent Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah and Sophonich the sonne of Maaseh the preeste to the Prophet Jeremye, sayenge: O praye thou vnto the lord oure God for vs. Now Jeremye walked fre amõg the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte, which when the Caldees that beleged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from theme.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye the Prophet, sayenge. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, thus answere shall ye geue to the kinge of Juda, that sent you vnto me for counsell: Beholde, Pharaos hoste whyche is come forthe to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte into hys owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, and fyght agaynst this cyte, wynne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lord. Deceyue not your owne myndes, thynkinge on thys maner: tush, the Caldees go now their waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees, that belege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tente, yet should they stande vp, and set fyre vpon this cyte. Nowe when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremye went out of Jerusalem, towarde the lande of Ben Jamin, to departe thence there amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamins porte, there was a porter, called Jeriah, the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of Hananiah, whyche fell vpon him, and take hym sayenge: thy myndo is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremye: It is not so. I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles Jeriah wolde not beleue him, but brought Jeremye bounde before the Princes. Wherfore the Princes were angrye with Jeremye, smytinge him to beaten, and to be layde in prison in the house of Jonathas the scribe. For the was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremye put into the dongeon and prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then Zedekiah the kynge sent for him, and called him, and asked him quietly in hys owne house, sayenge: Is there ought from the Lorde? Jeremye answered: yes that is, both: and thou (said he) shalt be delyuered in to the kinge of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Zedekiah: What haue I offended against the, against thy seruauntes, or against this people, that ye haue caused me to be put in prison? Where are youre prophetes whych haue prophesied vnto you, and sayd, that the kinge of Babylon should not come against you & this lande? And therfore heare now, O my Lord the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me no more into the house of Jonathas the Scribe, that I dye not there. Then Zedekiah the kinge commaunded to put Jeremye in the fore entre of the prison, and daylye to be geuen him a cake of breade, & ele no dighe meate, vntil al the breade in the cyte were eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remaineth in the fore entre of the prison.

The .xxxviii. Chapter.

Of the myssyon of the rulers Jeremye is put into a dongeon. At the request of Abdemelech the Chamberlaine, the kyng (Emanuel) Jeremy is to be brought fourth of the Dongeon. Jeremye chargeth the kynge how he might escape death.

SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phashur, Jucal the sonne of Selemiah, & Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all y people, namely on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Who so remayneth in this cyte, shall perishe, eyther with the sweard, with honger or with the pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Caldees shal escape, * winninge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. For thus sayeth the Lord: the cyte (no doute) must be deliuered into the power of the kinge of Babylon, and he also shal winne it. Then sayd the princes vnto the king: Syr, we beseche you, let this man to be put to death. For thus he discouraged the handes of the soudyars that be in this cyte, & the hãdes of al the people, whē he speaketh such wordes vnto thē. This man seeketh not for peace of the people, but mischefe. Zedekiah the kinge answered & sayde: lo he is in youre handes, for the king may denye you nothing. Then toke they Jeremye, and cast him into the dongeon of Melchiah the sonne of Hamelech, that dwelt in the fore entre of the prison. And they let downe Jeremye with cordes into into a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremy stack fast in the myre. Now when Abedmelech the Morian beinge a chamberlayne in the kinges courte, understode, that they had cast Jeremy into the dongeon: he went out of the kinges house, & spake to the king (which sat vnder the porte of Beniamin) these wordes: Myne Lorde the king where as these men medle with Jeremye the E prophet, they do him wrong. Namely, in that they have put him in prison, there to dye of honger, for there is nomore bread in the city. Then the kynge commaundeth Abedmelech the Morian and sayde: Take frō hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, & drawe vp Jeremy ỹ prophet oute of the dongeō, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, & went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges & worne cloutes, and let them downe vp a corde, into the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abedmelech the Morian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwyxte the and the corde, & Jeremy dyd so. So they
D drew vp Jeremy wyth corde and toke him out of the dongeon, & he remayned in the fore entry of the prison. Then Zedekiah the king sent & caused Jeremy the Prophete be called Jer.xxxviij.a vnto him, into the thirde entrye, that was by the house of the Lorde. And the kinge sayde vnto Jeremy: I wyll aske the some what, but hyde nothinge from me. Then Jeremye answerde Zedekiah: Yf I be playne vnto the thou wilt cause me suffre death: yf I geue the counsel, thou wylt not folowe me. So the king
F swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremye, sayinge: As truely as the Lorde liveth, that made vs these soules, I wil not slay the, nor geue the into the handes of the that seke after thy life.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto Zedekiah: Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes the God of G Israel: Yf case be, that thou wylt go forth vn to the kynge of Babylons Princes, thou shalt save thy life, and thys cyty shall not be brēt, yea both thou and thy housholde that escape
Jer.xxxviij.b. wyth youre lyues. But yf thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons princes, thē shall this cyty be delyuered into the handes of the Caldees whiche shal set fyre vpon it, & thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremy: I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in their handes, & so they to haue me in derysyon.

But Jeremye answerde: No, they shall not
H betrape the. O herken vnto the voyce of the Lord (I beseche the) wherin I speake vnto the, so shalt thou be wel, and save thy life. But yf thou wylt not go forth, the Lord hath told me this playnely. Beholde all the wemen that are left in the kynge of Judahs house, shall go out to the kyng of Babylons princes. For they thynche, that thou art discevued: and that men in whome thou diddest put thy trust, have gotten the vnder, & set thy fete fast in the mire, and gone their waye from the. Therefore all thy wyues with their children shall fle vnto the Caldees, and thou shalte not escape
I their handes, but shalt be the kinge of Babylons prisoner, and this cyte shalbe brente. Then sayd Zedekiah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceyue, that I have talked with the, & come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayde the kinge to the? hyde it not frō vs, and we wil not put the to death. Tel vs (we pray the) what sayde the kinge to the? Se thou geue them this answere: I have humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kinge had him. Then they held their peace, for they perceyued nothinge. So Jeremye abode stil in the fore entrie of the prison, vntil the daye that Jerusalē was wonne.

The.xxxix.Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor besiegeth Jerusalem. Zedekiah flyeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayne. Hys eyen are strake oute. Jeremy is preserued for. Abedmelech is delyuered from captyuyte, because of the confydence that he had in God.

NOw when the citie of Jerusalē was taken (for in the .ix. yeare of Zedekiah kinge of Juda in the A tenth Moneth, came Nabucho- Jere.xxxix.a. donozor the kinge of Babilon, vn.Re.xxv.a.
and all his Hoste, and besieged Jerusalem. And in the .xi. yeare of Zedekiah, in the fourth Moneth, the .ix. day of the Moneth, he brake into the citie). Then all the Princes of the king of Babilon came in, and sat thē downe vnder the porte: Nergel, Sarezer, Samegarnabo, Sarsachim, Rabsaris, Nergel, Sarezer, Rabmah, with all the other princes of the king of Babilon. And when Zedekiah the king of Juda & his soudiers saw them, they Jer.xxxix.a.
fled, and departed out of the citie by night thorow the kinges garde, & thorow the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they went towarde the wildernesse.

But the Caldees Hoste folowed faste af- B
ter them, and toke Zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought him prisoner to Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the king of Babilon caused the children of Zedekiah and all the nobles of Juda be slayne, before hys face at Reblath. And made Zedekiahs eyes to be put out, and bounde him with chaynes and sent him to Babilon.

Moreouer, the Caldees brēt vp the kinges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. vn.Re.xxv.b
As for the remnaunt of the people that were Jere.xxxix.b. in the citie, and suche as were come to helpe them (what soeuer was left of the comen sort)

Nabuzarad̄ the chefe captayne caried them to Babylon. But Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, let the raſcal people (and thoſe that had nothinge) dwell ſtill in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vineyardes and corne felde at the ſame tyme. Nabuchodonoſor alſo the kinge of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge, concerninge Jeremy, ſayinge: take & cherych him, and make muche of him: let him do him no harme, but intreate him after his owne deſyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabuſaſban the chefe chamberlayne, Nergalſarezer the treaſurer, and all the kinge of Babylons Lordes, ſent for Jeremy, and cauſed him be fet out of the fore entrye of the perſon, and committed him vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam the ſonne of Saphan, that he ſhould cary him home, & ſo he dwelt among the people. Jerem. xl. b.

Jer. xxxviij. d

Nowe whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the perſon, the worde of the Lord came vnto him, ſayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Morian: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Jſrael: Beholde the cruell and ſharpe plage that J haue decreed for this cite, will J bringe vpon them, that thou ſhalt ſe it: but J will delyuer the, (ſayeth the Lorde) and thou ſhalt not come in the handes of thoſe men, whom thou feareſt. ffor doutles J wyl ſaue the, ſo that thou ſhalte not perysshe with the ſwerde, but thy lyfe ſhalbe ſaued, and that becauſe thou haſte put thy truſt in me, ſayeth the Lorde.

The .xl. Chapter.

Jeremye hath licence to go whether he will. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jeruſalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan perſwaſeth hym to ſlee Godoliah.

Jere. xlij. a. Joſu. xxiij. b.

Thus is the maner how the lord intreated Jeremy, when Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had let him go free from Ramah, whither he had led him bounde amonge all the perſonners, that were caried from Jeruſalem & Juda vnto Babylon. The chefe captayn called for Jeremy, & ſayd vnto him: The Lorde thy God ſpake myghtely before of the myſery vpon this place. Now the Lorde hath ſent it, & performed it as he had promiſed: ffor ye haue ſynned agaynſt the Lorde, & haue not bene obedient vnto hys voyce, therefore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, J louſe the bandes from thy handes this daye: yf thou wilt now go with me vnto Babylon, vp thy fo: J wyll ſe to the, and prouyde for the. But yf thou wilt not go with me to Babylon, the remayne here. Beholde all the lande is at thy wil, loke where thou thinkeſt conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. Yf thou canſt not be contente to dwell alone, then remayne with Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam, the ſonne of Saphan: whō the kinge of Babylō hath made gouernoure ouer the cites of Juda, & dwell with him among the people, or remayne where ſoeuer it pleaſeth the. So the chefe captayne gaue him his expenſes with a rewarde, and let him go. Then went Jeremy vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam to Mazphah, & dwelt there with him among the people that were left in the lande. Jere. xxxix. b

C

Now when the Captaynes of the hoſte of Juda) which with their ſelowes were ſcatred abroad on euery ſide in the lande) vnderſtode that the kinge of Babylon had made Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam gouernoure in the land, & that man, wyfe & childe, yea & the poore men in the lande (that were not led captyue to Babylon) ſhould be vnder his iuriſdiction. They came to Godoliah vnto Mazphah: Namely, Jſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, Johanan, & Jonathah the ſonnes of Kareah, Sareah the ſonne of Thanhometh, the ſonnes of Ophai the Netophatite, Jeſaniah the ſonne of Maachati with their companions. And Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam, the ſonne of Saphan, ſwore vnto them, and their ſelowes on this maner: Be not afraied to ſerue the Caldees, iij. Re. xxv. dwell in the lande, and do the kinge of Babylon ſeruice, ſo ſhall ye proſpere. Beholde, J dwell at Mazphah to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, & to ſatisfye ſuch as come to vs. Therfore gather you wine, corne and oyle, & kepe them in youre ware houſes, & dwell in youre cities that ye haue in kepynge.

Yea, all the Jewes alſo that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in all the countreyes, when they hearde, that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam the ſonne of Saphan gouernoure vpō the that were left in Juda. All the Jewes (J ſay) returned out of al places where they fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mazphah, and gathered wine & other frutes, and that very much.

Moreouer Johanan the ſonne of Careah and al the captaynes of the hoſte, that were ſcatred on euery ſide in the lande, came to Godoliah in Mazphah, & ſayde vnto him: knowe ſt thou not that Baalis kynge of the Ammonites hath ſent Jſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, to ſlaye the? But Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then ſayd Johanan the ſonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mazphah theſe wordes ſecretely: Let me go, J pray the, and J wil ſlaye Jſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, ſo that no body ſhall knowe the. Wherfore he will kyll the, that all the Jewes whiche reſorte vnto the, myght be ſcatred, and the remnaunte in Juda perysshe? Then ſayde Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam to Johanan the ſonne of Careah: Thou ſhalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that men ſaye of Jſmael.

The .xli. Chapter.

Jſmael ſlayeth Godoliah gratefully, & many other beſyde hym. Johanan followeth after Jſmael.

In the ſeuenth Moneth it happened, that Jſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah the ſonne of Eliſama (one of the kinges bloude) came iiij. Re. xxv. b with

wyth them that were greatest about the kyng and ten men that were sworne with him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mazphah, & ate there together. And Jsmael the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that were sworne to him, starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan with the swerde, and slewe hym, whome the kinge of Babylon had made gouernoure of the lande. Jsmael also slewe al the Jewes, that were with Godoliah at Mazphah, & all the Caldees that he founde there waytynge vpon him.

The next daye after that he had slaine Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowne) there came certayne men from Sichem, from Silo and Samaria, to the nombre of.lxxx. whiche had shauen their beardes, rent their
B clothes, and were al bemy, hauyng meat offrynges, and incense in their handes, to offre it in the house of the Lord. And Jsmael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mazphah weppinge, to mete them. Nowe when he met them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came in the middest of the citye, Jsmael ỹ sonne of Nathaniah (with the that were sworne vnto him) slewe them, euen at the myddest of the pyt. Amonge these.lxxx. men there were ten, that sayde vnto Jsmael: Oh slay vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of wheat barleye, oyle, and honye. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethren. Now ỹ pit, wherin Jsmael dyd cast the dead bodies of the men (whome he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Asa caused to be made, for 4.Re.xv.b.c. feare of Baasa the kynge of Jsrael, and the same pyt did Jsmael fyll wyth slayne men. As for the remnaunte of the people the kynges doughters and all the people that were
C yet left at Mazphah, vpon whom Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure. Jsmael the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prisoners toward the Ammonites. But whē Johanan the sonne of Careah and all they whyche had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoste wyth him, hearde of all the wickednes that Jsmael ỹ sonne of Nathaniah had done,
Deu.xiij.c. they toke their companions, and wente oute
Reg.xij.b. for to fyght wyth Jsmael the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the waters of Gabaon in Gabaon. Nowe when all the people, whome Jsmael led captyue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the other captaynes of the hoste, they were glad. So all the people of that Jsmael had caryed awaye from Mazphah, were broughte agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Jo-
D hanan the sonne of Careah. But Jsmael the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Johanan with eyght of hys swome companyons, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah & al the captaynes of the hoste that were wt hym, toke the remnaunt of the people whome Jsmael the sonne of Nathaniah had led awaye (When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had relieued from him: fighting men, women and children, and gelded men, whō they broughte agayn from Gabaon: & wente from thence, & sat them downe at Gerath Camaim, whyche lieth beside Bethlehem, that they might go me to Egipte, for feare of the Caldees, of whome they were afrayed, because that Jsmael the Jerem.xl.d sonne of Nathaniah had slaine Godoliah Ahikams sonne, whom the kyng of Babylō had made gouernoure in the lande.

The.xlij. Chapter.

The Captaynes aske counsel of Jeremye, what they ought to do. Jeremye monysheth the remnaunt of the people, not to go into Egypte.

THen all the rulers, and Johanan ỹ A sonne of Careah, Jezaniah the sonne of Osaiah came wyth all the people frō the least vnto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremye Jerem.xlij.d.
the Prophet: O heare our peticion, that thou Jer.xxxvij.a. mayest pray for vs vnto the Lord thy God, and for the remnaunt, wherof there be very few left of manye, as thou seyst vs, that the Lorde thy God may shew vs a way to go in & tell vs, what we shoulde do. Then Jeremye the prophete sayd vnto thē: I haue heard you. Beholde, I wil pray vnto God your lorde, as ye haue required me: & loke what answere ỹ lord geueth you, I shal certifye you therof, & kepe nothing backe frō you. And they sayd vn Josue.i.d to Jeremye: The lord of truethe & faythfulnes
i.Macha.iij.d be our witnesse, that we will do all, that the Jerem.xlij.a.
Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether B it be good or euill. We will herken vnto the voyce of oure Lorde God to whom we sende the, that we may prospere, when we haue followed the voice of the Lorde oure God.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye. Then called he Jehonan the sonne of Careah, & al the captaynes of the people that were wyth hym: yea, and all the people from the least to the moost, and sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Jsrael, vnto whom ye sent me, to lay forth your prayers before him. Yf ye will dwell in this lande, I shall buylde you vp, and not breake you downe: I shall plante you, and not rote you out: for I am pacified, as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kinge of Babylon, of whome ye stande in awe. O be not afrayed of hym, sayeth the Lorde: for I wilbe with you, to helpe you, and deliuer you from his handes. I wil pardō you, I will haue mercy vpon you, and bryng you agayne into youre owne lande.

Neuertheles, yf ye purpose wt to dwell C in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God, but will saye then, we wil not dwell here, but go into Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre, heare the noyse of trūpet, nor suffre hunger, there wil we dwell. Wherfore heare now the worde of the Lord Ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayeth the

Lorde

Lorde of Hoostes the God of Israel: yf ye be wholy purposed to go into Egipte, and to be there as straungers, the swerde that ye feare, shall overtake you in Egipte: and the hunger whereof ye be here afrayed shall hange upon you into Egipte, and there ye shall dye. For all they, that of set purpose undertake to go in to Egipte, there to take them selues of their mysery, shal perysshe with the swerde, with hunger and pestilence, not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, yͭ I will bringe upon them.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Israel: lyke as my wrath and indignacion is come upon the enhabytoures of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure go forth upon you also, yf ye go into Egipte: For there ye shalbe reuyled, al hated, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shall never se it more. The Lorde forbiddeth you (O ye remnaunt of Juda) that ye shal not go into Egipte.

And forget not that I have warned you earnestly this day, els shall ye begyle youre selues. For ye sent me vnto the Lorde oure God, and sayde: O praye thou the lord oure God for vs: and lyke what answere the lorde oure God geueth the, that bringe vs agayne & we shall do therafter. Now have I shewed and declared vnto you the wyll of the Lorde youre God, for the whiche cause he hath sent me to you. Yf ye wyll not folowe it, be sure, that ye shall perysshe with the swearde, with hunger & pestilence, euen in the same place, where youre lust was to go, and dwell.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Johanan carryeth the remnaunt of the people into Egipte, contrary to the worde of Jeremye. Jeremye prophesyeth the destruccion of Egipte.

Now when Jeremye had ended all the wordes of the Lord God vnto the people (for their sakes to whome God had sent hym) Azariah the sonne of Osaiah, & Johanā the sonne of Kareah with al yͭ proud personnes, sayde vnto Jeremye: Thou lyest, the Lord our God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shoulde not go into Egypt, and dwel there. But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the against vs, that he might bringe vs into the captiuite of the Caldees: that they myght slay vs, and carye vs away prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah, & al the captaynes of the hoste, and al the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord, Namely, to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hoste, carryed awaye al the remnaunt in Juda, that were come together agayne from the Heathen (amonge whome they had ben scatred) to dwell in the land of Juda. Men, women, chyldren, the kynges doughters, all those that Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had left with Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam. They carryed awaye also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, & so came into Egipte: for they were not obeyent vnto the commaundement of God. L Thus came they to Thaphnis.

And in Thaphnis the word of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy, sayenge: Take great stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the brickwall, vnder the dore of Pharaos house in Thaphnis that all the men of Juda maye se, and saye vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lord of Hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wil sende and call for Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babylon my seruaunt, and wyll set hys Jere. xliii. seate vpon these stones that I have hyd, and he shall spreade hys tente ouer them.

And when he commeth, he shall smyte the lande of Egipte with slaughter, with pestilence, and with the swerde. He shal set fyre vpon the temples of the Egiptians Goddes, and burne them vp, & take them selues prisoners. Moreouer he shall araye him selfe with the lande of Egipte, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shal departe his waye from thence in peace. The pyllers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egipte: shall he brake in peaces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians Goddes.

The xlvii. Chapter.

He reproueth the people for their Idolatrye. They that flye into the wildernesse of the Lorde, are chastened. The destruccion of Egipte and the Jewes therin, is prophesyed.

This is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy concerninge all the Jewes, whyche dwelt in Egipte, at Magdall, at Thaphnis, at Memphis & in the lande of Patures. Thus sayth the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Israel: ye have sene al the mysery that I have brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cytes of Juda, so that this day they are desolate, & no man dwellinge therin: and that because of the great blasphemyes, which they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they went backe to do sacrifyce, and worshyppe vnto straunge Goddes: whome neyther they, nor ye, nor youre fathers have knowne. How be it, I sent vnto them my seruaunts al the prophetes: I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warninge: O do no such abhommable thinges, & thinges that I hate. But they wolde not folow nor herken, to turne from their wyckednes, and to do no more sacrifice vnto straūge Goddes. Jere. xxvi. xxxii.

Wherfore myne indignacion and wrathe was kyndled, and it burnt vp the cytes of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate as it is come to passe this day. Now therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Israel. How happeneth it, that ye do so great euyl vnto your owne soules, thus to destroy the men and women, children and babes of Juda? so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your owne hādes: when ye offer vnto straūge

Goddes

Egypt. Goddes in the lande of Egipte, where as ye be gone to dwel. That ye mpght vtterly perysshe, and that ye mpght be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednes of your fathers there, the wickednes of the kinges of Juda & their wyues, & wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the lande of Juda, in the cytye and in the lande of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sory this daye, ye feare not neyther walke ye in my lawe, and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and youre fourfathers.

K Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: I am fully determyned and determyned, to punysh you, and to vtter out al Juda. As for the remnant of Juda that purposlye were vnto Egipte, there to exile the of their mysery I will take them, and they Amos.ix.b. Jerem.xlij.c. and.xliij.a. shall al be destroyed. In the lande of Egipte shall they perysshe beynge consumed with the swerde, and with honger. For from the least vnto the moost, they shall perysshe with the swerd and with honger. Moreouer they shall be reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will vysyt them that dwel in Egipte, as I haue visited Jerusalem: with the swerde, with honger and with pestilence: Jer.xxxix. So that none of the remnant of Juda, which are gone to dwell in Egypte, shalbe left to come agayn into the lande of Juda al though they thincke to come thither again & to dwel there. For none shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

D Then all the men which knewe that their wyues haue offered vnto straunge Goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues, that stode there, yea and al the people that dwelt there in Egipte in the cytye of Patures, answerde Jeremy, & sayd: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, we will in no wyse heare them: but whatsoeuer Jerem.xlij.b. goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that wyl we do. We wyl do sacrifice, and offer oblacions vnto the Quene of Heauen: lyke as we & our fourfathers, our kinges and oure heades haue done in the cities of Juda, & in the stretes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnesse of victayles, then were we in prosperyte, and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

But sence we left, to offer, and to do sacrifice E vnto the Quene of Heauen, we haue had scarsenes of all thynges, and perysshe with the (Machab.i.b. swerde and honger. Lyke all, when we wemē dyd sacrifyce and offred vnto the Quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and poure vnto her dyuine offerynges, to do her seruice wythoute oure husbandes wyles.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people, to the men, to the wemen and to all the folcke which had geuen hym that answere: Did not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces, that ye Jerem.xxxix. youre fourfathers, youre kynges and rulers (with all the people) haue offred in the cities of Juda, in the stretes and land of Jerusalem? And hath he not considered this in his mynde? In so muche, that the Lorde mpght no longer suffre the wickednes of youre wurkynges, and the abhominable thinges which ye dyd? Is not youre lande desolate and voyde, yea & abhorred, so that no man dwelleth therin any more, as it is come to passe this daye? Deut.i.a.

Dyd not al this happen vnto you, because ff ye made suche sacrifyce, and sinned against m.Reg.xxiij. the Lorde? Ye hene not folowed his voyce, to Jeremy.xl. walke in his lawe, in hys ordynaunces and in r.b. his statutes. Baruch.i.b.

Yea, this is the cause, that all mysfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer Jeremye spake vnto all the people, and to al the wemen: Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egipte: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Ye & your wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, the thing that ye haue fulfylled in dede.

Yea this haue ye sayde: We wyl not kepe Jerem.xliij.b. but do the thynge that pleaseth vs: we will do sacrifice and poure out drinckofferynges to the Quene of heauen. Purposlye haue ye set vp your owne good meanynges, & fulfylled haue ye fulfylled youre owne intente. And therefore: heare the worde of the Lorde al Juda, ye that dwel in the lande of Egipte.

Beholde, I haue sworne by my greate name, sayeth the Lorde, that my name shall not G be rehearsed thorow any mans mouth of Juda, in al the lande of Egipte: to saye: The lorde Gene.xxij.a. God lyueth, for I wil watch, to plage them, and not for their welth. And al the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egipte, shal perysh with the swerde and with honger, vntil they Jerem.xlij.a. be vtterly destroyed.

Neuertheles, those that fled away for the swerde, shal come agayne into the land of Juda, but very fewe of them. And all the remnaunte of Juda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwel, shal knowe whose wordes shalbe founde true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I wyll vysyt you in this place, sayeth the Lorde, and that ye maye knowe, howe that I (wythoute doute) will perfourme my purpose vpon you, to punisshe you. Beholde, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll delyuer Pharao Hophra kynge of Egipte into the handes of his enemyes, that seke after his life: euen as I gaue Zedekiah H4.Re.xxv.a. the kinge of Juda into the handes of Nabuchodonozor kinge of Babylon, whiche fought Jere.xxxvij.b. after his life.

The xlv Chapter.

Baruch to repentaunce of Jeremye.

THese are the wordes that Jeremye the prophete spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias, after that he had written these sermons vnto a boke at the mouthe of Jeremy. In the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kinge of Juda. A Jere.xxxvi.b

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell vnto the, O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast wayttyng.) Wo is me, the Lorde hath geuen me payne for my trauaile: I haue weried my selfe with sighyng he, and that I finde no rest: Therfore tell him, O Jeremye, that the Lorde sayeth thus: Beholde, the thing that I haue buylded wyll I breake doune agayne, and rote oute the thinge that I haue plated, yea thys whole lande. And seheest thou yet promocyon? Loke not for it, and desire it not. For I wyll bryng a miserable plage vpon all flesshe sayeth the Lord. But thy lyfe will I geue the for a pray wheresoeuer thou goest.

The .xlvi. Chapter.

The prophecyeth the destruccyon of Egypte. Nebuchadnezar is appointed to Israel.

THese folowe the wordes of the Lorde to the prophete Jeremy, whiche he spake vnto the Gentyles. Their wordes folowing preached he to the Egipcians concernyng the Hoste of Pharao Necho kyng of Egypte, when he was in Charcamis beside the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babilon slew him, in the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah, kynge of Juda.

Xli. Reg. xxiij. 2. Paral. xxxv.

Pe make ready buckler and shylde, pe go forth to fyght. Pe harnesse youre horsses, and set youre selues vpō them. Pe set youre helmettes fast on, pe bryng forth speares, pe scoure youre swerdes, and put on youre brest plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, that I se you so afrayed? why turne pe backe? wherfore are youre worthyes slayne? Pea they runne so fast away, that none of them loketh behynd hym. Fearefulnesse is fall vpon euerychone of them sayeth the Lord. The lyghtest of foote shall not flie awaye, and the worthies shall not escape.

Towarde the North by the water of Euphrates, they shal stomble and fal. But what is he this, that swelleth vp as it were a flood, roaring & raging like the streames of water? It is Egypte that ryseth vp lyke the floude, & casteth oute the waters wyth so greate noyse. For they saye: We wil go vp, & wyll couer the earth: we will destroy the cities, wyth the that dwel therin. Get you to horse backe, rol forth the Charrettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Mohans, ye Libias with youre buckelers ye Lidians with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lorde God of Hostes, a day of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge him of his enemies. The swearde shall deuoure, it shalbe satisfyed and dashed in their bloud. For the Lorde God of Hostes shall haue a slaye or offeringe towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Galaad) and bringe tryacle vnto the doughter of Egipte. But in vayne shalt thou go to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The Heathen shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shalbe full of thy confusyon: for one stronge man shal stomble vpon another, howe then shoulde they not fall both together?

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the Prophet Jeremy, concerninge the host of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon, which was sent to destroy the land of Egipt: Preache out thorowe the lande of Egipt, and cause it be proclamed at Magdol, Memphys and Taphnis, and saie: Stande stil, make the redye, for the swearde shall consume the rounde aboute.

How happeneth it that thy mightie worthies are fallen, why stode they not fast? Eurn because the Lord thrust them doune. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer styll vpon another. One cryed vpon another: Vp let vs go againe to oure owne people, and to oure owne naturall countreye, fro the swerd of oure enemye.

Crye euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egypte, the tyme wyl bringe seduction. As truely as I liue (sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes) it shal come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus ryseth in the sea. O thou doughter of Egipte make ready thy geer to flye. For Memphis shalbe voyde and desolate, so that no man shal dwel therin. The lande of Egipt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe, but one shal come out of the north to pitch her forwarde. Her wagied soudiars that be with her, are like fat calues.

They also shal flie away together, and not abide: for the daye of their slaughter and the tyme of their visytacyon shall come vpon them.

The crye of their enemies shall make a noise, as the blast of a trompet. For they shal enter in with their Hoste, and come with axes as it were hewers doune of wood. And they shal cut doune their wood, sayeth the Lord, wythoute any discretion. For they shall be mo in nombre then the grashoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tel them. The doughter of Egipte shalbe confounded, when she shalbe delyuered into the hādes of the people of the North.

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I will visit that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egipte, yea bothe their Goddes & their kinges, euen Pharao, and all them that put their trust in him. Yea I will deliuer the into the hādes of those, that seke after their lyues, Namely, into the power of Nabuchodonozar the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of his seruaunte. And after all these thinges it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, sayeth the Lorde.

But be not thou afrayed (O my seruaunte Jacob) feare not thou, O Israell. For lo, I wyl helpe the from farre, and thy sede from the lande of thy captyuyte. Jacob also shall come agayn, & be in rest: he shal be ryche, and no man

no man shall do hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my servaunte) sayeth the Lord, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nacions amonge whome I have scatred the. Neuertheles, I wyll not consume the, but chastē the, and correcte the: yea and that wyth discretion: nether wyll I spare the as one ỹ were fantasselle.

¶ The notes.

a. The Chaldees spilled the Egyptyans, at ỹ flombde of Euphrates, whiche was towarde the North: where as yet theyr host was wōderous greate, and theyr houses and charettes manye. But the greater theyr hoste was, the more cruell was theyr slaughter: so dyd the Lorde punyshe theyr wyckednesse, geuynge them into the handes of the Chaldees: & therfore called the Prophet the day of their slaughter the dape of the Lordes vengeaunce, & the a slayne offerynge of the Lorde.

b. As thoughe he sayde. Hytherto (O Egipt) haste thou bene as a goodlye fayre calfe, for thyne aboundaunce of ryches. Therfore as bullockes and oxen are stonge with hornettes & pricked forwarde with gades (or as some call them gaddes) so shall the Babylonyans stynge and pricke the, and dryue the to flyghte & ouerthrowe the. By hym that shulde come oute of the North, is vnderstaunde the kyng of Babylon and hys hoste.

c. Her waged soudyars, &c. The meanynge is, that the hyred hoste of the Egyptyans gathered of the coastes that bordered therron, shulde be fearfull and weake, and more dayntye & delicious, then stronge and manfull, as men fattened lyke shall fedde oxen, so ỹ they shulde also flye wyth the Egyptyans, when theyr mysterye dayne ende, and when the daye of theyr vysitacyon and punyshement shulde come.

The.xlvii.Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynste the Philistines.

THese are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete agaynste the Philistines, before ỹ Pharao smote the cytye of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shall waters aryse oute of the North: & shall growe to a greate floude, ouerflynge ouer and couerynge ỹ land, the cytyes, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they ỹ dwel in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse & stampynge of theyr stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of theyr charettes and at the rombelynge of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to theyr children, so feable and wery shall theyr handes be: at the same tyme, when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make waste both Tirus, Sidon and all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye all Palestina and the other Iles, that be dwelled from the Ilande. Baldnesse is come vpon Azah, Ascalon wyth her other valleys shall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wylte thou stape, O thou sweard of the Lorde? Turne agayne into thy sheeth, reste, and leave of. But howe can it reste, when the Lorde hym selfe hath geuen hym a charge agaynste Ascalon, and raysed it vp agaynste the cytyes of the sea coast?

The.xlviii.Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

THus sayeth the Lorde of hoastes the God of Israel a- A gaynste Moab: wo be to the cytie of Nabo, for it shal be layed waste, broughte to confusyon & taken. Yea thy stronge cytye of Sarnathia- rim shalbe broughte to shame, and afrayd: Moab shall no more be had in honoure: Wyckes counsell shalbe taken vpon Heseboū. Come (shall they saye) let vs rote them oute, ỹ they maye be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, yea that they maye no more be thought vpon: Thus the sworde shall persecute the: A woyce shall crye from Horonaim: Wyth greate wastynge and destruccyon, is Moab made desolate.

a. 2.reg.xvii.b. Esa.xv.a.xvi Ezech.xxv.b. Sophon.ii.b. Jesue.xiii.c

And this crye shalbe hearde in all her cytyes. At the gopnge vp vnto Luche there shall aryse a lamentacyon: & doune towarde Horonaim, there shall be hearde a cruell & a dead ly crye: Get you awaye, saue youre lyues, and be lyke vnto the heath in the wyldernes. For because thou haste trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalte be taken. Chamos wyth hys preestes and prynces shall go awaye into captiuite.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cytyes, none shall escape. The valeys shalbe destroyed, and the feldes shall be layed waste: lyke as the Lorde hath determed.

b. Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedelye: for her cytyes shalbe made so desolate, that no mā shall dwell there in. c. Cursed be he that doth the worcke of the Lorde negligentlye, and cursed be he that keepeth backe hys sworde from sheddynge of bloude.

Moab hath ever bene ryche and carelesse from her youth vp, she hath spytte and taken her ease wyth her treasure. She was neuer yet put oute of one vessell into another (that is) she neuer wente awaye into captiuite, ther fore her taste remayneth, and her sauoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde that I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vp, to purpare & season her vessels: yea her tam- E berdes rattell, and shake to and fro. And Moab shalbe ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethell, wherein she put her truste.

Wherfore do ye thincke thus: we are mighty, and stronge men of warre? Moab shall be destroyed, and her cities burnte vp: her chō-seu yong men shall be slayne, sayeth the king, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes. The destruccion of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghboure shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall saye: O howe happeneth it, that the stronge staf & the goodlye rode is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibō, come downe from thy glorye, and sit in powerte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the stretes, and loke aboute the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thinge is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

D Mourne, and crye, tell it oute at Arnō, that Moab is destroyed. And iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande: Upon Holon & Jahazah, vpon Mephaath and Dibon vpō Nabo & the house of Diblathaim, vpon Kariathaim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon & Kerioth, vpon Bozrah and all the cyties in ỹ lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The horne of Moab shall be smitte downe and her arme broken, sayeth the Lorde. Make her dronchen, for she magnified her self aboue the Lord, that men maye clappe their handes at her wompte, and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Israel, shalt thou not laugh him to scorne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yea because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste him, thou shalt be driuen awaye. Ye Moabites, shall leave the cyties, & dwell in rockes of stone, and become like doues, that make their nestes in holes.

E As for Moabs pryde, we haue hearde of it, she is verye hye mynded. I know her stoutnesse, her boastynge, her arrogancye and the pryde of her stomach, sayeth the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye neyther vpholde her in strength nor dede. Therfore shall there mournynge be made for Moab, and euery mā shal crye for Moabs sake: a lamētacion shalbe made to the men that stand vpon the wal. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the, O thou vyneparde of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the sea, & the braunches of Jazer but vnto ỹ sea: the destroyer shal breake into thy harueste and grape gatheringe: Myrth and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the tymbrel, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shalbe no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomache to cīpe, yea there shalbe none to crye vnto him: which also time were hearde from Heshbon to Eleale & Jahaz, whiche lyfted vp their voyce frō Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of three yeare olde. The waters also of Nemrim shal be dryed vp.

Moreouer, I will make Moab cease (sayeth the Lorde) from the offrynges & sensynge that he hath made vnto her Goddes in hye places. Wherfore my hert mourneth for Moab, like a croude playenge an heape sōg: and for the mens sake of the byrche wall my herte mourneth also, euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull songe: for they shalbe verye fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shalbe shaven, and all beardes clypped of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded aboute with sackclothe. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shal be mournynge: For I will breake Moab like an vnprofytable vessell sayeth the Lord. O howe fearfull is she? O howe mourneth she? O howe doeth Moab hange downe her head, and is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughynge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde aboute her.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, the enemye shall come flyenge as an Aegle, and spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clymme ouer the walles, and winne the stroge holdes. Then the myghtyest herte in Moab shalbe lyke the herte of a woman trauaylinge wyth chylde. Deu.xxviij. Jerem.xlix.

And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayeth the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fall in the pyte, and who so getteth oute of the pyt, shalbe taken in the snare. Jer.xlix.d.

G For I will bringe a yeare of vysytacyon vpon Moab, sayeth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadow of Hesebon. For there shall go a fyre oute of Hesebon, and a flamme from Sion, and shal burne vp that proude people of Moab, bothe before and behynde. Esay.xvi.

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perysh: Yea thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the laste will I bringe Moab oute of captyuite agayne, sayeth the Lord. Thus farre of the plage of Moab.

The notes.

a. Chamos is the name of the Idole & God of the Moabytes.

b. After the Greke. Some reade: Greue a flowerpot, wynges.

c. The Hebr. expounde thys of the Chaldees, that they shulde haste to destroye the whole kyngedome of the Moabytes: as though the texte shulde meane thus much: Cursed be he that negligently performeth the bengeaunce of the Lorde, that spareth these moste wicked Moabytes, and that wythholdeth hys swerd from shedynge of their bloude.

The .xlix. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynste the Ammonytes, agaynst Israel, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

Ja

AS concernynge the Ammonites thus the Lorde sayeth: Hath Israell no chyldren, or is he without an heyre? Why hath your kynge then taken God in? wherfore doth hys people dwel in hys cities? Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyll bringe a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites. Lahell shalbe desolate, and her cytyes burnte vp: and the Israelytes shall be Lordes ouer those that had them in possessiō afore, sayeth the Lord. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shall be voyded out of the grounde, sayeth the Lorde. The cytyes of Rabah shall crye oute, and gyrde them selues wyth sacke cloth: they shall mourne, and runne aboute the walles: for their kynge shal be led awaye prisonner: yea hys priestes and princes wyth hym.

Wherfore trustest thou in the water streames that flowe to and fro, O thou fearce doughter: and thynckest thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no man shal come to the?

Beholde, I wyll bring a feare vpon the, sayeth the Lord God of Hostes, from all those that be aboute the: so that ye shall be scatered euerye man from another, and no man shall gather them together agayne that be fled. But after that, I wyll bringe the Ammonytes also oute of captyuite agayne.

Vpon the Edomytes hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysdome in Theman? Is there no more good counsell amonge hys people? Is their wysdome then turned clene to naughte? Get you hence, turne youre backes, creye doune into the deepe, O ye cytesens of Dedan.

For I wyll bringe destruccyon vpō Esau and the daye of hys visitacion. If ỹ grape gatherers came vpon the, shuld they not leaue some grapes? If the nyghte robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so muche as they thoughte were ynough?

But I wyll make Esau bare, and discouer hys secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. Hys seede shalbe wasted awaye, yea hys brethren and his neyghbours, and he himselfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Thou shalte leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behynde the, and I wyll kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they that men thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the firste: and thynkest thou then to be fre? No, no: thou shalt neyther be quyte nor fre but thou muste drincke also: For why, I haue sworne by my selfe (sayeth the Lord) that Bozrah shal become a wyldernes, an open shame a laughynge stocke and curseynge: and her cytyes shalbe a continuall desert.

For I am perfectly informed of ỹ Lord, that he hath sente a message all readye vnto ỹ Heathen. Gather you together, and go fourthe agaynste them: make you readye to the battaile: for lo, I wyll make the but smal among the Heathen, and lytle regarded among men.

Thy hye stomach & the pryde of thy herte haue deceyued the, because thou wylte dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountaines in possessiō. Nowe thoughe thy nestes were as hye as the Aegles, yet will I caste the doune, sayeth the Lorde.

Moreouer Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: who so goeth by it, shalbe abashed, & wodre at all her myserable plages. Lyke as Sodome Gomor, and the cytyes that laye there about, were turned vp syde doune (sayeth the Lorde) so shall no body dwell in Idumea, & no man shall haue hys habytacyon there. Beholde, lyke as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Etham, so wyll I dryue hym, and make hym runne agaynste her. But who is ỹ a.ponygeman that I wyll ordeyne thereto? Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyll stryue wyth me? What shepherde may stāde in my handes?

Therfore heare the counceil of the Lorde, ỹ he hathe taken vpon Idumea: and hys purpose that he hath deuised vpon the cytesyns of Theman: The leest of the flocke shall teare them in peces, and lyke wyse their dwellynge place shall be wyldernesse with them. At the noyse of their fall the earthe shall quake, the crie of their voyce shalbe herde vnto the red sea. Beholde, the enemye shall come & flie vp hyther, lyke as it were an Aegle, and spreade his wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the herte of a woman trauailinge of childe. Vpō Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shall come confusion, for they shall heare euill tydinges: they shall be tossed to and fro lyke the sea that can not stande styll. Damascus shalbe sore afeared, and shall flie, tremblynge shall come vpon her. Sorowe and payne shall ouertake her as a woman trauaylynge of chylde. But howe shulde so worshipful and glorious a cytie be forsaken? Heare therfore: her yonge men shall fall in the stretes, & all her men of warre shall be taken awaye in that tyme, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whiche shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdom of Hazor, whome Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon smote doune, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpō them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people towarde the east. Their tentes and their flockes shal they take awaye, yea their hangynges and their vessel. Their Camels also shall they carye awaye with them. They shall crye about them on euerye syde with a fearfull crye.

Flie, get you fone awaye, creepe into caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabytours of Hazor, sayeth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath holden a coun-

a councell concerning you, and conclude his deuyse against you. Aryse, and get you vp a-gainste yonder ryche and carelesse people (saieth the Lorde) whiche haue neyther gates nor bore barres, and that dwell not together.
Their camels shalbe stolen, and the droues
of their cattell depart awaye.

Moreouer, these that be shaken wil I scatter towarde all the windes, and bring them to destruccion: yea and that those we their owne kamplayers, saieth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwellynge for Dragons, and an euerlastynge wyldernesse: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shal haue there his habytacion.

These are the wordes, that the Lord spake
to the Prophet Jeremye concernynge Elam,
in the beginninge of the raygne of Zedechiah kynge of Juda. Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll .b. breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye their strength and vp-on Elam I wyll bringe the foure windes
from the foure quarters of heauen, and wyll scatter them agaynste the same foure windes.
And there shalbe no people, but some of them shall flie vnto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afraied of their enemyes, and of them that seke their ly-ues, and wyll bringe vpon them the indigna cyon of my wrathe, saieth the Lorde. And I wyll persecute them with the swearde so lõge tyll I haue brought them to naught. I wyll set my stole in Elam, I wyll destroye bothe
the kyng and the princes from thence, saieth
the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wil bringe Elam oute of captyuyte againe, saieth the Lorde.

The. l. Chapter.

He prophesyeth the destruccion of Babylon, & the deliueraunce of Israel, which was in captyuyte.

THe wordes that the Lord spake vnto the Prophet Jeremye, con-cerninge Babylon, & the lande of the Caldees: spreache amonge
the Gentiles, let youre voyce be hearde, make a token: erye oute, kepe no silẽce
but saye: Babylon shall be wonne, Bel shalbe confounded, & Merodach shalbe ouercome.
Yea their Goddes shalbe brought to shame, and their ymages shall stande in feare.
For oute of the northe there shall come a people against her, whiche shal make her lande so waste, that no body shall dwell therin: neyther man nor beast, for they shall flye and departe from thence. a In those dayes & at that time saieth the Lorde, the children of Israell shall come, they and the children of Juda, weping & makinge haste, and shall seke the Lord their God. They shall aske the waye to Sion, thither shall they turne their faces, & come and ioyne vpon the, in a couenaunte that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a lost flocke, my she-pherdes haue disceyued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the litle hyl, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: & their enemyes
saide: We haue made no faute against them for they haue displeased the Lorde, yea euen
the Lorde whiche is the rewarde of their righ-teousnes, & that defended their fathers. Get shall ye flie from Babilon, & depart out of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the rã mes that go before the flocke. For lo, I wyll wake vp an hoost of people from the northe lande, and bringe them vpon Babylon: these shall laye sege to it, and winne it: their ar-owe shall not myssle, like as a cunnyng archer shooteth not wronge. And the Caldees shalbe spoyled, and all they that spoyle them, shalbe satisfyed, saieth the Lorde: because ye were so cheerfull and glad, to treade downe myne heri tage, and fulfylled youre pleasures, as the cal
ues in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them ly
ke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victory.
Youre mothers shalbe sore confounded, & they that bare you, shall come to shame. Be shall be the laste set by amonge the nations, voyde, waste, and dryed vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shall be whole desolate. All they that go by Babylon, shall stande styll, & be ashashed, and shall wonder at all her plages.

Go forth in youre araye against Babylon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes:
shute at her, spare no arowes, for she hath sin ned against the Lorde. Crye oute vpon her, vpon her, against her round about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacyons shal fall, and her walles shall come downe, for it shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lorde. Yea vengeaunce shalbe taken of her, and as she hath done, so shall she be dealte with al. They shal rote out the sower from Babylon, & hym that handleth
the sythe in haruell. For feare of the swearde of the enemye, euery man shal get hym to his owne people, and euery man shall flye to his owne lande. Israel is a scatered flocke, the lyo ons haue dispersed them. First the kynge of the Assyryans deuoured them, last of all this pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel and Basan, and be satisfyed vpon the mounte of Ephraim & Galaad. In those dayes & at the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) yf the offence of Israel be sought for, there shal none be found: yf men enquyre for the sinne of Juda, there shalbe none: for I wyll be merciefull vnto the whome I suffre to remayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemyes lande, and vysett them that dwel therin: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lorde: do accordyng to all, that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter & great murther, namelye on this maner: How happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and broken in sonder? Howe chanceth it, that Babylon is become a wylderues amonge the heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, and thou arte taken: vnawares arte thou trapped and snared: for why, thou halte prouoked ỹ Lorde vnto anger: The Lorde hath opened his house of ordynaunce, and brought forthe the weapens of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lorde of hoostes worcke.

These thinges shal come vpon her at the last, they shal breake into her proude chābers, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They shal so destroye her, that nothynge shall be lefte. They shall slaye all their mightye soudyars, and put them to death. Wo be vnto them, for ỹ daye & tyme of their visitacion is at hande. We thinke I heare all readye a crye, of them that be fled & escaped oute of the lande of Babylon, which shewe in Sion the vengeaunce of the Lorde oure God the vengeaunce of his temple, yea a voyce of them, that crye against Babylon: Call vp all the archers against Babylon, pytche youre tentes rounde aboute her, that none escape. Recompence her, as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wyth her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde, agaynste the holy one of Israel. Therfore shall her yonge men fal downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe rooted oute in that daye, saith the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto the (O thou proude) sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stomble & fall, & no man shall helpe hym vp. I wyll burne vp his cities wyth fyre, and it shal consume al that is rounde aboute hym.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: The children of Israell & Juda suffre violence together. All they that haue them in captyuyte, hope them fast, and wyll not let them go: but their auenger & redemer is myghtye, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes: he shal maintayne their cause, he shall make the lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one wyth another. The swearde shall come vpon the Caldees, sayeth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their princes, & vpon their wise men: The swearde vpon their false sayers, as for those (they shal become fooles.) The swearde vpon their worthies, so ỹ they shall stande in feare: The swearde vpō their horsmen and charettes, and vpon al the comō people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become, lyke women: The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stolen awaye. The swearde vpon their waters, so ỹ they shalbe dryed vp. For the lande worshipeth ymages, & delyteth in straunge wonderfull thynges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, Apes, and Estriches dwell therin: for there shall neuer man dwell there, neyther shal any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there aboute, Jerem.l.b sayeth the Lorde: So shall no man dwell there Deu.xxviij.c also, neyther shall any man haue there hys habitacion. Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, with a greate bounde of men and many kynges shall stande vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes & dartes, cruell are they and vnmercefull.

Their voyce roareth lyke the ragyng sea, they ryde vpon horses, & come weaponed to fyght against the O Babylon. As sone as the kyng of Babylon heareth tell of it, hys handes shall ware feable: Sorowe and heuynes shal come vpon him, as a woman trauelynge wyth childe. Beholde, lyke as the Jer.xlix.i. Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt meadowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dryue the forth, & make them runne against her. But whom shall I chose out, & ordeine to such a thyng? For who is lyke me, or who wyl stepue to me? or what Job.xli.a shepherde maye stande against me? Therfore heare the councel that the Lord hath geuē vpō Babylon, and the deuyce that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The leaste amonge the people shall teare them in peces, & take what pleasaunte thinge they haue: they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the wynning of Babylon shall moue the earthe, & the crye shalbe heard amonge the Gentyles.

The.li. Chapter.

Howe Babylon shalbe ouerthrowen. Jeremy geueth hys boke to Saraias.

THus hath the Lorde sayd: behold I wyll raise vp a perilous wynd A against Babylon & her citizens Jer.xxb that heare rule, I wyll against me. I wyl sende also vnto Babylon fanners, a, to fanne her oute, & to destroye lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shal-

be about her on every syde: Moreouer, the Lorde hath sayde vnto the howe men, and to them that clymme ouer the walles in hyll places: Ye shall not spare her yong men, but doume all her hoste. Thus the slayne shall fall doume in the lande of the Caldees, & the wounded in the stretes. As for Israel and Juda, they shal not be forsaken of their God, of the Lorde of Hostes, of the holy one of Israel: no, though their land have fylled all their lande full of synne. Flye awaye from Babylon, every man saue hys lyfe. Let no man holde hys tonge to her wyckednes, for the tyme of the Lordes vengeaunce is come, yee he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hãde a golden cuppe, that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne have all people dronken, therfore are they oute of their wytte. But so denlyes Babylon fallen, & destroyed. Mourne for her, bryng plasters for her woundes, yf she may peraduenture be healed agayne. We wolde have made Babylon whole (sayde they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone, & go every man into hys owne countre. For her iudgement is come into heauen, and is gone vp to the clouddes. And therfore come on, we wyll shewe Syon the worke of the Lorde oure God.

Make sharpe the arowes, and fyll the quyuers: for the Lorde shall rayse vp the spirite of the kynge of the Medes, which hath already a desire to destroye Babylon. This shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lordes, and the vengeaunce of hys temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make power watche stronge, set penre watche men in araye, yea holde parope watches, & prepare all that shall the Lorde go forth with the deuyce, which he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the greate waters O thou that hast so greate treasure & riches, thyne ende is come and the rebenynge of thy wonninges. The Lord of hostes hath swarne by hym selfe, that he wyll ouer whelme the with men lyke grashoppers in nombre, which with a crowde shall crye Alarum Alarum against the. Yea euen the Lorde of hostes, which with his power made the earthe, with hys wysedome prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discression spred oute the heauens. As soone as he letteth hys voyce be heard, the waters in the aire were fearce: He drawyth vp the clouddes from the endes of the earthe. He turneth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bryngeth the windes oute of their secrete places. By their reason of wysdome, all men are become foolish. Confounded be all the callers of ymages for the thynge that they make is but disceyte, and hath no breath. Wayne is it and worthye to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vysitacion it shall perysshe.

Neuertheles, the portyon of Jacob is none such: but he that made all thinges, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, he is the rode of hys enherytaunce. Thou brakest my weapens of warre, and yet thorowe the I have scatered the nacyons & kyngdomes: Thorowe the have I scatred horse and horse man: yea the charretes, and suche as sat vpon them: Thorowe the I have scatred man and woman, olde & yong, bacheler and mayden. Thorowe the I have scatred the shepherde and hys flocke, the husbandeman and hys cattell, the princes and the rulers. Therfore wyll I rewarde the cite of Babylon and all her cytesens the Caldees with all the euyll whiche they have done vnto Syon: yea that ye youre selues shall se it, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou.b. noysome hyll) sayeth the Lorde, thou that destroyest all landes. I wyll stretche out my hande ouer the, and caste the doune from the stony rockes: and wyll make the a brente hyll, so that neyther corner stones, nor pynnacles, nor foundacyon stones shalbe taken anye more oute of the, but waste and desolate shalt thou lye for euer more, sayeth the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the lande: blow the trompettes amonge the Heythen, prouyde the nacyons against her, call the kyngedomes of Ararat, Menni, and Aschanes against her: nombre oute Caphtar against her, bryng an greate a sorte of horses against her, as yf they were grashoppers. Prepare against them the people of the Medes with their kynges princes, and all their chefe rulers, yea and the whole lande that is vnder them.

The lande also shall shake & be afrayed, when the deuyce of the Lorde shal come forth against Babylon: to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell anye more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the battell, & kepe them selues in stronge holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shalbe lyke women. Their dwellynge places shal be brente vp, their barres shalbe broken. One purseuaunte shal mete another, yea one poste shall come by another, to bring the kyng of Babylon tydynges: that his cite is taken in on euery syde, the foordes occupyed, the fennes brente vp, and the soudyares sore afrayed.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the doughter of Babylõ hath bene in her tyme lyke as a thrasshynge floure, but shortly shal her harueste come. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an emptye vessell. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragõ, and filled his belly with my delycates: he hath cast me oute, he hath taken my substaunce awaye and the thynge that was lefte me, hath he caryed vnto Babylon, sayeth the doughter that dwelleth in Syon: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wil drynche vp her sea, and dipe vp her water springes.

Babilon shall become an heape of stones a dwel-

a dwellinge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondringe, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lyons, and as the yonge lyons whelpe they be angrie, so shall they bende the selues. In their heate I shall sett drinke before them, & they shalbe Jeremy.li.b dronchen for ioye: Then shall they slepe an euerlastinge slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde I shall carie them downe to be slayne like sheepe, like wethers and gootes. O, how was Sesach wonne! O, how was the glorye of the whole lande taken! how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen? The see is risen ouer Babilon, and hath couered her with his greate wawes.
Her cyties are layed waste, the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a lande where no

Reuel. xviii.a thrugh. Moreouer, I will vysit Bell at Ba-Dani. xiiii.b bylon: and the thynge that he hath swalowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also shall runne no more vnto him, yee and the walles of Babylon shall fall.

O my people, come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, from the feareffull wrath of the Lorde. Be not fayntehertted, and feare not at euery rumoure that shalbe herde in the lande: for euery yeare bringeth newe tydinges, yee straunge wyckednes and lordshippe. And lo, the tyme commeth that I will vysit the ymages of Babylon, and the whole lande shalbe confounded, yee and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her. Heauē and earth with all that is therin, shall triumphe ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayeth the Lorde.

Like as Babylon hath beaten downe and K slayne many out of Israell, so shall there fall
Jeremye.l.c many, and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the Lorde afarre off: and thynche vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare y blasphemyes: oure faces were couered with shame, because y straung aleauntes came into the Sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme commeth, that I will vysit the ymages of Babylon, and throwe the whole lande Jere. xliv.b. they shall mourne and fall. Though Babylō clymmed vp into heauen, & kepte her power an hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde.

A pytyous crye shall be herde from Babylon, and a greate misery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth thē, and when he dyspeth out the hye stomache & proude boastyng, wherwith they haue benē as furyous as y wawes of greate water flowdes, and made greate crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babylon) whyche shall take her worthyes, & breake their. c* bowes: for God is dyspoyled to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficyently to recompence them. Yee (sayeth the Lorde) I will make their Princes their wyse men, their chefe rulers & all their worthyes, dronchen: so that they shall slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake: This sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoſtes: The thycke wall of Babylon shalbe vtterly broken, & her hyonde gates shalbe brent vp. And the thynge that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour, shal come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, in the.iiij. yeare of his raigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable Prince. Jeremye wrote in a boke all the mysery that shulde come vpon Babylon, yee and all these sermons that be wryten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou commest vnto Babylon se that thou reade all these wordes, and sayest O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neither people nor catell shall dwell there eny more but to lie waste for euer and whē thou hast redde out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shall Babylon synche, & be thrust downe with the burthē of trouble, that I will bringe vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the prechinges of Jeremy.

¶ The.lij. Chapter.

Jeremye reproueth the robberye of Jechonah Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees. Zedekiahs sonnes are slayne before his face, & his eyes put out. The temple is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were left in Jerusalem are caryed to Babylon. Kynge Jehoiachin taken out of prison, & fed like a kynge.

Zedekiah was. xxi. yeare olde, when he was made kynge, & he raigned. xi. yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremies daughter of Lobnah. He lyued wickedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoiakim dyd. Wherfore the Lorde was angrie at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast thē out of his presence. And Zedekiah fell from the kynge of Babylon. But in the.ix. yeare of his raygne, In the tenth Moneth, the tenth daye of the Moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Jere.xxxix.a Babylon with all his hoste came before Je- iiij. Re.xxv.
rusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarckes rounde about it. And this besieging of the cytye endured vnto .xi. yeare of kyng Zedekiah.

And in the fourth Moneth, the.ix. daye of the Moneth, there was so greate hunger in the cytye, that there were no more vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake awaye, and fled out of the cytie by nyght thorow the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now the Caldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet went these men their waye to warde the wyldernesse.

Jere. xxxix. b. xxxix. a.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Zedekiah the kynge in the felde of Jericho, when his hoost was runne from him. So they carved the kynge awaye prisoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

Jere. xxxix. b

The kynge of Babylon also caused Zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face, yea and put all the princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Zedekiah, caused hym to be bounde with chaynes, to be caried vnto Babylon: and lett hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth Moneth in the.xi. yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne of the kynge of Babylons seruantes came vnto Jerusalem, and brent vp the house of the Lorde. He brent vp also the kynges palaces, all the houses and all the gorgeous buildinges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoost of the Caldees that were with the chefe Captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and such folcke as yet was left in the cytie, which also were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yea and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne carved thē awaye prisoners. But the poore people of the countre, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne leaue in the lande, to occupye the vynyardes and feldes. The Caldees also brake the brasen pylers that were in the house of the Lorde, yea the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde and carved all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, shouels, slethe hokes, sprynklers, spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occupyed in the seruyce: with the basens, colepannes, sprynklers, potres, cāde styckes, spoones and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe Captaynes toke also the two pylers, the lauer, the.xii. brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate, which kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessel contepned so moch metall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piler was .xviii. cubytes hye, and the rope that wente aboute it, was .xii. cubytes, and foure fyngers thycke and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates rounde about of cleane brasse.

iij. Reg. vij.

After thys maner were both the pylers fashioned with the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundreth and .xcvi. which hanged vpon the whoopes rounde aboute. The chefe Captayne also toke Sarsiah the hye preste, and Sophoniah that was chefe next hym, and the three keepers of the treasury. He toke out the cytie a chamberlayne whych was a captayne of the souldyers, and seuē men that were the kynges seruauntes, whiche were founde in the cytie: and Scpher a captayne that vsed to muster the men of warre: with .lx. men of the countre that were taken in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kynge of Babylon caused the to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captyue, out of hys owne lande. Thys is the summe of the people, whō Nabuchodonosor ledde awaye captyue.

In the seuenth yeare of hys regne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, three thousand and three and twenty. In the .xviii. yeare. Nabuchodonosor carved awaye from Jerusalem eight hundreth and .xxxii. persones. In the .xxiii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne, toke awaye seuen hundreth .xlv. Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousand and syxe hundreth.

In the .xxxvii. yeare after that Jehoacin the kynge of Juda was carved awaye in the xxv. daye of the .xii. Moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babylon (the same yeare that he reigned) gaue Jehoacin the kyng of Juda his pardon, and let him out of prison, and spake louyngly to hym. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kynges that were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea and he ate with him al hys lyfe longe. And he had a competuall lyuynge geuen hym of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne thynge alowed hym all the dayes of hys lyfe, vntyll he dyed.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the glorye of Jacob without any fauoure: all the stroge places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen thē downe to the grounde: her kyngdome & her Princes hath he suspended.

Gymel.

Jn the wrath of his indygnacyon he hath brokē all the.a* horne of Jsrael: he hath with drawē his ryght hande from the enemye: yee a flame of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp all rounde about.

Daleth.

B Je hath bent hys bowe lyke an enemye, he hath fastened his ryght hande as an aduersarye: and euerye thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smyten it downe. He hath poured out hys wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

He.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemye, he hath cast downe Jsrael & all hys places: yee all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed, & fylled the daughter of Juda wyth moch sorow and heuynesse.

Vau.

Her tabernacle (which was lyke a gardē of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solēpne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solempne feastes & Sabbathes in Sion, are cleane forgotten. Jn his heuy displeasure hath he made the kynge and prestes to be despysed.

Zam.

The Lorde hath forsakē hys owne aulter, and is wroth with his owne Sanctuary, and hath geuē the walles of their towres in to the handes of the enemye. Their enemyes made C a noyse in the house of ỹ Lorde, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

Heth.

The Lorde thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter Sion, b* he spred out his lyne, & drewe not in his hande, tyll he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles together.

Teth.

Her portes are caste downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder: her kynge & prynces are caried awaye to the Gentyles. They haue neither lawe nor Prophetes, nor yet eny vysyon from the Lorde.

Jod.

c* The Senatours of the daughter Syon spt vpō the grounde in sylence: they haue strowed asshes vpon their heades, and gyrded them selues with sack cloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe their heades to the grounde.

Caph.

Myne eyes begynne to kaple me thorowe D wepyng, my body is disquieted, my leuer is poured vpon the earth, for the greate hurte of my people, seynge the chyldren and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the cyte.

Lamed.

Euen when they spake to their mothers: where is meate and drynche? for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cyte, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome.

Mem.

What shall J saye of the, O thou daugh- E ter Jerusalem, to whom shall J lycken the? To whom shall J cōpare the, O thou daughter Sion, to comforte the with all? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see. who maye heale the?

Nun.

Thy prophetes haue loked out vayne and folish thynges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wickednesse, to kepe the from captyuite: but haue ouerladen the, and thorowe falsshed scaired the abrode.

Samech.

All they that go by the, clappe their hādes at the: hyssynge and waggynge their heades vpon the daughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cyte that man call so fayre, wherin the whole lande triopseth?

Ain.

All thyne enemyes gape vpon the, whysperynge and bytynge their teth, sayenge: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we loked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it. F

Phe

The Lord hath fullfylled the thynge, that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had dewysed longe agoo: he hath destroyed and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersary to triumphe ouer the, & set vp the horne of thyne enemye.

Zade.

Let

Let thyne hert.d* crye vnto the Lorde, O thou cytie of the daughter Sion: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer daye & nyght: rest not, & let not ỹ aple of thine eye leaue of.

Poph.

Stande vp and make thy prayer in ỹ first watch of the nyght, poure oute thyne herte lyke water before the Lord: lyft vp thyne handes, for the lyues of thy ponge chyldren, that dye of honger in the stretes.

Res.

Behold, O Lord, and consyder, why hast thou gathered me vp so cleane? Shall the wemen then eate their owne frute, euen chyldren of a spanne longe? Shall the preestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarye of the Lorde?

Sin.

Ponge & olde lye behynde the stretes vpō the groūde, my maydens & ponge men are slayne wyth the swearde: whom thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacyon haste put to death: yee euen thou haste put thē to death, and not spared them.

Thau.

My neyghbours ỹ are roūde aboute me, haste thou called, as it were to a feaste daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, nether was eny left behinde. Those that I had brought vp and norysshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

Aleph.

A I Am the man, that (thorowe the rodd of hys wrath) haue experyence of mysery.

He droue me forth, and led me per into darcknesse, but not in to lyght.

Agaynst me onely he turneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

Beth.

My flesh & my skynne hath he made olde, and my bones hath he broken.

He hath buylded roūde aboute me, ỹ closed me in wyth a* gall and trauayle.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

Gymel.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuy fetters vpon me.

Though I crye and call pitefully, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes wyth foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

Daleth.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Bere, & as a lyon in a hole.

He hath marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marck to shutte at.

He.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot, euen into my reynes.

I am laughed to scorne of al my people, they make songes vpon me all ỹ daye longe.

He hath fylled me with bytternesse, and geuen me wormwod to drynche.

Vau.

He hath smytten my teth in peces, & rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges.

I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde.

Zain.

O remembre yet my mysery & my trouble the wormwod and the gall.

Yee thou shalt remembre the, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I cōsyder these thynges in my hert, I get a hope agayne.

Heth.

Namely, ỹ the mercyes of the Lord are not cleane gone, and that hys louynge kyndnesse ceaseth not.

O how good is ỹ Lord vnto the, ỹ put their truste in him, & to ỹ soule ỹ seketh after him?

O how good is it wyth stylnesse to wayte & tarye, for the health of the Lorde?

O how good is it for a man, to take the yocke vpon hym from hys youth vp.

Jod.

He sytteth alone, he holdeth hym stylle, and dwelleth quyetly by him selfe.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (peraduenture) there happen to be eny hope.

He offereth hys cheke to the smyter, he wyll be contente with reproues.

Caph.

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer.

But though he do caste of, yet accordynge to ỹ multitude of hys mercyes, he recyeueth to grace agayne.

For he doeth not plage, & call out the chyldren of men from his heete.

Koph.

I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, out of the depe pytte.

Thou hast herde my voyce, and hast not turned away thine eares fro my syghinge & crienge.

Thou hast enclyned thy self vnto me, whē I called vpon the, and hast layde: feare not.

Thau.

Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of their handes.

Geue them the thynge, that their owne herte is afraid of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indygnacyon, and rote them out from vnder the heauen.

¶ The notes.

¶ The prayer of Jeremye.

All to remembrauncer (O Lorde) what we haue suf A fred, cōsyder and se oure confusyon. Oure enherytaunce is turned to the straungers, and oure housses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherlesse, and oure mothers are as the wydowes. We are fayne to drinke oure owne water for money, and oure owne wod muste we bye with money. Oure necke vnder persecucyon, we are weery, and haue no rest.

A fore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, and now to the Assirians, onely B that we myght haue bred ynough. Oure fathers (whiche now are gone) haue synned, & we muste beare their wyckednesse. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, & no man delyuereth Jere. xxxi.a. vs out of their handes. We muste gett oure Ezech. xviij. lyuinge with the parell of oure lyues because of the drouth of the wyldernesse.

Oure skynne is as it had bene brent in an ouen, for very sore honger. The wyues are rauished in Sion, and the maydens in the cytyes of Juda. The princes are hanged vp with the hande of the enemyes, they haue not sparred the olde sage men, they haue take ponge mens lyues from them, and the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders C sytt no more vnder the gates, and the ponge men lyke no more playeng of Musyke. The Therfore oure herte is full of heuynesse, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hyll of Syon that is destroyed. In so moch, that the foxes runne vpon it. But thou, O Lord, that remaynest for euermore, and thy seate world wythout ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forgett vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lord, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shall we be turned. Renne our dayes as in olde tymes, for: thou hast banyshed vs now lōg ynough, & hast bene sore dysplessed at vs.

¶ The ende of the Lamentacyons of Jeremye.

¶ The boke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecyed, & in what place. How he sawe a whirlwynde. The bewtye of the foure beastes. The bewtye of the wheles. The bewtye of the throne, and of the Image about the throne.

¶ It chaunsed in ȳ xxx. yeare & fifth daye of ȳ .iii. moneth, that I was amonge the prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar: a* where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyō of God. Now the fyfth daye of the moneth made out the syxth yeare of kyng Joacins captiuytye. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lord vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the Prieste, in the lande of the Caldees by the watre of Cobar, where the hande of the Lorde came vpon hym.

And I loked, and beholde a stormy wynde B came out of the North with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with hys glysterynge was all rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare, and as it were the lyckenesse of foure beastes, which were fashyoned lyke a man: saue, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were streyght, but their fete L were lyke bullockes feet, and they glysstered, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon all the foure corners they had mens handes. Their faces and their wynges were towarde the foure corners: yee were the wynges so, ȳ one euer touched another. When they wente, they turned them not about: but ecchone went streyght forwarde.

Vpon the ryght syde of these foure, their + faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the left syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of of another, and wyth the other they couered their body. Euery one when it wente, it wente streyght forwarde. Where as the spirite ledd them, the ther they went, and turned not about it their goynge.

The fashyon and countenaunce of the D beastes was lyke hoate coales of fyre, euen as though burnynge cressettes had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glysstre, and out of the fyre there wente lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thought it had lyghtened. Now when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worche of wheles vpon the earth wyth foure faces also lyke the beastes. +

The fashyon and worche of the wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned them not about in their goinge. They were large, greate and horyble to loke vpon. Their bodyes were full of eyes round about S them all foure. When the beastes wente the wheles wente also with them: And when the beastes lyft them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whether soeuer the spirite wente, thether wente they also, and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyft vp, for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.

Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament, whyche was fashyoned as it had bene of the most pure Chrystal, and that was spred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layed abrode, one toward another, and two wynges couered the body of euery beast. M And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, and a rushynge together as it were of an hoost of men. And whē they stode styll, they let downe their wynges. Now when they stode styll, and had letten downe G their wynges, it thondred in the firmament that was aboue their heades. Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heades, there was ȳ fashyō of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Vpon the seate there sat one lyke a man. I beheld hym, & he was lyke a cleare lyght, as it had bene all of fyre with in from hys lopnes vpwarde.

And

And beneth when I loked vpō him vnder the lopnes, me thought he was lyke a ſhyning fyre, that geueth lyght on euery ſyde. Yee the ſhyne & glyſtre & lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a rayn bowe, which in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen ſo was the ſymylitude, wherin the glory of the Lorde appeared. When I ſawe it, I fel vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of him that ſpake.

C He ſayde moreouer vnto me: thou ſonne of man, take dylygēt hede wyth thyne eares, to the wordes that I ſpeake vnto the, faſten them in thyne hert: and go to the parſoners of thy people, ſpeake vnto the, and ſayde on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath ſpoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. Myth that the ſpirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyſe of a greate ruſhyng and remouyng of the moſt bleſſed glory of the Lorde out of his place.

Eze. viii.a.3

I hearde alſo the noyſe of the wynges of the beaſtes, that ruſhed one agaynſt another, yee and the rattlyng of the wheles, that were by them, whyche ruſhyng and noyſe was very greate.

Now when the ſpirite toke me vp, and caried me awaye, I went with an hevy and a ſorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lorde comforted me ryght ſoone.

And ſo in the begynnyng of the moneth Abib, I came to the parſoners, that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: And ſo contynued I amonge them ſeuen dayes, beinge verye ſory.

D

And

And when the ſeuen dayes were expired, the Lord ſayde vnto me: Thou ſonne of man I haue made the a .a* watchmā vnto ỹ houſe of Iſraell: b* therfore take good hede to the woldes, and geue them warnyng at my commaundement.

E If I ſayde vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man: that (wythout doute) he muſte dye, and thou geueſt hym not warnynge, nor ſpeakeſt vnto hym, that he maye turne from hys euell waye, and ſo to liue: The ſhalll the ſame vngodly man dye in hys owne vnrygh tuouſnes: but hys blonde wyll I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheles, yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forſake not hys vngodlynesse: then ſhall he dye in his owne wyckednelle, but thou haſt diſcharged thy ſoule.

Now yf a rygh teuous man go frō hys righteouſnelle, and do the thynge that is euell: I F will laye a ſtomblynge blocke before hym, & he ſhall dye, becauſe thou haſt not geuen him warnyng: yet dye ſhall he in hys owne ſynne ſo that the vertue, which he dyd before, ſhall not be thought vpon: but hys blonde wyll I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuertheleſſe, yf thou exhorteſt the rygh teous, that he ſynne not, & ſo the rygh teous do not ſynne: then ſhall he lyue, becauſe he hath receyued thy warnynge, and thou haſt diſcharged thy ſoule. And there came ỹ hand of the Lorde vpon me, and he ſayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke wyth the.

So when I had ryſen vp, and gone forth in to the felde: Beholde, the glory of the Lord ſtode there, lyke as I ſaw it afore, by the water of Cobar.

G Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the ſpyrite came in to me, whych ſet me vp vpon my fete, & ſayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and ſparre thy ſelf in thyne houſe. Beholde, (O thou ſonne of man) there ſhall charnes be brought for the, to bynde the wythall, ſo that thou ſhalt not eſcape out of them. And I wyll make thy tunge cleue ſo to ỹ roſe of thy mouth, that thou ſhalt be domme, and not be as a chyder wyth them: for it is an obſtynate houſholde.

But when I ſpeake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and ſaye: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: who ſo heareth, lett hym heare: who ſo wyll not, let hym leaue: for it is an obſtynate houſholde.

¶ The notes.

a* By thys watchman are figured biſhoppes, Paraſtes, & paracheru, which muſt take the occaſion of their ſpeakynge & exhortinge at the mouth of God and ſpeake not in their owne, but in his name.

b* Some trade: thou ſhalt herken vnto the wordes of my mouth, and ſhalt monyſh them from out of me.

The.iij.Chapter.

The ſeage of the cyte of Jeruſalem is ſygnyfyed. The longe contynuance of the captyuyte of Iſraell. An hunger to ſygnyfyed to come in the captyuyte.

THou ſonne of man: a* take a tyle ſtone, & laye it before the, and deſcrybe vpon it the cyte of Jeruſalem, how it is beſeged, how bulwarckes & ſtrōge dyches are grauen on euery ſyde of it: deſcrybe alſo tentes, and an hoolte of men rounde about it.

Moreouer, take an yron panne, and ſet it betwixte the and the cyte, in ſtede of an yron wall. Then ſet thy face towarde it, beſege it, and laye ordynaunce agaynſt it, to wynne it. This ſhalbe a token vnto the houſe of Iſraell. But thou ſhalt ſlepe vpon thy left ſyde, and laye the ſinne of the houſe of Iſraell vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou ſhalt ſlepe vpon that ſyde, and beare their ſynnes. Neuertheleſſe, I wyll appoynte the a tyme V (to put of their ſinnes) and the nombre of the dayes: That hundreth and.xc. dayes muſte thou beare the wyckednelle of the houſe of Iſraell. Whē thou haſt fulfylled theſe dayes lye downe agayne, and ſlepe vpon thy right ſyde.xl. dayes, and beare the ſynnes of the houſe of Juda.

A daye for a yeare, a daye (I ſaye) for a yeare, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore ſet now thy face agaynſt that beſeged Jeruſalem, and diſcouer thyne arme, that thou mayeſt prophecye agaynſt it.

Beholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the, that thou ſhalt not turne the fro me one ſide to another, tyll thou haſte ended the dayes of thy ſege.

Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barlye beanes, growell ſede, Millium and fitches: and put theſe together in a veſſell, and make E the loaues of bred therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou muſt lye vpon thy ſide: that thou mayeſte haue bred to eate, for that hundreth and.xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eateſt, ſhall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twen tye ſicles euery daye. This apoynted meate ſhalt thou eate dayly, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou ſhalt drynche alſo a certayne meaſure of water: Namely, the ſyxte parte of an Hin ſhalt thou drynche dayly from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes ſhalt thou eate, yet ſhalt thou fyrſte ſtrache them ouer with mans dounge, that they maye ſe it. And with that ſayde the Lorde: Euen thus ſhall the chyldren of Iſrael eate their defiled bred in the myddeſt of the Gentyles, amonge whom I wyll ſcatter them.

Then ſayde I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, D my ſoule was yet neuer ſtayned: for frō my youth vp vnto this houre. I did neuer eate of a dead carcaſe, or of that whyche was ſlayne of wylde beaſtes, neither cam there euer ony vncleane fleſh in my mouth.

Wher

Wher vnto he answered me, and sayde Well than, I wyll graunte the to take cowes donge, for the donge of a man, and to strake the bred ouer with all, before them.

Ezech.v.d. Ezec.xiiij.d. iij. Re.xxv. And he sayde vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyll mynisshe all the prouispon of bred in Jerusalem, so ꝑ they shall wepe their bred, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a verye lytle measure therof, to drynche. And when they haue no more verdner water, one shall be destroyed wyth another, and sampshe awaye for their wyckednesse.

¶ The notes.

a* This is a prophecye done by an outward signe, as in Jeremye.xiij.a. When the people are vnworthy of the word of God, then are the Prophetes commaunded to vse such vysyble signes: as here to paynte out Jerusalem ꝯ the beseginge therof in a tyle stone.

The.v.Chapter.

The ryddle of the hearres, by whyche is signifyed the destruccyon of the people. The causes of the anger of God towarde the people. The Lorde declareth the ryddle of the hearres.

A Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasoure. Take that, ꝯ shaue the hearre of thy head and beerd: Then take the scoales and the waight, and deuyde the hearre a sunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cyttie, ꝯ cut the other thirde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thirde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, ꝯ then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesy of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre: & burne it in the fyre. Out of the same B fyre shall there goo a flame, vpon the whole house of Jsrael. Moreouer, thus sayde the Lorde God: This same is Jerusalem. I sett her in the myddest of the Heathen ꝯ nacions: that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despysed my iudgmentes more then the Gentiles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacyons, that lye rounde aboute her: For they haue cast out myne ordinaunces, ꝯ not walched in my lawes. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: For so moch as ye with youre wickednesse sarre excrede the Heathen, that dwell rounde aboute you: Ezec.xviij.d (For ye haue not walched in my lawes, neither haue ye kepte myne ordinaunces) Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God.

C Jwyll also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the wyll I syt in iudgmẽt, in the syght of the Heathen, and wyll handle the of such a fashion, as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer will do from that tyme forth, and that Deu.xxviij. because of all thyne abhominacyons. For in Ezec.iiij.e. the fathers shall be layne to eate their owne iij. Re.xxvi.f sonnes, and the sonnes their owne fathers. Such a counte will I kepe in the, ꝯ the whole remnaint will I scatte in to all the wyndes.

Wherfore as truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) seyng thou hast defiled my Sanctuary, with all maner of abhominacyõs and with al thy shameful offences: For this cause will I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouer se the, nether will I spare the.

One thirde parte within the, shall dye of the pestilence and of honger: Another thirde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the, with the swearde: The other thirde parte ꝑ remayneth, will I scatte abroade towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swearde after them. Thus I wyll perfourme my in- D dignaciõ ꝯ set my wrath agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruent gelousye haue spoken it. Moreouer I wyll make the waste and abhorred, before all the Heathen that dwell aboute the, ꝯ in the syght of all them, that go by the: so that when I punisshe the in my wrath, in myne anger, ꝯ with the plage of my whote displeasure: thou shalt be a verye abhominacion, shame, a gasynge ꝯ wondrynge stocke, amonge the Heathen that lye aboute the. Euē I the Lorde haue spoken it, and it shall come to passe, when I shute amonge them the perlous dartes of honger, which shalbe but death: Yee therfore shall I Ezech.xiij.e. shute the, because I wyll destroye you I will encrease honger, ꝯ mynysshe all the prouispon of bred amonge you.

Plages and mysery wyll I sende you, yee and wylde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence ꝯ bloudshedynge shall come vpon you, and the swearde will I bringe ouer you. Euē I the Lorde, haue sayde it.

The.vi.Chapter.

He sheweth that the people shalbe plaged for the synne of Jdolatrie. He prophesyeth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, and their deliueraunce. The destruccyon of the contrarye is prophesyed.

ANd the worde of the Lord came A vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Jsrael, that thou Ezec.xxxvi. mayest prophecie vnto them, ꝯ saye Heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Jsrael: Thus hath the Lorde God spoke to the mountaynes, hilles, valleyes and dales.

Beholde, I wyll bringe a swearde ouer you, ꝯ destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe youre aulters, ꝯ breake downe youre temples. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the dead carcases of the chyldren of Jsrael wyll I caste before their ymages, youre bones will I destroye rounde aboute youre aulters, and dwellynge places.

The cyties shalbe desolate, the hyllychapels layed waste: youre aulters destroyed, B and broken: youre goddes caste downe and taken awaye, youre temples layde euen wyth the grounde, youre owne workes cleane rote oute.

Youre

Youre slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. Those that amonge you haue Datue. 18.f. escaped the swearde, will I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I will scatter you amonge the nacyons. And they that escape frō you, shall thynche vpō me amonge the Heathen, where they shalbe in captiuyte.

As for that whoorish & vnfaythfull herte of theirs, wherwyth they runne awaye fro me, I will breake it: yee and put oute those eyes of theirs, that cōmytte fornicacyō with their Idols.

E Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased wyth their selues, for the wyckednesses & abhominacions, which they haue done: and shall learne to knowe, how that it is not in vayne, that I the Lorde spake, to bringe soch myserye vpon them.

The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, and stampe wyth they fete, & saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perisshe wyth the swearde, with honger & wyth pestilence. Who so escaype of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perish with the swearde: and the other that are besieged, shall dye of honger.

D Thus will I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when youre slayne men lye amonge youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles & toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places, where they dyd sacrifyce to all their Idols. I will stretch myne hande oute vpon the, and will make the lande waste: so that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblathah forth, throwe all their habitacyons: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde

The.vij.Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israell shall shortly come. The cause of the destruccion therof. The purpose to commaunded to shewe the summe of the euill lye that are at hande.

A THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: The I call, O thou sonne of man, Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the lande of Israell: The ende commeth, yee verely the ende commeth vpon all the foure corners of the earth.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, one myserye & plage shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the, is come all readye, the houre is come

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicyō is hard by, and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaynes. Therefore, I will shortly poure out my fore displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpō the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacyons.

Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neither Ezech.bij.h. will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy i.c. wayes, and shewe thy abhominacions, to C learne you for to knowe, how that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here the daye is come, the houre is runne oute, a* the rodde flourisheth, wylfulnesse waxeth grene, malicious violence is growne vp, and the vngodly waxen to a staffe. Trouble shall come in the myddeste of all selles so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for nether of them both shall lyue. For the vysion shall come so greatly ouer all, that it shall not be hyndered: No man also with his wickednesse shall be able to saue hys owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe and make you all readye, but no man shall goo to the battel, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe wythout, pestilence E and honger wythin: so that who so is in the Deu.xxxij.d felde, shalbe slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the cytie, shall perisshe wyth honger and pestilence.

And soche as escape and fle from amonge them, shall be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the felde: every one shall be slayne, because of his owne wickednesse.

For this cause will I make them to be abhorred. Moreouer, I will geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. The.viii.Chapter.

An appearaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalem in the spirit. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatrpes of the house of Israel, and chiefly of the Priestes.

IT happened, that in the sixte yeare the fpfth daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house, & the Lordes of the councell of Juda with me: and the hande of ꝑ lord God fell euen there vpon me. And as I loked vp, I saw, as it were a lpkenelle of fyre from hys loynes downeward, and from hys loines vpwarde it shyned maruelous cleare. This ſi
b militude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heayry lockes of my head, and the spirite lyfte me vp betwyxte heauen & earthe: and God brought me in a vision to Jerusalē, into the entrye of the a.inner porte that lyeth towarde the Northe: there stode an ymage, with whome he that hath all thynges in hys power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: c Thou sonne of man, O lyfte vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the northe. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes towarde the northe, and beholde: beside the porte Northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacpon in the verye entrynge in. And he sayd further more vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seist thou what these do? Sepst thou the great abhompnacpons that the house of Israel commytte in this place? which oughte not to be done in my sanctuarye? But turne the about, and thou shalte se yet greater abhompnacpons. And with that broughte he me to the courte-gate, & when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wal. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou d sonne of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorow the wal, beholde, ther was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, & loke what wycked abhompnaciõs they do there. So I wente in, & sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idoles and abhominacions of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde about the wall. There stode also before the ymages. lxx. lordes of the councell of the house of Israel, and in the myddeste of them stode Jaazamah the sonne of Saphan: and euerye one of them had a censoure in hys hande, and out of the incense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, haste thou sene what the e Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly euerye one in hys chambre? For they saye: Tush, the Lorde seyth vs not, the Lord regarde deth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalte se the greate abhompnacpons that they do. And with that he broughte me to the dore of ꝑ porte of the Lordes house, towarde the north. And beholde there sate women mournynge for f. f Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: haste thou sene this thou sonne of man. Turne the about & thou shalte se yet greater abhompnacpons. And so he broughte me into the inward court of the Lordes house: and beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwyxte the foure entrye and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that turned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces towarde the east & these worshipped the sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, g thou sonne of man? Thynketh the house of Israel, that it is but a trysle, to do these abhompnacpons here? Shulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, & vndertake to prouoke me vnto angre? Yea and purposelye to caste vp their noses vpon me: Therfore wpll I also do some thynge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouerse them, neither wpll I spare them. Yea and though they crye in myne eares with loude boyce, yet wpll I not heare them.

¶ The notes.

a. The hyll Syon was walled rounde aboute and that wall wherby compalled it was called the outwarde wall: Aboute the temple was there another wall, that was called the inwarde wall, whiche although it were outewarde from the temple, yet was it inwarde from the wall whiche compalled the hyll. The spare betweene the inwarde wall, and the temple, was called the inner courte. Therein were manye portes, and in the northe port therof was Ezechiel set, for that place was holye, and therein dyd they vse to worshipp God: but with the fylthynes of thys hatefull ymage of Baal (whiche the Prophete here calleth the ymage of prouocacpon, because it prouoked the Lorde to vengeaunce) had they defyled it: as superstitpon doeth commenlye defyle euen the moste holyest thynges, & lacke as apeare moste Godlyest.

b. That is, after Sapnt Hierome, Abonides Amalius, whiche was Hesus fayrest sonne, ¶ whiche is kepard to haue rysen from death to lyfe, whiche fable the wemen of Jewrye dyd celebrate and holde solempne both wyth wepinge and teares. Some saye that it was an Jmage, whiche was made to wepe by crafte. Before this Jmage dyd wemen also bewayle theyr separacyon from theyr louers, and reioyced when they obtayned them agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

EE cryed also with a loude voice in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the cite, euery man with his weapened hand to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men oute of the strete of the vpper porte toward the north, and euery man a weapen in his hand to the slaughter. There was one amongest them, that had on him a lynen rayment, & a writers pynkhorne by his syde.

These wente in, & stode beside the brasen aulter: for the glorye of the Lorde was gone awaye from the Cherub, & was come downe to the thresholde of the house, and he called the man that had the lynen rayment vpon him, & the writers pynkhorne by his syde, and the Lorde sayde vnto him: Go thy waye thorow the cyte of Jerusalem, and set this marche Thau vpō the foreheades of them, yͭ mourne & crye for all the abhominacyons, that be done therin. And to the other, he sayde that J myght heare: Go ye after him thorow the cyte, slaye, spare none, spare nouȝhpi and destroye bothe olde men and ponge, maydens, children, and wyues.

sayde he vnto me: The wickednesse of ye house of Jsrael and Juda is very greate: so that the lande is full of blonde, and the cite full of vnrighteousnesse: for they saye: Tushe, the Lord regardeth not the earth, he seyth vs not. Ther fore wyl J vpon them, myne eye shall not owerse them, neyther wil J spare them, but wil recompense theyr wickednesse vpon theyr heades. Now the Cherubyns stode vpon the right syde of the house, when the man wente in, and the clonde fylled the vtmermer court. But the glory of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the thresholde of the house: so that the temple was full of clowdes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yea and the sounde of the Cherubyns wynges was heard into the fore court lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almyghty God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hote coales from the myddest of the wheles, whiche were vnder the Cherubyns: he went & stode beside the wheles. Thē the one Cherub reached forth his hand from vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, & gaue it vnto him that had on the lynen rayment in his handē: whiche toke it, and went oute. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there apeared the lykenesse of a mans handē: J sawe also foure wheles beside the Cherubyns, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fashyon of the precyous stone of Thersis: yet (vnto the sight) were they fashioned and lyke, as yf one whele had ben in another.

When they wente forthe, they wente all foure together, not turnynge aboute in theyr goynge. But where the fyrste wente, thyther wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in theyr goynge. Theyr whole bodyes theyr backes, theyr handes and wynges, yea and the wheles also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And J herde him call the wheles, Galgal (that is) a rolide boule. Euery one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourthe of an Aegle, and they were lyfted vp above. This is the beaste, that J sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe when the Cherubins wente, the wheles wente wyth them, & when the Cherubyns shoke theyr wynges to lyfte them selues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Standyng, when they stode, these stode also: And whē they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite was in

D Then the glorye of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubyns. And the Cherubins clackred with theyr wynges, & lyft the selues vp from the earth: so that I sawe when they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them.

This is the beast that I sawe vnder the god of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euerye one had foure faces, and euery one foure wynges, and vnder theyr wynges, as it were mens handes. Now the figure of theyr faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, & so was the countenaunce of the: Euerye one in hys goynge wente straight forwarde.

What they were that counsell the people of Israel against them by prophesyeng. Gathering out how they shalbe destroyed abroade. The rewarde of the howse commeth of God, wherwith can we not walke in his commaundementes. He threatened them that leane vnto theyr owne counsailes.

MOreouer, the spirite of the Lorde lyft me vp, & brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And beholde, there were xxv. men vnder the dore among whome I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men ymagyn mischefe, and a wycked counsel take they in this cytie, saying: tusshe, there is no destruccyon at hande, let vs buylde houses: thys Jerusalem is the cauldron, & we be the flesshe. Therfore shalte thou prophecye vnto them, yea prophecye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spirite of the Lorde vpon me, and sayd vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lord: On thys maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israell) and I knowe the ymaggynacyons of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in thys cyte, and fylled the streates full of the slayne. Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in thys cytie, are the flesshe, and thys cytie is the cauldron: But I wyll bynge you out of it: ye haue drawen out the swearde euen so wyll I also bynge a swearde ouer you, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll bynge you out of this citie, and delyuer you into youre enemyes handes, and wyll condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in all the coastes of Israell, I wyll be auenged of you: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. This cytie shall not be youre cauldron, neyther shall ye be the flesshe therein: but in the coastes of Israell wil I punyshe you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walcked, nor kepte his lawes: but haue done after the customes of the heathen, that lye rounde about you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face, and cried with a loud voyce: O Lord God, wylte thou thus vtterlye destroy all the remnaunte in Israell? And so the word of the Lorde came to me on thys maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethern: thy kynsfolke, and the whole house of Juda, whiche dwell at Jerusalem, saye: They be gone farre from the Lord, but the lande is geuen vs in possessyon. Therfore tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you farre of amonge the Gentyles, and scatre you amonge the nacyons, & I wyll halowe you but a lytle in the landes where ye shal come. Tel them also, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and bryng you from the countrees where ye be scatred, and wyl geue you the lande of Israel agayne: and thyther shall ye come. And as for all ymprouementes and all youre abhominacyons: I wyll take them awaye.

But lorke, whose hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abhominacyons & wicked ymagynges: those mens dedes wyll I bynge vpon their owne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. After this did the Cherubins lyft vp theyr wynges, and the wheles wente with them, and the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them. So the glorye of the Lorde wente vp from the myddest of the cytye, and stode vpon the mounte of the cytye towarde the east. But the wynde toke me vp, & in a vision (which came by the spirite of God) it brought me vp agayne into Caldea among the prisoners. Then the vision y I had sene, vanyshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had shewed me.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou, sonne of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde housholde: whiche haue eyes to se, and yet se not: & yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere ready to flye, and go forth by dayre vnto them, that they may se. teth Dygge thorowe the wall, that they may se, & beare thorowe it the same thing, that thou toke'st vp in their sight. So for thy selfe, thou shalte go forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face, þ thou se not the earthe, for I haue made the a shewtoken vnto the house of Israel. Nowe as the Lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: the gere þ I had made ready, brought I oute by daye. At euen I brake doune an hole thorowe the wall with my hande: & when it was darcke, I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them oute in their sight.

L And in the morninge, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, of Israell that frowarde housholde ashe the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell them: Thus saith the Lorde God: Thys prynce vnder take the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, & all the house of Israell, that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am youre shewtoken: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vn to you: ffye shall ye also, and go into captyuyte. He shall breake doune the wal, to carry stuf there thorowe: he shall couer hys face, þ he se not the grounde, with his eyen. My lyne will I spreade out vpon hym, & catche him in my net, & carye hym to Babylon, in the lande of the Caldees: whiche he shall not se, and yet shall he dye there. So whan I haue scatred them amonge the Heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. But I will leaue a lytle nombre of them from the swearde, hunger and pestilence: to tell all their abhominacions amonge the Heathen, where they come, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Ezech.xlvij.c. & xxxij.a

M Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: eyth a fearfull tremblynge shalte thou eate thy breade, with carefulnesse & sorowe shalte thou drinche thy water. And vnto the people of the lande, speake thou on thys maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, & to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate youre breade with sorowe, and drinche youre water with heapenesse: For the lande with the fulnesse ther of shalbe layde waste, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin. And the cyties that now be well ocrupyed, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

N Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of bywerde is that, whiche ye vse in þ lande of Israel, sayinge: Thus, seynge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the visyons are of none effecte: Tell them therfore: thus saith the Lorde God: I wil make that by worde to cesse, so that it shal no more be commonlye vsed in Israel.

But saye this vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thinge whiche hath bene prophecyed, shalbe fulfylled. There shal no vysyon be in vayne, neyther anye prophecye O false amonge the children of Israel: For it is I the Lorde, that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the Lorde speake, it shall be performed, & not be slacke in commynge.

Yea eurn in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) will I dryue some thynge, and bynge it to passe, sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel saye in this maner: Tushe, as for the vysion that he hath sene, it wil be many a day or it come to passe: Ya it tarre of it, the thyng that he prophecyeth. Therfore say vnto them: Thus saith the Lorde GOD: All my wordes shall no more be slacke: Lohe what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

The .xiij. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde against false Prophetes, which teach the people the counsailes of their owne hertes.

The worde of the Lorde came A vnto me, saying: Thou sone of man. Speake prophecye against those Prophetes, þ preache in Israel: & say thou vnto them that prophecye oute of their owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto those folysh prophetes, that folowe their owne spirite, and speake where they se nothynge. O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the dyrte felde: For they stande not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battell in the daye of þ Lord. Yapne thinges they se, & tell lyes, to make their preachynges with al. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Yapne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lorde hathe spoken it where as I neuer spake it.

Therfore, thus saith the Lorde God: Be- B cause youre wordes be vayne, & ye seke out lyes: Beholde, I will vpon you, saith þ Lord Myne handes shall come vpō the Prophetes that loke out vayne thinges, & preache lies: they shal not be in the councell of my people, nor write in þ boke of the house of Israel, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel, that ye Jer.xxij.d maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde God. And that for this cause, they haue disceyued my people, and tolde them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a wal, and they Mat.vij.c daube it with lowse clape. Therfore tell them which daube it with vntempered morter, that it shal fal. For there shal come a great shower of rayne, greate stones shall fall vpon it, and a sore storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wal come doune. Shal it not then be sayde vnto you: where is now the morter, that ye

dawbed it with all? Therfore thus ſayth the Lorde God: I wyll breake oute in my wroth full diſpleaſure with a ſtorme wynd, ſo that in myne anger there ſhall come a myghtye ſhowre of rayne, & hayle ſtones in my wrath, to deſtroye withall.

L As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed wyth vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen wyth the grounde, ſo that the foundacyon therof ſhall remoue, & it ſhall fal, yea and ye youre ſelues ſhall perysh in ỹ mid deſt therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am ỹ Lord. Thus wil I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I ſaye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. Theſe are the Prophetes of Iſrael, whiche prophecye vnto the cytye of Ieruſalem, and ſhewe out vyſyons of peace for them, where as no peace is, ſayeth the Lorde God. Wherfore (O thou ſonne of man) ſet thy face againſte the doughters of thy people, whiche prophecye out of their owne hertes: & ſpeake thou prophecye againſt them, and ſaye: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, that ſowe pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolſters vnder the heades D both of yong and olde, to catche ſoules wyth Map.b.c. all. For when ye haue gotte the ſoules of my Ezech.xij.b people in youre captiuite, ye promiſe them lyfe and diſhonoure me to my people, for an handfull of barlepe, and for a pece of breade: when ye kyll the ſoules of them, that dye not, & ſaue mes lyfe to them, that lyue not: Thus ye diſſemble with my people, that beleueth youre lyes.

Wherfore thus ſaith the Lorde God: Behold, I wyll alſo vpon the pyllowes, wherwith ye catche the ſoules in ſpenge: them wyl I take from youre armes, and let the ſoules go, that ye catche in ſpenge. Youre bolſters alſo will I teare in peces, & deliuer my people out of youre hande: ſo that they ſhal come no more in youre handes to be ſpoyled, and ye ſhall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Becauſe that with youre lyes ye diſcomfoute the herte of the ryghteous, whome I haue not diſcomfouted: Agayne. For ſo muche as ye corage the hande of the wycked, ſo that he maye not turne from hys wicked waye, and lyue: therfore ſhall ye ſyppe oute no more vanite, nor pro phecye youre owne geſſinges: for I wyl deliuer my people out of youre hande, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The Lorde throweth his worde to the people for theyr ſynnes ſake. The vnfaythfulnes of the worſte ſorte. The Lorde himſelfe deſtroye by falſe Prophetes. A comfourth of them that ſtode vnto Babylon.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, ſayeng: Thou ſonne of man, theſe men beare theyr Idols in their hertes, and go purpoſely vpon the ſtombleynge block of their owne wyckednelle: how darre they then aſke councell at me? Therfore ſpeake vnto them, & ſaye: Thus ſayth the Lorde God. Euerye man of the houſe of Iſrael that bearyth hys Idols in his herte, purpoſynge to ſtomble in hys owne wickednelle, and commeth to a Prophete, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man will I the Lorde my ſelfe geue anſwere, accordynge to the multytude of hys Idoles, that the houſe of Iſrael maye be ſnared in theyr owne hertes, becauſe they be cleane gone from me, for theyr Idoles ſakes.

Wherfore, tell the houſe of Iſrael: thus B ſayeth the Lorde God: Be conuerted, forſake youre Idols, and turne youre faces from all youre abhominacyons. For euery man (whether he be of the houſe of Iſrael or a ſtraunger, that ſogeourneth in Iſrael) whiche departeth fro me, & carryeth Idols in hys herte, purpoſynge to go ſtyll ſtombling in his owne wickednelle, & commeth to a Prophete, for to aſke councell at me thorowe him: vnto ỹ man wyll I the Lorde geue anſwere, by myne C owne ſelfe. The xvi. Chapter.

As the vnspeakable wode of the tyme ter to call in to the thre, so sayeth he that Jerusalem shalbe burnt.

The worde of the Lorde came vn to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vyne amonge al other trees? & of the vyne stock amonge al other tim ber of the groue? Do men take wode of it, to make any worke withall? Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to hange any thyng vp? Beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be burnte, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is burnte to allhes. Is it mete then for any worke? No.

Seyng then, that it was mete for no worke being whole: much lesse maye there any thig be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed & burnte it. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Like as I cast the vyne into the fyre for to be burnt, as other trees of the wode. Euen so will I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, & set my face against them: they shall go out from the fyre, & yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the lande waste, because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The Prophete concernyng to speake of the abhominacions of Jerusalem, doth first declare the kyndnes of God towarde it. Jerusalem as regarded of vnthankfulnes, for her fornicacion with Idoles. Of the children the wickednes of other people in exemplum of the sinnes of Jerusalem. Gyftes of the abhominacions into whiche the Sodomytes fell. Exhorte to prompte vs to the repentaunce.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, shewe therute of Jerusalem their abhominacions & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny & kinred came oute of the lande of .a. Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethyte. In the daye of thy byrthe, when thou waste borne, the strynge of thy .b. nauel was not cut of: thou wast not bathed in water: to make the cleane: Thou wast neyther robbed with salt, nor swedled in cloutes: No man regarded the so muche, as to do any of these thinges for the or to shewe the suche fauoure, but thou waste bitterlye cast oute vpon the felde, yea despised waste thou in the daye of thy byrthe.

Then came I by the, and sawe the troden doune in thyne owne bloude, and sayde vnto the: thou shalte be pourged from thyne owne bloude, from thyne owne bloude (I say) shalt thou be clensed. So I planted the, as the blossome of the felde: thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou haste gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beute, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Now when I went by the, & loked vpon the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yea euē the tyme to bowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonestye: yea I made an othe vnto the, and maryed my selfe wyth the (sayeth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the wyth water, and pourged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the wyth oyle, I gaue the chaunge of rayments, I made the shues of Carus le ther: I gyrded the about with whyte silcke, I clothed the with heerthues, I decked the wyth costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpō thy fore head, fare rynges vpon thyne eares, and set a beutyfull croune vpon thyne heade. Thus waste thou decked with syluer & golde, and thy rayment was of fyne whyte silke, of nedle worke & of dyuerse colours.

Thou dyddest eate wothynge but sowrels, hony and oyle: maruelous goodly waste thou & beutiful, yea euen a very Quene waste thou: In so muche, that thy .c. beutye was spoken of amonge the Heythen, for thou waste excellent in my beutye, which I put vpon the, sayeth the Lorde God. But thou haste put confidence in thyne owne beutye, & played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou haste committed whordome, wyth all that went by the, & haste fulfilled their desyre: yea thou haste take thy garmētes of dyuerse colours, & decked thyne aulters therwith, where vpon thou myghtest fulfyll thyne whoredome, of suche a fashyon, as neuer was done, nor shalbe. The goodly ornamentes & Jewels whiche I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, haste hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages

E thereof, and committed whordome with al.
Thy garmentes of dyuerse colowres hast thou taken, and decked them therwith: myne oyle and incense hast thou set before the. Thy meate whiche I gaue the, as spowrle, oyle & honye (to fede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And thus came also to passe, saieth the Lord God. Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes & doughters, whom thou hast begotten vnto me, and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be their meate. Is this but a smal whordome of thine (thinckest thou) that thou slayest my children and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them?
And yet in all thy abhominacyons & whor-dome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, howe naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesse (wo wo vnto the, saieth the Lord) thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place:
yea at the heade of euery strete hast thou buil ded the an aulter. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast laied out thy legges
D to euery one that came by, and multiplied thine whordom. Thou hast committed forni cacyon with the Egyptians thy neyghbours whiche had muche flesh, and thus hast thou vred thyne whordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I will stretch out mine hande
ouer the, and will minishe the foode of lode, & deliuer the ouer into the willes of the Philistines thine enemies, whiche are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. Thou hast playd
the whore also with the Assirians, whyche might not satisfye the: Yea thou hast played the harlot, and not had ynough. Thus hast thou stil committed thy fornicacyon frō
the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lust not satisfyed. How shoulde I reuenge thine herte (saieth the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these thinges, thou precious whore: buyldinge thy stewes at the head of euerye strete, and thy brodell houses in all places? Thou hast not ben as another whore that maketh boost of her winninge, but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlock, and taketh other in stede of her husbande. Gyftes are geuen to al other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, and to com mitte fornicacyon vnto the. It is come to passe with the in thy whordomes contrarye to the vse of other women, yea there had no such fornication ben committed after the, seyng that thou powrest gyftes vnto other, and no re-warde is geuen the: thys is a contrarie thing.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde
O thou harlot: thus saieth the Lorde God:
For so much as thou hast spent thy money,
and discouered thy shame, shewed thy whor-dome with all thy louers, and with all the Idols of thy abhominacions in the bloude
of thy children, whom thou hast geuen them:
Beholde therfore, I will gather together all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe comen: yea and all them whom thou favourest, and euery one that thou hatest: and wil discouer thy shame before them, that they al maye se thy filthines.

Moreouer, I will iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, & recompence
thyne owne bloud in wrath and gelousy.
I will geue the ouer into their power, that shal breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodel houses, they shall stripe the oute of thy clothes, al thy gaye and beutyfull Jewels shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked and bare: yea they shal bryng the comē people vpon the, whiche shall stone the, and slaye the downe with their swordes. They shall burne vp thy houses, & punish the in the syght of manye wemen. Thus will I make thy whordome to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewardes.

Shoulde I make my wrath to be syt, take my gelousy from the, be content, and no more to be displeased? Seynge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Behold ther fore, I will bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, saieth the Lorde God: howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordynge to thy wycked dwelle and all thy abhominacions. Be-holde, al they that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also against the: suche a mo ther, suche a doughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne dough-ter, that hast cast of her housbande & their chil dren. Yea, thou art the syster of thy systers, whiche forsoke their husbandes and their chil dren. Youre mother is a Cethite, and youre father an Amorite. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwel vpō thy left hande.

But thy youngest syster that dwelleth on thy right hand, is Sodoma & her doughters.
Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, nor done after their abhominacyons: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte
then they. As truly as I lyue, saieth the lorde God: Sodoma thy syster with her doughters hath not done so euyl, as thou and thy dough ters. Beholde, the sinnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abun daunce and Idelnesse: these thynges had she and her doughters. Neyther that, they trached not their handes to the poore and nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thinges before me: therfore I tooke them awaye, when I had sene it. Neyther had Samaria done halfe of thy sinnes, yea thou hast exceaded them in wyckednesse. In so muche that in cō parysen of all the abhominacions whyche thou hast done, thou hast made thy systers good women.

As for their captyuite, namely the captyuite of Sodoma and her doughters: the captyui te of Samaria and her doughters. I wyll bringe them agayne, so wyl I also bringe agayne thy captiuite amonge thē: that thou mayest take thyne owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, & to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namelye) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria and her doughters with thy selfe and thy doughters, shalbe brought agayne to youre olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and before the wickednes came to light, thou wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Syrians with all their townes, and the Philistines with all that lye rounde about them, brought the to shame & confusyon: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne spytefulnes and abhomynacyon, sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shoulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast dispysed the oth, and broken the covenaunte. Neuertheles, I wyll remembre the covenaunte, that I made with the in thy youth, in so much yt it shalbe an euerlastinge covenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of thē: then shalte thou receyue of me thy elder and younger sisters, whome I will make thy doughters, and that Jere.xxxi.c. And so will I renue my covenaunt with the, that thou mayest know that I am the Lorde: that thou mayest thynche vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I have forgeuen the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The notes.

a. Wherfore he vpbraideth vnto the Jewes the name of straunge nacyons is before sayd in the first chapter Exo.c.

b. Mauel may signifye the desires and delectacyons of man, whiche are healed by the worde and feare of God: as it is sayde Proner.iij.b. But feare the Lord and departe frō euyl, so shal thy navel be whole, &c. The learned expounde thys whole sentence of the tribulacion that Israel suffered in Egipte, and after amonges the Caldees. After the death of Joseph, when Pharao knew them not. Exo.i. were they moost abiect and vyle, and no man had compassyon on them. This was the daye of their byrth. And in like case after the destruccyon of Jerusalem and in their imprysonment at Babilon. At both these times were they motherles and helpeles, concernynge their owne strengthes: but were yet cared for of God and receyued by his mercy. The Prophete borowyth his sayinge of speaking of the maner of mothers, after the birth of their children, which first bathe their nawles and washe them with salt, and then swadle them, &c. Such help had Israel none in their aduersities in Egypt and Babilon, but lay couerwhelmed in their spytefulnes & mysdeades, and were regarded as bastardes and vnmotherlye intreated of all men. There was no man but onely God that toke thought for them or holpe them: and that did he onely of his mercy, without any of their desertynges.

c. By this brydye are signifyed the gyftes & graces that the Lorde hath gruen to his people, whiche neuertheles was an Idolatres and worshipped other Goddes, or worshipped God after another maner and way then he had commaunded them: whiche thinge is signifyed by their fornycacyon, as in Exo. xxxij.b. & after in the xxiij.a.

The. xvij. Chapter.

The parable of the two Aegles (vpon) which (signifyeth that Jerusalem, whiche contrary to the other had taken the frendshyp of Nabuchodonozor, turned hym self to the kyng of Egypte, and therfore perysshed. An exposicio of the parable. 3 prophesye of Christ.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: put forthe a darcke speakinge, and a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. There came a great.a. Aegle with greate wynges, yea with myghty long wynges, and full of fethers of dyuerse colowres, vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke a braunche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and carped it into the lande of Canaan, and set it in a cyte of marchauntes. He toke also a braunche of the land & planted it in a fruteful ground, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a wyllye tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vyneslyche, but low by the grounde: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred oute braunches. But there was another Aegle, a great one, whych had great wynges and many fethers: and behold the rotes of this vyne had an hunger after hym, and spred oute his braunches towarde hym, to water hys frutes. Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good grounde besyde greate waters: so that (by reason) it shoulde haue brought out braunches & frute & haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake thou therfore, thus sayeth the lord God: Shall thys vyne prospere? shal not his rotes be pluckte oute, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches withere & fade awaye? yea without eyther strong arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Behold it was planted: shall it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and wytherd, yea euen in the shutynge out of his blossomes, as sone as the eest wynde bloweth?

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Speake to that frowarde housholde: knowe ye not, what these thinges do signifye? Tell thē: Beholde the kyng of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and hys Princes, and ledde them to Babylon.

He toke of the kinges sede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an oth of him. The Princes of the lande toke he with hym also, that the land myght be holden in subiecepon, and not to rebelle, but kepe the covenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, & sent hys Embassitoures into Egypte, that he myght have horses and much people. Should that prospere? Shoulde he be kept safe, that doeth such thynges? Or shoulde he escape that breaketh his covenaunt? As truely as I lyve (sayeth the Lorde God: He shal dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made him kyng: whose othe he hath despysed, and whose covenaunte he hath broken. Neyther shall Pharao with hys greate hoste and multitude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when they cast up bulwarkes, and set up bulwarckes to destroye much people. For seyng he hath despysed the othe, and broken the covenaunt (where as he yet gaue his hande therupon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

F Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truely as I lyve, I wil bring myne othe that he hath despised, & my covenaunt that he hath broken, upon his owne heade. I will cast my net aboute hym, and catche him in my parne. To Babylon wil I carye him, there will I pumyshe him, because of the greate offence that he made me. As for those that fle from him out of the hoste, they shalbe slayne with the sweord. The residue shalbe scatred towarde all the wyndes, and ye shal knowe, that I the Lorde have spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyll also G take.b. a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, & will set it, and take the vttermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hill: Manely, vpon the hye hill of Syon wil I plante it: that it may bringe forth twigges, and grue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye byde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lord have brought downe the hye tree, and set the low tree vp: that I have dryed vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to florysh. Euen I the Lorde that spake it, have also brought it to passe.

The notes.

b. By this braunche vnderstande our Lorde, and by the hye Cedre tree the tribe of Juda, of whiche he came: by the vp permost twygge is vnderstande Christ, and by the hyll of Syon, is figured the churche.

The.xviii. Chapter.

The Prophet sheweth that every man shall beare his owne synne. To whom the commaundement, or sentence pertayneth. Death is prophesyed to the vngodlye, and life to them that turne from their vngodlye wayes.

THe worde of the Lord came vnto me, on this maner: what A meane ye by this comen prouerbe that ye vse in the land of Israel sayinge: The fathers have eate sowre grapes, and the childrens teth are set on edge? As truely as I lyve, (sayeth the Lord God) ye shall vse this bywoorde nomore in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Lyke as the B father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth shal dye. If a man be godly and do the thynge that is equall and ryght he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe, he medleth with no mealtruous woman: he greueth no body, he geueth his detter his pledge again: he taketh none other thing good by violence: he parteth his meate with the hongrye: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothynge vpon vsury: he taketh nothynge ouer: he withdraweth his hand from vnryght: he dealeth faythfully betwixte man & man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, and performeth them faythfully) This is a ryghteous man, he shall surely lyue C (sayeth the Lord God.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murtherer a sheder of blonde: if he do one of these thynges (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hilles: he defyleth his neyghbours wife: he greueth the poore & nedy: he robbeth and spoyleth: he geueth not the detter his pledge again: he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thynges: he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh moreouer. Shall thys man lyue? He shall not lyue. Seynge he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, hys blonde shalbe vpon him.

Now if this man get a sonne also, that Jere.xxxi.c. seyth al his fathers synnes, whiche he hath Eze.xviii.A. done: and feareth, neyther doth such lyke. Ma- D nely he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wife: he wrongeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neyther spoyleth, nor robbeth anye man: he dealeth his meate with the hongrye: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receyueth no vsury, nor anye thinge ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes: This man shall not dye in his fathers sinne, but shall lyue without faple. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brothers, and dyd wickedly amonge his people: lo, he is dead in his owne sinne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then should not this sonne beare his fathers sinne? Therfore: because the sonne hath done equitie and ryght, hath kept al my commaundementes, and done them: therfore shal he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shal not beare the fathers offence, neyther shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the righteous shalbe vpon him, and the wickednes of the wycked shalbe vpon him selfe also. But if the vngodlye will turne away from all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe al my commaun-

dementes, and do the thinge that is equall and ryght, doutles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he did before, they a shall not be thought vpon: but in his ryghteousnes, that he hath done, he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayeth the Lorde God, but rather that he conuerte and lyue.

Agayne, yf the righteous turne awaye frō his righteousnes, and do iniquite, according to all the abhominacions, that the wycked man doth: shal he lyue? All the ryghteousnes that he hath done, shal not be thought vpon: but in the faute that he hath offended withall and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye say: Tush, the waye of the lorde is not indifferent. Heare therfore the house of Jsrael: Is not my waye ryght? Or, are not youre wayes rather wicked? When a ryghteous man turneth awaye from his ryghteousnesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he muste dye therin: yea for the vnryghteousnes that he hath done, muste he dye. Agayne, whē the wycked man turneth awaye from his wickednesse, that he hath done, & doth the thinge whiche is equall and ryght, he shall saue hys soule alyue. For in so muche as he remembreth hym selfe, & turneth him from all the vngodlynes, that he had vsed, he shall lyue, and not dye.

And yet sayeth the house of Jsraell: Tush the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnryght, O ye house of Jsrael: Are not youre wayes rather vnequall? As for me I will iudge euery man, according vnto hys wayes, O ye house of Jsrael, sayeth the Lord God. Wherfore be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all youre wickednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Caste awaye from you all youre vngodlinesse, that ye haue done: make you new hertes and a new spirit. Wherfore will ye dye, O ye house of Jsrael? seyng, I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The notes.

a. Shall not be thought vpon. The Sophysters haue a proper solucion for this text and suche like whiche testifye that God so forgeueth that he will not after call agayn his forgeuenes and punishe. True it is (saye they) God forgeueth the synne, but not the punishement due vnto y synne. Seuen yeares purgatory ment (as they paste) must we abyde in purgatorie for euerye synne, when it is forgeuen. yf this be not to mocke with god and his holy worde, I wote not what is mockage. yf God can, and do (as they affirme) geue me pardō of my synne, so y mythest geue me so much mo as lyttel payne therfore and yet not ones thincke on my synne, surely he hath a wonderfull remembraunce. And that he will not thinke on it, the text doth here openly affyrme. By this sophistry might the kinge geue a man his pardon for theft, & after hange him vp. For he might saye: Syr I forgaue you your theft, but not your hanging whiche is due vnto youre theft. Suche pardō woulde they be loth to haue that spake pnagruel it, yf the kinge whiche is but a man, be more faithfull, then to deale so with hys parduners, whome he forgeueth. How shoulde God then whiche is oure heauenly father, & whiche is euen goodnes it selfe, haue suche a lotell fayned, and vnperfect forgeuenes, that shoulde after punysh. But here of wil I now speake no more, least ye shoulde happly smel that this solucion were pnagruel, to pyche mennes purses, thinow halfe penie, Dirige grotes, Trentalles, peare maides, mowethmaides, &c. Because that although God can and may forgeue the synne, yet muste suche thinges obtayne the forgeuenes of the punyshement due therunto: Or that the Priestes benefytes were not sufficient for them to lyue on, with out such pyllage, or yet that the poore people could by any other meane be mayntened from that thinge, wherwith they, their wyues their housholde and children shoulde lyue.

The.xix.Chapter.

The captiuite of Jehoahas and of Jehoachin is figured by the lyons whelpes. & by the lyon. He setteth out the prosperyte of the cyte of Jerusalē, that was, and the myserye therof that is present.

BEt mourne thou for the princes of Jsrael, & saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lionesse amonge the lions, & norysshed her ponge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyō it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folcke. The Heathen hearde of him, and toke hym in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egipte.

Now when the dammē sawe, that all her hope and comforth was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him which went amonge the lyons, and became a fearce lion, learned to spoyle and to deuoure folcke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cities waste. In so muche that the whole lande and euery thinge therin, were vtterlye desolate, thorow the very noyse of his roaringe.

Then came the Heathen together on euery side oute of all countreyes against him, layed their nettes for him, and toke him in their pitte. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kinge of Babilon: which put him in prison, that his noyse shoulde no more be hearde vpon the mountaynes of Jsrael. As for thy mother, she is like a vyne in thy bloude, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braūches are growen oute of many waters, her stalkes were so strōge, that me myght haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hye in her stalckes,

So when men sawe that she exalted the

hyght

hepgth and multytude of her braunches, she was roted out in displeasure, and cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dryed up her frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of wythered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wildernesse, in a dry and thurstye grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalckes, which hath brent up her braunches and her frute: so that she hath no mo stronge stalckes, to be staues for offycers. This is a pytyous and miserable thynge.

The.xx. Chapter.

The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere them whyle they prape, for the offence of unkynde and wycked be hauyour. He promyseth that the people shall returne from captyuyte. By the wood that shoulde be burnt, is tygnyfyed the dampnage of Jerusalem.

IN the.xvij. yeare the.x. day of the.v. Moneth, it happened, that certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner. Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Are ye come hyther to aske any thinge at me? As truely as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll geue you no answere. Wylt thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue them? Shew them the abhominacions of their forefathers, and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the day when I chose Israel, and lyft up myne hand vpon the seede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea, whē I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayd: I am the Lorde youre God, euen in the daye that I lift up mine hande ouer them, to bring them out of the lande of Egypte, vnto a lande that I haue prouided for them, which floweth with mylke and honye, and it is a pleasaunte lande amonge all other: Then sayde I vnto them: Cast awaye euerye man the abhominacyons that he hath before hym, and defyle not youre selues with the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde youre God.

But they rebelled agaynst me, and would not folowe me, to cast awaye euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, & to forsake the Idoles of Egipte. Then I made to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them, yea euen in the myddest of the lande of Egipte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake, that it shoulde not be vnhalowed before the Heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, and among whom I shewed my selfe vnto them, that it would bryng them out of the lande of Egypte. Now when I had caried them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wildernesse: I gaue the my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes, whiche who so keepeth, shall lyue in them. I gaue them also my holy dayes (to be a token betwixte me and them, and therby know, that I am the Lorde, whiche halloweth them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynste me in the wildernesse, they would not walcke in my commaundementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes (whiche whoso keepeth, shoulde lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

Then I made me to poure out my indignacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I would not do it, for my names sake: lest it shoulde be dishonoured before the Heathen, from the which I had caried them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wildernesse, that I would not bryng them into the lande, whiche I gaue them, a land that floweth with mylck and honye, and is a pleasure of all landes, and that because they refused my lawes, and walcked not in my commaundementes, but and vnhalowed my Sabbathes, for their herte was gone after their Idoles. Neuertheles myne eye spared them so that I would not vtterly slaye them, and consume them in the wyldernes. Moreouer I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wildernesse: walcke not in the statutes of your forefathers kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not youre selues with their Idoles, for I am the Lorde youre God. Walcke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and do them, hallowe my Sabbathes: for they are a token betwixte me and you, that ye may know, howe that I am the Lorde. Notwythstandinge, their sonnes rebelled against me also: they walcked not in my statutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfyll them (whiche he that doeth shall lyue in them) neyther halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them in the wildernesse. Neuertheles I withdrawe my hande for my names sake, least it shoulde be vnhalowed amonge the Heathen, before whome I had brought the forth. I lift up myne hand ouer them also in the wildernesse, that I would scatter them amonge the Heathen, & strowe them amonge the nacions: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast alyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbathes, and lyft up their eyes to their fathers Idoles. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, and lawes thorow the whyche they shoulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed them in their owne gyftes (when I appointed for my selfe all their fyrstborne) to make them desolate: that they might knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israell, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Besyde all this, youre forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended against me. For after I had brought them into the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery hye hyll and the thycke trees: they made their offerynges, and prouoked me with their oblacyons, makinge swete sauoures there, and poured out their drynk-

fathers in the wildernesse, so will I punyshe you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I will bring you vnder my iurisdiccion, & vnder the bonde of the covenaunt. The louthers also and the transgressours will I take from among you, & bringe them out of the lande of youre habi-tacion: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in it: that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy Heare the worde of the Lorde: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wil kindle a fire in se, that I the Lord haue kindled it, so that no man maye quenche it. Then saide I: O Lord

The. xxi. Chapter.

The threatenyth the swerde, that is to saye, destruccyon to the cyte of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of Kynge Jehoiachin. He is commaunded to prophesye the destruccyon of the children of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lorde threatenyth death vnto Nabuchadonosor kynge of Babilon.

THe worde of the Lorde came to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, A set thy face toward Jerusalem, & speake against the Sanctuary, &
prophesie against the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wil vpon the, & wil drawe my swerde out of the sheath, and rote out of the both the righteous & the wyc-ked. Seinge then that I will rote oute of the both the righteous and wicked, therfore shall my swerde go oute of his sheath against all flesh from the South to the south: that al flesh may know that I the Lord haue drawen my swerde out of the sheath, and it shall not be put in again.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) B that thy loines crack withal, ye mourne bitterly for them. And yf they saye, wherfore mourneth thou? Then tel them: for the tydin-ges that cōmeth, at the whiche al hertes shal melt, all handes shalbe letterdowne, all stomaches shall swowne, and all knees shal wexe feble. Beholde, it commeth and shalbe fulfilled, sayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophesye and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God:
speake, the swearde is sharpened and well scourd. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scourd & it may be bright .a. O, the destroy-inge staf of my sonne, shall bringe downe all
wod. He hath put his swerd to the slaghter C & good holde may be taken of it. This swerd is sharpened & dight, that it may be geuen in to the hande of the manslayer.

Crie (O thou sonne of man) and howle, for thy

Samaria. this swerde shall smyte my people, & all the rulers in Israel, which with my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde thowsh this swerde. Smyte thou vpon the thyghe, for wherfore shoulde not the plage & flat of iudgement come? Prophecy thou sonne of man, & smite thine hādes together: make the swerde two edged, yea make it thre edged, that mans slapers swerde, that swerde of the greate slaughter, whiche shall smyte them, euen in their priuichambres, to make them abashed & sayne at the hertes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright and sharpe it is, how well dight & mete for the slaughter. Get the to some place alone, ether vpon the ryght hand or on the left, whether soeuer thy face turneth. I will smyte my handes together also, & satisfye my wrothful indignacio. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne sayenge: Thou sonne of man, make the two streetes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Vnto these streetes shall go out of one lande. He shall set him vp a place, at the heade of the streete shall he chose hym oute a corner. Make the a streete, that the swerde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytye of Ierusalem. For the kinge of Babylon shall stande in the turning of the waye, at the head of the two streetes, to aske councell at the sothsayers, cast enge the lottes with hys arowes to aske councell at the Idols, and to loke in the liuer. But the sothsayenge shall poynte to the ryght syde vpon Ierusalem, that he maye set men of warre, to smyte it with a greate noyse, to crye out Alarum, to set battelrammes against the gates, to graue vp dyches, and to make bulwarckes.

Neuertheles, as for the sothsayenge, they shal holde it but for vanite, euen as thoughe a pell were tolde them: yea & they them selues remembre their wickednesse, so that by ryght they must be taken and wonne. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God: For so muche as ye poure selues shew your offrynge, & haue opened your wickednesse, so that in all your workes men may se your synnes: yea in so muche (I say) that ye poure selues haue made mencion therof ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked gyde of Israel whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take away the myter, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought low. Ruyne ruyne, yea ruyne them will I, and destroy them: and that shall not be fulfilled vntyll he come, to whome the iudgement belongeth, & to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophecye and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to the children of Ammō, and to their blasphemye, speake thus: The swerde, the swerde is drawen forth al redye to the slaughter, and sowred that it glistreth (because thou hast lohed the out banisher, and prophecyed lies) that it may come vpon thy necke, like as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne: whose day came, when their wickednesse was full.

Though it were put vp agayn into the sheath, yet will I punysh the, in the land where thou wast noryshed and borne, and powre my indignacion vpon the and will blowe vpō the in the fyre of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruell people, which are learned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy blood shall be shed in the lande, that thou mayest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

a Some reade: Shall we remoue oute selues. He despyseth the staffe of my sonne, and all wood. The Lorde readeth: the tribe of my sonne: that is to saye, the tribe of Juda. Or shall the staffe of my sonne despyse al wood: That is, Shall the tribe of Juda dyspyse all the other.

The xxij. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde against Ierusalem for murthering, & denying the honour vnto their fathers & mothers, & other wyckednesse. Of the wyckednesse of the false prophetes & gyddes, & of their vnreasonable counsailers. The tyrannye of rulers. The vnkyndnes of the people.

Moreouer, the worde of the lord came vnto me, & sayd: thou sonne of mā, wilt thou not reproue this bloudthurstye cyte? shewe hem their abhominacions, and tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O thou cyty, that sheddest blonde in the middest of the, that thy tyme may come also: & makest the Idoles to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gylty, in the blond that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the Idoles, whiche thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore will I make the to be confounded amōg the Heathē, & to be despysed in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shal laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, & art full of vnclennesse. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed blond in the. In the haue they despysed father & mother, in the haue they oppressed the straūger, in the haue they vexed the widdowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despysed my Sanctuarye, and vnhalowed my Sabboth. Wycked men are there in the, that shede bloude, & eate vpon the hylles, and in the they vse vnhappynesse.

In the haue they discouered their fathers shame, in the haue they vexed women in their vncleānesse. Euery man hath brake shamefully with his neyghbours wyfe, and abhominably defiled his doughter in law. In the hath euery man forced his owne systers, euen his fathers doughter: yea gyftes haue ben receyued in the, to shede bloude. Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcion, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I haue smitten* my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vsed, and vpon the blonde whyche hath bene shed in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy handes defende the selues in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, will bringe it also to passe. I will scatter the amonge the Heathen, and strowe the about in the landes, & wil cause thy filthynesse to cesse oute of the: yea and I will haue the possession in the sight of the Heathen, that thou mayest know, that I am the Lorde.

*That is, to wete, in tokē of great wo-fulnes.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that shoulde be tynne, yron, lead, are in the fire become drosse. Therfore, thus sayeth the lord God: For so muche as ye all are turned into drosse; beholde, I wyl bringe you together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as syluer, tynne, yron and lead are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melt them. Euen so wil I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indignacyon. I will bringe you together, and kindle the fyre of my cruel displeasure vnder you, that ye may be melted therin.

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therin, that ye may know, how that I the Lord haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell her: thou art an vncleane lande, whyche is not rayned vpō in the daye of the cruell wrath: thy Prophetes that are in the, are swome together to deuoure soules, lyke as a rorynge Lyon, that spareth by his praye. They receyue ryches and good, and make many widdowes in the. Thy priestes breake my lawe, and defyle my Sanctuarye. They put no differēce betwene the holy and vnholy, neither discerne betwene the cleane and vncleane: they turne their eyes from my Sabbothes, & I am vnhalowed among the. Thy rulers in ỹ are like rauishing wolues, to shed blonde, and to destroye soules, for their owne couetous lucre. As for thy Prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered clay, they se vanyties, and prophetye lyes vnto them, sayinge: the Lorde God sayeth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wicked extorcion and robbery. They vexe the poore and nedye and oppresse the straunger agaynste ryghte. And I soughte in the lande for a man, that woulde make vp the hedge, and set him selfe in the gappe before me in the landes behalfe, that I shoulde not vtterlye destroy it: but I couldе spude none. Therfore will I poure out my cruel displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre in my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompence vpon their heades sayeth the Lorde God.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

Of the signification, that is to saye, of the Idolatry of Samaria & Jerusalē, vnder the names of Oholah & Oholibah. In comparyson of Samaria he sheweth that the destruction of Jerusalem is the heuyer. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophecyed. The abhominacyon of both the whores is found oute. Their punishment.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, there were two wemen, that had one mother: these (whē they were younge) begānne to playe the harlottes in Egypte. There were their brestes bosed, and the pappes of their mayden head destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oholah .a. and her youngest syster .b. Oholibah. These two were myne, & bare sonnes and doughters. Their names were, Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalem, that was Oholibah. As for Oholah she begānne to go a whorynge, when I had taken her to me, & she was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, whyche had to do with her: euen the princes & lordes, ỹ were clothe in costly araye: lyke younge men, lusty riders of horses. Ezech. xx. a

Thus thorowe her whordome she cleaued vnto all the younge men of Assiria. Yea she was made vnclene vpon them, and defyled her selfe with all their Idols. Ney her crafftes she left from the fornicacyon, that she vsed with the Egyptians, for in her youth they lay vnder her, they brosed the brestes of her maydenheade, and poured their whordome vpon her. Wherfore I delyuered her into the handes of her louers euen the Assirians, whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sonnes and doughters, and slue her with the swerde. An euyll name gat she of all people, and they punished her.

Her syster Oholibah sawe this, & destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, more then she, & exceaded her syster in whordome: she loued the Assirians (which also lay vnder her) namelye the princes & greate lordes, that were clothed with all maner of goodly apparell, all lusty horsemen and faire younge personnes. Then I sawe, that they bothe were defiled alike. But she increased still in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the images of the Caldees set forthe with fresshe colours, with lyne girdles about the and goodly bonnettes vpon their heades, lokinge all like Princes (after the maner of the Babilonians and Caldees in their owne lāde where they be borne) immediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she burnt in loue vpon them, & sent messaungers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babilonians came to her they lay with her, and defiled her with their whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them: her whordome and shame was discouered & sene: then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also.

Neuer-

Samaria. Neuertheleſſe ſhe lefte her whordome euer ſ̄ longer the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin ſhe hath playen the harlot in the lande of Egipte: ſhe lusted in luſt vpon them, whoſe fleſhy wan like the fleſhe of Aſſes & their lede like the lede of horſes. Thus thou haſt renued the filthineſſe of thy youth, whē thy louers vnfeled thy pappes, & marred thy breſtes in Egipte.

D Therfore (O Oholibah) thus ſayeth ſ̄ lord God. I will raiſe vp thy louers (with whom thou haſt ſatisfied thy luſt) againſt the, and gather them together rounde about the: namely, the Babilonians, & all the Caldees: Pecod, Soha and Koa, with all the Aſſirians: all younge and fayre louers: rulers and lordes knightes and gentlemen, whiche be all good horſemen: theſe ſhal come vpon the with horſes, charrettes, and a great multitude of people: whiche ſhalbe harneſſed about the on euery ſide, with breſtplates, ſheldes and helmettes. I will punyſhe the before them, yea they them ſelues ſhal punyſh the, accordinge to their owne iudgement. I will put my gelouſy vpon the, ſo that they ſhall deale cruelly with the. They ſhall cut of thine noſe and thyne eares, and the remnaunte ſhall fall thorow the ſwerde. They ſhall carie awaye thy ſonnes and doughters, and the reſidue ſhalbe brent in the fyre. They ſhall ſtripe the oute of thy clothes, and carye the coſtly Jewels awaye with them.

E Thus wil I make an ende of thy filthineſſe and whordome, whiche thou haſte brought oute of the lande of Egipte: ſo that thou ſhalt turne thyne eyes no more after them, and call thy minde no more vpon Egipte. For thus ſayeth the Lorde: behold, I wil deliuer the in to the handes of them, whom thou hateſt: yea euen into the hādes of thē, to whom thou haſt fulfilled thy luſt, whiche ſhall deale cruelly with the: all thy labour ſhall they take with them, and leaue the naked & bare, & thus the ſhame of thy filthy whordome ſhal come to light. All theſe thynges ſhall happen vnto the, becauſe of thy whordome, wherin thou haſt vſed amonge the Gentiles with whoſe Idoles thou haſt defiled thy ſelfe. Thou haſt walked in the waye of thy ſiſter, therfore will I geue the her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Thou ſhalte drynke vp thy ſiſters cuppe, how depe and ſtarre ſoeuer it be to the botome. Thou ſhalte be laughed to ſcorne, and had as a greatye in derꝑſpon, as is poſſible. Thou ſhalte be full of dronckennes and ſorowe, for the cuppe of thy ſiſter Samaria is a cuppe of deſtruccyon and waſtynge: the ſame ſhalt thou drynke, & ſuppe it oute euen to the dregges, yea thou ſhalt eate vp the brake peces of it, and ſo teare thyne owne breſtes: For euen I haue ſpoken it, ſayeth the Lorde God.

F Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: For ſo muche as thou haſt forgotten me, & caſt me aſide, ſo beare now thyne owne ſhame and & whordome. The Lord ſayde moreouer vnto me: Thou ſonne of man wilt thou not reproue Oholah and Oholibah? Shewe them their abhominacyons: namelye, that they haue broken their wedlocke, and ſtayned their hādes with bloud: yea euen with their idoles haue they cōmitted aduoutry, & offered them their owne childre (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yea, and thus haue they done vnto me alſo, they haue defiled my Sanctuary in that ſame daye, & haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they haue ſlayne their children for their Idoles, they came the ſame daye into my Sanctuary to defile it. Lo, thus haue they done in my houſe. Beſide all this, thou haſt ſent thy meſſaungers for men oute of farre countreyes: and whē they came, thou haſt bathed, trimmed and ſet forth thy ſelfe of the beſt faſhion: thou ſitteſt vpon a goodlye bed, & a table ſpred before the: wherupō thou haſt ſet mine incenſe and myne oyle.

Then was there greate cheare with her, & the men that were ſent from farre countreyes ouer the deſert, vnto theſe they gaue bracelettes vpon their hādes, and ſet glorious crounes vpon their heades: then thought I: no doute, theſe will vſe their harlotry alſo with pouder old whore. And they went into her, as vnto a comen harlot: Euen ſo went they alſo to Oholah & Oholibah thoſe filthy women.

O ye all that loue vertu & rygh teouſnes, iudge them, punyſh them, as aduoutrers and murtherers ought to be iudged & punyſhed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloude is in their handes. Wherfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: bringe a great multitude of people vpon them, & make them be ſcatred and ſpoyled: theſe ſhall ſtone them, & gyue them with their ſwerdes. They ſhall ſlaye their ſonnes and doughters and burne vp their houſes with fyre.

Thus will I deſtroye all ſuch filthynes out of the land: that al women may learne, not to do after your vnclenneſſe. And ſo they ſhal lay your filthineſſe vpon your owne ſelues, & ye ſhalbe punyſhed for the ſinnes, that ye haue committed with your Idols, & ye ſhall know that I am the Lorde.

The.xxiii. Chapter.

The prophet the figure of Jeruſalem by a parable of a ſtrange ꝓnce. The puniſhe of Samaria with many other repreuinges.

IN the.xij.yeare, in the.x. moneth the.v.day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me ſayinge: O thou ſonne of man write vp the name of this daye, yea euen the houre of this preſent day: when the kinge of Babilon ſet hym ſelfe againſte Jeru-

Jerusalem. Shewe that obstinate housholde a parable and speake unto them: Thus saieth the Lord God: Set the a pot, se it on, & poure water into it: put all the peces together in it, all the good peces: the lyme and the shoulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones set well therin.

With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner: Wo be unto the bloudye citie of the pot, wherupon the rustmesse hangeth, and is not yet scoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there neede not lottes be cast therfore, for the blonde is yet in it. Upon a playne dare stone hath she poured it, and not upon the grounde, that it might be couered with dust: & therfore have I letten her poure her blonde upon a playne dare stony rocke, because it should not be hid and that I might bringe my wrathfull indignacion and vengeaunce upon her.

Wherfore thus saieth the Lorde God: O wo be unto that bloudthirsty cyty, for who I will prepare a heape of wood: heare thou the bones together, kindle you the fire, seeth the flesshe, let all be well soden, that the bones maye be sacht oute. Moreouer, set the pot empty upo the coales, that it may be warme & the metall hote: that the spyth & rustmesse maye be consumed. But it will not go of, there is so muche of it: the rustmesse must be burnt out. Thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I would have clensed the, but thou wouldest not be clensed. Thou canste not be purged from thyne uncleannesse, tyll I have poured my wrathfull indignacion upon the, Euen I the Lorde have so decreed: Yea, it is come thereto alreadye, that I wil do it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be intreated: but accordynge to thy wayes & imaginacions, thou shalt be punyshed, saieth the lord God. And the worde of the Lorde came unto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, beholde I wil take awaye * the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou neyther mourne, nor wepe, nor water thy cheekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy self alone, but se no deadly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes upon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breade. So I spake unto the people by tymes in the morninge and at euen my wyfe died: then upon the next morowe, I did as I was commaunded. And the people sayde unto me: wilt thou not tell us, what that signifyeth, whyche thou doest? I answered them, the word of the lord came unto me sayinge: Tell the house of Israell, thus saieth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll suspende my sanctuarye: euen the glorye of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, & the thyng that ye love, your sonnes & doughters whome ye have left, shall fal thorow the swerde.

Lyke as I have done, so shall ye do also:

Naum. iii. c. Hiacuc. ii. a.

That is, thy wife.

Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners breade: your bonnettes shall ye have upon your heades, and shoes upon your fete. Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your sinnes ye shalbe sorowful, and one repente with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewtoken. For lyke as he hath done, so whe this commeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye learne to knowe) that I am the Lorde God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye, when I take from them their power, their wyfe and honourr, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their bodies: namelye, their sonnes and doughters. Then shall there one escape, and come unto the, for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouth be opened to him, whiche is escaped, that thou mayest speake, & be no more domme: Yea and thou shalt be their shewtoken, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The. xxv. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde upon the sonnes of Ammon which reioyced at the fal of Israell. Against Moab & Seir. Against Idumea. Against the Philistines.

The worde of the Lorde came unto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face against the Ammonites, prophesye upon them, & say unto the Ammonites: heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus saieth the Lorde God: For so muche as thou spakest ouer my Sanctuarye. A ha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel, I trowe it be nowe desolate: ye and ouer the house of Juda, I trow they be now led away prisoners: Beholde, I will deliver the to the people of the east, that they maye haue the in possession, these shal set their castle to and houses in the. They shall eate thy fruite, & drincke up thy milche. And for * Rabath, I will make of it a stall for camels, and of Ammon a sheepefolde: & ye shal knowe, that I am the Lord.

For thus saieth the lord God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thine handes, and stamped with thy fete, yea reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israell with despyte: beholde, I will stretche out myne hand ouer the, and delyuer the, to be spoyled of the heathen, and rote the out from amonge the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of al landes: yea, I will make the be layed waste, that thou mayest know, that I am the Lorde.

Thus saieth the Lorde God: For so much as Moab and Seir do say: Se for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be. Therfore beholde, I will make the cyties of Moab weapenlesse, and take awaye their strength: their cyties and chefe coastes of their lande, whiche are the pleasures of the countrey. As namelye: Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon and Cariathaim: these will I open unto them of the East, that they maye fall upon the Ammonites: and wil geue it them in possession, so that the Ammonites shall no more be had in remembraunce amonge the Heathen. Even thus will I punyshe Moab also, that they maye

From Theman vnto Dedan will I make it desolate, they shalbe slayne wt the swearde. Thus owre my people of Israell will I auenge me agayne vpon Edom: they shall handle him, accordinge to my wrath & indignacion, so that they shall know my vengeaunce, sayeth the Lorde God.

1.Macha.b.a

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as the Philistines haue done this, namely taken vengeaunce with despitefully stomaches and of an olde euyll will set them selues to destroye. Therfore thus saith the Lorde God: Beholde: I will stretch oute mine hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyers, and cause all the remnaunt of the sea coaste to perishe. A greate vengeaunce will I take vpō them, & punish them cruelly: that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde, which haue auenged me of them.

The prophecyeth that Tyrus shalbe ouerthrowen, because it reioyced at the destruccion of Jerusalem. The wonderyng and admyrement of the marchauntes, for the destruccion of Tyrus. Anno

A Esa.xxiij.a. Jer.xlvij.b. Ezech.xxvij.

IT happened, that in ỹ.xi. yeare the firste daye of the Moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, because that Tyre hathe spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I trow ỹ portes of the people be broken, & the tutores vnto me, for I haue destroyed my helpfull: yea therfore sayeth the lorde God. Beholde O Tire I wil vpō the, I wil bring a great multitude of people agaynst the, lyke as when the sea ariseth with his wawes: These shal breake the walles of Tire, and cast doune her towres. I wil scrape the ground from her, & make her a bare stone: yea as the dryinge place, where the fyshers hange vp their nettes by the sea syde. Even I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde

B God. The gētyles shal spoile her: her daughters vpon the felde shall perysshe with the swerde, that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I will bringe hither Nabuchodonozor (which is the kynge of Babylon, and a kinge of kinges) from the North vpon Tire, with horses charettes, horsmen, and with a greate multytude of people. Thy doughters that are in the lande, shall he slaye with the swearde: but agaynst the, he shal make bulwarckes & graue vp dyches about the, & lyft vp his shylde agaynste the. His slynges and batelrammes shall he prepare for thy walles, and with his weapens breake doune thy towres. The dust of his horses shall couer the: they shalbe so many: thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horse men, charettes and wheles: when he

C entreth to thy portes, as men do into an open cyty. With the hoffes of his horse feet, shall he treade doune all thy strete.

He shall slaye thy people with the swerde, & breake doune the pyllers of thy strength. They shal waste awaye thy ryches, and spoile thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake doune, and destroy thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy timbre and foundacion shal they cast in the water. Thus will I bring the melody of thy songes, and the noyse of thy mynstrelsy to an ende, so that they shall no more be hearde. I will make a bare stone of the, yea a dryinge place for nettes, & shalt neuer be builded agayne: For even I the lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God: thus hath the Lord God spoken concernyng Tire. The Jles shalbe moued at the noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of the slayne, that shall be murthered in the. All kinges of the sea shall come doun from their seates regal, they shal laye awaye their roabes, & put of their costly clothinge. Yea with tremblinge shal they be

D clothed, they shall sytt vpon the ground: they shalbe afrayed at thy sodeu fall, and be abashed at the.

Jerem.l.f.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: O thou noble cyty, that hast bene so great ly occupyed of olde, thou that halte bene the strengthe vpon the sea with thine inhabitours of whom all men stode in feare: How art thou nowe so vtterlye destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fal the inhabytours of the Jles, yea and the Jles them selues, shall stande in feare at thyne ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: when I make the a desolate cytye (as other cities be, that no man dwell in, and whē I bringe the depe vpon the, that greate waters maye couer the: Then wyll I call the doune vnto them, that descende into the pyt: vnto a people that hath bene longe deade, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wildernesse, with them whiche go doune to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in the. And I wyll make the to be no more in honoure in the lande of the lyuynge. I wil make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though he thou be sought for, yet shalte thou not be founde for euermore, sayeth the Lorde God.

The worde of God againſt the kynge of Tyrus for two cauſes. Daniel the Prophete is meaned to betwixte the kynge of Tyrus. The ſworde of the Lord againſte Sydon. The Lorde promiſeth that he wyll gather together the children of Iſrael.

The worde of the lord came vn to me ſaying: Thou ſonne of A man, tell the Prince of Tyre. Thus ſaieth the lord god becauſe thou haſte a proude hert & haſt ſaid: I am a god: I haue my ſeate in the middeſt of the ſea like a God, where as thou art but a man and not God, & yet ſtandeſt in thine owne conceyt, that thou art God. Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell hym: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou arte a seale of a shemefle, full of wysdome & excellente beutye. Thou hast ben in the pleasaunte garde of God: thou art dect with all maner of precyous stones: with Rubi, Topas, Christal, Iamuetz, Onix, Jaspis, D Saphyr, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy brewys and the holes that be in the, were set redye in the daye of thy creacyon. Thou arte a lapis Cherub, stretched wyde ouer for to couer.

And shal no more be a pryckinge thorne, and an hurtynge breer vnto the house of Israel, nor vnto them that lye rounde about her, and hate her, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lord God: when I gather the housholde of Israel together ageyne frō the nacyons amonge whom they be scattered: G then shall I be sanctifyed in them, in the sight of the Gentyles, & they shal dwell in the lāde that I gaue to my seruaunte Jacob. I wyl put an hoke in thy chawes, & hāge al the fyshe of thy waters vpō thy scales, after y I wyl draw the out of thy waters, yea and all the fyshe of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I wyll caste the oute vpon the drye lande: with the fyshe of thy waters, so that thou shalte lye vpon the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered nor taken vp: but shalte be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the foules of the ayre, that all they whyche dwell in Egypte, maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: because thou hast ben a staffe B of rede to the house of Israel. Whē they take in Ezech.28.b hold of the with their hādes, thou breakest & pare Esay.xxx.a hest their ouerpe syde, & yf they leaned vpon xxxi.a.xxxvi.a the, thou brakest & hurtest the ryues of their backes. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll bringe a sweardc vpon the, & rote oute of the horse man and beaste. Yea the lande of Egypte shalbe desolate and waste: & they shal knowe, that I am the Lord. Because he sayde: the water is myne, I my selfe haue made it. Beholde, therfore, I wyll vpon the & vpon thy waters: I wyll make the lande of C Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syene vnto the borders of the Morian lād, so that in.xl.yeares there shall no fote of man walcke there, neyther fote of catell go there, neyther shall it be inhabyted. I wyll make the lande of Egypten to be desolate, amonge other waste countreyes, and her cytyes to lye boyde.xl.yeares, among other boyde cytyes: And I wyll skatter the Egyptyans amonge the Gentyles and nacyons.

Ageyne, thus sayth the Lorde God: Whē Jer.xlvi.d the.xl.yeares are expyred, I wyll gather the Egyptyans together ageyne, out of the nacyons, among whome they were scattred, and wyll bringe the prysoners of Egypte ageyne into the lande of Pathures (their owne nature countre) that they maye be there a lowlye small kyngdome: yea they shalbe the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, leste they exalte them selues aboue the Gentyles, for I wyll monyshe them that they shal no more rule the Heathen. They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke the ouye more wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, & to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

In the.xvii. yeare, the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath made hys hoste, wyth greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: that euerye head may be balde, and euerye shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen neyther hym nor hys hoost anye rewarde, for the greate trauayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde god: beholde, I wyl geue the lande of Egypt vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye take awaye all her substaunce, robbe her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to pay hys hoste theyr wages wythall. I wil geue hym the lande of Egypte for hys labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wyll I cause the b. horne of the house of Israell to growe forthe, & open the mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, howe I am the Lorde.

a. The properte of dragons is to haunte where aboundaunce of waters are: Therfore is the kynge of Egypte here called a dragon, because of the aboundaunce of water that are in Egypte, where he raygned. So is Jerusalē called a flure, because of her hauntynge of Idolatrye as before in the.xvi.c.

The.xxx.Chapter.

The destruccyon of Egypte and of the cytyes to be destroyed.

THe worde of the Lorde came more ouer vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, prophecye & speake thus sayth the Lorde God: Mourne ye wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come: I darck daye of the Heathen. The houre is at hande, the swearde commeth vpon Egypte. When the woundred men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacyons are destroyed, the Morians like shall be afrayed, yea the Morians lande, Lybya and Lydia, al theyr comē people, & Chub and al that be confederate vnto them, shal fal with them thorowe the swearde.

Ezech.xxxi. xxxii.xxxiii.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: The mayntayners of the land of Egypt shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the tower of Syene shall they be slayne downe wyth the swearde, sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreys they shalbe made desolate, & amonge other waste cytyes they shalbe wasted. And they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shall theyr messengers go forth fro me in shippes, to make the careles Morians afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them in the daye of Egypte for doubtles it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll make an ende of the people of Egypte thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylō. He and hys people with hym, yea and the crewell tyraunttes of the heathen shalbe brought to destroye the lande. They shal drawe oute theyr sweardes vpon Egypte, and fyl the land full of slayne men. I wyll dryue vp theyr floudes of water, and let the lande into the hāden of wycked people. The lande and al that is therin, wyl I destroye thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll destroye the Idols, and bryng the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shal no more be a Prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnes wyl I sende into the Egyptyans lande. As for Pathures, I wyl make it desolate, & kindle a fyre in b. Zoan. Alexandria wyll I punyshe and poure my wrothful indignacion vpon c. Sin, whiche is the strengthe of Egypte. Al the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

c. Sin, that is Pelusium

Sin shalbe in greate heauynesse, Alexandria shalbe rored oute, and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The beste men of Helyopolis & Bubasto shalbe slayne wyth the swearde, & carped awaye captyue. At Taphnis the daye shalbe darcke, when I breake there the scepter of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloud shal couer her, & her doughters shalbe led awaye into captyuyte. Thus wyll I punysh Egypte that they may know, how that I am ỹ Lord.

It happened in the.xi. yeare, vpon ỹ seuēth daye of the fyrste Moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: & lo it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, neyther shall any playster be layed vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypte, and breake hys strong arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wyl smyte the swearde oute of hys hande.

Ezech.xxix.

And for the Egyptyans, I wyl scatter them amonge the Heathen, & strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wil strength the arme of the kynge of Babylō, & geue him my swerd in hys hāde, but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so that he shall holde it before hym pytyously lyke a wounded man. Yea I wyll stablysh ỹ kyng of Babylōs arme, & the armes of Pharao shal fal doune, ỹ it maye be knowne, that I am the Lord, when I geue the kynge of Babylon my swearde in his hād, ỹ he may draw it out vpon the land of Egypte: & that when I scatter the Egyptyans amonge the Heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe the multytude of wa ters that he sente from hym, he obtayned ma nye longe braunches. In the.xii. yeare, the fyrste daye of the.xii. Thou castest thy wa ters about the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stampest in their floudes. Thus Eze.xii.b saith the Lorde God: I wyll sprede my nette xxix.a. ouer the, namelye, a greate multytude of peo ple: these shall brynge the into my parnet, for I wyll caste the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the: I wyll geue al the beastes of the lande ynoughe of the. Thy fleshe wyll I caste vpon the hylles, and fyl the valleyes w B thy hyghnesse. I wyl water the land with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the moun taynes, and the valleys shall be full of the. When thou arte put oute, I wyll couer the hea Ezech.xiij.b uen, and make hys starres dymme. I wyll Joel.iij.c sprede a cloude ouer the sunne, and the moone shall not geue her lyghte. All the lyghtes of heauen wyll I put oute ouer the, and brynge darcknesse vpon thy lande, sayeth the Lorde God. I will trouble the hertes of many peo ple, when I brynge thy destruccyon amonge the Heathen & countreys, whom thou knowest not. Yea I wyl make many people with their kynges so afrayed thorowe the, that their hearre shal stād vp, when I shake my swearde at their facys. Sodenly shall they be astonyed, euerye man in hym selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: the kynge of Babylons swearde shall come vpon the, C with the sweardes of the mightyes wyll I smyte doune thy people. All they that be migh tye amonge the Gentyles, shall waste the proude pompe of Egypte, and bynge doune all her people. All the cattell also of Egypte will I destroye, that they shall come no more vpon the waters: so that neyther mans foote, nor beastes clawe, shall stere them anye more. Then will I make their waters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayeth the Lorde God: when I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countre with al that is therin, shalbe layde waste: and when I smyte all them whiche dwell in it, that they D maye knowe, that I am the Lorde. This is the mourninge, that the doughters of the Gentiles shall make: Yea a sorowe and lamentacyon shal they take vp, vpon Egypte and al her people, sayeth the Lorde God.

In the.xij. yeare, the.xv. daye of the Moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, Esay.xiiij.c. Ezech.xxxi.c. sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Take vp a lamentacyon vpon the people of Egypte, and caste them doune, yea and the myghtye people of the Gentiles also, euen with them that dwell beneth: and with them that go doune in to the graue. Downe (thou sayst sorowest thou not) and laye the with the vncircumcysed. Amonge those that be slayne with the swearde shall they lye. The swearde is geuen alreadye, he shall be drawen forthe, and all hys people. The myghtye worthyes and hys helpers, E be gone doune, and lye with the vncircumcysed, and with them that be slayne with the swearde, shall speake to hym oute of the hell.

Assur is there also with hys compayne, and their graues rounde about, which were slaine and fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye beside hym in the lowe pytte. Hys comens are buryed rounde aboute hys graue, all together wounded, and slayne with the swearde whiche men afore tyme brought feare into F lande of the lyuynge.

Jerem.xlix.f. Dani.viij.a There is Elam also with all hys people, and their graues rounde about: which al being wounded and slayne with the swearde, are gone doune vncircumcysed vnder the earthe, whiche neuertheles sometyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge: for the whiche they beare their shame, with the other that be gone doune to the graue.

F Their buryall is geuen them, and al their people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are rounde aboute all them, which be vncircumcysed, & with the that be slayne thorowe the swearde: for seyng that in tymes past they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed, they must now beare their owne shame, with the that go doune to the pytte, and lye among the that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, & their people, and their graues rounde about. These al are among the vncircumcysed, & them that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge the worthyes, and vncircumcysed Gyauntes? which with their weapens are gone doune to hell: whose sweardes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge? Yea amonge the vncircumcysed shalte thou be destroyed, and slepe with them, that perysshed thorowe the swearde.

There is the lande of Edom with her kinges & princes also, whiche with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yea amonge the vncircumcysed, and them whiche are gone doune into the pytte. Moreouer, there be all the princes of the north with all the Sydonians, whiche are gone doune to the slayne. G Jerem.xlix. Ezec.xxxij. xxxv.a

With their feare & strength they are come to confusyon, and lye there vncircumcysed, amonge those that be slayne with the swearde: and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone doune to the pytte. Nowe when Pharao seyth this, he shalbe comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swearde both Pharao and all his host, sayeth the lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the lyuynge. But Pharao and all his people shall lye amonge the vncircumcysed, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xxxiij. Chapter.

He setteth oute the office of a watche that preacheth the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that do hope ye, and boldeneth in the with the promes of mercy. As the former rygtuousnes helpeth not the rygtuous, yf he geue him self agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wicked that conuerteth. The word of the Lord against the remnaunt of the people. Against the mockers of the woorde of the Shepherd.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde A came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Speake to the children of thy people, & tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a man of their cositte, & set him to be their watchma, the same man (whan he seyth the swearde come 2.Reg.xj.b. vpon the lande) shal blowe the trompet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trompet, and wil not be warned, and the swearde come and take him away: his bloude shall be vpon hys owne head: for he heard the sound of the trompet, and wolde not take hede: therfore hys bloude be vpon hym. But yf he will receyue warninge, he shall saue hys lyfe. Agayne, yf the watchman se the swearde come and blowe it not with the trompet, so that the people is not warned: yf the swearde come and take any man from amonge them, the same shall be taken away in hys owne sinne but hys bloude will I require of the watchemans hande. B C

And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watcheman vnto the house of Israell: that where as thou hearest any thynge oute of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I say vnto the wicked thou wicked, thou shalte surelye dye: & thou geuest hym Ezech.iij.

hym not warnynge, that he maye bewarre of his vngodly waye: then shall the wicked dye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude will I require of thy hãd. Neuertheles yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet will not be turned from it, then shall he dye because of hys synne, but thou haste delyuered thy soule.

L Therfor (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Ye saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shuld we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truelye as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in Ezech.xviij.e the death of the wicked, but moch rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodlye wayes, O ye of ỹ house of Israell. Oh, wherfore will ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldre of thy Ezech.xviij.d people: The ryghtuousnes of the righteous shall not saue hym, when soeuer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully: Agayne, the wickednesse of the wicked shal not hurt him, when soeuer he conuerteth from hys vngodlynesse.

And the ryghteousnesse of the righteous
D shall not saue hys lyfe, when soeuer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surelye lyue, and so he trust to his owne ryghteousnesse, and do synne: then shall hys ryghteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in the wickednesse that he hath done he shall dye. Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked: thou
Exo.xx.b shalt surely dye: and so he turne from hys
Jere.xxxij.a synne, and do the thinge that is lawfull and ryght: In so moch that the same wicked man geueth the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walcketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, & doth no wronge: Then shall he surelye lyue, and not dye. Per ỹ synnes that he hath done, shall neuer be thought vpon: for in so moch as he doth now the thinge that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people saye: Tushe, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, where as their owne waye is rather wrighte.

Whẽ the righteous turneth from his righ
Ezech.xviij.f teousnesse, & doth the thinge that is wycked,
Rom.6.a he shal dye therfore. But yf the wycked turne from hys wyckednesse, doing the thinge that is lawfull & ryght, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equall. O ye house of Israel, I will iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

E In the.xij. yeare, the.x. daye of the.x. moneth of oure captyuyte, it happened, that one which was escaped out of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cyte is destroyed. Now the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the euenyng afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntyll the mornynge that he came to me: yee he opened my mouth, so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayde: Thou sonne of man, they that dwell in the wasted land of Israel, sayde: Abrahã was but one man, & he had the lande in possessyon: now are we many, & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell ff Ezech.xxxvij.b them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: In the bloude Deu.xij.c haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idoles, & haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue the lande in possessyon?

Ye leane vpon your sweardes, ye worke abomynacyon, euery one defyleth hys neyghbours wyfe: & shall ye then possesse the lãde? Saye thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. b As truelye as I lyue all ye that dwell in thys wyldernesse, shalbe slayne with the swearde: what so euer is vpon the feld, will I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes & dennes shall dye of the pestylence. For I will make the lande so desolate and waste, and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israell shalbe so waste, that no man shall trauayle therby.

Then shall they learne to knowe, that I G am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste Ezech.xxxv.b and desolate, because of all their abomynacyons, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the chyldren of thy people ỹ talche of the, byth walles and in the doores of their houses, sayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare what worde is gone forthe from the Lorde: These come vnto the, after ỹ maner of a great people: yea my people sytt bowne before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not there after: for in their mouthes they shewe them selues, as though they were feruent, but their herte goeth after their owne courtous lucre. And as a balet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunt to synge, so talke thou be vnto thẽ: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wil not do thereafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo, it commeth in dede) then shall they know, ỹ there hath ben a Prophet amõg thẽ.

The.xxxvi.Chapter.

The prophecye deteyneth from the Gentiles vnto Israel. The benefytes done vnto the Iewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto them, by ther merytes. God exhorteth our hertes vnto the loue of his commaundements.

A Ezech.vi.c.

THou sonne of man, prophecie vpō the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: Heare the worde of ✠ Lorde, O ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because youre enemye hath sayde vpō you: Aha, the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: prophecye therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Seynge ye be wasted & troden downe on euery syde, and become a possessyon vnto the residue of the Gentyles, whych haue brought you in to mens mouthes & vnto an euell name amonge the people: Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys and dales, to the hyde wildernesses & desolat cyties, whyche are spoyled, & had in derysyon on euery syde, B amonge the residue of the heathen: Yee euen thus sayeth the Lord God: In the fyre of my gelousy haue I take a denyer, agaynst the residue of the Gentyles, and agaynst all Edom Ezec.xxxv.a which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possessyon, which also reioyced from their whole herte with a despyteful stomacke to waste it, and to spoyle it.

Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaynes and hilles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, this haue I denyed in my gelousy and terrible wrath: For so moch as ye haue suffred reproche of the heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I haue sworne, that the Gentyles which lye aboute you, shal beare youre confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israell) ye shall shute out your braunches, and bringe forth youre fruyte to my people of Israell, for it is hard by, that it wyll come. Beholde, I come C vnto you, and vnto you wyl I turne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

I will sende you moch people, which shal be all of the house of Israel: the cyties shalbe inhabyted, & the decayed places shalbe repayred agayne. I wyll prouyde you so moch people and catell, whiche shall increase & bringe fruyte. I wil restore you also to your old estat & shewe you more kindnes then euer ye had before: wherby ye shal knowe, that I am the Lorde. Yee people wyll I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israell) whych shall haue the in possessyon, & thou shalt be their inheritaunce so that thou shalt nomore be wythout them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moch as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, nether destroye thy people eny more, sayeth the Lorde God. D And I wyll not suffre the, for to heare thyne owne confusyon amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reproche of the nacions, nor cast out thyne owne people enymore, sayeth the Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israell dwelt vpon their owne grounde they defyled them selues with their owne wayes and ymaginacyons: so that in my syght they: waye was lyke the vncleanesse of a menstrous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon the, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, and because of their Idoles, wher with they had defyled them selues. I scatred them also amonge the heathen, so that they where strowed about in the landes. Accordinge to their wayes and after their owne inuencyons, so dyd I punysh them.

Now when they were gone vnto the Gentyles, & come in amonge them they a* dishonoured my holye name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, & must go out of their owne lande. Then spared I my holy name, which the house of Israell had dishonoured amonge the Gentyles, to whom they came. Therfore tell the house of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lord God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israell) but for my holye names sake, whyche ye dyshonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyll hallowe my greate name + agayne, which amonge the Gentiles is euell spoke of: to: ye pourselues haue dishonoured it amonge the. And the Gentiles shal knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayeth the Lorde God.

As to: you, I wyll take you from amõge the Heathen, and gather you together out of all countrees, and bryng you agayne into youre owne lande. Then wyll I poure clene water vpon you, & ye shalbe clene: yee frõ all Esa.xlviii.a. youre vncleannesse and frõ all youre Idols shal Iere.xxxi.c. I clense you. A new herte also will I geue you, and a new spirite wyll I put into you: As to: that stony herte, I wyll take it out of youre body, & geue you a fleshly herte. I will Deu.xxx.d. geue my spirite amonge you, and cause you to walche in my commaundemẽtes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyll them.

And so ye shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to youre forefathers, and ye shalbe my people, & I wilbe youre God. I wyll helpe you out of all youre vncleannesse. I wyll call for the corne, & will increase it, & wyll let you haue no hunger. I wyll multiplye the fruites of the trees & the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare no more reproche of hunger amonge the Heathẽ. Then shall ye remẽbre your owne wicked wayes, & youre vnaccepous, whiche were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at youre owne selues, by reason of youre synnes & abhominacõs.

But I wyll not do this for youre sakes (sayeth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Ther fore, O ye house of Israell, be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord God: what tyme as I shall clense you frõ all youre offences, then wyll I make the cyties to be occupyed agayne, and wyll repayre the places yͭ be decayed. The desolate lande shall be tylled agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the sight of all them that wente by. Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, & the bodye, desolate and broken downe cyties, are now strong, and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whyche repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne, that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet ones be found agayne of the house of Israel & do this for them: I shall increase them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke and yͭ Jeremp. i.a. flocke of Jerusalem are in the tyme solempne fraytre: so shall also the wylde wasted cyties be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

He prophesieth the bringyng agayne of the people beinge in captyuyte. He sheweth the vnyon of the two tribes with the tribe. Christ to be kynge of the Chosen people alone, and the only euerlastyng shepeherde therof.

The hande of the Lord came vpõ me, & caryed me out in A the spirite of the Lorde, & let me downe in a playne felde that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde aboute by them: & beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and maruelous dry also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: prophecye thou vpon these bones, & speake vnto them: Ye dry bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth yͭ Lorde God vnto these bones: B Beholde, I wyll put breth into you, that ye maye lyue: I wyll geue yow synowes, and make flesh grow vpon you, & couer you ouer with skinne: & so geue you breth, that ye may Gene.ij.b lyue, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecyed, as he had commaunded i.Esd.vi.a me. And as I was prophecyinge there came a noyse and a greate mocyon, so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Now when I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, and flesh grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou towarde the wynde: prophecy, & speake to yͭ wynd: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Come (O thou ayre) from the C foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these slayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had cõmaunded me: then came yͭ breth into thẽ, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greate sorte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecye thou, & speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I Ezec. xxxvij. wyll opẽ youre graues (O my people) & take D you out of youre sepulcres, & bringe you in to the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, & bringe you out of them. My spirite also wyll I put in you, & ye shall lyue: I wyll set you agayne in youre owne lande, and ye shal knowe, that I am the Lord, which haue sayd it, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke and write vpon it: Vnto Juda & to the chyldre of Israel his companyons. Then take another sticke, & write vpon it: Vnto Joseph yͭ stock of Ephraim, & to all the housholde of Israell his companyons. And thẽ, take both these together in thyne hande, so shall there be one E stycke therof. Now yͭ chyldre of thy people saye ple saye vnto the: wylt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answere: thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take the stocke of Joseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim & of the tribes of Israell his felowes, & will put the to ỳ stocke of Juda, & make them one stocke, & they shall be one in my hãde. And ỳ two stockes where vpon thou wrytest, shalt thou haue in thyne hande, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them.

Ose.i.b.

F Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take awaye the chyldren of Israel from amonge the Heathé vnto whõ they be gone, & wyll gather them together on euery syde, & bringe them againe into their owne lande: yee I wyll make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israell, and they all shall haue but one kynge. They shall no mo: be two peoples from henceforth, neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defile thé selues nomore with their abhominacyons, Idoles, & all their wicked doinges. I will helpe them out of all their dwellinge places, wherin they haue synned: and will so clense them: that they shalbe my people, & I their God.

G Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their kinge, & they all shal haue one shepherde onely. They shall walke in my lawes, & my commaundementes shall they both kepe and fulfil. They shal dwel in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaũt, where as youre fathers also haue dwelt. Yea, euen in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, & their childers chyldren dwell for euermore: and my seruaunt Dauid shalbe their euerlastinge prince. Moreouer, I will make a bonde of peace with them, whiche shalbe vnto them an euerlastinge couenaunt. I will sette them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuary will I set amonge thé for euermore. My dwellynge shalbe with them, yea, I will be their God, and they shal be my people. Thus the Heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: when my Sanctuary shalbe amõg them for euermore.

The.xxxviij. Chapter.

He prophecyeth that Gog and Magog shall come forth out of copodora beside in to the lande of promes. Their ouerth. He reherseth that the ouerthrowe of Gog was before prophecyed of the prophetes. The destruccyon of hym.

A Nd the worde of ỳ Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Magog, whyche is the chiefe prince of Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynst hym, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God: O Gog thou chiefe prince Mesech & Tuball: beholde, I will vpon the, and wil turne the about, and put a bytte in thy chawes: I will bringe the forth & all thine hoost, both horse and horsmé whyche be all weapened of the beste fashion: a great people, that holde altogether speares, shyldes and swerdes: the Perses, Moreans and with them the Lybians, whyche all beare shyldes & helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogouma out of the north quarters, and all his hoostes, yea, & manye people with the.

Eze.xxxix.

Eze.xx.c.

D Therfore prepare the, set thy selfe in araye with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeares thou shalt come into the lande, that hath bene destroyed with the swearde, & now is replenyshed againe with diuerse people vpõ the mountaynes of Israell, which haue longe ben waste. Yee they be brought E out of the nacyons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stourme wether, to couer the lãde, and as it were a darcke cloude thou with all thyne hostes, & a greate multytude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall manye thynges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt imagyn mischefe, & saye: I will vp to ponder playne lande, seyng they syt at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwell all without any walles, they haue nether barres nor doores) to spoyle D them, to robbe thé, to laye hande vpon their so well inhabyted wyldernesse agaynst that people, that is gathered together frõ amonge the Heathen, whyche haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchaūtes of Tharsis with all their worthies, saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylt spoyle: to take syluer and golde: to carye awaye catell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, thou E shalt prophecye, and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the Lord God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, ỳ my people of Israell dwelleth safe & shalte come from thy place out of the north partes: thou & moch people with the, whyche ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a greate multytude & an innumerable sorte. For thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the. a^n latter dayes: I will bringe the vp into my lande, ỳ the Heathé maye knowe me, whé I get me honoure vpon the, O Gog before their eyes.

a^n Of the latter or last dayes, & what they signifye ye haue in Esa.ij.a.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thou art he, F of whom I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruaūtes the prophetes of Israell, whyche prophecyed in those dayes and yeares, that I shulde bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog entreth vp in to the lande of Israell (sayeth the Lorde God) shall my ire kyndle vp in my wrath. For in my feruent and hote displeasure I haue decreed, that there shalbe a greate trouble in the land of Israel at that tyme. The very fishes in the sea, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and al the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

G The hilles also shalbe turned vp syde downe, the stapres of stone shall fall, & all walles shall synche to the grounde. I will call for a swearde vpō them in all my mountaynes, sayeth the Lorde God: so that euerye mans swearde shall be vpon another. Wyth pestylence and bloude will I punysh hym: stormy rayne & hayle stones, fyre & brymstone, will I cause to rayne vpon him & all his heape yee & vpon al that greate people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnifyed, honoured, and knowne amonge the Heathen: that they maye be sure, how that I am the Lorde.

The.xxxix.Chapter.

The Order the destruccyon of Gog & magog. The grose of Gog and of his hoste. The prophecieth that Gog & his company shall be devoured of birdes & beastes. Wherfore the house of Israel is exalted. Their bringyng again: frō captyuyte is promysed.

A THerfore O thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynste Gog, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, O Gog: thou chefe prince at Mesech and Tubal, I will vpon the, and turne the aboute, & carie the forth, and leade the from the north partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy bowe, I will smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arowes out of thy ryght hande. Thou with all thyne heape, and all the people that is with the, muste, fall vpon the mountaynes of Israell. Then will I geue yͤ vnto the fowles & wylde beastes of yͤ felde, to be devoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

Ezec.xxxviii.

B Into Magog, and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the Iles: will I sende a fyre, & they shall know, that I am the Lorde. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowne amonge my people of Israell: and I will not let my holy name be euell spoken of enymore: but yͤ very Heathē also shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holye one of Israell. Beholde, it commeth, and shalbe fulfylled in dede, sayeth the Lord God. This is the daye wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in yͤ cyties of Israel, shall go forth & set fyre vpon the weapens, & burne them: shyldes & speres bowes and arowes, billes & clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that

C they shall els bringe no stycches frō the felde, nether haue nede to hewe downe eny out of the wodde: For they shal haue weapēs ynow to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, & spoyle those that spoyled them sayeth the Lorde God.

At the same tyme will I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in, in Israel: euē the valley where thorow men go from the east to the fre warde. Those that trauayle therby, shall abhorre it. There shall Gog and all hys people be buried: and it shalbe called the valleye of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israell be burienge of them that they maye clense the lande. Yee al yͤ people of the lande shall burye them. So it shall be a glorious daye, when I gett me that honoure, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be deed buriers, euer going thorow the lande, & appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, that the lande maye be clensed. Frō ende to ende shall they seke, and that .vij. monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the land, where they se a mās bone, they shall set vp a toke by it, till the deedburiers haue buried it also, in yͤ valleys of yͤ people of Gog. And the name of the cytye shalbe called. * Hamonah: Thus shall they make the land clene.

* That is, multitude.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Speake vnto all the fowles and euery bryde, yee and to all the wylde beastes of the felde: Gather yͤ together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell: eate fleshe, and drincke bloude. Ye shall eate yͤ

fleth of the worthies, and drynke the bloude of the princes of the lande: of the wethers, of the lambes of the goates, and of the oxen that be al slayne at Basan. Eate the fat youre belyfull, & drynche bloud, till ye be dronken of the slaughter, whyche I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table, with horses and stronge horsmen: with captaynes and all mē of warre, sayeth the Lorde God.

I will bringe my glorye also amonge the F Gentyles, that all the Heathen maye se my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hande which I haue layed vpō them: that the house of Israell maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde their God; from that daye forth. And the Heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israell were led in to captyuyte: it was for their wickednes sake, because they offended me.

For the whych cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them in to the handes of their enemyes, that they myght all be slayne with the swearde. According to their vncleānesse and vnfaithfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Now

G will I bringe agayne the captiues of Jacob and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confusiō and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemyes landes, & am prayed in them before many Heathen: then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God, which suffred them to be led in to captyuyte amonge the Heathen, but now haue brought them agayne in to their owne lande, and not

The.xl.Chapter.

The reuoeringe of the spyrte & of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the Prophete.

A
IN the.xxv.peare of oure captyuitye, in the beginninge of the peare, the.x. daye of the moneth: that is the.xiiii. peare, after that the cyte was smytten downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Israell brought he me in the vysyons of God: and set me downe vpon a maruelous hye mountayne, where vpon there was a buyldynge (as it had bene of a cyte) towarde the south.

Thither he caried me, and beholde, there was a man, whose symylytude was lyke a brasse, which had a threde of flax in his hãde, & a metterodde also. He stode in the doze, and sayde vnto me: marke well with thyne eyes, herken to with thyne eares, & laste it in thine hert, whatsoeuer I shall shewe the, for to the intent that they myght be shewed the, therfore art þ brought hither. And what soeuer thou seyste, thou shalt certyfye the house of Israel therof.

Behalde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the metterodde that he had in hys hand, was six cubytes long & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of þ buyldyng, which was a metterodde, & the heygth
B also a metterodde. Then came he vnto the east doze, and weute vp the stayres, and measured the postes of the doze: wherof euery one was a metterodde thicke. Euery chambre was a metterodde longe & brode: betwene the chambers were fyue cubytes. The poste of þ doze within the porche, was one metterodde. He measured also the porche of þ pynermer doze whych contayned a metterodde. Then measured he the entrye of the doze, that contayned eight cubytes, and his pylers two cubytes: & this entrye stode inwarde.

C The chambers of the doze east warde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pylers also that stode of both the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured
C the wydenesse of the doze, which was.x. cubytes, & the heygth of the doze.xiii. cubytes. The edge before the chambers was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambers six cubytes wyde of either syde. He measured the doze from the rygge of one chãbre to another, whose wydenesse was.xxv. cubytes, & one doze stode agaynst another. He made pylers also.lx. cubytes hye, rounde aboute the courte doze. Before the inward parte vnto the foure entre of the pynermer doze, were.L. cubytes. The chãbers & their pylers within, rounde about vnto the doze, had sparre wyndowes: so had the foure entres also, whose wyndowes were rounde about within. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the foure courte, where as were chambers & paued woches, made in the foure courte rounde aboute.xxx. chambers vpon one paued woche. Now the paued woche was a longe beside the doze, & that was þ lower paued woche. After this, he measured the bredth from the lower doze, vnto the vtermer courte of the outsyde,
D which had an.L. cubytes vpon the east & the north parte. And the doze in the vttermost courte towarde the south, measured he after the length and bredth: hys chambers also on either side, wyth his pylers & foure entres which had euen the measure of the first doze. His heygth was fyfty cubytes, & bredth.xxv. cubytes: his wyndowes & porches wyth hys date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze towarde the east: there were.vii. steppes to go vp vpon, and their porche before them. Now the doze of the vtermer courte stode streighe ouer agaynst the doze, that was towarde the north east. From one doze to another, he measured.L. cubytes.

After that, he brought me to þ southsyde, where there stode a doze towarde the south: whose pylers and porches he measured, these had the same measure, & wyth their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the first wyndowes. The heygth was.l. cubytes, the bredth.xxv. with steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before hym, with his pylers & date trees on either side. And the doze of the vtermer courte stode towarde the south, & he measured from one doze to another an.L. cubytes. So he brought me in to þ vtermer courte, thorow þ doze of þ south syde: whych he measured, & it had the measure afore sayd. In lyke maner, his chambers, pylers, & foure entres had euen the foure sayde measure also. And he had with hys porches rounde aboute wyndowes of.L. cubytes heygth, and.xxv. cubytes brode. The porches rounde aboute were.xxv. cubytes longe, & v. cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermoste courte: vpon his pylers there were date trees, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon.

E He brought me also in to þ vtmost courte vpon the east syde, and measured the doze, accordyng to þ measure afore sayd. His chãbers, pylers, and porches had euen the same measure, as the first had: & with his porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was.l. cubytes, the bredth.xxv. cubytes: hys porches reached vnto the vttermoste courte: his pilers also had date trees on eyther syde, & viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the south doze, and measured it, which also had the foure sayde measure. His chãbers, pylers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was.L. cubytes, & the bredth.xxv. His pylers stode towarde the vttermost courte, & vpon them both were date trees, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose intraunce was at the doze ppiers, and there the burntofferynges were washed.

F In the doze porche, there stode on ether syde two tables for the slaughtynge: to sleye the burntofferynges, frume offerynges and trespacesofferynges ther vpon. And on the out syde as men go forth to the north doze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze, that is, viii. tables, wherupõ they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntofferynges, of a cubyte & a half longe and brode, and one cubyte hye: wher vpon were laped the vessels and ornamentes, wyche were vsed to the burnt and slayne offerynges, whẽ they were slaughted. And within there were hokes foure fyngers brode, fastened roundе aboute, to hange fleth vpon, & vpon the tables was laped ỹ offeryng fleth. On the outside of the pynermerdoze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte beside the North doze ouer against ỹ South. There stode one also, beside the east doze northwarde.

G And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on the South syde belongeth to the preistes, that 1.Para.ix.a. xxiii.c.xxv.f. kepe the halyest vpon: and thus towarde the North, is the Preistes that wayte vpon the aulter: which be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruice before the Lorde in stede of the children of Leui. So he measured the foze courte, wyche had in length an. C. cubytes, and as moch in bredth by the foure corners. Now the aulter stode before the house: And he brought me to the faze entre of the house, and measured the walles by the entre doze: which were syue cubytes lõge on ether syde. The thicknesse also of the doze on ether syde, was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was.xx. cubytes, the bredth.xi. cubytes, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by ỹ walles also were ppiers, on ether syde one.

The.xli.Chapter.

The description and deuyce of the house against the temple, & of the other thynges ther to belongyng.

A After this he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes: wyche were of both the sydes.vi. cubytes thicke, accordynge to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was.x. cubytes and the walles of the doze on ether syde syue cubytes. He measured the length therof, which contayned.xl. cubytes, and the bredth.xx. Then went he in, and measured the doze postes, wyche were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it selfe was syxe cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was.vii. cubytes. He measure the length and bredth therof, wyche were euery one.xx. cubytes, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of all. He measured also the wall of the house which was syxe cubytes. The chambres that stode rounde aboute the house, were euery one foure cubytes wyde, & one stode harde vpon another, wherof there were.xxxiii. And there stode postes beneth by the walles roundе aboute the house, to beare them vp: but in the wall of the house they were not fastened: The syde chambres were the hyer the wyder, and had steppes thorow them roundе aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest men might go to the hyest & myddest chambers. I sawe also that the house was B very hye roundе aboute. The foundacyon of the syde chambres was a meterodde (that is syxe cubytes) brode. The thicknesse of ỹ syde wall without, contayned syue cubytes, and so dyd the outwall of the chãbres in the house.

Betwene the chambers, was the wydenes xx. cubytes roundе aboute the house. The chambre dozes stode ouer against ỹ outwal, the one doze was towarde the north, the other towarde the South: and the thycknesse of the outwal was.v. cubytes roundе aboute. Now the buyldynge that was separated towarde the west, was.lxx. cubytes wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was.v. cubytes thicke roundе aboute, and the length foure score cubytes & ten. So he measured the house which was an. C. cubytes longe, & the separated buyldynge with the wall were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydnesse before the house and of it that was separated towarde the East, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyl- C dynge before and behynde with the chãbers vpon both the sydes: and it contayned an. C. cubytes. The pynermer temple, the porch of the foze courte, the side postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and ppiers roundе aboute ouer against the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer with bordes: and thus was it aboute the doze, vnto the vtmost house & without also: Per the whole wall on euery syde both within & without was syled ouer with greate bordes. There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwirte two Cherubins: One Che- D rub had two faces, the face of a man lokyng a syde towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made roundе aboute in al the house: Per the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the doze, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hy postes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashion of the Sanctuarye was euen as it appared vnto me a faze in the vision. The table was of wodde, thre cubytes hye and two cubytes longe: hys corners, the length and the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shal stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had ether of them two dozes & euery doze had two syde wychettes wyche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple

there

there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the walles: and a greate thicke balke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. Vpõ both the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe windowes and date trees, hanyng beames and balkes, lyke as the houle had.

The.xlij.Chapter.

Of the chambres of the temple for the Preestes, & the holy vestymẽtes.

A Then caryed he me out in to the fore court towarde the north, & brought me in to the chambre þ stode ouer agaynst the backebuyldynge northwarde, which had the length of an. C. cubytes whose dore turned toward the north. The wydenesse contened. L. cubites: ouer agaynst the. xx. cubites of the pauemẽt courte, and agaynst the paued worke that was in the fore court. Beside all these thre, there stode pylers, one ouer agaynst another: And before thys chambre there was a walkynge place of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a wave of one cubite wyde, & their dores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were allwaye narower then the lowest and myddest molte of the buyldyng: for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon another not haynge pilers lyke the fore courte: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

B The wall with out that stode by the chambres towarde the vtter most courte vpõ the fore syde of the chambres, was. L. cubytes longe: for the length of the vttermost chambres in the fore courte was. L. cubytes also: but þ length therof before the temple was an. C. cubytes. These chambers had vnder them an intraunce of the east syde, wherby a man myght go in to them out of the fore courte, thorow the thicke wall of the fore courte towarde the east, right ouer agaynst the separated buyldinge. Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde there were chambers also whych had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chãbers on the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

C Their intraunce, fashyon and dores were also of the same maner. Yee euen lyke as the other chambre dores were, so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye toward the fingers stepped on þ east side, there stode a dore to go in at. Thẽ sayde he vnto me: The chambers towarde the north and the south whych stande before the backe buyldynge: those be holye habitacyons, wherin the preestes that do seruice before the Lorde, muste eate the most holy offrynges: and there muste they laye the most holye offrynges: meatoffrynges, synne offrynges & trespace offrynges, for it is an holy place. When the preestes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore courte: but (seynge they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministracyon, and put on other garmentes, when they haue eny thynge to do with the people.

D Now when he had measured al the pauemẽt house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte, & measured þ same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with þ meterodde, whych rounde aboute contened. v. C. meterodds. And the north syne measured he, whiche cõtened rounde aboute eue so much. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west (which he measured) contened ether of them. v. C. meterodds. So he measured all the foure sydes where there were a wall rounde aboute. v. C. meterodds long and as brode also whych separated the holye from the vnholy.

The.xlij.Chapter.

The tryth the glory of God goyng in to the Temple from whence it had before departed. The abominable Idolatry of the children of Israell, for whyche they were condemned & stryngly forewarned of the comming of the Lorde.

A So he brought me to the dore, the turneth towarde the east. Beholde, then came the glorye of þ God of Israell from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a greate noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened wyth hys glory. His syght to lyke vpon was lyke the syght, that I sawe, when I wente in, what tyme as the cytye shulde haue bene destroyed: and lyke the vysyõ that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lord came in to the house thorow the East dore. So a wynde tooke me vp, and brought me into the vtter courte: and beholde, the house was full of the glory of the Lorde.

Ezech.i.a.

Ezr.3.c.xi.d

B I herde one speakyng vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this rowme is my seate, and the place of my fote steppes: where as I will dwell amonge the children of Israell for euermore: so that the house of Israell shall nomore defyle my holye name: nether they, nor their kynges, thorowe their whordome, thorowe their hye places, and thorowe the deed bodyes of their kynges: whych haue buylded their therholdes in maner harde vpõ my therholdes, & their postes almoste at my postes: so that there is but a bare wall betwyxte me and them.

Esay.lvi.a. Ioan.xiv.

Thus haue they defyled my holye name wyth their abhominacyons, that they haue cõmytted. Wherfore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shall put awaye their whordome and the deed bodyes of their kynges out of my syght, that I maye dwell amonge the for euermore. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) shewe thou the houlholde of Israell a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wicked nesse, and measure the fashion therat.

C Zach.ij.a.

And when they be ashamed of all their workes, then shewe them the fourme and fashpon of the temple: the commynge in, the gonge oute, all the maner and descripcion therof, per all the vses and ordynnances of it that they maye kepe & fulfill all the fashions and customes therof.

D This is the descripcpon of the house: Aboue vpon the mount rounde about all the comers, it shalbe the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcpon and fashpon of the house. Thys is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyte: whych is a spanne longer then another cubyte) hys botome in the myddest was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that wente rounde about it, was a spanne bnde. Thys is the heygth of the aulter: ffrom the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

Exo. xxvij. A. The aulter was foure cubytes hye, & frõ the aulter vpwarde stode foure hornes, and it was. vi. cubytes longe and. vi. cubytes bnde, vpon the foure corners: the courtynge of the aulter was .xiij. cubytes longe & bnde vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde about, had half a cubite: and the botome therof rounde about one cubyte: hys steppes stode towarde the East. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of mã, thus saieth the Lorde God: these are the ordynnances & lawes of the aulter, in the daye when it is made to offre burntoffrynges & to sprenchle

Exe. xliij. C blonde ther vpon. To the preistes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch, & treade before me to do me seruyce, sayeth the Lorde God: Vnto these geue thou a ponge bullock, for a synnoffrynge: & take the blonde of hym and sprenchle hys foure hornes withall and the foure corners of the aulter courtynge,

The nexte daye, take a gootbuck wythout blemish for a synnoffrynge, to reconcyle the aulter withall: lyke as it was reconcyled with the bullocke. Now when thou haste made it cleane, then offer a ponge bullocke without blemyshe, and a ramme out of the

G When these dayes are expired, then vpon the viij. daye and so forth, the preistes shall offre their burntoffrynges & thankoffrynges vpon the aulter: so wyll I be mercyfull vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

The .xliij. Chapter.

He sheweth what kynd of the temple is shutte. He is commanded to shewe the people wyth them offenses. The habitacion (so to speke) of the Lorde. Who are to be admytted to the seruyce of the temple and who to be refused. He sheweth what preistes he wolde haue ordeyned in to the holye place, and alle their offyce.

After thys, he brought me agayne to the outwarde doore of A the Sanctuary on the East syde and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This doore shall be styll shut, and not opened for enye man to go thorow it, but only for the Lorde God of Israell, yee he shall go thorowe it, els shal it be shut styll. The prynce hym selfe shall come thorow it, that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, and there shall he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the doore, vpon the North syde of the house. And as I loked aboute me, beholde, the glory of ỹ Lord fylled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lord B spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, a* lasten this to thyne herte, beholde, and take dylygent hede to all that I wyll saye vnto the, concernyng all the ordynnances of the Lord & all his lawes: ponder wel with thyne herte the commynge in of the house and the gonge forth of the Sanctuarye: and tell that obstynate housholde of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O house of Israell, ye haue now done ynough withall youre abhomynacyõs, seynge that ye haue brought in to my Sanctuary straungers, haynge vncircumcysed hertes and flesh, where thorow my Sanctuary is defyled, when ye offre me bred, fat, and blonde.

a* That is, consyder & ymagyne this in thyne hert.

Thus with all youre abhomynacyons ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuarye: but set keepers of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord C God: Of all ỹ straungers that dwell amõge the chyldren of Israell, no straunger (whose herte & flesh is not circumcysed) shall come within my Sanctuarye: No nor the Leuites that be gone backe from me, and haue dyscerned the people of Israell wyth all errours, gonge after their Idoles: therfore shall they beare their owne wyckednes. Shulde they be set & ordered to mynyster vnder the doors of the house of my Sanctuarye? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntoffrynges and sacrifycers for the people: to stande before them, and to serue them: seynge the seruyce D that they do them, is before their Idoles, and cause the house of Israell to stomble thorowe the wyckednes? ffor the whych cause I haue pluckte out myne hãde ouer them (sayeth the iij. Reg. ij. Lorde) so ỹ now they muste beare their owne iniquyte, and not to come nye me, to serue me with their preisthode, in my Sanctuarye, and moost holyest of all: that they maye beare their owne shame & abhomynacyons, which they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce that Exe.xliij.d. xlviij.b. is done therin? But the Prestes the Leuytes the sonnes of Sadoch, that kepte the holye ordynaunces of my Sanctuarye, when the chyldren of Israell were gone fro me: shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stãde before me, & to offre me the fat & the bloude, sayeth the Lorde God.

E They shall go in to my Sanctuarye, and treade before my table, to do me seruice, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Now when they go in at the dores of the vtmermer court: they shal put on lynen clothes, so that no wollyne come vpon them: whyle they do seruyce vnder the dores of the vtmermer courte, and within. They shall haue fayre lynen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynen breches vpon their lopnes, whyche in their laboure they shall not put about them: And when they go forth to the people in to the outward courte, they shall put of their clothes, wherin they haue mynystred, and laye them in the habytacyon of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparel, lest they vnhalowe the people with their clothes.

F Leuit.xxi.f. q.xii.a. They shall not shaue their heades, nor rolle the bushe of their heare, but rounde their heades onlye. All the Prestes that go in to the vtmoost court, shall drynche no wyne.

Leu.x.c.xxi. Ose.i.a.iij.a They shall marye no wydowe, nether one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel, or a wyddowe: that hath had a preest before.

They shall shewe my people the dyfference betwene the holye and vnholye, betwyxte the clene and vnclene. If any discorde arise, they G shall dyscerne it, and geue sentence after my iudgementes. My solempne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shall they kepe, and halowe my Sabbathes. They shall come at no deed persone, to defyle the selues (excepte it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster that hath hadpet no husbande) in soch they maye be defyled.

And when he is clensed, there shall be rekened vnto hym. vij. dayes: and yf he go in to the Sanctuary agayne to do seruyce, he shall bringe a synofferynge sayeth the Lorde God. The meatofferynge, synofferynge & trespaceofferynge shall they eate, and euery dedycate thing in Israel, shalbe theirs. ¶ The.xlv.Chapter.

Out of all the londe of promyse are there dyuerse and sondrye oblacyons, of which the first is geuen to the Lorde and to the temple, the seconde to the Lewytes, the thyrde to the prestes, the fourth to the cyte, the fyfth to the prynce. A rehearsall geuen to the heades of Israell. Of true weyghtes and measures. Of thre feastes, &c.

When ye deuyde the lande by the A lot, ye shal put a spye one parte for the Lorde, to be holy from Exe.xlviij.b. other landes: namely, xxv. M. metterodes longe, and x. M. brode. This shalbe holye, as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of thys parte there shall belonge vnto the Sanctuary. v. C. metterodes in all the foure comers, and. l. cubytes wyde rounde aboute to the suburbes. And fro this measure, namelye of xxv. M. metterodes longe, and x. M. brode, thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande.

The resydue of that holye grounde shall be the prestes, whiche do seruyce in the Sanctuarye of the Lorde, and goo in before the Lorde to serue hym, that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuarye, it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuytes that serue in the B house, there shalbe geuen. xx. habytacyons, of the. xxv. M. length and x. M. brode: but ye shall geue also vnto the cyte a possession of. v. M. metterodes brode, and xxv. M. longe, besyde the parte of the Sanctuary: that shall be for the whole house of Israell. Vpon both the Exe. xlviij.d sydes of the Sanctuarys parte, and by the cytye, there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce, whatsoeuer lieth ouer agaynst the cytye, as C farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde: whiche shalbe as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shalbe hys owne lande in Israell, that my princes be no more chargeable vnto my people. And soch as remayneth yet ouer in the lande, shalbe geuen to the house of Israell accordynge to their trybes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O ye princes, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynough: ceasse of, handle now accordyng to the thyng, that is equall and lawful: and thrust out my people nomore, sayeth the Lorde God. Ye shall haue a true weyght, a true a*. Ephah, and a true b*. Bath. The Ephah and the D Bath shalbe a like. One Bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an Homer, and so shall one Ephah do: their measure shall be after the Homer. One Spele maketh. xx. Gen.28.c*. Exo.xx. Sicles, and xxv. & xv. This is the heaue offrynge, that ye shall geue to be heaued: namelye, that. xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of wheate: and the xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barly. The oyle shall be measured with the Bath: euen the tenth parte of one Bath out of a. c*. Cor.

Ten Bathes make one Homer: for one E Homer sylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meatoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge, to reconcyle them, sayeth the Lorde God. All the people of the lande shall geue thys heaue offrynge vnto a fre wyll. Agayne, it shall be the princes parte to offre offre burntofferynges, meatofferynges and drynckofferynges vnto the Lorde, in the holy dayes, new Moones, Sabbathes, and in all

F the hye feastes of the house of Israell. The synofferynge, meatofferynge, brentofferynge and healthofferynge shall he geue, to reconcyle the house of Israell. Thus sayeth the Lord God: The first daye of the first moneth thou shalt take a yonge bullocke without blemyshe, and clense the Sanctuarye. So the preste shall take of the bloude of the synofferynge, and sprenckle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the doze postes of the vtwermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daye of the moneth (for suche as haue synned of ygnorauce, or beynge discepued) to reconcyle the house withall. Vpon the. xiiii. daye of the fyrste moneth ye shall kepe Ester. Seuen dayes shall the feast contynue wherin there shall no sower nor leuened bred be eaten.

G Vpon the same daye shall the prynce geue for hym selfe and all the people of the lande, a bullocke for a synofferynge. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery daye a bullocke and a ram, that are without blemish for a burntofferynge vnto the Lorde: and an he goate daylye for a synofferynge. For the meatofferynges, he shall geue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ram, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. Vpon the .xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy one after another, euen as ỳ other seuen dayes: with the synofferynge, burntofferyng, meatofferynge, and with the oyle.

The .xlvi. Chapter.

The ordynces of the Sabboth & of the new mones. Thorow which dores they muste go in, & come out of the temple. &c.

A Thus sayeth the Lorde God: the doze of the vtwermer courte towarde the East, shall be shut the .vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabboth ỳ in daye of the newe Moone, it shalbe opened. The shall ỳ prynce come vnder the doze porche, and stande styll wythout by the doze cheke. So the prestes shall offre vp hys burnt and healthofferynges. And he shall worshyppe at the doze poste and go hys waye forth agayne: but the doze shall nomore be shut tyll the euenynge.

On the same maner shall the people of the lande also do their worshype before the Lord, wythout thys doze vpon the Sabbathes and
B newe Moones. This is now the burntofferynge, that the prynce shall bringe vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabboth: syxe lambes without blemyshe, and a ram without blemyshe, and an Ephah for a meatofferynge, wyth the ram. As for the lambes, he maye geue as many meatofferynges to them, as he will, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shall be a yong bullocke without blemyshe, syxe lambes & a ram also wythout blemyshe. With the bullocke he shall geue an Ephah, and wyth the ram an Ephah also for a meatofferynge: but to the lambes, what
C he maye come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. When the prynce commeth, he shal go vnder the doze porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feaste, as many as come in by the North doze to do worshyppe, shall goo oute agayne at the South doze. And they that come in at the South doze, shall go forth agayne at the North doze. There shall none go oute at the doze where he came in, but shal goo forth ryght ouer on the other syde, & the prince shall go in and out amonge them.

Vpon the solempne and hye feaste dayes, D
this shalbe the meatofferinge: An Epha to a bullock and an Epha to a ram, & to the lambes as many as he wyll, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Now when the prynce byrn geth a burntofferynge or an healthofferynge wyth a free wyll vnto the Lorde, the east doze shalbe opened vnto him, ỳ he maye do with hys burnt and healthofferynges, as he doth vpon the Sabboth, and when he goeth forth, the doze shall be shutt after hym agayne. He shall daylie bringe vnto the Lorde a lambe
E of a yeare olde without blemyshe for a burnt offringe: this shall he do euerye mornynge. And for a meatofferynge he shall geue the syxte parte of an Epha, and the thyrde parte of an Hin of oyle (to mingle wyth the cakes) euery mornynge. Yee thys shalbe a daylye meatofferinge vnto the Lorde, for an euerlastynge ordynaunce: and thus shall the lambe, the meatofferynge and oyle be geuen euerye mornynge, for a daylie burntofferinge.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prynce geue a gyfte vnto eny of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But If he wyll geue one of hys seruauntes some of his heritage, it shall be his to the free yeare, and then to returne agayne vnto the prynce: for hys heritage shalbe hys sonnes onelye. The prince also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce, nor put them from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue hys possession, that my people be not scatred abrode, but that euerye man maye haue hys owne.

The.xlvij.Chapter.

The vysion of the waters that come out of the temple. The goodes of the lande of promes, and the dyuysion the reade tryber.

A Fter this he brought me agayne before the dore of the house: and beholde, there gushed out waters from vnder the postes of the house eastwarde (for § house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the suther south ward. Then caried he me out to the north dore, and brought me south there rounde aboute by the vttemost dore that turneth east ward. Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the right side. Now whã the man that had the meterodde in his hande wente vnto the east dore, he measured a. ¶ The ende of the Prophecye of Ezechiel.

¶ The boke of the Prophete Daniel.

The fyrste Chapter.

The Prophete sheweth the captiuite of Jehoakim kynge of Juda. Of the lynnes that were in captiuite the kynge commaunded to shute whithe of them shulde be taught the learnyng & language of the Chaldees. They are alowed the kynges feadyng. Daniel so refuseth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon. The fayrenes and endowrynge of theire chyldren.

A IN the thyrde yeare of the raygne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, & besieged it and the Lord deliuered Jehoakim the kynge of Juda into his hande, with certayne ornamen ters of the house of God, whiche he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of his God, and there he broughte them into hys Goddes treasurye. And the kyng spake vnto Aspharaz the chefe chamberlayne, that he shulde brynge hym certayne of the chyldre of Israel, that were come of the kynges sede & of princes, yonge spryngalders wythout ayne blemyshe, but fayre & welfauoured, instruct in all wisdome, connyng and vnderstanding: whiche were able to stande in the kynges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Caldeith.

B Vnto these the kyng appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate, and of the wyne, which he dranche hym selfe, so to norysshe the thre yeare: that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael & Azarias. Vnto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, & called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias, Sidrach, Misael, Misach, and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynte with hym self, that he wolde not be defyled thaowe the kynges meate, nor the wyne whiche he dronche. And this he desyred of the chefe Chamberlayne, leste he shulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayne, that he said vnto hym: I am afraied of my Lorde the kynge, whiche hath appoynted vnto youre meate & drinke: lest he spye your faces to be worse lykyng then the other spryngalders of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my head vnto the kynge.

Then Daniel answerd Melassar, whō the chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniell, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, & sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, & water to drincke: then loke vpon oure faces, & the face that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, their faces were better lykyng & fatter, then all ỳ younge spryngalders whiche ate of the kynges meate.

D Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate, and wyne, and gaue them potage therefore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngalders connyng and learnyng in all scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniell specyally, he gaue vnderstandynge of all visyons and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred, that the kynge hath appoynted to bryng in these yōge spryngalders vnto hym: the chefe chamberlain broughte them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kynge communed with them. But among them all were founde nonne suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge, whiche in all wysdome and matters of vnderstandynge, that he enquerred of them, founde them ten tymes better then all the sothsayers and charmers, ỳ were in all his realme. And Daniel abode styll, vnto the fyrste yeare of kynge Cyrus.

The.ii Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He callyth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame, & the interpretacyon therof. They answere that none can not shewe it. The kyng commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to shewe the question. The Lorde openeth the mysterye vnto Daniel. Daniel is broughte vnto the kynge, & sheweth him his dreame, and the interpreta cyon therof. Of the euerlastyng kyngdome of christ. The stone C. viii. Daniel is exalted and promoted of the kynge.

A IN the seconde yeare of ỳ raigne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, wherethrow his spirite was vexed, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kyng commaunded to call together all ỳ sothsayers, charmers, witches & Caldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came & stode before ỳ kyng. And the kyng sayd vnto thē: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syriane speache: * O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shal shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr answere, & said: It is gone fro me: yf ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacyon therof, ye shall dye, & youre houses shalbe pyled. But yf ye tell me the dreame & the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes & greate honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signifycacyon of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shewe his seruauntes the dreame, & so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then ỳ kinge answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a truth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so muche as ye se, that the thyng is gone fro me. Therfore ye wil not tell me ỳ dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne & spylle vtterly with lyenge wordes, which ye speake before me, to put of the tyme,

* The prophete begynneth here to vse the Syriane or Caldee language, vnto ỳ begynnyng of the viii. Chapitre

Therfore tell me the dreame, & so shal I knowe yf ye can shewe me, what it meaneth. Upon this, the Caldees gaue answere before ỳ king, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe, that can tell the kynge, whiche the kyng speaketh of, ye there is neyther kyng, prince nor lord, that euer asked lyke thynges at a southsayer, charmer or Caldee: for it is a very hard matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there one, that can certifye the kynge therof, except the Goddes: whose dwelling is not among the creatures.

¶ For the whiche cause the kyng was wroth with a greate indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: so the gentlemanne came forthe, that the wyse me should be slayne. They sought also to slay Daniel with hys companions. Then Daniel enquyred Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth alreadye to kyll the wyse men at Babylō. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch the kynges captayne: Why hath the kyng proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this, went Daniel in, and desyred the kynge, that he might haue leysoure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacyon: and then came he home agayne, & shewed the thynge vnto Ananias, Misael & Azarias hys companions: that they shulde desire the God of heauen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and hys felowes with other sorte as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not. Then was the mysterye shewed vnto Daniel in a lyfsyon by nyght. And Daniel praysed ỳ god of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of God myghte be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdome and strengthe are hys owne: he chaungeth the tymes & ages: he putteth downe kynges, & setteth vp kinges: he geueth wysdome vnto the wyse, & vnderstandynge vnto those that vnderstonde, he openeth the depe secretes, he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darkenesse, for the lyghte dwelleth with hym. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lente me wysdom and strength, & hast shewed me the thyng, that we desyred of the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Daniel.ii.a. Eccle.i.c. Iob.xxviii.b. Iere.xxvii.a. Daniel.vii.c. Iob.xxxii.b. 1.Ioh.i.b.

Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye ỳ wyse at Babylon: he went vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but bringe me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue founde a man amonge the prisoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kyng the interpretacyon. The answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Arte thou he, that canste shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue seene, & the interpretacyon therof? Daniel answered the kynge in hys face, and sayde: As for this secrete, for the whiche the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer nor the deuyll conuerter, that can certifye the kynge of it: Only God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kynge Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes. What.ii.a

Thy dreame, & that whiche thou hast seene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng thou dyddest caste in thy mynde, what shulde come hereafter: So he that is the opener of mi secrets, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for anye wysdome that I haue, more then anye other lyuynge: but only for that I myghte shewe the kynge the interpretacyon, and that he myghte know the thoughtes of his owne herte. Thou kynge sawest, & behold, there stode before the a greate Image, whose figure was maruelous greate, and hys vtsyde grymme. The Image head was of fyne golde, hys breste & armes of syluer, his body and lopnes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earthe. ¶

Thou sawest, tyll the tyme that (with out any handes) there was hewen of a stone whiche smote the Image vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earthe, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and gold broken altogether in peces: and became like the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the sommer floores, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the Image, became a greate mountayne, whyche fylled all ỳ whole earthe: This is the dreame. And nowe will we shewe before the kynge, what it meaneth. What.ii.a Lac.xxiii.

O kynge, thou arte a kynge of kynges: ¶ For the God of heauen hath geuen ỳ a kyngdome, ryches, strengthe and maiestye: yt hathe delyuered the all thynges, that are amonge the children of men: the beastes of the felde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer them all. Thou arte that golden head. After ỳ there shall aryse another kyngdome, whiche shall be lesse then thyne. The thirde kyngedome shall be lyke copper, & haue dominacyon in all landes. The fourthe kyng dome shalbe as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: Yea euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye. Daniel.ii.b

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earthe, and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngedome, whiche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it, for so muche as thou hast seene the yron myxte with the clay.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of clay, sygnifyeth, that it shalbe a kyngdome partely stronge and partly weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxte with clay: they shall myngle them selues with the sede of symple people, & yet not ioyne one with another, lyke as yron will

In the dayes of these kynges shall the God of heauen set vp an euerlastynge kyngdome whiche shall not perysshe, and yͤ kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: yͤ same shal breake and destroy all these kingdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

Dan.ij.b

And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut oute of the mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the coppar, the earthe, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kynge, what wyll come after thys. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure.

Dan.vij.c

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon hys face, and bowed hym self vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shuld offre meate offerynges and swete odours vnto hym. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayde: yͤ of a truth your God is a GOD above all Godds, a Lorde above all kynges and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canste dyscouer thys mysterye. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many & greate gyftes.

He made hym ruler of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lorde of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Now Daniel intreated the kynge for: Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offices in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hymselfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

The.iij. Chapter.

The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, whereto he commaundeth to be worshypped. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they obeye not the kynges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshyp the Image. They refuse so to do, and are put into a burnynge fornace. By whiche yͤ God they are delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the ouercome of the monarche.

NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden Image to be made whiche was.lx. cubytes hye, & syx cubytes thycke. This he made to be set vp in yͤ feld of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sent out to gather together the dukes, lordes and nobles, & iudges and officers, the debyters, & shewers, with all the rulers of the lande, yͤ they might come to the dedicacyon of the Image whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. Soo the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debyters and shewers with all the rulers of the land gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycatynge of the Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Dra. Some wryte yͤ feld of Babylon.

Dan.iij.a

Now when they stode before the Image, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the herald cryed out with all his might: O ye people, kynredes and tunges, to you be it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompetter, whiche shalbe blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Plaiterpes, Symphonyes and all maner of Musicke: ye fall downe and worshyppe the golden Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe & worshyppeth, shall euen the same houre be caste into an hote burnynge ouen. Therfor when all the folcke, hearde the noyse of the trompetters that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Plaiterpes, Symphonyes and all kynde of Musicke: then all the people, kynredes and nacyons fell downe, and worshyped the golden Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Now were there certayne men of the Caldees, that went vnto them, and accused the Iewes, and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beyng kynge, hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare noyse of the trompetter, harpes, shawmes, Plaiterpes, Symphonyes and all other melodyes shall fall downe, and bowe them selues towarde the golden Image: who so then lyeth not downe, and worshypped not, that he shulde be caste into an hote burnynge ouen. Now are there certayne Iewes, whome thou hast set ouer the offices of the lande of Babylon, namely, Sydrach, Misach & Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundement, neather wyll not serue thy Godds, nor bowe them selues to the golden Image, that thou hast set vp.

Dan.iij.a

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe, and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach and Abednago shulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, wyll not ye serue my Godds, nor bowe youre selues to the golden Image, that I haue set vp? Well, be redye here after, when ye heare the noyse of the trompetters blowne with the harpes, shawmes, Plaiterpes, Symphonyes and all other melodye: that ye fall downe, and worshippe the Image whiche I haue made. But yͤ ye worshippe it not, ye shall be caste immediatly in to an hote burnynge ouen. And yͤ is, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my hande? Sidrach, Misach and Abednago answered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consider vnto the in this matter. For why: our GOD whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can right well deliuer vs oute of thy handes. And though he wyll not, yet shalte thou knowe (O kynge) that we will not serue thy Godds, nor do reuerence to the Image, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacyon, so that the countenaunce of his face changed vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfor he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shuld be made seuen tymes hoter, then it was wonte to be, and spake vnto the strongest wrestlers that were in his hoste, for to bynde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, to cast the into the hote burninge oven.

So these men were bounde in their coted hosen, shoes with their other garmentes, and caste into the hote burninge oven: for the kinges commaundemente was so strayte, and the oven was exceadinge hote. As for the men that put in Sydrach, Misach & Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three men Sidrach, Misach & Abednago fell downe in the hote burninge oven, beinge fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kinge marueyled, & rose vp in al haste: he spake vnto his counsell, and sayde: did not we caste these three men bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kinge: Yea O kinge. He answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men goinge lowse in the middest of the fyre, and nothinge corrupte: and the fourthe is like an angell to the sone. Upon this wrote Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burninge oven: the spake also, and sayde: O Sydrach, Misach & Abednago, ye seruauntes of the hye God: go forthe, & come hyther. And so Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago went out of the fyre: Then the dukes lordes and nobles, and the kinges counsell came together to se these men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes: Insomuch that the very heeres of their head was not burnte, & their clothes vnchaunged: Yea there was no smel of fyre felt vpō them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, whiche hath sente his aungel, & delyuered his seruauntes, that put their trust in him: that haue altered the kinges commaundemente: and prepared their bodyes rather then they wolde serue or worshipp any other God, except their owne God onelye. Therfore I will, and commaunde, that al people, kynredes and tunges, whiche speake any blasphemye agaynst the God of Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, shall dye, and their house shalbe pyled: Forasmuche there is no God, that maye saue, as this. So the kinge promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the land of Babylon.

The iiij. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor threatneth agayne. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme and eateth grasse. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored into his kingedome.

A Nabuchodonosor kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges, that dwell vpon the whole earthe: peace be multiplyed amōg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens & meruelous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O how greate are his tokens, and how mighty are his wonders! His kingedome is an euerlastynge kingedome, and his power lasteth for euer & euer.

I Nabuchodonosor was quyet in mine house, and florysshynge in my palace, I sawe a dreame, which made me afraied: & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visyons of myne heade, troubled me. Then sente I oute a commyssyon, that all they which were of wysdome in Babylon, shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacion of the dreame. So there came the southsayers, charmers, Caldees and coniurers of Deuyls, to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it ye towched, they coulde not shewe me: tyll at the laste, there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, according to the name of my God) whiche hath the spirite of the holy Goddes in him: to whom I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthasar, thou prince of southsayers: For so muche as I knowe, that thou hast the spirite of the holy Goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the visyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a visyon in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the grounde, whiche was verye hye, greate and myghtye: the heyght reached vnto the heauē, and the breth extended to all the endes of the earthe, his leaues were fayre, he had verye muche frute, so that euerye man had ynough to eate thereof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a visyon vpon my bed: & beholde, * a watcher came downe from heauē, & cryed myghtely, sayinge. Hew downe the tre, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatre his frute abroade: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles leaue the grounde of his rote styll in the earthe, and binde him vpon the playne feld, with cheynes of yron and steele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

That mans herte of his shal be taken frō him, and a beastes herte shall be geuen him, tyll seuē yeares be come and gone vpō him.

This erande of the watcher is a commaundement grounded and sought oute in the counsell of him, that is most holye, to learne men so to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power, ouer the kingedomes of men, and geueth the, to whome it pleyseth him, & bringeth the very outecastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthasar, tell thou me, what it signifyeth: for as muche as the wyse men of my kingdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge spake, and sayde: O Balthasar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretacion there-

As for the tree, that thou sawest, whiche was so great & mighty, whose height reached vnto the heauen, and hys birdth vnto all the worlde, whose leaues were fayre, and the fruite much, vnder the whiche the beastes of ye feld had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the fowles of the ayre had syt.

Euen thou (O kynge) arte the tree, great & strong. Thy greatnesse increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to ye endes of the earthe. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holye aungel, ye came downe from heauen, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earthe, and bynde hym vpō the playne felde with chaynes of yron & stele: he shall be wet with the dewe of heauen, and hys parte shalbe with the beastes of the felde, tyll seuē yeares be come and gone vpon him: This (O kynge) is the interpretacyon, yea it is the very decree of him, that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge.

Thou shalte be caste oute from men, & thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of the felde: * with grasse shalte thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dewe of the heauen, yea seuen yeares shall come, and go vpō the, tyll thou know, that the hyest hath power vpon the kingedomes of men, & geueth them to whome he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tree shalde be lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy kyngedome shall remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to know, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kyng, be cōtent with my counsel, that thou mayeste louse thy synnes with ryghteousnesse, and thyne offences with mercye to poore people: for suche thynges shall prolonge thy peace. All these thynges touche the kynge Nabuchodonosor.

So after .xij. monethes, the kynge walked vp & doune in the palace of the kingedome of Babylon, and sayde: Thys is the greate cytye of Babilon, which I my selfe (with my power & strength) haue made a kynges courte, for ye honour of my magestye. While these wordes were yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voyce from heauen, saying: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to ye be it spoke: Thy kingdom shall departe from the, thou shalte be cast oute of mens companye: thy dwelling shalbe with the beastes of ye felde, in that thou shalte eate grasse lyke as an oxe, tyll seuē yeares be come & gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest, ye the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdome of men, and that he may geue them, vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The very same howre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast oute of mens companye, & ate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll hys heeres were as greate as Eagles fethers, & hys nayles like hys bēs clawes.

When this tyme was passe, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyest. I magnifyed and prayse hym that liueth for euermore, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kingdome from one generacō to another: in comparison of whō all they ye dwel vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng. Daniel.iiij.

He handleth accordyng to hys wyll, among the powers of heauen & amonge the inhabytours of the earthe: and there is none ye maye withstande hys hande, or saye: what dooest thou? At the same tyme was myne vnderstandyng geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kingedome, to my dignite, & to myne owne shappe agayne. My greate estates and princes soughte vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshippe. Psal.xxxvij.d. Job.xij.b

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor loue, magnifye and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all hys workes are true, and hys wayes ryghte. As for those that go on proudely, he is able to bringe them downe.

The .b. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon, amongst his feastes of the temple, seeth an hande writynge in the wall. The soothsayers callers of the kyng, can not expounde the writynge. Daniel is called, which reproueth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar kyng slayne, Darius succedeth in hys rowme.

KYnge Balthazar made a greate banchet to his thousand Lordes: with all these thousand he made great chere, & when he was dronken with wyne, he commaunded to bringe hym the golden and syluer vessels, whiche his father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Jerusalem, that the kyng and hys lordes with hys queue and concubynes might drynche therout. 2.Para.xxxvj.b

So they brought the golden vessell, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and hys lordes with his queue & concubynes dronche oute of them. They dronche wyne, and prayse their Idoles of golde, syluer, copper, yron, woode and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mannes hande writynge, ouer against the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace, & the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. Then chaunged the kynge his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one against the other. Wherfore the kynge cryed mightely, that they shulde bringe hym the coniurers, Caldees and southsayers of Babylo. The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede thys writynge, and shewe me the playne meanyng therof, shalbe clothed with purple, Jere.l.d Daniel.v.d have a cheyne of golde about hys necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngedome.

Upon this, came al the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neyther reade the wryttynge, nor shewe the kinge what it signified. Then was the kynge sore afrayed in so muche, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng and his lordes, ✠ the quene wente vp her selfe into the banckethouse, and spake vnto the kynge, sayinge: O kyng, God saue thy spirit for ever: Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kingdome, that hath the spirite of the holy Goddes within him, as it was seene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysdome like the Goddes. Yeathe kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the soth sayers, charmers, Caldees, and deuilconiurers, because that suche an aboundaunt spirite knowledge & wysdome (to expound dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doutes) was founde in hym: yea euen in Daniel who the kynge named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kynge. So the kynge spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Arte thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought oute of Jewry? I haue heard speake of the, that thou haste the spirite of the holye Goddes, experience and vnderstandyng, and that there hath bene greate wysdome founde in the. Now haue there ben brought me, wyse & conning charmers, to reade this wryttynge, and to shewe me the meanynge therof: but they coulde not tell me, what this matter signified. Then herd I saye, that thou canste expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doutes. Well then, yf thou canst reade this wryttynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalte be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about thy necke, and rule ✠ thyrde parte of my kyngedome.

Daniel answered, and sayde before the kynge. As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, or geue thy ryches gyftes to another: yet not the lesse, I will rede the wryttynge vnto ✠ kynge, and shewe hym the interpretacion therof. O kynge, God the hyest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignite of a kynge with worshippe and honour, so that al people, kyndredes and tunge stode in awe & feare of him, by reason of the hye estate, that he had sente him. For why, he slewe whom he wolde: he smote, whom it pleased hym. Agayne, whō he wolde, he set vp: and whome he wolde, he put downe. But because hys herte was so proude, and hys stomache set so fast vnto wilfulnesse: he was deposed from hys kingly trone, & his magesty was taken from hym. He was thrist out from amonge men, his herte was lyke a beastes herte, and his dwellynge was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate gresse ✠ lyke an oxe, and hys body was wet with the dewe of the heauen: tyll he knewe, that ✠ hyest had power vpon the kingdomes of men, and setteth ouer them, whome he lyst.

And thou hys sonne (O Balthazar) for al this, hast not submytted thyne herte, thoughe thou knewest all these thynges, but hast magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were brought before the, that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene and couchbynes, myght drinche wyne therout: And hast praysed the Jdoles of syluer and golde, copper and yron, of wode and stone: As for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou haste not loued hym. Act.xvij.d

Therfore is the palme of thys hande sente hyther from hym, to token vp thys writinge. And thys is the scripture, that is written vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Howe the interpretacion of the thynge is this: Mane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou arte weyed in the balaunce and arte founde to lyghte: Phares, thy kyngdome is delte in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to clothe Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamacion concerning him: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyrde parte of hys kyngedome. The very same nyghte was Balthazar the kynge of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Medea toke in the kyngedome, beyng.lxij. yeare of age. Esay.xlvij. Daniel.ix.a Daniel.v.a

The vi. Chapter.

Daniel is made ruler ouer the Lordes. The Iudgadvocates of an acte against Daniel. The proclamacion of the acte, whereof Daniel is accused vnto the kynge as a transgressour. He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is delyuered by faith in God. Darius accuseth not but vnto the kynge to be ruler in Gesher. Darius by the proclamacion of a decree magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to set ouer hys kingedome an. C. and .xx. Lordes, whyche shulde be in all hys kyngdome about. Aboue these he set three princes (of whō Daniel was one) that the Lordes myght geue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vndefeased. B

But Daniel excelled al these Princes and Lordes, for the spirite of God was plentyous in him: so that the kynge was mynded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Princes and Lordes sought, to picke matter in Daniel some quarell against the kyng: but coulde they fynde none occasion nor fawte vpon hym. For why, he was so faythful, that there was no blame nor vnfaythfulnesse founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we wil get no quarell against this Daniel, except it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon this, came the princes and Lordes together vnto the kynge, and sayde C sayde thus vnto him: king Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greate estates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senatours, and iudges, are determed to put oute a commaundement of the kinge, and to make a sure statute: namelye, that who so believeth any petycō, either of any god, or man (within thirty dayes) excepte it be onlye of the, O kinge: the same person maye be cast into the lions denne. Wherfore, O kynge, confirme thou this statute, and make a writtynge, that the thynge which the Medes and Persies have ordeyned be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the writtinge, and confirmed it. Now when Daniel vnderstode that the writtinge was made, he wente into his house: and the windowes of his hall toward Jerusalem stode opē. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made his peticion, and praysed his God, like as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makinge his peticion and prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, & spake before him concerninge his commaundement saynge: O kinge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within.xxx. daies who so requireth his peticion of any God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kinge: he shalbe cast into the denne of the lyons? The kinge answered, and sayde: yt, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Persies, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the prisoners of Juda, O kynge, regardeth neyther the, nor thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his peticion thre tymes a day. When the king heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and would haue rescued Daniel, to deliuer him, and put of the matter, vnto the Sunne wente downe to the intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceyuinge the kinges mind sayde vnto him: knowe thys (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Persians, that y commaundement & statute, which the kinge maketh, may not be altered. Then the kynge had them bringe Daniel, and they caste hym into the lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, & sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, he shall defende the. And there was broughte a stone, & layed vpon the hole of the denne: this the kinge sealed with his owne ring, & with the signet of his princes: that the kinges commaundement concerninge Daniel, should not be broken.

So the kinge wente into his palace, & kepte him sober all night, so that there was no table spred before him, neyther coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the morninge at the breake of the day, the kinge arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the lyons.

Now as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a pyteous voyce vnto Daniell: yea the kinge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the liuynge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent his aungell whiche hath shut the lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For why? before him giltlesse is founde oute before him. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kinge exceadinge glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was taughte oute of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon him, for he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the king commaunded to bringe them, and cast them in the lyons denne: them, their children and their wiues. So the lyons had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones a sunder, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote the kynge Darius vnto all people kindredes, and tonges, that dwelt in al landes: peace be multiplyed vnto you. My commaundement is, in al my dominion & kingdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the liuinge God, whiche abydeth euer: his kingdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlasting. It is he that deliuereth and saueth: he doeth wonders & maruelous workes, in heauen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the lyons. Thus Daniell prospered in the raigne of Darius and Cirus of Persia.

The.vii. Chapter.

A vision of.iiii. beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of.iiii. kyngdomes of the world. Of the power & tyrannie of Antichrist. Of the euerlastinge kingdome of Christ.

IN the firste yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vysyon was in his head vpon his bed. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayde: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde: the foure windes of the heauen stroue vpon the sea, and foure great beastes came vp from the sea one vnlyke another.

The fyrste was a lion, and yet had he Aegles winges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucte from him, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans herte.

Beholde, the seconde beaste was lyke a bere & stode vpon the one syde. And he had in his mouth by his teeth three great longe teeth, & it was sayde vnto him: Aryse, eate vp, many flesshe. Then I loked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leoparde: that had wynges as a fowle, vpon foure vpō the backe. This beaste had foure heades, and there was power geuen him. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and marvelous strōg. It had great yron teeth, it devoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue under hys fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes, y were before it: for it had ten hornes, whereof I take good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them another lyttle horne, before whom there were thre of the fyrste hornes plucked awaye. Beholde, thys horne had eyen lyke a man, and a mouth speakynge presumptuous thynges. I loked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat hym downe. His clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and the heares of hys heade, lyke the pure woll. His throne was lyke the fyrye flamme, and his wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe fourthe a fyrye streame, and went out from him. A thousande tymes a thousande serued him. & ten tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set, and the bokes opened. Then I take I hede thereunto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, whyche the horne spake. I beheelde, tyll the beaste was slayne, and his bodye destroyed, and geuen ouer to be burnt in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whyche went vnto the olde aged, before whome they broughte hym. Then gaue he hym power and dignitie regal, that all people tribes and tunges shoulde serue him. Hys power is an euerlastynge power, whych shal neuer be put downe, and his kingdome endureth vncorrupte. My herte was vexed, and I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, and the visions of my heade made me afrayed: til I gat me vnto one of them that stode by, to knowe the trueth, enterrupnge all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstād the interpretacion of these thynges.

These foure greate beastes, are foure kynges, whiche shal arise out of the earth. These shall take in the kingedome of the sayntes of the most hyest, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred to knowe the trueth concernyng the fourth beast, whyche was so farre vnlyke the other beastes, and so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and hys nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to knowe the trueth, as touchyng the ten hornes that he had vpon hys heade, and thys other, whiche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre: whyche horne had eyen, and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and loked with a grymmer visage, then his felowes. I beheld, and the same horne made warre with the sayntes, yea and gat the victorie of them, vntill the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgemente was geuen to the chefest sayntes: and till the tyme that the sayntes hath the kingedome in possession. He gaue me this answere: That fourthe beast shalbe the fourth kingedome vpō earth: it shalbe more then all other kingedomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes are ten kinges, that shall aryse out of the kingedom, after whom there shall stande vp another, whiche shalbe greater then the fyrste. He shall subdue thre kynges, and shal speake wordes against the hyest of all: he shall destroy the sayntes of the most hyest, and thinche, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shalbe geuen vnder his power, vntill a time, two tymes, and half a tyme.

But the iudgemente shalbe kepte, so that his power shalbe taken from him, for he shall be destroyed, and perishe at the laste. As for the kingedome, power and all might that is vnder the heauen, it shalbe geuen to the holy people of the most hyest, whose kingedome is euerlastinge, yea all powers shall serue & obeye him. Thus farre extende the wordes. Howbeit I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaunce chaunged, but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte.

The. viii. Chapter.

A vision of a fyrye he wether a rāme & an hegnate. The interpretacion of the vision as of the battell betwene the kinge of Persia and the kinge of the Grecians. Of the Romayns kynge Antichrist.

In the thirde yeare of the raigne of kinge Balthazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had seue the fyrste. I saw in vision (I when I saw it, I was at Susis in the chefe citie, whyche lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision, me thought I was by the ryuer of Vlai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe, and beholde there stode before me the ryuer, a rāme, whiche had hornes: and these hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, & the hyest came vp last. I sawe that this rāme pushed with his hornes against the west, against the north, and against the south: so that no beastes might stande before him, nor defende them from his power: but he did as him lysted, & waxed greate. I take hede vnto this, & then came there an hegnate from the west ouer the whole earthe, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a marueloꝰ goodly horne betwixte his eyen, and came vnto the rāme that had the two hornes (whome I had seue afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcelye vpon him with his mighty. I sawe him drawe nye vnto the rāme, beynge very fearce vpō him, yea he gaue him suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: neyther had the rāme so much strength as to stande before him: but he cast him downe, trode him vnder his fete: and no man was able to delyuer the rāme out of his power.

The

The goate waxed exceadinge greate, & when he was at the strongest, his great horne was broken also. Then grewe there other foure suche lyke in the stede, toward the .iiii. windes of the heaven. Peradoure of one of the least of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, whiche waxed marvelous greate: towarde the southe, towarde the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the host of heaven, wherof it did cast some downe to the grounde, & of the starres also, & trode them vnder fete.

Dani.viii.a. Macha.i.a

Peast grewe vp vnto the prince of the host from whom the dayly offringe was taken, & the place of his Sanctuarye taken downe: & a certayne reason was geuen vnto it, against the dayly offringe (because of wickednesse) that it might cast downe & throwe to the grounde and so to prosperre in all thynges, that he wil aboute.

D Vpon this I heard one of the Saynctes speke hinge, whiche Saynte sayde vnto one that asked this question: How longe shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the wasting abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarye and the power shall so be troden vnder foote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge & the mornynge, euen two thousand and three hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed againe.

Now when I Daniel had seene this vision, and sought for the vnderstandinge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge like vnto a man, and I heard a mans voyce in the ryuer of Vlai, which cryed and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

E Then he sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfylled. Now as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed sayntie, so that I sanke downe to the ground. But he tooke holde vpon me, and set me vp againe, sayinge: Beholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the last wrath, for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfylled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perses. But the goate is the kinge of the Grecke lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the fyrste kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the stede: it signifyeth, that out of thys people shall stande vp foure kyngdomes, but not so mighty as it.

F Aboue these kyngdomes (while vngodynes is a growynge) there shall arise a kynge of an vnshamefast face, whiche shalbe wyse in darcke speakinges.

He shalbe mighty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prosperr: he shall slaye the stronge and holye people. And through his craftynes, falshed shall prosperr in his hande, & he set vp the pryde, and many one shall be put to death in his welthynesse. He shall stande vp against the Prince of Princes, but he shall be broken wythoute hande. And this vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge & the mornynge. Therfore wryte thou vp this sight, for it wilbe longe, ere it come to passe.

1.Mach.i.d. & Theſſa.v.d. Mat.xxiv.b.

Vpon this was I Daniel very sicke, so that I lay sicke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kinges busynes, and marueled at the vision, neuertheles no man knewe of it.

X Daniel.b.a

IN the fyrst yeare of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, whiche was the sede of the Medes, & was made kinge ouer the realme of the Caldees: yeare in the fyrst peare of his raygne, I Daniel despred to knowe the yeasly nombre out of the bokes, whereof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete: that Jerusalem shoulde lye waste .lxx. yeares: and I turned me vnto god the Lorde, for to praye and make myne intercession, with fastinge, sackcloth & ashes, I prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowleged, & sayde:

O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercye with them, whiche loue the, and do thy commaundementes. We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue ben vnobedient and gone backe fro the, we haue departed from all thy preceptes and iudgementes.

Baruc.i.b.

We would neuer folowe thy seruauntes the Prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kinges and princes, to oure forefathers, and to all the people of the lande. O Lorde, righteousnesse belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertayneth confusion of face, as it doth at this same day, vnto all Juda and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: yea, vnto all Israell, whether they be farre or nye thorow out all landes: wherin thou hast driuen them, because of the offences that they had done against the.

Baruc.i.b.

O Lorde, vnto the pertayneth open shame, as it doth vnto vs, vnto our kinges and princes, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, that haue offended the, belongeth open shame.

Psalm.cxl.a

But vnto the, O Lorde our God, pertayneth mercye and forgeuenesse. In as we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde oure God, to walke in his lawes, which he layed before vs by his seruauntes the prophetes: yea all Israel haue transgressed, & gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce.

Wher-

Wherfore the curse & othe, that is written Deute.xxviii. in the lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God xx.viii. (agaynst whom we haue offended) is poured Leui.xxvi. vpon vs. And he hath performed his wor-des, whiche he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst oure iudges that iudged vs: to bringe vpon vs suche a greate plage, as neuer was vnder Baruch.ii. heauen, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before the Lord oure God, that we might turne agayne from our wicked dealle, and to be learned in thy verite.
Therefore hathe the Lorde made haste, to bringe this plage vpon vs, for the Lorde our D God is ryghteous, in all his workes which he doeth: for why, we wolde not herken vnto his voyce.

Baruch.ii. And now, O Lorde oure God, thou that Exod.xx.xiii. with a mighty hande haste brought thy pe-and.xxxv. ple oute of Egipte, to get thy selfe a name, whiche remayneth this day: we haue synned O Lorde, and done wickedly agaynste all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrothfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) fro thy cytie Jerusalem thy holy hill. And why?
for oure synnes sake, and for the wickednelle of oure forefathers is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are aboute vs. Now therefore, O oure God, heare the prayer of thy seruaunte, and his intercession.
O let not thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary that lyeth waste.

E O myn God, enclyne thine eare, and herke
yat the lenste for thine owne sake, open thyne eyen: beholde, how we be desolated, yea and the cytie also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not all oure prayers before the in oure owne ryghteousnelle, but but onely in thy greate mercyes. O Lorde, heare. O forgyue Lorde. O Lorde consyder, tarye not ater longe: but for thyne owne sake do it. O myn God: for thy cytie and thy people called after thy name.

As I was yet speakynge at my prayers, knowledgynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so mine intercession before the Lorde my God, for the ho-lye hyls sake of my God: yea, whyle I was Gabriel (whome I had seene afore in the vi-

I am now come to make the vnderstande it:
For assone as thou begannest to make thy

the desolacion shall continue till the ende of

The.x. Chapter.

There appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynē cloth: the visyon vnderstode by him, wherfore he is sent.

IN the thirde yeare of king Cirus of Perlia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwyse A called Balthazar) a matter, yea
a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceyued what the vision was. At the same time I Daniel mourned for the space of three weekes, so that I had no lust to eate bread: ne flesshe and wine there came nowe within my mouth: No, I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, till the whole thre weakes were oute.

Vpon the.xxiiii. daye of the first Moneth,
I was by the great floude, called Tigris: I lyft vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, B a man clothed in linen, whose loynes were gir- Daniel.viii.
ded vp with fyne gouldē of Arabye: his body Actum.xiii.
was like the Chrisolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was like lightninge, his eyen as the flame of fyre, his armes and fete were lyke vnto glistringe metall, but the voyce of his wordes was like the voyce of a multitude.

I Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulnelle fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye & hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate vision, so longe till there remayned no more strengthe within me: yea I lost my colour cleane, I waxed awaye, and my strength was gone.
Yet hearde I the voyce of his wordes: and as soone as I heardye it, sayntnelle came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vp-on my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whyche set me vpon my knees, and vpon the palmes of my handes, sayinge vn- Daniel.ix.b
to me: O Daniel, thou well beloued man:
take

take good hede of the wordes, that I ſhal ſay vnto the, and ſtande vpright, for vnto the am I now ſent.

And when he had ſayde theſe wordes, I ſtode vp trembling. Then he ſayd vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why ſence the firſt day that thou ſet thyne herte to vnderſtande, and diddeſt chaſten thy ſelfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene hearde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begannest to ſpeake had not the prince ouer the kingedom of the Perſes withſtand me.xxi.dayes. But lo, Michael Iuſa.b.d. Daniel.xij.a one of the cheefe Princes, came to helpe me, hym haue I left vp the kyng of Perſia, & am come to ſhewe the, what ſhall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wilbe longe yet or the viſion be fulfilled.

Nowe when he had ſpoken theſe wordes vnto me, I caſt doune my head to the ground and helde my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lippes one very like vnto a man. Then opened I my mouthe, & ſayde vnto him, that ſtode before me: O my Lorde, my pointes are lowſed in the viſion, and there is no more ſtrength within me: Howe may my Lordes ſeruaunt then talke with my Lorde? ſeynge there is no ſtrength in me: ſo that I can not take my breth? Vpon this there touched me agayne, one muche like a man, and comforted me, ſaying: O thou man ſo well beloued
Daniel.x.b. feare not: be cõtent, take a good herte vnto ỹ, & be ſtrong. So when he had ſpoken vnto me, I recouered and ſayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou haſt refreſhed me. Then ſayde he: knoweſt thou wherfore I am came vnto the? now wyl I go again to fyghe with the prince of the Perſes. As ſone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekelande ſhall come. Neuertheles I will ſhewe the the thinge, that is ſalt noted in the ſcripture of truethe. And as for all pöder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael your prince.

The.xi. Chapter.

A prophecy of the kynges of Perſia. Of the kyngedome of Grece. Of the kingedom of Egipt, & of the bounde thereof, and of ye battell betwix the kingdom of Syria. Of the Iewes that flye vnto the kyng of Egypte, whome Antiochus the kynge of Syria perſecuteth, whyche ſhuld vnto be Antichriſt. The pryde of Antiochus.

AND in the firſt yeare of Darius of Medea, I ſtode vp him, to cõforte him, & to ſtrength him, and nowe wil I ſhewe the the trueth. Beholde, there ſhall ſtande vp yet thre kynges in Perſia, but the fourth ſhal be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the cheefeſt power of his ryches, he ſhall prouoke euery mã againſt ỹ realme of Grekelande. Then ſhall there ariſe yet a mighty kinge, that ſhall rule with greate dominiõ, and do what him lyſt. And as ſone as his kin-
Daniel.viij.a gedome cometh vp, it ſhalbe deſtroyed, and deuyded toward the fower windes of the hea-
Micha.i. uen. They that come after hym, ſhall not haue ſuche power and dompayon as he: but hys kyngedome ſhalbe ſcatred, yea euen a-monge other then thoſe. And the kyng of the ſouth ſhal be myghtyer, then hys other princes. Agaynſte hym there ſhall one make hym-ſelfe ſtronge, and ſhal rule his dominiõ with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they ſhalbe ioyned together, and the kinges doughter of the ſouth ſhall come to the kynge of the North, for to make frendſhyp, but ſhe ſhall not obtayne the power of that arme, neyther ſhall ſhe be able to endure thorow her myght: but ſhe, and ſuch as brought her (yea and he that begat her, & cõforted her for hys tyme) ſhalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there ſhall one ſtande vp in his ſtedet whiche with power of armes ſhal go thorow the kinges lande of the North, & handle hym according to his ſtrength. As for their Idols & princes, with their coſtly Iewels of goulde & ſyluer, he ſhal carye them awaye captiues into Egipte, & he ſhall preuayle agaynſte the kyng of the north certayne yeares. And whẽ he is come into the kinges realm of the ſouth he ſhalbe fayne to turne agayne into hys owne lande. Wherfore hys ſonnes ſhalbe diſpleaſed, and ſhall gather together a myghtye greate hoſte of people: and one of them ſhall come, and go thorowe lyke a waterflowed: then ſhall he returne, and go forth with deſpyte and hastinge vnto his owne lande.

Then the kynge of the ſouth ſhalbe angry and ſhall come forthe to fyghte agaynſte the kinge of the north: yea he ſhal bringe a great multitude of people together, & a great heape ſhalbe geuen into hys hande: their ſhall he carye awaye with greate pryde, for ſo muche as he hath caſt doune ſo many thouſandes, neuertheles he ſhall not preuayle. For the king of the north ſhal gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore, & come forth (after a certayne tyme & yeares) with a mighty hoſte and exceadinge greate good.

At the ſame tyme there ſhall many ſtande vp agaynſt the kynges of the ſouth, ſo that the wycked children of the people alſo ſhall exalte them ſelues (to fulfyll the viſyon) & then fall. So the kynge of the North ſhall come to lape lege, & to take the ſtrõge ſenſed cyties: And the power of them of the ſouth ſhal not be able to abyde hym, and the beſt men of the people ſhal not be ſo ſtronge, as to reſiſt hym. Shortely, when he commeth, he ſhall handle him as he liſt, & no man ſhalbe ſo hardy as to ſtande agaynſt hym. He ſhall ſtand in ỹ pleaſaunt countreye, whiche thorow him ſhalbe deſtroyed. He ſhal ſet hys face wt al his power to obtayne his kingedome, and to be lyke vnto. Yea that ſhall he do, and geue hym vnto the doughters amonge women, to deſtroye hym. But he ſhall fayle, neyther ſhall he obtayne his purpoſe. After this ſhall he ſet hys face vnto the Iles, & take many of them. A prince ſhal ſtoppe him, to do hym a ſhame, beſyde the ſhame that he ſhall haue vnto hym. Thus ſhall he torne agayne to hys owne

lande, ſtomble, & fall, and be no more founde: To he that came vpon him & did him violence, ſhal ſtande in his place, & haue a pleſaunte kingedom: and after few dayes he ſhalbe deſtroyed, and that neyther in wrath, nor in bat tell. In his ſtrade there ſhal ariſe a vyle perſon, not holden worthy of ā kinges dygnitie: this ſhal come vnreadyly, & obtayne the kingedome with fayre wordes: he ſhall fyghte agaynſte the armes of the myghtye, and deſtroye them) yea and agaynſte the prynce of the couenaunte.

And after that he hath taken truce with him, he ſhal handle diſceytfully, that he maye get vp, and ouercome him with a ſmall flocke: & ſo with craftynes to get him to the fatteſt place of the lande, and to deale otherwyſe, then eyther his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he ſhall deſtroye the thinge, that they had robbed and ſpoiled, yea & al their ſubſtaunce: ymagininge thoughtes agaynſt the ſtronge holdes, and that for a tyme. His power, and herte ſhalbe ſtirred vp with a great armye agaynſt the kinge of the ſouth: where thorow the king of the ſouth ſhalbe moued then vnto battell with a great and mighty hoſt alſo. Neuertheleſſe he ſhal not be able to ſtand, for they ſhal conſpire againſt hym. Yea, they that eat of hys meate, ſhal hurte him: ſo that his hoſte ſhall fall, and many be ſlayne doune.

Theſe two kinges ſhalbe mynded to do myſchefe, and talke of diſcrete at one table, but they ſhall not proſpere: for yet, the ende ſhal not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted. Then ſhal he go home againe into his owne lande with great good, & ſet his herte againſt the holy couenaunt, he ſhalbe buſye againſte it, and then returne home. At the time appointed, he ſhall come againe, and go toward the ſouth. So ſhall it happen otherwyſe then at the firſt, yet ones again. And why? the ſhippes of Cythim ſhall come vpon him, that he may be ſmytten and turne again: that he may take indignacyon againſte the couenaunte of holynes, to medle againſt it. Yea he ſhall turne him, and drawe ſuche vnto hym, as leaue the holy couenaunte.

He ſhall ſet myghty men to vnhalowe the Sanctuary of ſtrength, to put doune the dayly offeryng, and to ſet vp the abhominable deſolacyon. And ſuche as breake the couenaunt ſhal he flatter with fayre wordes. But the people that wyll know their God, ſhal haue the ouerhand, and proſpere. Thoſe alſo that haue vnderſtandyng among the people ſhall enſoorme the multitude: and for a long ſeaſon, they ſhalbe perſecuted with ſwerde, with fyre, with captyuyte and with the takinge awaye of their goodes. Nowe when they fall they ſhalbe ſet vp with a little helpe: but many ſhall cleue vnto them faynedly.

Yea, ſome of thoſe whych haue vnderſtandinge ſhalbe perſecuted alſo: that they maye be tryed, purified and cleanſed, tyll the tyme be oute: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kinge ſhal do what him liſt, he ſhal exalte and magnifye him ſelfe agaynſte all, that is God. Yea he ſhall ſpeake maruelous thinges againſt the God of al goddes, wherin he ſhall proſpere, ſo longe till the wrathe be fulfilled, for the concluſion is decreed alredy. He ſhal not regarde the God of hys fathers, but his luſt ſhalbe vpon women: Yea, he ſhal not care for any God, for he ſhall magnifye himſelfe aboue al. In his place ſhall he worſhippe the mighty Idols: and the god whome his fathers knewe not, ſhall he honoure with goulde and ſyluer, with pretious ſtones and pleſaunt Jewels.

Thus ſhal he do, ſekyng helpe and ſuccour at the myghtye Idols and ſtraunge goddes. Suche as wil receyue him, and take him for God, he ſhall geue them greate worſhippe, & power: yea and make them loordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme ſhall the kinge of the ſouth ſtryue with him: & the king of the north in like maner ſhall come againſte him wyth charettes, horſemen and wyth a greate nauy of ſhippes. He ſhall come into the landes, deſtroye and go thorowe, he ſhall entre alſo in to the fayre pleaſaunt lande. Many perſones and countreyes ſhall decaye, except Edom, Moab & the beſt of the children of Ammon, whyche ſhall eſcape from hys hande. He ſhal ſtretch forth his handes vpon the countreyes & the lande of Egipte ſhall not eſcape him. For thorowe his goynge in, he ſhal haue dominion ouer the treaſures of ſiluer and gold & ouer al the precyous Jewels of Egypte, Lybia and Ethiopia. Neuertheleſſe the tidinges oute of the eaſte and north ſhal trouble hym, for the whiche cauſe he ſhall go forthe to deſtroye & curſe a greate multitude. The tētes of his palace ſhall be pytch betwyxte the two ſeas, vpon the hill of the noble Sanctuarye, for he ſhall come to the ende of it, & then ſhal no man helpe him.

The.xii. Chapter.

The prophecyeth the reſurrection of the deade. The dutie and office of the Prophecyer of Daniel.

The tyme wil come alſo, that the greate Prince Michael, which ſtandeth an thy people ſyde, ſhal aryſe vp, for there ſhall come a tyme of trouble, ſuch as neuer was, ſens there beganne to be any people, vnto ſ ſame time. The ſhal thy people be deliuered, yea, al thoſe that be found written in the boke. Many of the that ſlepe in ſ duſt of the earth, ſhal awake: ſome to euerlaſtinge lyfe, ſome to perpetual ſhame and repuke. The wyſe (ſuche as haue taught other) ſhall glyſter, as the ſhyninge of heauen: and thoſe that haue inſtructe the multitude vnto godlynes, ſhall be as the ſterres, worlde without ende.

And thou O Daniel, ſhut vp theſe wordes, & ſeale the boke til the laſt time. Many ſhal go about here & there, & the ſhal knowledge, ledge encrease. So I Daniel loked, & beholde there stode other two, one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon ponder syde. And one of them sayde vnto him, whiche was clothed in lynen, and stode above vpon the waters of the floud: How longe shall it be to the ende of the wonderous workes?

Apoc.x.d. Then hearde I the man with the lynen clothes, whiche stode above vpon the waters of the floude: when he helde vp his right and lefte hande vnto heauen, and sware by him whyche liueth for euer: that it shall tarry for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: & whē the power of the holy people is cleane scatred abroade, thē shal all these thinges be fulfilled.

Apo.xi.c.xii.e

I hearde it well, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my Lord, what shall happen after this? He answered: Go thy way Daniel, for these wordes shalbe closed vp, & sealed, till the last tyme: & many shalbe purified, cleansed and tryed. But the vngodly shal lyue wickedly, and those wicked (as many of Matth.xiij.b thē as they be) shall haue no vnderstanding. As for suche as haue vnderstandynge, they shall regarde it. And from the time forth that the daily offringe shalbe put downe & the abhominable desolacyon set vp, there shalbe a thousande two hundreth & xc. dayes. O well is him, that wayteth, & commeth to the thousande.iij.C.xxxv. dayes. Go thou thy way now, till it be ended: take thy rest, and byde in thy lot, till the dayes haue an ende.

The ende of the Prophecy of Daniel.

The boke of the prophete Oseas.

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherin Oseas prophesyed. Oseas bi commaūde of God taketh to hym wife, & gendreth the ij. children of the people. The destruccyon of the offspringe of Jehu, and of the Israelites, is prophesyed.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery, in the dayes of Oseas, Joathan, Ahaz and Ezechiah kinges of Juda: and in the tyme of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israel.

A First when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas, he sayde vnto him: Go thy way, take an harlot to thy wife, and get children by her: for the lande hath committed greate whordome aa gaynst the Lorde. So he went, and toke.a. Gomer the doughter of.b. Deblaim: whiche conceyued, and brought forth a sonne. And

B the Lorde sayde vnto him: call his name.c. Jesraell, for I will shortly auenge the blode of Jesraell, vpon the house of Jehu, and will bringe the kingedome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then will I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Jesrael.

She conceyued yet agayn, and bare a doughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name.d. Lauhamah (that is, not obtayninge mercy) for I will haue no pyte vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembraunce. Neuertheles I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and will saue them, euen through the Lord their God. But I will not deliuer them through bowe, swearde, battel, hosses, or horsemen.

Now when she had weaned Lauhamah, D she conceyued agayne, and bare a sonne. The sayde he call his name.e. Lo amp. For ye are not my people, therfore will I not be yours. And though the nombre of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, which can neyther be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayde vnto them, ye be not my people, euen there shall it be sayde vnto them, ye be the children of the lyuynge God. The shall the children of Juda and the children of Israel be gathered together agayn, & chose them selues one heade, and then depart oute of the lande: for great shalbe the daye of Jesrael.

The notes.

a. That is, consummacion: because the kingedome of Israel and Juda shoulde shortlye be consumed.
b. That is, fruyte of figges: because of the greate delicatenes and voluptuousnes, that Juda and Israel were in.
c. That is, the seede of God.
d. That is, hauinge no mercye.
e. That is, not my people.

The.ij. Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentaunce.

I Tell youre brethren, that they are my people: and youre sisters, that they haue obtayned mercye. As for youre a mother, ye shal chyde with her, & reproue her, for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande, vnlesse she put awaye her whordom out of my syghte, and her aduoutry from her breastes. Yf no I shal stripe her naked and sette her, euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall lay her waste, and make her like a wildernesse, and slay her for thirst. I shal haue no pyte also vpon her children, for they be the children of fornicacyon.

Their mother hath broken their wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to confusyon. iij. Re.xij.a For she sayde: I will go after my louers, that geue me my water and bread, my woll and flax, my oyle and my drinke. But I will hedge her awaye with thornes, and stoppe it that she shall not fynde her stepppes: and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shall seke them, but not fynde them. Then shall she saye: wel I will Exod. xx. b go turne agayne to my fyrste housbande, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then nowe. But this wolde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer & golde, whiche she hath bangeth vpon Baal.

Wherfore nowe will I go take my corne & wine againe in their season, and yet agayne my wolle and my flax, wherby I gaue her, to couer her shame. And nowe will I discouer her folyshenesse, euen in the syghte of her louers, and no man shal deliuer her oute of my handes. Moreouer, I wil take awaye all her mirthe, her holye dayes, her newemones, her Sabbothes, and all her solempne feastes: I wil destroy her vynyardes and figge trees, though she sayeth: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuen me. I wyll make it a woode, and the wilde beastes shall eate it vp. I will punysh her also for the dayes of Baal, wherin she exalted him, decking hym with her earynges and chaynes: when she followed her louers, and forgat me, sayeth the Lorde.

Wherfore beholde, I will entyse her & bring her into a wildernes, and speake frendly vnto her: there wil I geue her her vinyardes agayne: yea and the valleye of Achor also to thewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she singe there as in the tyme of her youthe, & lyke as in the day when she came oute of the lande of Egypte. Thus (sayeth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbande, and shal call me no more Baal, for I will take awaye those names of Baal from her mouthe, yea, she shal neuer remembre their names anye more. Then will I make a couenaunte with them, with the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and with euery thinge that creepeth vpon the earth.

As for bowe, swerde and battel, I will destroye suche out of the lande, & will make the to slepe safely. Thus will I marye the vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: yea, rue to my selfe wil I marye the, in rightewesnesse, in equyte, in louinge kyndnesse and mercye. In fayth also will I marye the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme will I shewe my selfe frendlye and gracious vnto the heauens, (sayeth the Lorde,) & the heauens shal helpe the earth, and the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shall helpe Iesrael. I will sowe them vpon earth, for a sede to myne owne selfe, & will haue mercye vpon her, that was without mercy. And to the, which were not my people, I wil saye: thou arte my people: and he shal saye: thou art my God.

The notes.

a. Mother here signifyeth the Synagoge, or the Iewes, or the churche, or congregacion of the people, as in Esai. l. a.

The .ij. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towarde the people.

THen sayde the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye, & bowe an aduouterous woma, who thy neyghbourre loueth, as the Lord doeth the children of Israell: how be it they haue respecte to straunge Goddes, and loue the wine kannes. So I gat her for. xb. syluerlinges, & for an Homer & an half of barley, & sayde vnto her: Thou shalt bide vp me a long season: but se that thou playest not the harlot, and take thou medle not with none other man, & then will I hepe my selfe for the.

Thus the children of Israell shall syt a great whyle without king and Prince, without offeringe and aulter, without preest and true lacon. But afterwarde shall the children of Israell conuerte, and seke the Lorde their God: and Dauid their kinge: & in the latter dayes, they shall worshippe the Lorde, and hys louynge kyndnesse.

The .iij. Chapter.

A complaint against the people & the preestes of Israel.

HEare the word of the Lorde ye children of Israel, for the lord must punish the, that dwel in the land. And why? There is no faythfulnes, there is no mercy there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but swearing, lyenge, manslaughter, theft, & aduoutry haue gotte the ouerhade, & one bloudguiltinesse folowth another. Therfore shall the lad be in a miserable case, & al they that dwel therin, shall mourne: the beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, & the fishes in the sea shal dye. Yet is there none, that wyl chasten nor reproue another. The preestes which shoulde reforme other me, are become like the people.

Therfore stombleste thou in the day tyme & the prophet with the in the nyght. I wil bringe thy mother to silence, & why? my people perish, because they haue no knowledge. Seing then that thou hast refused vnderstanding, ther fore wil I refuse the also: so that thou shalt no more be my preste. And for so muche as thou hast forgotte the lawe of thy God, I wil also forget thy childe. The more they increased in the multitude, the more they sinned against me, therfore will I chaunge their honoure into shame. They eat vp the synnes of my people, and lounge them in their wyckednesse. Thus the preest is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wil punysh the for their wicked wayes & rewarde them accordinge to their owne imaginacions. They shall eate and not haue enoughe: They haue playd whordome, therfore shall they not prospere, and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Israel art disposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shouldest not haue runne to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, nor haue sworne, the Lord liueth. For Israel is gone backe like a wanton cow. The Lord therfore shall make her fede, as the lāb that goeth astray. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols, wel, let him go. Their drunckennes hath put them backe, and brought them to whordome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bring (say they) to their owne shame. A wind shall take hold of their fethers & they shalbe confounded in their offeringes.

A. To vse whordome or fornycacion therein one of the Prophetes, is, to take another God the the true God, and to serue ymages or to beleue in them.

The. viii. Chapter.

Of the byttes and wickednes of the people.

A When I vnderstande to make Israel whole, then the vngracyousnes of Ephraim and the wickednes of Samaria cometh to lyght: then go they about with lyes. At home, they be theues: & without they fall to robbinge. They consyder not in their hertes that I remembre all their wickednes. They go about with their owne inuencions, but I se them wel ynough.

B They make the kinge & the princes, to haue pleasure in their wickednes, and lyes. All these burne in aduoutrye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hath lefte kneadynge, till the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it thys day with oure kinges & princes, for they beginne to be wroode dronken thorowe wine, they vse familiarite with suche as disceyue him. They with the ymaginacyon of their herte are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all the ynyghte lyke the slepe of a baker, in the morninge is he as hote as the flamme of fyre, they are altogether as hote as an ouen.

C They haue deuoured their owne iudges, all their kinges are fallen: yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore maist Ephraim be myxte amonge the heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man turneth: strangers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth ful of gray heares: yet will he not know it, and the pryde of Israell is calle doune before their face, yet will they not turne to the Lord their God, nor seke him for all this.

Osee.vii.a.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is begyled, and hathe no herte. Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe go they to the Assyrians, but whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall spreade my net ouer them, and drawe them doune as the foules of the ayre: & accordinge as they haue bene warned, so will I punyshe them. Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at naught. I am he y haue redemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. They call not vpon me with their hertes, but lye howlinge vpon their beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for mirth and dronke, and me wil they not obeye. I haue taught them, and defended their armes, yet do they ymagin mischefe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not a right, and are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shal be slayne with the swerde, for the malyce of their tunges, such blasphemie shall they learned in the lande of Egypte.

Thy calf, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wrathfull indignacion is gone forthe agaynst the. How longe will it be, or they cā be cleused? ges amonge the Assirians. They poure oute no wyne for a drinckofferinge vnto the Lord, neyther geue they him their slain offeringes: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherin all they that eate them, are defyled. For the breade that they haue for their lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde.

15 What wyl ye do then in the a. solempne daies, and in the feaste of the Lorde? Lo, they shall get them awaye for the destruccion: Egipte shal receyue them, & Moph shall bury them. The nettles shal ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and bushes shalbe in their tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensynge are at hande. As for the Prophete, ye holde hym for a foole: and him that is spyritu-all for a mad man: so great is youre wickednes and malice. Ephraim hath made him selfe a watchman of my God, a prophet, & is become a snare to do hurte in euery streate and abhominacion in the house of his God.

They be gone to farre, & haue destroyed them selues, like as they dyd afore tyme at Gibea. Therfore their wickednes shalbe remembred, and their synnes punyshed.

I founde Israel lyke the grapes in the wildernes, & saw their fathers as the fyrst figges in the top of the figge tree. But they are gone to Baal Peor, & runne awaye from me to that shamefull Idoll, and are become as abhominable as their louers. Ephraim. * Roseth lyke a braunche, so shall their glory also. In so muche, that they shall neyther beget, conceyue nor beare childe. And though they bring vp any yet will I make them childelesse among men. Yea, wo shall come to them, when I departe from them. Ephraim as me thynketh is planted in welthynesse, lyke as Tirus, but nowe must she bring her owne children forth to the manslayer.

O Lorde thou shalt geue them: what shalte thou geue them? geue them an vnfrutefull wombe and dry pappes. All their wickednesse is done at Galgal, there do I abhorre them. For the vngratefulnes of their owne inuencions. I will driue them oute of my house. I will loue them no more, for all their princes are vnfaythfull. Ephraim is he wen bounde, their rote is dryed vp, so that they shal bringe no more fruite: yea and though they bringe forth any, yet will I slaye euen the best beloued fruite of their body. My god shal caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedient vnto hym, therefore shal they go astray amonge the Heathen.

The notes.

a. The scripture heer calleth the solempne day and the feast of the Lorde the tyme of the Lordes bringe comme: because that therin the power of God shewed it selfe, in that he suffered the Assirians to take hys people priseners. Read lyke thynge ye haue Sophony.i.b.

Israel was a goodly vyne, but he hath brought forth vnprofytable fruite: yea, the more fruite he had, & moo aulters he made: the more good I dyd to their lande, the more frendshyppe they shewed to their Images. Their herte is deuyded, therfore wyll they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their Images, he shall destroye their aulters. Then shall they saye: we haue no kinge, for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kinge do to vs? They couen together, and sweare vayne othes: they be confederate together, therfore groweth their punyshement, as the wedes in the furowes of the lande.

They & dwel in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shall the people mourne ouer them selues, and the preestes also, that in their welthynesse reioyced with them: and why? it shall passe awaye from them. It shalbe brought to the Assyrians, for a present vnto kinge Jareb. Ephraim shal receyue shame punishement: Israel shalbe confounded for his owne ymaginacions. Samaria with her kynge shall vanyshe awaye as the scomme in the water. The hye places of Aun where Israel do synne, shalbe caste downe: thystles and thornes shall growe vpon their aulters. Then shall they saye to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as Gibea did afore tyme, where they remayneth, should not the battel then come vpon the wicked children, as wel as vpon the Gibeanites? I wyl chastyse them, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shalbe gathered together ouer them, when I punyshe them for their greate wickednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe that is vsed to go to plowe, therfor I layed him, & set vpon his fayre neck, I droue Ephraim, Juda plowed, and Jacob played the husbande man, that they myght sowe vnto righteousnes, and reape the fruite of welldoynge that they might plowe vp their freshlande, & seke the Lorde, till he came, and learned the righteousnes.

But nowe a they haue plowed them wyckednesse, therfore shall they reape synne, & eat the fruite of lyes. Bycause thou puttest thy confydence in thyne owne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy warriors: there shall growe a sedicion amonge thy people. All thy stronge cities shalbe layd waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his families, thorowout that was auenged of Arbell, in the day of batell, where the mother perysshed in her children. stroyer frō the almighty. Shall not ſ meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the mirthe also & ioye from the house of oure God? The ſede shall perysshe in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, ſ floures shalbe broken downe for the corne shalbe destroyed. O what a ſyghynge make the cattell: the bullockes are dryven vp and downe, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are lamysshed awaye.

O Lord, to the will I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderneſſe, and the flamme hath burnt vp all the trees of the felde. Yea, the wylde beastes crye also vnto the: for the waterryuers are dryed vp and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernes.

The notes.

a. Saynt Hierome sayth in the prologe of Oſee, that thoſe prophetes (which shewe not the tyme of their prophecye, dyd prophecye in the tyme of the Prophet that standeth next before the, whyche declareth the tyme of hys prophecye.

The.ii. Chapter.

The prophet vttereth the vnmercyfulnes & cruelty of their enemyes. An exhortacion to move them to conuerte.

BLowe oute the trompet in Sion, & crye vpon my holy hyl, that all ſuche as dwell in the land, may tremble at it, for the daye of the Lorde commeth, and is harde at hande: a darcke daye, a gloomynge daye, a cloudye daye, yea & a stormy daye, lyke as the morninge ſprædeth oute vpon the hylles: Ame lp, a great and myghtye people, ſuche as haue not bene ſente the begynninge, neither shal be after them for euer more. Before hym shall be a conſumynge fyre, and behynde hym a burnynge flamme. The land shal be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde hym shall it be a very waste wyldernes, and there is no man, that shall escape hym. They are to lyke vpon lyke harded horſes, and runne lyke horſe men. They ſhyppe vp vpon the hylles, as it were the ſounde of charettes, as ſ flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people ready to the battell.

The folcke shalbe afraped of hym, all faces shalbe as blacke as a pot. They ſhal renne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in hys goynge shall kepe hys araye, and not go oute of hys path. There shall not one dyuyde another, but eche shall kepe hys owne waye. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurte. They shall come into the cyte, and renne vpō the walles: They shal clymme vp vpon ſ houſes, & ſlyppe in at the wyndowes lyke a theefe. The earth shall quake before him, yea, the heauens shalbe moued: The sunne & mone shall be darckened, and the starres shal withdraw their lyght. The Lorde shall shewe his voyce before hys hoſte, for hys hoſte is greate, ſtrōg and myghtye to fulfyll hys commaundremēt. This is that greate and merueylous feare-full daye of the Lorde: And who is able to abyde it.

Now therfore ſayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes, with faſtynge, weppynge and mourninge, rente youre hertes & not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde youre God, for he is gracyous and mercyfull, longe ſuffrynge and of great compaſſion, & ready to pardone wickednes. Who (no doute) he also shall turne, & forgeue: and after hys chastenynge, he shall let youre increase remayne, for meat & drynke offeringes vnto the Lorde youre God. Blowe oute with the trompet in Sion, proclame a faſt ynge, cal the congregacion, and gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bringe the chyldren & ſuckelynges together. Let the bridgrome go forth of his chamber, & the bryde oute of her cloſet. Let the prieſtes ſerue the Lorde betwixte the porche & the aulter, weping and ſaying: be fauourable (O Lorde) be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thyne herytage be brought to ſuche confuſyon, leſte the Heathen be Lordes therof. Wherfore ſhulde they ſaye amonge the Heathen: where is nowe their God?

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer hys lande, & ſpare his people: yea, the Lorde shall anſwere, and ſay vnto his people: Behold, I will ſende you corne, wyne & oyle, ſo that ye shall haue plentye of them: & I will no more geue you ouer to be a reproſe amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the North, I shall dryue hym farre from you: & thute him out into a dry and waste lande, hys face towarde the eaſt ſea, and hys hynder partes towarde the vtmoſt ſea. The ſtynche of hym shall go vp, and his foulthy corruptyon shall fal vpon himſelfe, because he hath dealte ſo proudelye. Feare not (O lande) but be glad, and triomphe, for the Lorde wyll do greate thynges. Be not ye afraped neither (O ye beaſtes of the felde) for the pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shall beare their fruite: the figgetrees & vyne yardes shall geue their encrease.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Sion) & triomphe in the Lorde youre God, for he hathe geuē you a teacher of ryghtuouſnes: and he it is ſ shall ſende you doune shuwers of rayne, early and late in the fyrſte moneth, ſo that the garners shalbe full of corne, and the preſſes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares ſ the grashopper, locuſte, blaſtynge, & caterpyller (my greate hoſte, whiche I ſente amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shal reſtore the to you agayne, ſo that ye shall haue enoughe to eate, and be ſatisfyed, and prayſe the name of the Lorde youre God, that so merueylouſlye hath dealte with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded anye more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddeſte of Israel, and that I am youre God: yea, & that there is none other, & my people shal no more be brought to confuſyon.

After this, will I poure out my ſpirite vpon all all flesshe: and youre sonnes & youre doughters shall prophecye: youre olde men shall dreame dreames, & youre yong men shall se visions pea in those dayes I will poure out my spirite vpon seruauntes and maydens. I will shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the earth beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapour of smoke. The sunne shalbe turned into darcknes, & the mone into bloude: before the greate & notable daye of the Lorde come. And whosoeuer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shalbe saued. For vpon mount Syon & at Jerusalem, there shalbe a saluacion, lyke as the Lorde hath promysed, pea & amog the other remnaunte, whome the Lorde shall call.

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of his people.

BEholde in those dayes & at the same tyme, when I turne vgayne the captyuyte of Juda & Jerusalem: I shal gather al people together, & bringe them in the vallaye of Josaphat: and there will I reason with them: because of my people & heritage of Israel, whom they haue scatred abrode in the nacyons, and parted my lande, pea they haue cast lottes for my people the yonge men haue they set in the bordell house, and solde the Damsels for wine, that they myght haue to drynke. Thou Tyrus & Sidō and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Will ye delye me? well yf ye wil rendre delye me, I shal recompence you, euen vpon youre head, & ryght shortly: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my lapye & goodly Jewels, & brought the into youre goddes houses. The children also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto the Grekes, that ye myght bringe them farre frō the borders of their owne countrey.

Beholde therfore, I will raise them oute of the place, where ye haue solde them, & will rewarde you euen vpon youre heade. Youre sonnes & your doughters will I sell thorowe the handes of the children of Juda, & so they shal geue them forth to sel, vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countre, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thinges among the Gentiles, proclayme warre, wake vp the gyaunts, let them drawe nye, let them come vp all the lustye warryours of the. Make you sweardes of youre plowshares, and speares of youre sythes. Let the weake man saye: I am stronge. Muster you, and come, all ye heathen rounde about: gather you together, there shall the Lorde laye all thy gyauntes to the grounde. Let the people arise, & get them to the vallaye of Josaphat, for there will I sit, & iudge all heathen rounde about. Laye to youre sythes, for the haruest is ripe: come, get you downe: the wynepresse is ful, pea the wynepresses runne ouer, for their wickednesse is waxen greate.

In the vallaye appointed, there shalbe mu-ny, many people: for the daye of the Lorde is nye in the vallaye appointed. The sunne and mone shalbe darkened, & the starres shal withdrawe their light. The Lorde shal roare oute of Syon, and crye oute of Jerusalem, that the heauens & the earthe shall quake wythal. But the Lorde shalbe a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the children of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lorde youre God dwell vpon my holy mounte of Syon. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no straungers go thorowe her any more. Then shall the mountaines droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall flowe with mylcke. All the ryuers of Juda shall haue water ynough, & out of the Lordes house there shal flowe a spryng to water the broke of Sittim: but Egipt shalbe layed waste, and Edom shalbe desolate: because they haue dealte so cruelly with the children of Juda, and shed innocents bloude in their lande. Agaynst Juda shalbe mynistred for euermore, and Jerusalem from generacion to generacion: for I wil not leaue their bloud vnauenged. And the Lorde shal dwell in Syon.

The ende of the prophecy of Joel.

The boke of the Prophete Amos.

The fyrste Chapter.

The tyme of the Prophecye of Amos. The wordes of the Lorde agaynst Juda, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the Sonnes of Ammon.

THese are the sermons that were shewed vnto Amos (whiche was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Osias kynge of Juda, and in the tyme of Jerobeam the sonne of Joas kynge of Israel, two yeare before the earthquake. And he sayde: The Lorde shall roare oute of Syon, and shewe his voyce frō Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a mysserable case, and the toppe of Charmell dryed vp. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre & foure wyckednesses of Damascus, I wil not spare her, because they haue thresshed Galaad with yron sleades: But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, the same that cōsume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabyter frō the felde of Auen, & him that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaunt house: so that the people shalbe disperced oute of Syria, sayeth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord: For thre and foure wyckednesses of Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captyue, & haue done them in to the lande of Edom. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I wyl rote out them ꝑ dwell at Asdod & hym ꝑ holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretche oute myne hande ouer Ecaron, that the remnaunte of the Philistines shal perysshe sayth the Lorde.

Joel.iij.a. Thus sayeth the Lorde: ffor thre and foure wyckednesses of the cytye of Tyre, I wil not spare her, because they haue myserably the captyuite of the Edomytes, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaũt. Therfore wil I sende a fyre vnto the walles of Tyre, that shal consume her palaces. Thus sayeth the Lorde:

16.Reg.v.a. Abdi.i.a. Jere.xlix.b ffor thre and foure wickednesses of Edom I wyl not spare hym, because he persecuted hys brother with the swearde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred verye longe, and so kepte indignacion alwaye by hym. Therfore wyll I sende a fyre into Theman, which shal deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

Jerem.xlix.a Lorch.xxi.a xxv.a Thus sayeth the Lorde: ffor thre and foure wyckednesses of the children of Ammõ I wil not spare the, because they ripte vp the women greate with childe in Galaad, to make ꝑ borders of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I wyl kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath ꝑ shal consume her palaces: with a great crie, in the daye of batel, in tempest & in the daye of stourme, so that their kinge shall go into captyuite he and hys princes together, sayeth the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

Against Moab, Juda, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: ffor thre & foure wyckednesses of Moab, I wil not spare hym because he burnte the bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therfor wil I sende a fyre into Moab, which shal cõsume the palaces of Carioth, so that Moab shal perysshe with a noyse, & the sounde of a shawme. I wyl rote oute the iudge from amonge the, & slaye all hys princes with hym, sayeth ꝑ lord.

Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Juda, I wil not spare hym: because he hath cast a syde the lawe of the Lord, & not kepte his cõmaundementes: for why, they wolde nedes be disceyued with the lyes, that theyr forefathers folowed. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into Juda, whiche shall cõsume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde: ffor thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wyl not spare hym: because he hath solde the righteous for money, and the poore for shues. They treade vpõ poore mẽs heades, in the dust of the earthe, & croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dyshonoure my holye name, they a.lye beside euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of theyr Goddes they drinche the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: notwithstandynge I destroyed his fruite from above, and his rote from vnder.

Agayne: I broughte you oute of the lande of Egypte, and led you.xl. yeares thorowe the wylderuesse, that ye myghte haue the Amorites lande in possession. I rayled vp prophetes amonge your children, and abstayners amõg your younge men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, sayeth the Lorde? But ye gaue the abstayners wyne to drinche, yea ye cõmaunded the Prophetes, sayinge: Prophecye not. Beholde, I will crathe you in sonder, lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is full of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neither ꝑ strõg be able to do anye thynge: no, the gyaunt shal not saue hys owne lyfe. The archer shal not abyde, and the swyfte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shal not saue hys lyfe, & he ꝑ is as manlye of stomache as a gyaunte, shall in that daye be sayne to runne hys waye naked, sayeth the Lorde.

The iii. Chapter.

He reproueth the house of Israel of wickednes.

Here, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you O ye children of Israel, euen all the tribes whome I broughte oute of Egypte, and sayd: you only haue I accepted from all the generacyons of the earth, therfore wyl I visyte you in all youre wickednesses. Shall two walke together, excepte they be agreed amonge them selues? Doth a lyon roare in the woodde, excepte he haue a praye? Or ceepeth a lyons whelpe oute of hys denne, excepte he haue gotten somthinge? Doth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earthe, where no fouler is? Taketh a man hys snare vp from the grounde, afore he catche sõwhat? Loue they oute alarum with the trompet in ꝑ cytye, and the people not afrayed? Commeth there anye plage in a cytye without it be the Lordes doynge? Nowe doth the Lorde God no maner of thynge, but he telleth hys secrete before vnto hys seruauntes the Prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyll not be afrayed? Seynge then that the Lord God him selfe speaketh, who wyll not *prophecye? *Or excepte prophecye.

Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypte, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se greate murther and violente oppressyon amonge them, for why, they regarde not the thyng that is ryght saith the Lorde: they gather together euyll gotten goodes, and laye vp robbery in theyr houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God. This lande shalbe troubled and besieged rounde about, thy strength shalbe plucte from the, & thy palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as an hyrdeman taketh two legges or a peece a pece of an eare oute of the lions mouth: Eue so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, hanginge their couches in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shalbe plucte awaye. Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Iacob (sayeth the Lorde GOD of hoostes) that when I begynne to vysyte the wickednes of Israel, I will visit the auteres at Bethell also, so that the hornes of the auter shalbe broken of, and fall to the grounde.

4.Reg.xxiij. xxv.

As for the wynter house and sommer house I will smyte them downe, and the houses of Iuory, yea, & many other houses shal perysh, and be destroyed, sayeth the Lorde.

Heare this worde .ye. fat kyne, that be vpon the hyl of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to your Lordes: bring hyther, let vs banche.

Ye came to Bethell for to worke vngracyousnes, and haue increased your synnes at Galgal: ye brought your sacrifyces in the morninge, and your tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thanckesofferynge of leuen, ye promysed fre wyl offerynges, and proclamed them. Suche lust had ye, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I geuen you pouertie in all your cyties, and carnesse of bread in all your places, yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Whyle there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest I withheld the rayne from you: yea I rayned vpon one cyty, and not vpon another, one pece of grounde was moysture with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpō was drye. Wherfore two, yea thre cyties came vnto one to drynche water: but they were not satisfyed, yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde.

Pestylence haue I sente amonge you, as I dyd in Egipt: your yong men haue I slayne with the swerd, and caused your horses be taken captyue: I made the stynkynge sauoure of your tentes to come vp into your nostrels: Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorre, so that ye were as a brande plucte oute of the fyre. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Therfore thus wyl I handle the agayne, O Israel, yea, syns thus wyl I handle the. Make the redy then to mete thy God, O Israel. The .v. Chapter.

A complaynt of the ruyne of Israel.

A

Heare this worde, O ye house of Israel, & why I must make this wone for you: The virgin Israel shall fal, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shalbe cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: There an there dwelt a .M. in one cite there shalbe lefte scarce an hundreth therein: & where there dwelt an .C. there shal scarce ten be left for the house of Israel. Neuertheles, thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Galgal, & go not to Berseba, for Galgal shalbe carped awaye captyue, & Bethel shal come to naught. Seke the Lorde, that ye maye lyue, lest the house of Ioseph be brente with fyre, and consumed, & lest there be none to quenche Bethel.

B

Ye turne the lawe to wormwode, and caste downe ryghtuousnes vnto the grounde. The Lorde maketh the seuen starres and the Orions, he turneth the nyghte into daye, and of the daye he maketh darcknesse. He calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them oute vpō the playne grounde: the Lorde is his name: He rayseth destruccyon vpon the myghty people, and bringeth downe the stronge hold: but they owne hym ruyll wil, that reproueth them openly, and who so telleth the the playne truth they abhorre him. For so muche then as ye oppresse the poore, & robbe him of his best substaunce: therfore, where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasaunt vynyardes shal ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynck: and why? as for the multitude of your wickednesses and your stout synnes, I know them ryghte well. Enemyes are ye of ryghtuous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therfor the wyse muste nowe be dume to holde his tunge, so wicked a time is it.

Deut.xxviij.

The.vii. Chapter.

Of the captyuite of Israel and Juda.

A THe Lorde God shewed me such a vysyon: beholde, there stode
one that made grashoppers, euen when the corne was shotte forth, after the kinge had clypte hys shepe. Nowe when they vndertoke to eat vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde:
O Lorde God, be mercyfull, I beseche the: for who shulde els helpe vp Jacob, that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracyous therin, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shal not be. A-gayne the Lorde shewed me tyme vpon vpon: be- B holde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punish withal, and it deuoured the greate depe: yea it consumed a parte alreadye. Then sayd I Lord God, holde thyne hande: for who shulde els helpe vp Jacob, that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercyfull therein, and the Lord God sayde: well, it shall not be.

Moreouer, he shewed me thys vpon vpon: be-holde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered wall, and a masons *trowel in hys hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seyst thou?
I answered: a masons trowel. Then sayde the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl laye the trowel amõg
my people of Israel, and wyll no more ouer se them: but the hye hyschapels of Isaac must be layed waste, and the churches of Israell made desolate: and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wyl stand vp against it with the swerde. C Vpon this sent Amaziah the prest to Bethell iiij.Reg.x.b
vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, sayenge:
Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebell a-gaynst the, the lande can not awaye with his wordes. For Amos sayeth, Jeroboam shall dye with the swearde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyue out of their owne lande. And Amaziah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence (thou that canst se so well) & flee into the lande of Juda: get the there thy lyuynge, and propheryse there: and propheryse no more at Bethell, for it is the kynges chapell, and the kynges courte.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amaziah: D tes sonne: but a herper of catell. Now as J was breakinge downe molberies, and goyng after the catell, the Lorde take me, and sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and prophecye vnto my people of Jtrael. And therfore, heare thou now the word of the Lorde: Thou sayest: pu phecye not agaynst Jtrael, & speake nothing agaynst the house of Jsaac. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lord: Thy wyfe shalbe defyled in the cytye, thy sonnes and daughters shall be slayne with the swearde, & thy lande shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalt dye in an vncleane lande, & Jtrael shalbe dryuen out of hys owne countre.

The .viii. Chapter.

Against the rulers of Jtrael. The Lorde discouereth that he will fulfill the thynges why: he he dyd determyne agaynst Jtrael.

A He Lorde God shewed me this vysyon: and beholde, there was a maunde wyth sommer frute. And he sayde: Amos, what seest thou? J answered: a maunde wyth sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Jtrael, J will no more ouerse them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be turned in to sorowe, sayeth the Lorde God. Many dead bodyes shall lye in every place, and be caste forth secretelye. Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedy in the lande, saying: When wil the new moneth be gone, that we maye sell vytaile, & the Sabboth, that we maye haue scarcenesse of corne: to make the bushell lesse, and the syele greater? We shal set vp falle waighes that we maye gett the poore vnder vs wyth their money, and the nedy also for shues: yee let vs sell the chaffe for corne.

The Lorde hath swome agaynst the pryde of Jacob: surely wordes of theirs will J neuer forget. Shall not the lande tremble, and all they & dwell therin, mourne for thys? Shall not their destruccyon come vpon them lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them, as the floude of Egypte? At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde God) J shall cause the Sunne to go downe at none, and the land to be darcke in the cleare daye. Youre hye feastes will J turne to sorowe, and youre songes to mournynge: J will bringe sackcloth vpon al backes, and baldnes vpon every head: yee soch a mournynge will J sende them, as is made vpon an only begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lord God) & J shal sende an hunger in to the earth: not the hunger of bread, nor the thyrst of water: but an hunger to heare the worde of the Lorde: so that they shall go from the one sea to the other, yee from the north vnto the east, rumynge about to seke the worde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme, shall the fayre virgins and the ponge men pe rysh for thyrst, yee euen they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and saye: as truthe as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truthe as thy God lyueth at Berlaba. Thyse shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

The .ix. Chapter.

Threatnynges agaynst Jsrael. No man can escape the hande of God.

I Sawe the Lord standynge vpō the aulter, and he sayde: smyte the doore cheke, that the postes maye shake withall. For they couetousnesse shal fall vpon al their heades, and their posterite shalbe slayne wyth the swerde. They shall not flee awaye, there shall not one of them escape, nor be delyuered. Though they were buryed in the hell, my hande shall fetch them from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall J call them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmell, yet shall J seke them out, and bynge them from thence: Though they crepe downe fro my syght in to the depe of the sea, J shall commaunde the serpente, euen there to byte them. If they goo awaye before their enemyes in to captyuite, then shall J commaunde the swerde, there to slaye them.

Thus will J sett myne eyes vpon the, for their harme, & not for their wealth. For whē the Lorde God of hoostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwell therin, muste nedes mourne: And whē they destruccyon shall aryse as euery streame and runne ouer them, as the floude in Egipte. He that hath hys dwellynge in heauen, & groundeth hys tabernacle in the earth: He that calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: hys name is the Lorde. O ye chyldren of Jtrael, are ye not vnto me, euen as the Morians, sayeth the Lorde: haue not J brought Jtrael out of the land of Egypte, the Philystines fro Caphtor, and the Syrians from Kyr? Beholde, & eyes of the Lorde are vpō the realme that synneth, to rote it clene out of the earth: Neuertheles, J will not vtterly destroye the house of Jacob, sayeth the Lorde.

For lo thys J promyse: though J syfte the house of Jtrael amonge all nacyons (like as they vse to syfte in a syue) yet shall not the smallest grauell stone fall vpon the earth: But all the wicked doers of my people, that saye: Tush, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perish wyth the swerde. At that tyme will J buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallē downe and hedge vp hys gappes: and loke what is broken, J shall repayre it: Yee J shall buylde it agayne, as it was a fore tyme, that they maye possesse the remnaunt of Edom, yee & all soch people as call vpon my name wyth them sayeth the Lorde, whyche doeth these thynges.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that plowman shall ouer take the mower, & the treader of grappes, hym & soweth fede. The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shalbe fruytefull, and I will turne the captyuyte of my people of Israell: they shall repayre the waste cytyes, and haue them in possessyon: they shal plante vynyardes, and drinke the wine therof: they shal make gardens, & eniope the fruytes of them. And I wyll plante them vpon their owne grounde, so that I wyll neuer rote them out agayne from their lande which I haue geuen them sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Against Edom, & the trust that they had in riches.

A Exec.xxxv. & xxxvi. Amos.i.c.

Hys is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdy: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken vpon Edom: We haue hearde of ỹ Lord that there is an embassage sent amonge the Heathen: Vp, let vs aryse, and fyght agaynst them. Beholde, I wyll make the small amonge the Heathen, so ỹ thou shalt be vtterly despysed. Jere.xlix.c. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyft ỹ vp, thou that dwellest in the stronge holdes of stone, & haste made the an hye seate: Thou sayest in thyne hert: who shall cast me downe to the grounde? But though thou wertest vp as hye as the Aegle, and maydest thy nest aboue amonge the starres: yet wolde I plucke the B downe from thence. Yf the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takinge thy reste: shulde they not steale, tyll they had ynough? Yf the grape gatherers came vpon the, wolde they not leaue the some grapes? But how shall they ryfle Esau, and seke out hys treasures?

Amos.ix.a. Abacuc.ij.b.

Yee the men that were swoune vnto the, shall dryue the out of the borders of thyne owne lande. They that be now at one wyth C the, shall dyscerue the, & ouercome the: Euen they that eate thy bread, shall betraye the, or euer thou perceyue it. Shall not I at the same tyme destroye the wyse men of Edom, & those that haue vnderstandynge, from the mount of Esau? Thy gyaunts (O Theman) shalbe afrayed, for thou w the slaughter they shalbe all ouerthrowne vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shall come vpon the, for the malyce that thou shewedest to thy brother Jacob: yee for euermore shalt thou perysh, and that because of the tyme: when thou dydest set thy selfe agaynst hym, euen when the enemyes caryed awaye his hooste, and when the aleauntes came in at hys yates, and cast lottes vpon Jerusalem, and thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

Exap.xvii.d. Nume.xx.c.

Thou shalt nomore se the daye of thy brother, thou shalt nomore beholde the tyme of hys captiuite: thou shalt nomore reioyse ouer the chyldren of Juda, in the daye of their destruccyō, thou shalt tryumphe nomore in the tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt no more come in at the gates of my people, in ỹ tyme of their decaye: thou shalt no se their myserye in the daye of their fall. D

They of the South shall haue the mount of Esau in possessyon: and loke what lyeth vpon the grounde, that shall the Philistines haue: the playne feldes shall Ephraim & Samaria possesse: and the mountaynes of Galaad shal Ben Jamin haue. ¶ The ende of the boke of the prophecye of Abdy.

The Prologe of the Prophet Jonas.

W. T. vnto the Christen Reader.

AS the enuious Philistynes stopped the welles of Abraham and filled them vp with erth, to put the memorpall out of mynde, to the entent that they myght chalenge the grounde: euen so the fleshlye mynded pharisees stoppe vp the hauens of lyfe whiche are in the scripture, with the erth of their traditions, false symilytudes and leynge allegories, and that of lyke sele, to make the scripture theyr owne pot lesson & marchaundyse: and so shutte vp the kyngdome of heuen which is Gods worde neyther entreynge in them selues nor sofferynge them that wolde.

The scripture hath a hoope wythoute, and wyth in a koule, spirite and lyfe. It hath wythoute a barcke, a shell and as it were an hard bone for the fleshly mynded to gnaw vpon. And wythin it hath pith, cornell, mary, and all swetenes for Goddes electe whyche he hath chosen to geue them his spirite, and to write his lawe and the fayth of his sonne in their hertes.

The scripture conteyneth thre thynges in it. Fyrst the lawe to condemne all flesshe: secondarely the gospell that is to say, promises of mercye for all that repente and knowlege of their sinnes at the preachyng of the lawe and calleth in their hertes that the lawe is good and iuste: whych them selues to be traitors to lerne to kepe the lawe and to learne to beleue the mercye that is offered them: and thirdlye the figures and ymages of their traitors both what chaunces fortuned them, & also by what meanes their traitemasters taught them and made them perfecte, and how he vsed the true from the false.

When the pharisees come to the lawe, they put glosies to and make no more of it then of a worldelye lawe whyche is satisfyed with the outward worke and which a clarke maye also fulfyll. Whyle yet Gods lawe nor ceaseth to condemne a man bicause it is impossible in his herte and purpil he kepe it naturallye without compulsion and all other respecte, saue onelye of pure loue to God and his neyghbour, so he naturallye loueth when he is an hongred, without compulsion and all other respecte saue to stake his hongre onelye.

And whil they come to the gospell, ther they mingle their leuen and lape. God now recounteth vs no more to mercye, but of mercye receyueth vs to penaunce, that is to wyte, holy deedes that make them fytte to lyes and be their captaynes, both in soule and bodye. And yet they layne their Idole the Pope is mercyfull that if thou make a lytle mowe gyrdar in his Balams eyes, there is neyther penaunce nor purgatorye nay ample failing at all but to fle to heuen as quick as a thought and at the twynkellynge of an eye.

And the leuen sauces and gyftes of men which are contemned in the Bybie, they exalte as thynges no more perteynynge vnto them, then a take of Robyn hode, and as thinges they wotte not where to they serue, laue to layne fayre distaue and tayllynge allegories, to stablish their kyngdome with all. And one the chefest and fleshlyest thinge they haue, is to magnifie the sayntes aboue measure and aboue the truth, and wyth their goostes to make them greater then euer God made them. And if they finde any intercepte in lyenne alreyded vnto the sayntes, that they exalte wyth all dyligence, prouocedynge the glorye of the mercye of God and robbynge wretched sinners of all their comforte, and thinke therby to flatter the sayntes and to obtayne their fauour and to make specyall aduocates of them euen as a man wolde obtayne the fauoure of wrothe tyrannes: so they also layne the sayntes more cruel then euer was any heathen man and most wrekefull and denegate them the goostes layne their goddes as their hertes that tormente the soules in hell, if their ymages be not kyssed and their images beclad and sensed with a Pater noster (wel the prayer onely ouer hyppes be answered with one herres husbandmynges more at all and worshipped wyth a candell and the offeringe of ouer deuotion, in the place whyche they haue chosen to heare the supplicacions and make petycions of their clarkes vnto them.

But thou reader thinke of the lawe of God herein that it is all to gether spirituall, and so spirituall that it is neuer fulfilled vnto perfection, but if the flesh flowe out of repent hertes with as greate loue vnto the thy neyghboure, for no deseruynge of his, as though he be thine enemye, as Christ teacheth the o here by the, for no deseruynge of thine but euen vnto thine owne hyre. And in the meane tyme, whyle all ouer infirmyte and cyuile lode on Christ, still we be gouerned by vnto perfecte men in the full knowlege of Christ and full loue of Christe agayne vs of our neyghbours for his sake, after the ensample of his loue to vs, remembre that the fulfyllynge of the lawe in a full fayth in christ his bloud coupled wyth ouer gostlesse and fulwyllynge ouer lyues to learne to be better.

And of the Gospell as pertayneth vnto vs here in the scripture, beleue full that God will fulfyll all vnto the, o that vnto the perceyuynde. For, as the repentaunce of thine herte when thou turnest to him and taketh euell, euen of his goodnesse and fatherlye mercye vnto the, o man for the sorrowe thou hast wyth pacyence wyshes of thine owne hapening. So that a full fayth onely wythout respecte of all weathes, in the forgyuenesse both of the same which he vsede in time of ignorance wyth lyfe and doctrine to synne, and also of all the same which we haue by chaunce & of frayltye, after that we are come to knowlege and haue receyued the lawe out of ouer herte. And all bodes serue onely for to helpe ouer neyghbours and to cause ouer flesshe that we fall not to synne agayne, and to exercise ouer fayth in vertue, and not to make satisfaccion to God wardes for the synne that is one gone.

And all other stories of the Bybie, wythout exception, are the practisinges of the lawe and of the Gospell, and are true and tayrfull ensamples and sure ernestes that God will euen so deale wyth vs, as he wyth them, in all infirmities, in all temptacions and in all lyke colde and chaunces. Whereto ye se on the one syde, howe fatherly & tenderlye and wyth all compassion God entreateth his elette wherby I admyre the kinges as traitors, to learne to walke in the wayes of his lawes, & to kepe them of true. If they forgatte them selues at a tyme and went agayne wyth all mine eye. If they fell and hurte them selues, he healed them agayne wyth all compassion and tenderneese of hert. He hath brought great tribulacion and aduersite vpon his electe: but all of fatherlye loue onelye, to teache them and to make them to knowe them selues, and the tyme that there laps was, that they myght afterwarde finde his mercy. For his mercy wayted vpon them, to ryd them out agayne, assone as they were lerned and come to the knowlege of their owne herte: so that he neuer cast man a whyt lenge hope: for euer he dyd himself saue them onelye which had fryste cast the roche of his lawes from their mothes, wyth their disobeysaunce and malyce of herte. Whereby ensamples how comfortable are they for vs, when we be fallen into synne and God in come vpon vs wyth a chaunge, that we despeare not, but repente wyth full hope of mercye after the ensamples of mercye that are gone before. And therefore they were written for ouer learninge, as testifyeth Paul. Rom. 15. to comforte vs, that we myght the better put ouer hope and trust in God, when we se, how mercyfull he hath bene in tymes past vnto ouer weake brethren that are gone before, in all their vnrighteousnes, malice, temptacions, yee and horrible synnes into whyche they were ouer thrown fell.

And on the other side se & behold they that hardened their hertes and hated of malice and rebelde mercye that was offered them and hid no power to repente, perished at the latter ende wyth all confusion. Thanne mercyfullye. Whych ensamples are very good and necessary, to hope vs in stryfe and trouble in time of persecucion as thou mayest se by Paule. 1. Cor. 2. that the abyde in the feare of God, and was not lyfted vp fall to vnrulynes and so synne and prouoke God and hynge wrath vpon vs.

And thirdely se in the gentyls, howe as God is mercyfull and longe sufferynge, euen so they all by ernest preposicion and preachers, bringe the vnfruitfulnes of their vncouthe brethrene and their owne synnes & vnkyndnes wyth all gentylnes and longe sufferynge, vntyll they hymself agayne the holy ghost, maliciously perseuerynge the open and manyfest tryumphe therein the ensample of the Pope, wrayed in fleshly agayne God and to quench the truth of his holye spirite, as ouer their captayne and trompet blowere, to stir other a wrathe, and lyken vnto him selues, blasphemye, prowlynge, lustes, pompe, pryde, couetousnes and glotonye, wyth the bondage, thraldome, extremite, malyce, wretchednesse & vtter damnacion of his brethrene: & so vnto other cruell to be stronge to tyrde and cruell, that he wyll not suffre one vnlyke spoken against his false magicke wyth crueltye and vnsparynge ypocrisye to be vnderpynged, though all chryfyrdome shulde be set together by the eares, & shuld end he cared not how many hundred thousande there lyues.

Now that thou maiste reade Jonas frutefully & not as a poetis fable but as an obligacion betwene God and thy soule, to an erneft penye geuen vnto God, that he will helpe the in time of nede, if thou turne to hym & do the worde of God thy euerye fote and tyth of thy soule, this marke and note. First counte Jonas the frende of God & a man chosen of God to reuelue hys name vnto the worlde: but yet a ponge scholer, wilde and rude after the fasion of the apostles, whyle Christ was yet with them bodyly, which thoughe Christe taught them euer to be meke and to despise them selues yet all stroue amonge them selues who shulde be greatest. The sonnes of Zebede walke for the one on the right hande of Christ and the other on the lyft. They wolde prayse, that fyre myghte descende fro heaven, and consume the Samaritanes.

When Christe axed who sare men that I am, Peter a chosen, thou art the sonne of the liuynge God, as though Peter hadde bene as perfecte as an angell. But immediately after, when Christe preached vnto them of hys death and passion. Peter was angry and rebuked Christe and thoughte exactly that he had vsed not wolde what he sayde, as at another time, when Christ was in feruentye prayer in beholdynge the people, that he had no leyser to eate, they bemde vnto hym, supposynge that he hadde bene before vpon lefe. And one that caste oute deuelles in Christes name, they forbade, because he walked not on them so glorious as they yet.

And thoughe Christe taught all wayes to forgeue, yet Peter after longe goynge to Christ, axed whether men shulde forgeue vnto seuen, thynkynge that nye, tymes had bene to much. And at the laste supper Peter wolde haue dyed with Christe, but yet within fewe houres after, he denied hym, both cursynge & sweringe that he was not one of his disciples. And after the same maner, though he had so longe hard that no man myght ouerage hym selfe, but rather turne the other cheke to, yet in the garde against yet when Christ was in takynge, Peter axed whether it were lawfull to smite with the sworde, and taried none answere, but layed on valiantly. So that though when we come fyrste vnto the knowledge of the truethe, and the peace is made betwene God and vs, and we lowe hys lawes and beleue and trust in hym, as in our father and haue good herte vnto hym and be bolde & ready in the spirite, yet we are but children and ponge scholers wolde and fayne wolde haue lasser to growe in the spirite, in knowledge, loue and in the deades therof, as younge children maie haue tyme to growe in their bodyes.

And God our father and hole maister leadeth vs & teacheth vs accordynge vnto the capacite of our shamokes, and maketh vs to growe and wax perfecte, & proueth vs & tryeth vs as gold in the fyre of temptacions and tribulacions. As Moses writeth Deut. viii. Remember all the waye by whyche the Lorde thy God caried the thy.se yeares in the wyldernes, to humble the & to tempte the, to proue the, that it myght be knowen what were in thyne herte. He brought the into aduersite and made the an hongred, & then fed the with man which neyther thou nor yet thy fathers eare knewe of to teach that a man liueth not by breed onely, but by all that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. For the promises of God are ryght vnto all that chaunge not them, much more then to bread and beastes substaunce, as the iourney of the children of Israell out of Egypte into the lande promised them, manifesteth the notes & exaumples of that aboundantlye, as here all the rest of the bible also. Now be we vnspeakeable ingratitude & vnfaithfulnes to truste in the trueth of Gods promises, except we haue learned it in much tribulation, after that God hath deliuered hym out therof ageyne.

God therfore to teache Jonas and to shewe hym his office herte and to make hym perfect and to endure he also by two exaumples, first hym oute of the lande of Israel where he was a prophete to go amonge the heathen people and to the greatest & mightyest citie of the worlde then, called Niniue, to preach that wyth in xl. dayes they shulde all perishe for their synnes & that the cyte shulde be ouerthrowen. Whyche message the fre will of Jonas had as much power to do, as the weakest herted woman in the worlde hath power, if she were commaunded, to leppe into a tubbe of lyuynge snakes and adders: so happeneth it God hath commaunded Gods to haue ouerfreech her sonne Isaac, as he dyd Abraham, the moder haue beleued wyth hym yet he had done it, as though he were stronge enough, yet many an holye sowle coulde not haue founde in their herte, but wolde haue beleued and haue runne away from the prefence of the commaundement of God wyth Jonas if they had bene so stronge tempted.

For Jonas thought of two maner wise, I am here a prophete vnto Gods people the Israelites. Whyche though they haue Gods worde reuelued vnto them dayly, yet despise it and worshippe God vnder the lykenesse of calues and after all maner fashions fame after by a vayne waye, and therfore are of all nacyons the vnkynde and most worthy of punishment. And yet God for one of tenne that are amonge them and for hys names sake spareth them and forbeareth them. Howe tul shall God take to,vnkynde vengeaunce on so great a multitude of them to whome hys name was neuer preached to and therfore are not the tenth part so euil as they? If I shal therfore goo preache to them I shall I haue and shame my selfe and God shall and make them the more to despise God and sette the lesse by hym & to be the more cruell vnto hys people.

And vpon that imaginacion he fled from the face or presence of God: that is, oute of the coastes where God was worshipped in and from the obseruynge of Gods commaundement, and thought, I will get me another waye amonge the Heathen people and be no more a Prophete, but lyue at rest and out of all combraunce. Neuertheles that God of all mercye whych careth for hys elette ordeyneth and trayneth all thyngs good to them and compelleth them to beate them ageyn and spitteth them to make them alyue ageyne, and playeth wyth them as a father dothe sometyme wyth the ponge ignoraunce children) and tempteth them and proueth them to, make them se their owne perfect, purposed for Jonas, how it chaunged shuld be.

When Jonas was entred in to the shippe, he layed hym downe to slepe and to take hys rest: that is, hys conscience was called backe vnto the commaundements of God which sent hym to Niniue, and hys fleshlye worldome that vnbanded and counselled hym the contrarye & all the lafte purposed against the commaundement and tempted hym another waye, as a shippe caught hys dreames, and as portes layne the matter of daunger to be before the eyes affectible, wyll to auenge our brothers deth, we fought to fle our owne synne. Where vpon hys verye prayse and repentence of lafte he came to slepe, for to put the commaundement wythe to gaynse and breake hys conference, out of mynde, as the nature of all wicked is, when they haue finded a good, to seke all meanes wyth rest, stroke & pastyme, to driue the remembrance of peace out of their thoughtes as Adam dyd, to couer their nakednes wyth apons of popy holy workes. But God awoke hym out of his dreame, and set hys synnes before hys face.

For when that Lot god caughte Jonas, thē be sure that hys synnes came to remembraunce ageyne and that hys conscience raged no lesse them the wawes of the sea. And then he thoughte that he onelye, was a sinner & the Heathen that were in the shippe none in respecte of hym, and thought also, as verye as he was fled fro God, that as verye God had call hym ageyne for the light of the goode maketh the naturall christe not onelye to se and to knowledge hys sinne, but also to forget all hys fathers olde mercie & kyndnesse. And then he confessed hys synne openlye & had yet lesse perelle alone then that the other shuld haue perished with hym for his sake; and so of verye desperacion to haue lyued any lenger, bad call him into the sea ward, except they wolde be lothe also.

To speake of lottes, howe farforth they are lawfull is a lyghte question. Fyrste to vse them for the diuesynge of strife, as when partenars, their goodes an equally diuided as they can, take euery man hys part by lotte to auoyde all suspicion of disceyptfulnes. Secondly as the Appostles in the fyrste of the Actes, when they sought another to succede Judas the traytour & the persones were geuen vs them to breake strife and to facilite all parties, and call lotte whether shulde be admitted, desyrynge God to temper them and to take whome he knewe moste mete for vse, they wolde not whether to preferre, as happye coulde not all agree on eyther; so lawfull and in all the cases. But to abuse them vnto the temptyng of God and to compell hym ether wyth to other thyng, is where of we shulde to beware, when we haue no commaundement of hym so to do, as these heathen here dyd, though God turned it vnto hys glorye, can not be but euell.

The Heathen shippemen abouen at the lyght of the miracle, feared God, prayed to hym, offered sacrifice and bowed bowen. And I doute not, but that some of them at length all came ther by vnto the true knowledge & true worshippynge of God and were wonne to God in their soules. And thus God wrought so to turne mercifull in all hys wayes wroughte their lyues healthe out of their extremite of Jonas, euen of hys good will & purpose & loue where wyth he loued them before the worlde was made & not of chaunce, as it appeareth vnto the eyes of ygnorant.

And that Jonas was .iii. dayes & .iii. nyghtes in the belye of hys fyshe, we can not thereby gesse vnto the

Jewes

Jesus and subdues us vnto our will, that Christ shall therfore dye and be buryed and ryse agayn. But how vse the example of Jonas to proue the story of the worde. For he that beleueth the one can not doubt in the other as muche as the worke of God was no lesse mayghty in preseruynge Jonas alyue agaynst al naturall possybylytes & in restorynge him lyue out of his sepulchre, then in restorynge by Christ agayn out of his sepulchre. And the more betweene the go ynge and comynge of the resurrection therby, as Christ vpon earth bestowith the sensyble thynge. Matth.xii. wrong vnto the Jewes that came about him, and beheld a sygne as a wonder from heauen, to enspire vnto that he was Christus: euen so vseth he towardes vs now vnto which besyde the testymonie of Gods worde they be maried vnto God, and beleue in hym faythfully lyke a sygne, but there shal no sygne be gyuen them saue the sygne of the Prophete Jonas. For as Jonas was .iij. dayes and .iij. nyghtes in the bely of the whale, euen so shal the sonne of man be .iij. dayes and .iij. nyghtes in the hert of the earth. Which was a mortal wound, as we saye, and a sharpe chastenynge vnto the Jewes and as much to saye as thou art buryed Jewes lyke a Gyaour so shal he ryse agayn as Jonas was cyded out of the sepulchre of his belye and then sent vnto the Nynyuites to preache that they should repente, euen so shal I ryse agayne out of my sepulchre, a comfortable and preache repentaunce vnto you. Be therfore when ye se the sygne that ye repent or els ye shal surely perysh and not escape. For though the vnfaythfulnesse, which ye now vse in my worde be a lesse sin to youre fathers, ye shal not thinke but worthye ernest, when ye se so great a miracle and so greate power of God shed out vpon you. And as Christe came agayne after the resurrection in his spirite, and preached repentaunce vnto them, by the mouth of his apostles and disciples, and wyth miracles of the holy ghoste. And all that repented not, perished shortly after, and the rest caried away captyue into all quarters of the world for an exaumple, as ye se vnto this daye.

And in the same maner there the worde begonne, wonderfull repentaunce was offred & not receyued, there God toke cruel vengeaunce immediately as ye se in the floud of Noe, in the ouerwrowng of Sodome and Gomor, and al the countre about & as ye se of Egipte, & the Amorites, Canonites and afterwarde of the be ye Israelites, and then at the last of the Jewes to and of the Assyrens and Babylonians, & so throughout al the empyres of the worlde.

Sithens preached repentaunce vnto the olde Bryttaynes that inhabited Englande they repented not, and therfore God sent in their enemies vpon them on every syde, and destroyed them vp, & gaue the lande vnto other nations. And greate vengeaunce hath bene taken on that londe for euer sens that tyme.

Wherefore preached repentaunce vnto our fathers not longe sens: they repented not (as their hertes were inflamed, & they were vpholden with their olde Popysh trufles, vngodlynesse, wherewith they had made their soules glad) against the ernestnesse against al the workes of the holy Ghoste that brought vp, wrought them first wyth him, and wakened the later euer & euer more the begynnynge of an open frowne shulde be hope of repentaunce, but so before ye wote of all. For what followed ruby flame, slaye, cast and rayghte hang and set vp all. Amonge hanges arose, vnder which al ydolatrie all blood was shed vp and holde the common sworde, what in prysone and what wyth them comen sworde, in fightynge amonge them selues for the crowne, and the cruell and tormed deth, & the land brought halfe into a wylderneße in respecte of that it was before.

And now Christe to preache repentaunce, to ryse vp once agayne out of his sepulcher, in whiche the pope had buried him and kept him downe, wyth his prelates and polayes and al begynnynges of repentaunce were stryken and fetched, and wyth the sworde of al powers, which he had blessed wyth his fete marchaundise. And as I doubte not of the exaumples that are paste, so am I sure that great wrath will follow, except repentaunce turne it selfe agayne and ceasse it.

Where Jonas had ben in the Prisen hole a space & the rage of his enemyes was somwhat quyeted and slaughed and he come to him self agayne, and had reserued a lytle hope, the quakynes and pangues of feare coulde much more vse here, fall ouercome, he prayed, as he maketh mencion in the text strong: Jonas prayed here out of the Lords hel out of the bely of the fysh. Now the workes of that prayer are not here set. The prayer that here standeth in the text, is the prayer of myghty and thankesgeuynge, which he prayed a whole whyle after he was clered and past al perylles.

In the ende of which prayer he sayeth, I shal sacrifyce vnto the voyce of thankesgeuynge & pay that I haue vowed, that sauynge commeth of the Lorde. For hereby is comforte out of the hert, that of mercyes are not destroyed of our vnkyndnesse to the ende he confesse that gladnesse dwel. And so before that all the Jewes vnbelefe in their hertes, as wel as ours baptyme. Whereby Jonas wythe tarryinge many experience prouydeth to vs. For right swetnesse & sufferaunce of heathen, here wherin Jonas had bene offended so much before, more but litle and sensyble sprynges and not enterprete, that the hertes of their selues shulde be a sygnes vnto the people, to put the in remembraunce of their vnkynde sacrifyce of thankesgeuynge of their vnbelefe in God the onely sauyer. Wherfor sygnal vengeaunce fell at most almoste, they were abhominable and beastyly prouysyons & vnnaye superstycious ouer ceremonies and sacramentes are become nothyng at all that trust and beleue in the merytes of them & are not taught the sygnyfycacyon, to vnderstande Gods worde knowledge & the doctryne of God.

Where Jonas was cast vpon lande agayne, then his hert was fre, and bad go ouer to go whether God sent him and to do what God bade. For a newe consyderaunce and loue a ground. For he had bene at a narow strayt, as ye se in a streyte where he was ouergon of mortal vnkyndnesse and vnbelefe wythowte, wherfor scripture shewith the vnkyndnesse of God and his tenderer myght ouercome vnto the myght of God. For all these as we be blynde in hym, we can not see like and shall ouer other goodnes greatnes and glorye. And as soone as he tarryeth in the sprete, no can not but like and loue the place him and glorye of God vnder.

And as the .iij. dayes sojourne of Jonas, wherin he was so lengthe as to go rounde about it, as thoughe al the Jewes, I commyt vnto the determynacyon of other men. What I thynke that it was then the greatest sprte of the worlde.

And that Jonas went a dayes iourney in the cyte, I suppose he dyd it not in one especyal mynt sayre a calling pronouncynge here a lytell & there another a trouble for cause of the people the which els myght perish.

And when they are come vnto the repentaunce of the Nynyuites, shall then here crueltie, that belongeth vnto Gods iudgement to remembre mercye vnto al that truely repente & beleue in mercye. Wherby exaumple ouer louynge Christ alle callyth vs to the truth of the meanynge Jonas (signyfyeth Nynyuites shal ryse in iudgement wyth this nation and condemne them, for they repented at the preachynge of Jonas, and behold a greater then Jonas here standyng al vnto bill. At whose preachynge yet, though it shoue neuer so mayghty to paste the herte, and the all hys myracles vnto the hert hardes Jewes coulde not myght bring the harde Nynyuites repente at the bare preachig of Jonas reuealig them selues without ouermuche al al.

Wher for the Jewes hys ignorynge the sorrowful letter of God and their gracyes hys made a congregacyon ouer and Pharisey, and so hath set a bande or cruel wrage on Gods sone, to shame and harden the gloryous daughter of hys conceyuynge. Ye thus seme to beleue not to robbe Mahomet hath vnder a colour of longe prayenge, and to gather in the name of all wyues, and to saue the people wyth mercyable condemnations against al laue, to haue them euery out of their garden, and no frute at al.

The sworde sayeth and another vnto Turcy. For ye worldes gifte helpe from them at their ende, for a rotty pyle of offrynge, haue the gentyle of the holy ghoste vnto them an inheritaunce as it is mette to be all the spone chefe yelder they well take at home, whyche then hardnesse and malyce Gentyle shamefulnesse hys haue people, which then hath chefen to be the cruelle, for to begyn the feale wyth the sone of their owne birthright, and so be the Jewes for to saue the feale from the gargayne of the blood that earth gaynste them, stirth them wyth hatynge, sclaunge, to temple gaynge and robbyng or murthynge, or whatsoeuer els they gaynge not the Gentyle frendes counsaylour, gaue leaue or at any wyse that then shall among the lyue people.

It was greate cause for Christe to bidde the people on the Sabboth haue vnto the grayne of God vpo the other, but none at all for them to helpe their cattell vnto their owne profyte. It was lyuynge vnto vnto pay wyth a lytell or no an horsebrede vnto or out of an vnmaiden bridle, but to saue vnto of their goodnes wythe, that which come of harlotry, theft and extorcyon, stode no frende at all.

It hath sometyme chefen lyued to make many disputes. But to trouble them to proue God in his ordynances, had they no ende at all.

The lyre perfayte to behinde the ygnorace of holy churche and to feaste the people wyth the werke of God and terrible powers of hell, that no man shulde know the wicked herb or the perfayte vnyrthe. And the all straye and strange lyuynge vnto God for the goodnes of his holy breade wherin holy churche ys one and vnyuersall, that it was much greater synne to truely be them, thi to fal vnder the fall of God, What dangerous ruyn of God, and how terrible a mortall damnation thynke ye preached they to fall on the that had stolen to the holy thinges of God and pet layed Christ, that eight millions and fyue hundreth dyspensacions and vnspeakeable indygences were diuerse tymes vnder hope and chaunce of pilde of thole bicelled lechers, which to mighty maintened Irons patrimoure & had made it so prosperous & enuironed it & walled it about on euerye syde with the teares of God, that no man durst touch it.

It was greate boldnes to gaynsaye the sayinges of the prophetes & to condempne their owne fathers for sayenge of them, and yet were they them selues for blynde pete of their owne confusion, as redy as their fathers to lie whatsoeuer testified vnto them, the same truth which the prophetes testified vnto their fathers. So that Christ compareth all the eight wyfe mille of their holye patriarches vnto the outwarde purpose of a painted sepulchre full of deuth and all vncleannesse within. And lykewise to begylde & mans neyghbeares in their bargeninge are Mappes & com pasle spun in with cauteles of the lawe: wise then as it is now in the kingdome of the Pope. By the reason whereof they refluded the lawe of some part of their power, & obteyned al true repentaunce for how could they repent of that they could not se to be synne.

And on the other syde they had sette vp a spyritualnesse of holy workes, to clense their soules with al, as the Pope counterfeyteth be with holy oyle, holy breed, holy salt, holy candels, holysome ceremonies, and holysome blessinges, and with whatsoeuer holynes then will saue with the holynes of gods worde which onely spreadeth vnto the herte and worketh the soule his fruitfulnesse and vnfeynednesse of synne, and leadeth her by the way of repentaunce vnto the bloud of Christes blouge to washe it awaye through faith. By the reason of whose false rightwisnes they were disobedient vnto the rightwisnes of God, which is the forgeuenesse of synne in Christes bloud and coulde not beleue it. And so thorowe fleshly interpretynge the lawe and false imagined rightwisnesse, their herte were hardened and made as stone as clere as harde kernesse of fyre, that they could receyue neither repentaunce nor faith or any maydes of grace at all.

But the heathen Nynuites, though they were blinded with false & good, yet were in their [illegible] peparte vncorrupte and vnhardened, and therefore when the onely preaching of Jonas came vnto the knowledge of their synnes and confessed them & repented truely and turned euery man from his euil deedes and besta ued their soppose of herte and true repentaunce, which they dedes, which they had oute of faith and hope of forgeuenesse, their prayer they bodies with praier and fastinge and with taking al pleasures from the flesh: synnes, so God was angre for they wickednesse, euen so shall he forgeue them of his mercy yf they repented and beleue these wordes Jonas.

And in the same sorte of all, now shall yet a goodly exlampie of turninge, as it behoue certayne Jonas to syt for al the tyrannes the wicked deep. He was so fore displeased, because the Nynuites perished not, that he was weary of his life and wished after death for here sakes, that he hath lost the glory of his prophesyinge, in that his prophecie came not to passe. But God reuoked him with a lykenesse lapenges of gresse with shone hot for the lesse of a lyte which is spronge vp in one night, wherein thou beholdest how no labours of ours neyther was it thyne owne worcke. How much more then shuld great mine here the losse of so greate multitude of innocent are in Nynine, which are as myne handes worke, saye Jonas. I am God ouer all, and father as well vnto the Heathen as vnto the Jewes and merciefull to all and to sinne yet I wyll, neyther desire I to cruelly by any Prophete, but that I will forgeue if they repente and my mercy neyther on the other side, what so euer I promyse, will I fulfyll it, leaue for their sakes onely whiche truste in me & shewe them selues to hope my layers of very sone, as naturall children.

On this manner to read the Scripture is the right vse thereof & vnto the holy ghoste ruled it to be wrytten. That so that thou farder take out the lesse, thou God wyll haue thy to be interpretinge of spyritualnesse wherbouse glose or couerynge the blyndnesse of thyne owne face, so that thou take in thyne herte, how that it is damnable synne before God, not to loue thy neyghboure that is thyne enimye, as euerye as Christ loueth the, and that not to loue thy neyghboure in thyne herte, is to haue dempted all ready all synne against him. And therfore wepell that loue becommeth, thou maist knowledge vnfeynedly that there is synne in the hell bede thou hast. And it maist crucifye greue thine herte and thou maist swalow al the good bedes in Christes bloud yer they can be pure & an acceptable sacrifice vnto God, & maist desire God the father for his sake, to take thy bedes a worth and to pardon the imperfectnesse of them, and to geue the power to do them better and with more feruent loue.

In on the other syde thou maist serche diligently for the exemples of mercye which God hathe planted the agayne. Whiche stande in two points, that is to wete, the lowe spyritualye interpreted, how that all is damnable synne that is not vnfayned loue out of the grounde and bottom of the herte after the exlampie of Christes loue to vs because we be all equally created & formed of one God oure father, and mankynde bought & redemed with one bloude of oure sauioure Jesus Christe: to that the promises be go men vnto a repentynge soule that thurstith & longeth after them of the pure and fatherlye mercye of God thorowe oure fayethe onelye without all deserynge of our bodes or merites of oure workes, but for Christes sake alone, & for the merites & deserynges of his woshes, both & passions that he suffered altogether for vs & not for vs onely: which is promes I saye if they be written in vnscherte are the keye which to open all the Scripture vnto the, that no creature can lokke the out, and with which thou shalt go in & out, and finde pasture & foode euery where. And of these lessons be not wrytten in thine herte, then to all the Scripture shutte vp, as a cornell in the shale, so that thou mayste read it and somme of it, & neuer se all the Scripture of it and peraduenture to stryue be a profounde Sophister, & yet vnder stande not one iote therof.

And therefore that thou take the lesse and lerne which are comprised in the storie, for sure & vnbounded exlampies that God is wyll dealt with be vnto the worldes ende.

Herewyth Reader farewell and be commended vnto God, and vnto the grace of his spyrite. And pryde it not that thou hoppe not thyne eares vnto the callynge of God, and thou harde not thyne herte begyled with Antichrist interpretynge of the lawe and false imagined & spoyrituelle rightwisnes, & so the synnistre eye with the at the daye of iudgement & condemne the.

And secondarily yf thou fynde ought amysse, when thou lyst the lyfe in the glasse of Gods worde, thinke it compendious welcome, to amende the same betymes, in tyme, and warned by the exlampie of other men, rather then to tary vntyll thou be beten also.

And yf peraduenture it shal so chaunce, that the wylde lustes of the fleshe shal vyende the & carye the cleane awaye with them for a tyme: yet at the latter ende, when the God of all mercye shall haue compased the to on euery syde with temptacions, tribulation, aduersitye & combraunce, to bryng the home again vnto thyne owne herte, and to set the Jonas wherin thou wolded to fayne couer and put oute of mynde with detestacion of bolupteous pollymes, before the eyes of the conscience: then call the faythful exlampie of Jonas and all the storye vnto thy remembraunce, and with Jonas turne vnto thy father that smote the not to sle the away, but to lay a condyte, & o prouynge plaister vnto the pocke that lay vp and fret inwarde, to blame the disease out and to make it appeare, that thou mightest feale thy synnes & the daunger therof, and come and receyue the healynge playster of mercy.

And forget not that whatsoeuer exlampie of mercye God hath shewed sence the beginninge of the worlde, the same is pourtrayed, yf thou wylt in the manner turne agayne and repente it as they dyd. And wyth Jonas be a knower of thy synne and confesse it and knowledge it vnto thy father.

And as the lawe wyth-holdeth thy conscience, so in thyne herte and to many outwarde thinge, euen so lyke wyse thyne herte, the playster of mercye, the promises of forgeuenesse in oure sauioure Jesus Christe, accordynge vnto al the exlampies of mercye, that are gone before.

And wyth Jonas let them that wayte on vanitees and lyes God here and there and in euery tyght lyne in their herte go, & take thou the firmament of God in thyne herte. For in thyne herte is the worde of the lawe, & in thyne herte the word of faythe in the promyse of mercy in Jesus Christe. So that yf thou canst fele such a repentynge here & knowledge and sorye sone that Jesus is God ouer al synne, thou art safe.

And lykewise wha the rage of thy conscience is ceased & quyeted wyth full faythe in the promyses of mercye, then offer wyth Jonas the offerynge of praise & thankes geuynge, & pure the bowle of thy baptisme, that God onely saueth of his only mercye and goodnesse that is, before Antichrist & o preache confidence, that it is God onely that sauyeth, & God onely that hearkeneth after the cause of thy tribulation here thyne owne synne, and the cause of thy deliueraunce here the mercye of God.

And beware of the lust that saye that we haue power to cure the lust before the preachynge of the gospell, to receyue grace, to hope the lawe of congruite, as God to be mercyfull. And laye wyth Jhon in the fruit, that as the lawe was geuen by Moyses, euen so grace is fulfylled in vs geuen by Christ. And when they say our bodies with grete desyre houers sore them with Paule, saynge: that euerlastinge lyfe is the gyft of God through Jesus Christe our Lorde, & that we be made sonnes by layth. Johan. 1. and therfore heyres of God with Christ. Rom. viij. And that we receyue all of God through layth in stedfastly repentaunce, and that we do not vse wickednes vnto God, but ether vnto our selues, to slay the lust that remayneth in the flesh and to waxe perfect, ether vnto our neyghbours which do as much for vs agayne in other thinges. And when a man ascendeth in gyftes of grace, let him vnderstond that they be geuen him, as wel for his neighbours, as for him selfe: as thoughe all the membres be commytted vnto the partes, yet for his felowes sake with him, whiche geue the thankes vnto their Lorde and recompanye the partes agayne with other kyndes seruyce in their offices. And when they saye that Christe hath made no satisfaccion for the synne vnto vs after our baptyme: saye thou with the doctrine of Paul, that in our baptyme we receyue the mysteryes of Christes death (whereby repentaunce and layth of which two, baptyme is the sygne. And though when we fall of frayltie after ouer baptyme we receyue that sygne no more, yet we be renewed agayne through repentaunce and layth in Christes blood, which remayne, the signes of baptyme euer continued amonge vs in baptysinge ouer yonge children doth euer kepe in mynde and tell vs vnto agayne vnto our profession if we become aferde, & promyseth vs forgyuenesse. Ether can actuall synne be washed awaye with our workes, but with Christes bloude: neither can there be any other sacrifyce or satisfaccion vnto God ward for the sinne Christes bloud. For as muche as we can do no workes vnto God, but receyue onely of his mercye vnto ouer repentyng layth, through Jesus Christ our Lorde and onely sauer, vnto whom and vnto God ouer father thorowe him and vnto his holy Ghoste, that onely purgeth, sanctifieth & satisfieth vs in the innocent bloud of ouer redemption, be prayse for euer. Amen.

The boke of the Prophete Jonas.

The fyrst Chapter.

Of the flyght of Jonas when he was sente to preach. A tempest arysed, and caused him to be cast into the see where he was.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, saying: Arise, and get the to Ninive that greate cyte: & preache vnto them, how that their wickednes is come vp before me. And Jonas made him ready to flee vnto *Tharsis from the presence of the Lord, and gat him downe to Joppa: where he founde a shyppe ready for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payde his fare, & went aborde, that he myght go with the vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea: so that the shippe was in iooperdy of goinge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, & cryed euery man vnto his God: & the goodes that were in the shippe, they cast in to the sea, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layed him downe and slombred.

So the master of the shippe came to him and sayde vnto him: why slomberest thou? Vp, call vpō thy God: yt God (happely) will thynche vpon vs, that we perysshe not. And they sayde one to another: come, lett vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas. Josu. vij.c.

Then sayde they vnto him: tell vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacyon? whence comest thou? what countreman art thou, and of what nacyon? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen, which made both the sea & dry lande. Then were the men exceadingly afrayed, & sayde vnto him: why diddest thou so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lord, because he had told them) & sayde moreouer vnto him: What shal we do vnto the, that the sea maye ceasse from troubling vs? (for the sea wrought & was troublous) he answered them: Take me, and cast me in to the sea, so shall it set you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is come vpon you.

Neuertheles, the men assayed with rowynge, to bringe the shippe to land: but it wolde not be, because the sea wrought so, and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lord, & sayde: O Lord lett vs not perish for this mās death, neither laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge: for thou, O Lorde, hast done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, & cast him in to the sea, & the sea left ragyng. And the men feared the Lorde exceadingly, doyng sacrifices and makinge vowes vnto the Lorde.

The.ij.Chapter.

Jonas is swolowed of a whal. The prayer of Jonas.

BVt the Lorde prepared a greate fysshe, to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh, thre dayes & thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God, out of the fysshes belly, & sayde: In my trouble I called vnto the Lord, & he herde me: out of the belly of *hell I cryed, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the sea, and the floude compassed me aboute: yee all thy waues and roules of water went ouer me. Then I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght: but I wyll yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule, the depe laye aboute me, and the weedes were wrapte aboute myne head. I went downe to the botome of the hylles, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcyon. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpō the Lord: & my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanyties, will forsake his mercy. But I wyll do the sacrifyce with the voyce of thankesgyuynge, and wil paye that I haue vowed: for

The.ii.Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Nimue. The repentaunce of the kynge of Nimue.

A THen came the worde of ỹ Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayenge: vp, and get the to Nimue that great cytye, & preache vnto the the preachinge whyche I bade the. So Jonas arose, and wente to Nimue at the Lordes commaundement. Nimue was a greate cyte vnto God, namely, of three dayes iourney. Josu.i.a.

And Jonas wente to, and entred in to the cyte: euen a dayes iourney, & cryed, sayenge:

B There are yet .xl. dayes and the shall Nimue be ouerthrowen And the people of Nimue beleued God, and proclamed fastynge, and arayed them selues in* sack cloth, as well the greate as the small of them. And the tydinges came vnto the kynge of Nimue, whyche arose out of hys seate, and dyd hys apparell of, and put on sack cloth, & sate hym downe in asshes.

* The arayinge them in sack cloth was an outewarde signe of greate repentaunce, as in Genesi.f

C And it was cryed and commaunded in Nimue, by the auctoute of the king and hys lordes, sayenge: le that nether man or beast, oxe or shepe taste ought at all: and that they nether fede nor drinke water: but put on sack cloth both man and beast, and crye myghtely vnto God: yee se that euery man turne from hys euell waye, and from the wyckednesse, that he hath in hande. Mat.xii.d. Luc.xi.c.

D Who can tell? God maye turne, & repente & cease from hys fearce wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their workes, how they turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euell, whych he sayde he wolde do vnto them, and dyd it not. Esai.xxxviij

The.iii.Chapter.

Jonas is repeaued of God.

A THerfore Jonas was sore dyscõtent & angrye. And he prayed vnto the Lord, & sayde: O Lord was not thys my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countre? therfore I hasted rather to flee vn to Tharsis, for I know well ynough ỹ thou art a mercyfull God, full of compassiõ, long sufferynge, & of a great kyndnesse, & repentest whe thou shuldest take punishmẽt. And now O Lord, take my lyfe fro me (I beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lord: art thou so angrie? And Jonas gat hym out of the cytye, & sat downe on the east side therof: & there made hym a boothe, & sat vnder it in the shadow, tyll he myght se, what shulde chaunce vnto the cytie. iij.Reg.xix.a

B And the Lord God prepared a wylde vyne which sprang vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue hys head, to deliuer hym out of hys payne. And Jonas was exceadynge glad of the wylde vyne.

C But vpon the nexte morowe agaynst the spring of ỹ daye. The Lord ordened a worme which smote the wylde vyne, so that it wethered awaye. And when the Sunne was vp God prepared a feruent east wynde: and the Sunne bett ouer the head of Jonas, that he fainted agayne, and wished vnto hys soule, that he myght dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrie for ỹ wylde vyne? And he sayde: yee very angrie am I euẽ vnto the death. And the Lorde sayde: thou hast cõpassion vpon a wylde vyne, wherein thou bestowdest no labour, nor maydest it growe: whyche sprange vp in one myght & perished in another: And shulde not I then haue compassion vpon Nimue that greate cytye, wherin there are aboue an. ¶ The boke of the Prophet Micheas.

The fyrst Chapter.

Of the destruccyon of Samaria bycause of their Idolatrye.

Hys is the worde of ỹ Lord that came vnto Micheas the Morasthite, in the dayes of Jothan, Ahas & Jehezekiah kynges of Juda: which was shewed hym vpõ Samaria & Jerusalem. Heare all ye people, marcke thys well O earth, and all that therin is: For the Lorde God hym selfe be wytnesse amonge you, euen the Lord from hys holy temple. ffor why? beholde, the Lord shal go oute of his place, & come downe & treade vpon the hye thynges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder hym, and the valleyes shall cleue asunder, lyke as wax consumeth at the fyre, & as the waters runne downwarde. Against the tyranny of Princes, & false prophetes.

H Eare, O ye heades of the house of Jacob, & prelates of & house of Israel: Shulde not ye know what were lawfull and ryght?
Deut.xvij.d Jerme.v.A. Psal.xxxvj. Ye hate the good, and loue the euell: ye plucke of menne shynnes, and the flesh from their bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, and slap of their shynne: ye breake their bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were in to a caudron, and as flesh into a pot.

And as concernynge the prophetes that disceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them: When they haue enye thynge to byte vpon, then they preach that all shalbe well: but yf a man put not some thynge in to their mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym.

Therfore youre vysyon shalbe turned to night, & youre prophecyenge to darcknesse.

Then shall the vysyon seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yee they shalbe sayne, all the pacte of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. As for me, I am full of strength, and of the spirite of the Lorde, full of iudment and boldnesse to shewe the house of Jacob their wyckednesse, and the house of Israell their synne.

The.vi.Chapter.

An exhortacyon to heare the iudgment against Israell beynge vnkynde. What maner of Sacrifyces do please God.

HEarken now what the Lorde A sayeth: Vp reproue the mountaynes, and let the hylles heare thy voyce. O heare the punish- Esai.xviii.a. ment of the Lord, ye mountaynes, ỹ ye myghtie foundacions of the earth: for for the Lorde wyll reprouue hys people, and reason with Israel: O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wherin haue I hurte the? geue me answere. Because I brought the frō the lande of Egypte, and delyuered the out of the house of bondage? Because I made Moses, Aaron and Miriam to lede the? Remember (O my people) what Balach ꝑ kyng of Moab had imagyned agaynst the, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue hym, from Sethim vnto Galgal, that ye maye know the louyng kyndnesses of the Lorde.

Exod.xiiij. Num.xxij.a. Num.xxiij. xxiiij.xxv.

What acceptable thynge shall I offre vnto the Lord? shall I bowe my knee to the hye God? Shall I come before hym wyth burnt offrynges, and wyth calues of a yeare olde? Hath the Lorde a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I geue my fyrstborne for myne offences, and the fruyte of my body for the synne of my soule? I wyll shewe the, O man, what is good, & what the Lorde requyreth of the: Namely, to do right, to haue pleasure in louynge kyndnesse, to be lowlye, and to walcke wyth thy God: that thou mayest be called a cyte of the Lorde, & that thy name maye be ryghteousnesse. Heare (O ye tribes) who wolde els geue you soch warnynge? Shulde I not be displeased, for ꝑ vnrighteous good in the houses of the wycked, and because the measure hys myspshed? Or shulde I iustifie the false balaunces and the bagge of disceytfull weyghtes, amonge those that be full of ryches vnryghteously gotten: where the cyte synneth dayle wyth falshede, speake lies, & haue dysceytfull tunges in their mouthes?

Exod.xx.g. Deut.xxv.c Prou.xx.b. Lyc.xxv.b.

Therfore I wyll take in hande to punysh the, and to make the desolate, because of thy synnes: Thou shalt eate, & not haue ynough: yee thou shalt bringe thy selfe downe. Thou shalt fle, but not escape: and those that thou woldest saue, wyll I delyuer to the swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to annoynte thy selfe wythall: thou shalt tread out swete must, but shalt drynche no wyne. Ye kepe the ordynaunces of Amri, & all the customes of ꝑ house of Ahabye folowe their pleasures, therfore wyll I make the waste, & cause thy inhabyters to be abhorred, O my people: and thus shalt thou beare thyne owne shame.

¶ The.vij.Chapter.

A complaynt of the yuell maner of the ryghteous: Agaynst the trust ought we not to holde vych ouer greate tryndes.

WO is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleanynge in the harueste. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I fayne (with all my herte) haue of the best fruyte. There is not a godlye man vpon earth, there is not one ryghteous amonge men. They.a* labour al to shed bloud, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye: they do well, when they do euil. As the prince wyll, so sayeth the iudge: that he maye do him a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what his herte desyreth: & the iudgers alowe hym. The best of the is but as a thistle, & the most ryghteous of the is but as a breer in the hedge. But when the day of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalt be vysyted: then shall they be wasted awaye. Let no man beleue hys frende, nor put his confidēce in a prynce. Kepe the porte of thy mouthe, frō her that sleyth in thy bosome: for the sonne shall put hys father to dishonoure, the doughter shall ryse agaynst her mother, the doughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe: & a mās foes shalbe euen they of hys owne household.

Neuertheles I wyll loke vp vnto the Lorde, I wyll paciently abyde God my sauioure: my God shall heare me. O thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fal, for I shal get vp agayne: and thoughe I sye in my *.b. darcheneslle, yet the Lorde is my lyght. I wyll beare the punyshment of the Lorde (for why? I haue offended hym) tyll he sit in iudgement vpon my cause, and se that I haue ryght. He wyll bringe me forth to the lyght, & I shall se hys ryghteousnesse.

She that is myne enemy shall loke vpon it, & be cōfounded, which now sayth. Where is thy Lorde God? Myne eyes shall beholde her: when she shalbe trode downe, as the clay in the stretes. The tyme will come, that thy gappes shall be made vp, & the lawe shall go abroade: & at ꝑ tyme shal they come vnto the, frō Assur vnto the stronge cytyes, & from the stronge cytyes vnto the ryuer: frō the one sea to the other, frō the one mountaine to ꝑ other.

Esa.xxxvij.a. Amos.v.c.

Not withstandynge the land must be wasted, because of them that dwell therin, and for the frutes of their owne imaginacyons. Therfore fede thy people wyth thy .c. rodde, the flocke of thyne heritage which dwell desolate in the woodde, that they maye be fedde vpon the mountayne of Charmell, Basan & Galaad as afore tyme. Marueloꝰ thinges wyll I shewe them, lyke as when they came oute of Egypte. Then shall the heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power, so that they shal d. laye their hande vpon their mouthe, and stoppe their eares. They.e. shal lycke the dust lyke a serpente, & as the wormes of the earthe that trebble in their holes. They shalbe afrayd of the Lorde oure God, and they shall feare the.

Where is there such a God as thou? that pardonest wickednes, and forgyuest the offences of the remnaunte of thyne heritage? He kepeth not hys wrath for euer. And why? his delyte is to haue compassyon: he shal turne agayne, and be mercyfull to vs: he shall put downe oure wyckednesses, and caste all oure synnes into the bottome of the sea. Thou shalt kepe thy trouthe wyth Jacob, and thy mercye for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sworne vnto oure fathers longe agoo.

¶ The ende of the Prophecye of Sophony.

¶ The boke of the Prophet Aggeus.

¶ The first Chapter.

The tyme of the Prophesye of Aggeus. An exhortacyon to buylde the temple againe.

IN the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, in the vi. moneth, the first day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde (by the Prophete Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel ỹ sonne of Salathiel the prince of Juda, and to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, sayenge: Thus speaketh the Lord of hoostes, and sayeth: This people doth saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lord by the Prophete Aggeus, and sayde: Ye youre selues can finde tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shall thys house lye waste? Consyder nowe youre owne wayes in youre hertes (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) ye sowe muche, but ye bring litle in: ye eate, but ye have not ynough: ye drinke, but ye are not satisfied, ye decke youre selues, but ye are not warme: and he that earneth any wage, putteth it in a broken purse.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: Consyder youre owne wayes in youre hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetche wood, and buylde vp the house, that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honoure, sayeth the Lorde. Ye loked for much, and lo, it is come to litle: ỹ though ye bring it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes? Euen because that my house lyeth so waste, and ye renne euery man vnto hys owne house. Wherfore the heauen is forbidden to geue you anye dewe, and the earthe is forbidden to geue you encrease. I have called for a drouthe, both vpon the lande ỹ vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon wyne, ỹ oyle, vpon euery thynge that the grounde bringeth forth, vpon men and vpon catell, yea and vpon all handy labour.

Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye preest with the remnaunte of the people, heard the voyce of the Lorde their God, and ỹ wordes of the Prophete Aggeus (like as ỹ Lorde their God hath sent him) the people dyd feare the Lorde. Then Aggeus the Lordes angell sayde in the Lordes message vnto the people: I am with you, sayeth the Lorde. So ỹ Lorde awaked vp the spirite of Zorobabel the prince of Juda, and the spirite of Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, and the spirite of the remnaunte of all the people: that they came, and laboured, in the house of the Lorde of hoostes their God.

The notes.

a. To wake vp the spirite of a man is, when God by hys spirite comforteth and boldeneth the herte to take vpon him without feare any acte or deade of greate importaunce.

The.ij. Chapter.

He sheweth that the goodnesse of the Lorde shall exceede the hyre, because of the buylding of Christ.

UPon the.xxiiij. daye of the syxte moneth, in the seconde yeare of kyng Darius, the.xxi. daye of the seuenthe moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vp the prophete Aggeus, saying: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, and to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, ỹ to the residue of the people, and saye: Who is lefte amonge you, that sawe this house in her fyrste beautye? But what thinke ye nowe by it? Is it not in your eyes, euen as though it were nothynge? Neuertheles be of good chere O Zorobabel (sayeth the Lorde) be of good comforte, O Jesua thou sonne of Josedech hye preest: take good hertes vnto you also, all ye people of the lande, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes and do accordynge to the worde (for I am with you, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) lyke as I agreed with you, when ye came out of ỹ lande of Egypte: and my spirite shalbe among you, feare ye not.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: yet ones more wyll I shake heauen and earthe, the sea and the drye lande: yea, I will moue all heathen, ỹ the comforte of all heathen shall come, and so wyll I fyll this house with honoure, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. The syluer is myne, and the gold is myne, sayth the Lord of hoostes. Thus the glorye of the last house shalbe greater then the fyrste, sayeth ỹ Lorde of hoostes: and in this place will I geue peace, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

The.xxiiij. daye of the.xi. moneth in the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Aggeus, saynge: This sayeth the Lorde GOD of hoostes: Aske the preestes concernynge the lawe, ỹ saye: yf one beare holye fleshe in his cote lappe, and with his lappe do touche the bread, pottage, wyne, oyle, or anye other meate: shall he be holye also? The preestes answered ỹ sayde: No. Then sayde Aggeus: Nowe yf one being defyled with a dead carcase, touche ange of these: shall it also be vncleane. The Prestes gaue answere, & sayd: yea, it shalbe vncleane. Then Aggeus answered, and sayde: even so is this people & this nacion before me, sayth the Lorde: & so are all the workes of their handes, yea, and all that they offer, is vncleane.

And now (I praye you) consyder frō this day forthe, and howe it hath gone with you afore: or euer there was layed one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde, that when ye came to a come heape of. xx. bushels, there were scarce ten: and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to powre out. L. potters of wyne, there were scarce. xx. For I smote you with heate, blastynge and hayle stones in all the labours of your handes: yet was there none of you, that wolde turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Consyder then from this day forth and afore, namely, from the. xxiiij. daye of the xi. moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layed: marck it wel is not the sede yet in the barne? haue not the vines, the figgetrees, the pomgranates, & olive trees bene yet vnfrutefull? but from this day forth, I shall make them to prospere.

Moreouer the. xxiiij. daye of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and saye: I will shake bothe heauen and earthe, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kyngedomes, yea, & destroye the myghtye kyngedome of the heathen. I will ouerthrow the charettes, and those that sit vpon them, so that both horse and man shall fall downe, euery man thorowe his neyghbours sweorde.

And as for the, O Zorobabel (sayeth the Lord of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaunt: I wil take the (sayeth the Lord) at the same tyme, and make the as a seale, for I haue chose the, sayth the Lord of hostes.

By the iiii. charettes, he vnderstandeth the prosperite of foure kyngedomes.

MOreouer, I turned me, lyfte vpe vp myne eyes, and loked: and be holde there came .iiii. charettes oute from betwixte two hylles, A whiche hylles were of braſſe. In the fyrste charet were reade hoorse: in the secōd charet were blacke hoorse, in the thyrde charette were whyte hoorse, in the fourthe charet were hoorses of dyuerse colours and stronge. Then spake I, and sayde vnto the angel that talked with me: O Lorde, what are these? The Aungell answered, and sayde vnto me: These are the .iiii. wyndes of the heauen, whiche be come forthe to stand before the ruler of all the earth. B That with the blacke hoorse wente into the land of the northe, & the whyte followed them, and the spotted hoorses wente forthe towarde the southe. These hoorses were very stronge, and wente oute, and sought to go, and take theyr iourney ouer the whole earthe. And he sayde: get you hence, & go thorowe the worlde. So they wente thowowe oute the worlde. Then cryed he vpō me, and spake vnto me, saying: beholde, these that go towarde the north, shall stylle my wrath in the northe countrey.

Zacha.i.b Apoca.vi.a

Jere.iii.b

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Take of the prysoners that are come C from Babylon, namely, Heldai, Tobiah and Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and go into the house of Josiah the sonne of Sophonye. Then take golde and syluer, and make crounes therof, and set them vpon the heade of Jesua the sonne of Josedech, the hye preeste, and speake vnto hym: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde the man whose name is the braunche: and he that shall sprynge vp after hym, shall buylde vp the temple of the Lorde, yea euen he shall buylde vp the temple of the Lord. He shall beare the prayse, he shal syt vpon the Lordes throne, and haue the dominacion.

Zacha.vi.b Psal.xxxvi.a

A Preest shall he be also vpon hys throne, & D a peaceable counsell shalbe betwixte them both. And the crounes shalbe in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaia, and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And suche as be farre of, shal come and buylde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe, howe that the Lorde of hostes hath hath sent me vnto you. And this shal come to passe. If ye will herken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

Psalm.xcv.a Hebr.i.b.iii.b viii.d.x.b

The .vij. Chapter.

The admonicion of fastynge wythoute mercy. The destruccion of Jherusalem, and the captyuyte of the people.

A IT happened also in the fourthe yeare of kinge Darius, that the word of the lord came vnto Zacharye in the fourth daye of the ix. monthe, whiche is called *Callew: what tyme as Sarazar & Regome lech & the men yͭ were with thē, sent vnto Bethel for to pray before the lorde: & yͭ they shoulde saye vnto the priestes, which were in the house of the Lord of hostes, & to ye prophetes: should I wepe in the fyfte moneth, and abstayne, as I haue done now certain yeares? The came the word of the Lorde of hostes vnto me, saying: Speake vnto all the people of the land, & to the priestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourneth in yͤ .v. & .vij. moneth (now this lxx. yeares) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate & drincke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes which the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was yet inhabited & welthy, she and the cities round about her: when there dwelt men, both toward the south and in the playne countreye?

C And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharye, saying: Thus saieth the Lord of Hostes: Execute true iudgement: shew mercy & louinge kyndnesse, euery man to his brother. Do the widdow, the fatherlesse, the straūger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagen euil against his brother in his hert. Neuertheles they would not take hede, but turned their backes, & stopped their eares, that they should not heare: yea, they made their hertes as an Adamāt stone, least they should hear the law & wordes, whiche the Lorde of hostes sent in his holy spirite by the Prophetes afore tyme.

D Wherfore the Lorde of hostes was verye wroth at them. And thus it is come to passe, that like as he spake, & they would not heare: euen so they cryed, and I would not heare, (saieth the Lord of hostes) but scattered them among all Gētiles, whō they knew not: Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauayled no man in it, neyther to, nor fro, for that pleasaunt lande was vtterly layed waste.

The .viij. Chapter.

Of the tokens of the people vnto Jerusalem, and of the mercye of God towarde them. Of good workes. The coldnesse of the Gentyles

AGain the worde of the lord came vnto me saying: Thus saieth the Lord of hostes: I was in a great grefe ouer Sion, yea I haue bene very grieuously ouer her in a great displeasure: thus + saieth the Lord of hostes: I wil turne me again vnto Sion & wil dwell in the middest of Jerusalem: so that Jerusalem shalbe called a faythfull, and the hyll of the Lorde of hostes, yea an holy hyll.

Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes: There shal yet olde men & women dwell again in the stretes of Jerusalem: yea, & such as go with staues in their handes for yeres age. The stretes of the cite also shalbe ful of ponge boyes & damoselles, playinge vpon the stretes. B

Thus saieth the Lord of Hostes: yf the residue of this people thinche it to be impossible in theyr dayes, should it therfore be impossible in my sight, saieth the Lord of hostes: Thus saieth the Lord of hostes: Behold, I wil deliuer my people fro the land of the east & west, and will bringe them again, that they maye dwell at Jerusalem. They shalbe my people and I wilbe their God, in truth & righteousnesse. Thus saieth the lord of hostes: let your handes be stronge, yea that ye heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes which be in the dayes, that the foundation is layed vpon the Lorde of hostes house, that the temple may be buylded. For why? before these dayes neyther men nor cattell could wynne anye thinge, neyther might ye man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let euery man go against his neyghbour.

Neuertheles I wil now entreate the residue of this people no more as in tymes, saieth the Lord of Hostes, but they shalbe a seed of peace. The vyne yarde shal geue her fruite, the grounde shal geue her increase, and the heauens shall geue their dew: & I shall cause the remnaunt of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that like as ye were a curse amonge the Heathen C (O ye house of Juda & ye house of Israel) Euē so wil I deliuer you, yͤ ye shalbe a blessing: feare not, but let your handes be stronge.

For thus saieth the Lord of Hostes: Like as I deuised to punishe you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, saieth the Lord of hostes, and spared not. Euē so I determed now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Juda, and Jerusalem, therfore feare ye not. Now these thinges that ye shall do, are these: Speake euery man the truth vnto his neyghbour, execute iudgement truelye, & peaceably within your portes, none of you ymagin euil in his hert against his neyghbour, & loue no false othes: for all these are the thinges that I hate, saieth the Lord. And yͤ word of the lord of hostes, came vnto me saying: Thus saieth the lord of Hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fyfth, the fast of the seuenthe, & the faste of yͤ tenth, shalbe ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous dayes vnto the house of Juda: Only loue the truth and peace. D

Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes: There shal yet come people, and the inhabiters of many cities: and they that dwell in one cite, shal go to another saying: Up, let vs go, and pray before the Lord, let vs seke the Lorde of Hostes. I will go with you: yea much people and mighty heathen shall come and seke the Lorde of Hostes at Jerusalē, & to pray before the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: In that tyme shall ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gentiles) take one Jew by the hemme of his garment, and saye: we will go with you, for we have heard, that God is amonge you.

The .xi. Chapter.

The conversion of the Gentiles. The commynge of Christ, synnage on an Asse.

THe worde of the Lorde shalbe prepared at Adrach, & Damascus shalbe his offeringe: for the eyes of all men and of the tribes of Israel shal looke vp vnto ỹ lord. The borders of Hemath shalbe hard therby, Tyrus also and Sidon, for they are verye wise. Tyrus shal make her self strong, heape vp syluer as the sande, & golde as the clay of the stretes. Beholde, the lord shal take her in, & have her in possession: he shall smyte downe her power into the sea, & she shalbe consumed with fire. Then shall Ascalon se, & be afraid. Gaza shalbe very sore, so that Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusyon. For the kynge of Gaza shal perysshe, and at Ascalon shal no man dwel.

Straungers shal dwel at Asdod, & as for the pryde of the Philistines, I shal roote out. a. That is, their false prestes and their abhominacyons from among their teeth. Thus they shalbe left for our God, yea were wonte to rule, they shalbe as a prince in Juda, & Accaron like as Jebusyte. So will I cõpasse my house rounde about to my men of warre goynge to & fro: that no oppressoure come vpon the any more. For that have I sene now with myne eyes.

Reioyce thou greatly, O doughter Syon, be glad, O doughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kinge commeth vnto the, euen the righteous & Saviour: lowly and simple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, & vpon the foale of an asse. I will rote out the charrettes from Ephraim, & the horse from Jerusalem, the battel bowes shalbe destroyed. He shall geue the doctryne of peace vnto the heathen, & his dominiõ shal be from the one syde to the other, and frõ the flouddes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also through thy bloude of thy couenaunt, shalte let thy prysoners out of the pyt, wherin is no water. Turne you nowe to the strong holde, ye that be in prison, & long sore to be delyuered: And this daye I bringe the word, that I will rewarde the double again. For Juda have I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim have I spilled. Thy sonnes (O Syon) will I rayse vp against the Grekes, & make the as a gyauntes swearde: the Lorde God shalbe seene above them, and his darte shal go forth as the lightninge. The Lorde God shall blowe the trompet, and shall come forth as a storme out of the south.

The Lorde of hostes shall defende them, they shall consume and deuoure, & subdue the with slyng stones. They shal drynke & rage as it were thorow wyne. They shalbe fylled like the basens, & as the hornes of the aulter. The Lorde their God shall delyuer them in the day, as the flock of his people: for the stones of his Sanctuary shalbe set vp in his lãd. O how prosperous & goodlye a thinge shall that be? The corne shall make the yong men thearefull, and the newe wyne the maydens.

The .x. Chapter.

The people is moued to require the bountye of trouth of the Lorde. The Lorde promyseth to vysite & comforte the house of Israel.

RAyne the Lord then by tymes to geue thou the latter rayne, so shall the Lorde make cloudes, & geue you raine ynough, for all the intreate of the fielde: for rayne is the answere of Jdols. The sothsayers se lyes, & tel but vayn dreames: the comforthe that they geue, is nothinge worth. Therfore go they astraye lyke a flocke of sheepe, & are troubled, because they have no shepherde. Myne wrothfull displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, & I will vysite the goates. For the Lord of hostes wil graciously vysite his flocke, the house of Juda, and hold them as a goodlye fayre horse in the battell. Out of Juda shall come the helmet, the nayle, the battelbowe, and all the princes together. They shalbe as the gyauntes, whiche in the batell tread downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shal fight, for the Lorde shalbe with them, so that the horsemẽ shalbe confounded. I will cõforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I wil turne thẽ also, for I pitie them: & they shalbe lyke as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am their God, and wil hear them. Ephraim shalbe as a gyaunt, and their hert shalbe therefull as thorow wine: yea, their children shall se it, & be glad, & their herte shall reioyce in the Lord. I wil blow for them & gather thẽ together, for I wil redeme thẽ. They shal increase as they increased afore. I will sow thẽ amõg the people, that they may thinche vpon me in farre countreyes, they shall lyue w their children, & turne again. I wil bring thẽ again also from the lãd of Egipt, & gather thẽ out of Assiria. I wil catie thẽ into the land of Galaad & to Libanus, & they shall wante nothing. He shall go vpon the sea of trouble, & smyte the sea waues: so ỹ al the depe flouds shalbe dried vp. The proud boastinge of Assur shalbe cast down, & the scepter of Egipte shalbe take away. I will cõforte thẽ in the Lord, that they maye walcke in his name, sayeth the Lorde.

The .xi. Chapter.

The destruccyon of the tẽple. The cure of the faithfull is committed to Christ, by the father. A grevous poison against Jerusalem and Juda.

OPen thy doores, O Libanus, that the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye fyre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea, all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Basan) for the mightye strong wood is cut downe

Here,

a. That is, pryde of the Philistines.

Men may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Men may heare the lyons whelpes roare, for the pride of Jordan is wasted away.

Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shalbe slaine of those that possesse the: yet they take it for no sinne, but they that sell the, say: The Lorde be thanked, I am riche: yea, their owne shepherdes spare the not. Therfore will I nomore spare those that dwell in the land (sayeth the Lord)
but lo, I wil delyuer the people, everye man into his neighbours hãd, and into the hande
B of his king, that they may smyte the lande, & I out of their handes wil not I delyuer them.

I my self fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) & take vnto me two staues: the one I called louinge mekenesse, the other I called wo, & so I kepte the shepe. Three shep-Mat.xxiij.c. herdes destroyeth I in one moneth, for I might not away with the, neither had they any delyte in me. Then sayd I: I wil fede you no more,
the thing that dieth, let it dye: & that wil perishe, let it perishe, & let the remnaunt eate, every one the flesshe of his neyghboure. I take also my louing mekenesse staf, & brake it, that I might disanul the couenaunt, which I made with al people. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore simple shepe that had a re-C specte vnto me, knewe thereby, that it was the word of the lord. And I sayde vnto the: yf ye thinche it good, bring hither my pipe: yf no, then leaue. So they waged doune .xxx. syluer pens, the value that I was pryced at. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly pryce for me to be valued at of them) & I take the .xxx. siluer pens, & cast them to the potter in the house of the Lorde. Then brake
I my other staf also (namely wo) that I might D lowse the brotherhead betwixte Juda and Israel. And the Lord said vnto me: Take to the also the staf of a foolish shepherde: for lo, I wil rayse vp a shepherde in the lande, which shall not seke after the thinges that be lost, nor care for such as go astray: he shall not heale the wounded, he shall not norishe the thing that is whole: but he shall eate the flesshe of suche
as be fat, and teare their clawes in peces.

O Idole shepherd, that leaueth the flocke.
The swerde shall come vpon his arme & vpõ his right eye. His arme shalbe cleane dryed vp, and his right eye shalbe sore blinded.

The.xij. Chapter.

Of the destruccion and buildynge agayne of Jerusalem.

A Mat.xxiiij. Marc.xiij. Luce.xxj.

The heauy burthen which the lord hath deuised for Israel.
Thus saieth the lord, which spred the heauens abroade, layde the foundacion of the earth, and geueth man the breath of lyfe: Beholde I will make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto al the people that are round about her: yea, Juda him self also shalbe in the sege agaynste Jerusalem. At the same tyme wil I make Jerusalem, an heauye stone for al people, so that al such as lift it vp shalbe tourne & rente, & all the people of the earth shalbe gathered together against it. B

In that day, sayeth the Lorde, I will make all hostes astarted, & those that ryde vpon the to be out of their wittes. I wyll open myne eyes vpon the house of Juda, & smyte all the hostes of the people with blindnesse. And the princes of Juda shal say in their hertes. The inhabiters of Jerusalẽ shal gyue me consola-cion in the Lord of hostes their God. In that tyme will I make the princes of Juda lyke an hote burninge ouen with wood, & lyke a tor-fet of fyre among the sheaues, so that they shal consume al the people rounde about the, both Abdy.i.b.
vpon the right hand and the left. Jerusalem Amos.i.A.

same place, where Jerusalem standeth.

The Lorde shal preserue the tentes of Juda like as afore time: so y the glorye of the house C of Dauid, & the glory of the citesins of Jerusa-lẽ, shalbe but litle regarded, in cõparison of y glory of Juda. In that day shal the Lord defende the citesins of Jerusalẽ: so that the weakest then amonge them shalbe as Dauid: & y house of Dauid shalbe lyke as Gods house,
and as the Angel of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme wil I go about to destroy al suche people as come against Jerusalem.
Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid & vpon
the citesins of Jerusalẽ wil I poure out the Jhon.xix.B.
spirite of grace & prayer, so y they shal loke
vpon me, whõ they haue pearsed: & they shal bewepe him, as men mourne for their only begotten sonne: yea & be sory for him, as men are sory for their fyrst childe.

Then shal there be a great mourning at Je- D
rusalem, like as the lamentacion at Adadremon Zac.xiij.f.
in y feld of Maggadon. And the lãd shal be-wayle euery kinred by thẽ selues. The kinred kinred of the house of Semei thẽ selues alone

all the other generacions, euerychone by thẽ

The. xiiij. Chapter.

The wofulnesse of the churche vnder the figure of Ieruſalem. Of the kyngedom of the Lorde.

1 BEholde, the day of the Lorde com meth, that thou shalt be spoyled, & robbed: for I will gather together
all the heathen, to fyghte agaynste Ieruſalem, so that the cyty shalbe wonne, the houses spoyled, & the wemē defiled. The half of the cyty shal go awaye into captiuite, & the residue of the people shal not be caried out of the cyty. After that shal the lord go forthe to fyght agaynste those heathen, as men vse to fyght in the daye of battell. Then shall his fete stād vpon the mount olyuete, that lyeth vpon
the east syde of Ieruſalē. And the mount olyuete shal cleuen two, eastward & westward, so that there shalbe a great valley: & the half mount shal remoue toward the north, & the other toward the south. And ye shal flee vnto Amos. j. a. my valley of my hylles, for the valley of the hylles shal reach vnto Asal. Yea, ye shal flee, like as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Vsiah king of Juda. And the lord my God shall come, and al sayntes with him. In that day shal it not be light, but cold & frost. This shalbe that specially day, whiche is knowne 6 Thatis, vnto the Lord: neyther day nor light, but about vnderstāding the euening time it shalbe light. In that tyme to the word shal there a waters of lyfe ryse out frō Je-God ruſalem: the half parte of them. b. toward the b Towarde east sea, & the other half toward the vttermost the east sea, & sea, & shal continue both somer & winter. And towarde the lord himselfe shalbe king ouer al yͤ earth.
vttermost sea At that tyme shal there be one Lord onlye, & that is, all the his name shalbe but one. Then shall go about wolde ouer the whole earth, as vpon a feld: frō Gibea to C Remmō, & frō the south to Ieruſalē. The shal be set vp, & inhabited in her place: from Ben-Jamins poste, vnto the place of the first post, & vnto the corner poste, & frō the tower of Ha namel, vnto the kinges wine presses. There shal men dwel, & there shalbe nomore cursing but Ieruſalem shalbe safely inhabited. This shalbe the plage, wherwith the Lorde wyll smite al people, that have fought agaynst Ieruſalem: Namely, their flesh shal consume awaye, though they stand vpon their fete: their eyes shalbe corrupt in their holes, and their tung shall consume in their mouth.

Jn that day shal the Lorde make a great sedition amonge thē, so that one man shal take another by the hande, & lay his handes vpon
the hādes of his neighbour. Juda shal fight al so against Ieruſalē, & the goodes of al yͤ heathen shalbe gathered togither round about:
gold & siluer, & a very great multitude of clothes: so that this plage go ouer hosses, mules, camels, asses, & al yͤ beastes that shalbe in the host, like as yͤder plage was. Euery one yͤ remayneth thē of al the people, which came against Ieruſalē, shal go vp yearly, to worshippe the king (euen the Lord of hostes) & to kepe the feast of tabernacles: & loke what ge-neracion vpō earth goeth not vp to Ieruſalē for to worshippe the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shal come no rayne. Yf the kinred of Egypt go not vp, and come not,
it shall not rayne vpon them neyther. D
This shalbe the plage wherwith the Lorde wil smite al heathē, yͤ come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea, this shalbe the sinne plage of Egipt, & the sinne plage of al people that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that time shall the riding geer of the horses be holy vnto the Lord, & the kettels in the Lordes house shalbe lyke the basens before the aulter: yea al the kettels in Ieruſalē & Ju da, shalbe holy vnto the Lord of hostes: & all they that slay offeringes, shall come take of thē, & dight them therin. And at that tyme there shalbe no mo Chananites in the house of the Lorde.

And now make youre prayer before God, that he may have mercy upon us: for suche thinges have ye done. Shal he regarde youre persones, thynche ye, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes? Yea, what is he amonge you, that wyll do so muche as to shut the doores, or to kindle the fire upon myne aulter for nought? I have

For from the rysynge up of the sunne unto the goynge doune of the same, my name is greate amonge the Gentyles: yea, in every place shall there sacrifice be done, & a cleane meatoffrynge offered up unto my name: for my name is great among the hethen, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. But ye have unhalowed it, in that ye saye: the aulter of the meate ys dis spysed.

Now saye ye: It is but labour and travail, and thus have ye thought scorne of it (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) offeryng robbery, yea, & lame and the sicke. Ye have brought me in a meatoffrynge, shoulde I accepte it of youre handes, sayeth the Lorde? Cursed be the disceyver, which hath in his flocke one that is male and when he maketh a vowe, offereth a spotted ewe unto the lord. For I am a great kyng (sayeth the the Lorde of hoostes) and my name is fearfull amonge the Heathen.

Threatninges against the prieastes denyinge confesse of the people.

21 AND now (O ye preestes) this commaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it, nor regarde it, to geve the glorye
Deu.xviii.d unto my name, sayeth the lorde of hoostes. I wyll sende a curse upon you, and wyll curse your blessinges: yea, curse the I wil I yf ye do not take hede. Behold, I shall corrupte your sede, and cast dong in your faces: even the donge of your solempne feastes, & it shal cleve faste upon you: & ye shal know, that I have sent this commaundement unto you, that my covenaunt which I made with Levi, myght stande, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

I made a covenaunt of life & peace to hym: this I gave him, that he might stande in awe of me: so he did feare me, & had my name in reverence. The law of truth was in his mouth
B and there was no wickednesse founde in his lippe. He walked with me in peace & equite, and dyd turne many one awaye from their synnes. For the preestes lippes should be sure knowledge, that men may seke the lawe at his mouth: for he is a messanger of the lorde of hoostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, & have caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye have broken the Deu.xxxiii.b covenaunt of Levi, sayeth the Lord of hoostes. Therfore wil I also make you to be despised, and to be of no reputacion among all the people, because ye have not kepte my wayes, but have partial in the lawe.

Ephe.iii.a. C Have we not all one father? Hath not one Zacha.xi.b. God made us? why doth every one of us then despise his owne brother, and so breake the covenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Juda offended, yea, the abhampnacyon is done in

But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth thys (yea, both the maister and the scolar) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, with hym that offereth up meatoffringe unto the lord of hoostes. Nowe have ye brought it to thys poynte ageinne, that the aulter of the Lorde is covered with teares wepping and mourning: so that I will no more regarde the meatoffringe, neyther will I receyve it accepte anye thinge at youre handes. And yet ye saye wherfore? Even because that where as the Lorde made a covenaunt betwixt the & the wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despised her: Yet is she thyne owne companion and maried wyfe.

The one, after the interpreters reckon to be spoken of Abraham.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellente spirite. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promised of God. Therfore take well to your spirit, and let no man despise the wyfe of his youth. If thou hatest her, put her awaye, sayeth the Lord God of Israel, & geve her a clothinge for the frame, sayeth the Lord of hoostes. Take wel then to your spirit, & despise her not. Ye greve the lord with your wordes, & yet ye saye: wherin al have we grieved him? In this, that ye saye: All that do evil are good in the sight of god, and such please him. Or els where is the God that punisheth?

Of the messanger of the Lorde Johan Baptist, & of the kyng of the Lorde, and of Elias.

BEholde, I wil sende my messanger, which shall prepare the way before me: & the Lord whome ye X + Matth. xi.b. Marci.i.a. Luc.vii.c. Ec.xlviii.a.b.d Mal.xiiii.a. woulde have, shall come to his temple, yea, even the messenger of the covenaunt, whome ye longe for.

Behold

Beholde he commeth, sayeth the Lord of hoostes. But who may abyde the day of hys cõmyng? Who shalbe able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is lyke a goldsmythes fire and lyke a washers sope. He shall sit hym downe to trye and to cleanse the syluer, he shall purge the children of Leui, & purifye them lyke as golde and syluer: that they may bring meat offeringes vnto the Lorde in rightewesnes. Then shal the offering of Juda & Jerusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord, lyke as from the beginninge, and in the yeares afore tyme. I wil come and punish you, and I my selfe will be a swyft witnes, against the witches, against the aduouterers, against false sweareres: yea, and against those, that wrongously kepe backe the hyerlinges dewtye: which vexe the widdowes and the fatherlesse and oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the Lord of Hoostes. For I am the lord that chaunge not, and ye (O children of Jacob) will not leaue of: ye are gone away frõ myne ordinaunces, and kepe not them. Turne you now vnto me, and I will turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: ye saye: wherin shall we turne? Shoulde a man vse falshede and disceyte with God as ye vse falshede and disceyte with me? Yet ye saye: wherin vse we disceyt with the? In Tithes & heuerofferinges. Therfore are ye cursed with penury, because ye dissemble with me, all the sorte of you.

Bringe euerye Tithe into my barne, that there maye be meat in myne house: and proue me with all (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) yf I will not open the windowes of heauen vnto you, and powre you out a blessynge with plenteousnesse. Yea, I shal repraue the consumer for your sakes, so that he shall not eare vp the frute of your grounde, neyther shall the vineyarde be barren in the felde, sayeth the Lord of hoostes. In so muche that all people shall saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shalbe a pleasaunt lande, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes.

Ye speake harde wordes against me, sayeth the Lorde. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken against the? Ye haue sayed. Iust but lost labour, to serue God: What profyt haue we for keping his commaundementes, and for walkinge humbly before the Lorde of Hoostes? Therfore maye we saye, that the proude are happye, and that they whiche deale with the vngodlynesse, are lette vpfor they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: the Lord considereth and heareth it. Yea, it is before him a memoriall boke, wryten for such as feare the Lorde, & remẽbar his name. And in the day that I will make (sayeth the Lord of hoostes) they shalbe mine owne possession: and I wil fauoure them, lyke as a mã fauoureth his owne sonne, that doth him seruyce. Turne you therfore, and consydre what differrence is betwyxt the ryghteous & vngodly: betwyxt him that serueth God, and him that serueth him not.

For marck, the day commeth, that shall burne as an ouen: and all the proude, yea and all such as do wickednesse, shalbe stubble: and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote nor braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall the Sonne of ryghteousnesse aryse, and healthe shalbe vnder his wynges: ye shal go forth, & multyply as the fat calues. Ye shall treade downe the vngodlye: for they shalbe lyke the ashes vnder the soles of your fete, in the day that I shall make, sayeth the Lord of hoostes.

Remembre the lawe of Moses my seruaũt whyche I commytted vnto hym in Oreb for all Israel, with the statutes and ordynaunces. Beholde, I wyl sende you Elias the Prophet: before the comming of the daye of the greate and fearfull Lorde. He shall turne the hertes of the fathers to their children, and the hertes of the children to their fathers, that I come not, & smite the earth with curssynge.

(Mathews)

CConsidre rightly (good reader) that the bokes before vs are founde in the Hebrue tonge, reserued of al men: and that the other folowing, whiche we calle Apocrypha (because they were wont to be read, not openly & in comen, but as it were in secrete & a certe) are neither founde in the Hebrue nor in the Chaldee: in whose tonges they haue not of longe time ben written (as wel as the rest) & happely the boke of Ecclesiasticus, whereupon al men haue lerned to speake & write them: And that also they are not receyued nor taken as legitimate and lawful, as wel of the Hebrues as of the whole church of Christ: & therwith we haue sparse them, and set them alone, that they may the better be knowen to the entent that men make choise of whom bokes moste ought to be receyued, and of which not. For S. Hierome the kyng of the boke of Iudith (which is Apocrypha) saith, that the authorite therof is not sufficient worthy and sufficient to confirme and establish the thynges that lacke in question. And generally of all the bokes called Apocrypha, he saith, that men make vse of them to the edifying of the people, but not to confirme and strengthen the doctrine of the Church. I know not here the letter of the Counsel of Cannon. Gentis Romana authoritas, where it sheweth this vnderscite. Lette were the glose of S. Cannon. the distinction betwen both, that me make them, but not so generally as though he should saye, that generally and thoroughout they are not allowed. And not without a cause. For that they haue ben corrupted & falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by the vsage in the bokes called Apocrypha of the Hebrues. Which thyng is easy to be knowen euen nowe bothe in certain pointes, namely in the bokes of the Machabes, & other seuered bokes. Hereto (besides) that he founde not in the Hebrue, by the meanes whereof it is become bothe to the more suspect & the lesse receyued. In the moste vse of the thyrde and fourth boke of Esdras, whiche (without question) is put out in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by the vsage in the bokes called Apocrypha of the Hebrues. Which thyng is easy to be knowen euen nowe bothe in certain pointes, namely in the bokes of the Machabes, & other seuered bokes. Hereto (besides) that he founde not in the Hebrue, by the meanes whereof it is become bothe to the more suspect & the lesse receyued. In the moste vse of the thyrde and fourth boke of Esdras, whiche (without question) is put out in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by the vsage in the bokes called Apocrypha. Wherefore then, when thou wilt maintene any thyng for certayne, recompte a reason of thy faith, take heede & ponder therein by the holy & perfect Scriptures, for many (Peter, moste surely) be that speaketh, but non speake as moued by the holy ghost of God. He speth the woorde of god, as a thyng made true & certayne, opened vp the Prophetes & Apostles, inspired with the holy ghost of whom we haue our selfe wytnesse with the rest. Leaders hauyng great desyre to confirme and establish their opinions by the law of man, say, that they do not to the vttermost of their power, that ought to be done. But what must here a good man ought he to haue, that feareth be to a Christian, the whyche beleeueth not here litle, or nothyng not in the lawes of the liuyng God, but in many inuentions, subgonges al all thynges according to their own leasyng to an vnbeleeuyng imagination & phantasie. Let vs therefore that are builded on the foundation of the holy Prophetes and Apostles, & on the hed corner stone (on whose foundation fayth is most founded, & whiche ever preached, that is Iesus Christe, the sonne of God) leaue the thynges that are beneath, & folowe the aduyse, nothyng to add nothyng to or from them, and fal strong vpon more there, as on a sure place. For our Christen fayth consisteth not in our owne thynges, but in playne and manifest certayne affirmations, and in moste true perswasion, taken and confirmed by testimonie diuerse. In whiche thou graunt vs to stande perpetually, to the entent that endeuoryng vs to fulfilling thy holy will in the, and keeping & vse all thynges commaunded vnto vs, we may be the more lyke to thy seruaunt, and to obteyning of thy Charite.

The thirde boke of Esdras.

Iosias holdeth Pascouer. After his death Ioachas his sonne made kyng in his stede: whom the kyng of Egipt putteth out, and setteth in his stede Ioachim. Ierusalē is destroyed, and Nebuchadnezar taken.

The firſt Chapter.

AND when Iosias had prepared the temple vnto his Lord, he slewe the Paschal lambe the xiiij. day of the firste moneth. He set the Priestes also in order (accordynge to their dayly courses) beyng arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shoulde hallowe themselues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy Arcke of the Lorde, in the house that kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde: Ye shall no more beare the Arcke vpon youre shulders. Now serue youre Lorde, and take the charge of his people of Israel, after your kynages and your tribes: accordyng as kyng Dauid the kyng of Israel hath ordeyned, and accordyng as Salomō his sonne hath honorably prepared: yea, loke that ye all do seruice in the temple, accordynge to the ordeyning and distribution of the principall men, whiche are appoynted out of the tribes, to do seruice for the children of Israel. Kyll the Paschal, & prepare offrynges for youre brethren, and do accordynge to the commaundement of the Lorde, which he gaue vnto Moyses. And vnto the people that was founde, Iosias gaue xxx. thousande of sheepe, lambes, kydds, and goates, and three thousande oxen. These the kynge (of his kynglye liberalitie) gaue vnto the people, accordyng as he had promysed: & to the Priestes (for the Paschal) he gaue. ii. M. sheepe, and an hundreth oxen. Moreouer, Iechonias & Semeias, & Nathanael their brethren and Asabias, Ierihel, and Iosabad gaue vnto the Paschal v. M. sheepe and three hundreth bullockes.

And when these thynges were brought to passe, the Priestes and the Leuites stode gorgeously in their order, and had the vnleuened bread throughout the tribes. And after the ordeyning of the principal men in the tribes, they offered vnto the Lord in the sight of the people, accordyng as it is written in the boke of Moyses, & so they roosted the Easter lambe as accordynge was. And for the thankefullnesse and the other, they dight them in heteris & porres, and set them before the people with good will, and afterwarde before them selues, and the prestes. For the prestes offred ꝯ fat, until the time was expyred, but the Lewytes prepared for them selues ꝯ for their brethren the children of Aaron. The singers also the childre of Asaph stode in their ordre, according as Dauid had ordeyned. And bid Asaph Zachary ꝯ Idithun, which were appointed by the kyng. Moreouer the porters ꝯ dore kepers stode by the doores ꝯ that diligently, soo that none went out of their ministring ꝯ seruice: for their brethren (the Lewites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges perfourmed, ꝯ belonged to the offering of the Lord. In that dayes they helde the Passeouer, ꝯ offred thankofferinges before the sacrifice of the Lord, according to the commaundement of kynge Josias.

So the children of Israel which were then present helde an honorable Passeouer, and the feast of swete breed .vii. dayes long. Yea, such a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel, frō the tyme of the Prophet Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel helde not suche an Easter, as this which kyng Josias helde, ꝯ the Prestes, the Lewites, the Jewes ꝯ all Israel, of al them that were at Jerusalē. And in the .xviii. yere of the raygne of Josias was this Passeouer kepte. And with a perfecte hert did kyng Josias ordre all his workes, before the Lord, ꝯ the thinges that were written of hym in tymes past, concerninge those that synned and were vngodly against the Lord before al people, ꝯ that sought not the worde of the Lord vpō Israel. * After al these actes of kyng Josias, Pharao the kyng of Egipt went vp and came toward Carcamis by Euphrates, and Josias went to mete him. Then sent the kyng of Egipt vnto Josias saying: what haue I to do with the, O kyng of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fighte against the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy way home again in all the haste. And Josias would not turne again vppon his charet, but habertoke to fight against him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of the Prophete, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pitched a battayl against him in the feld of Magedon. And the princes prestes to kyng Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruauntes: Carry me away out of the battayl, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes tokе hym awaye out of the front of the battayl. Then sat he vp vpō the seconde charet, came too Jerusalem, dyed, and was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. And in all Jewry they mourned for Josias, yea, the rulers also with their wyues made lamentacōn for hym vnto this daye. And this was done euer styll in Israel.

These thynges are written in the boke of the stories of the kynges of Juda, namely, all the actes and workes of kyng Josias, his kynglye power and mastrye, his vnderstandyng in the lawe of God, ꝯ what he vnderstode, yea, thynges which are not written in the boke of ꝯ kinges of Israel ꝯ Juda. And the people tooke Jechonias the sonne of Josias and made him kynge in steade of Josias his father, when he was .xxiii. yeare olde. And he raygned ouer Israel three monethes. And the kyng of Egipt put hym downe, that he should not raygne in Jerusalem, and raysed vp a taxe of the people, namely, an .C. talentes of siluer and one talent of golde. The kynge of Egipt also made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda ꝯ Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges ofspryng with the kinge hym self ꝯ Zarazias his brother, he toke the, ꝯ carried them away prisoners into Egipt. * Four and twēty yere old was Joachim, wha he was made kyng in the lande of Juda ꝯ Jerusalem, ꝯ he did euel before the Lord. After this, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon came vp, bounde hym with bandes of yron, ꝯ carried him into Babylon. Nabuchodonosor also tooke all the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, and all the Jewels, ꝯ caried them vnto Babylon, ꝯ brought the into his owne temple at Babylon. Of his vnclenses ꝯ vngodlines it is writē in the boke of the actes of the kinges. And Joachim his sonne raygned in his stede. He was made kyng, beyng .xviii. yere olde, ꝯ raygned but .iii. monethes and .x. dayes in Jerusalē, ꝯ did euell before the Lorde. So after a yeare, Nabuchodonosor sent ꝯ caused hym be brought vnto Babylon with the holy vessels of the Lord, and made Sedechias his brother king of Juda and Jerusalem, when he was .xxi. yeare olde: and he raygned .xi. yeare.

And he did euell also in the sight of ꝯ Lord ꝯ cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto him by the prophet Jeremy at ꝯ mouth of the Lord. And where as he had made an othe vnto kynge Nabuchodonosor, he mansware him selfe, ꝯ fell frō hym hauyng a stifnech ꝯ a hert, ꝯ transgressed all the statutes ꝯ ordinaunces of the Lord God of Israel. The rulers also ꝯ heades of the people of the Lord did much euel, ꝯ became vngodly, more then the Heathen, beyng defyled in all maner of abhominacōn: Yea, ꝯ defyled the holy temple of the Lord at Jerusalē. And the god of their fathers sent his messengers vnto the, to turne them backe, ꝯ to call them againe frō their synne: for he wolde fayne haue spared them and his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles they had his messengers in derision: ꝯ lokе what God spake vnto the by his prophetes, they made but a spaste of it. Thus they went on so long tyll the Lord was wroth with his people for their vngodlines, and til he caused the kynges of the Caldees too come vp, which slewe their youngmen with the swerde, yea, euē in the cloyster of their holy temple, ꝯ spared no body, neither yong nor olde, neyther maydē nor youngwyfe: they were all deliuered into the power of the kynges of the Caldees, ꝯ al the holy vessels of the Lorde and the kynges treasures toke they, ꝯ caried the vnto Babi-

lon. As for the house of the Lorde, they burnt it, & brake downe the walles of Hierusalē, set fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldinges and brought them to naughte, & the people þ were not slayn with the swerde, they carped vnto Babylon.

Or rather the Persians rayned. Jere.xxv.c and.xxix.c.

Thus became they prisoners, & bondemē of the kyng of Babilon * vntil they were deliuered & rayned for them selues, * when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whyche he promysed them by the mouthe of the Prophet Jeremy, and tyll the lande had her rest: namely, all the tyme that it laye wayste had it rest and quyetnes, lxxvii. yeares.

* Cyrus geueth leeme to the Iewes to returne to Hierusalē, & restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sent to Artaxerxes, which accuse the Jewes for buyldyng of the cyte: and so to the buyldyng stynt of, vntyl the ii. yeare of Darius.

The.ii. Chapter.

ii.Par.xxvb & i.Esd.i.a

NOwe when kyng Cyrus rayned ouer the Persians, & whē the Lord wolde performe the worde that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy: the Lord raysed vp the spirite of Cyrus, the kyng of Persians, so that he caused thys writting to be proclaymed throwe oute hys whole realme, sayinge: Thus sayeth the kyng of Persiē: The Lord of Israel that hye Lord hath made me kynge of the lande, & cōmaunded me to buylde hym an house at Hierusalē in Jewry. If there be any now of your people, the Lord be with hym, & go vp with hym to Hierusalē. And all they that dwell roumde about that place, shall helpe the, whether it be with golde, with syluer, with gyftes with horses & necessary cattel, & all other thinges that are brought with a free will to & house of the Lorde at Hierusalem.

Then the principal men out of the tribes and vyllages of Juda and Benjamin stode vpso did the preistes also & the Leuites (whō the Lord had moued) to go vp, and to buylde the house of the Lorde at Hierusalem. And they that were about them, helped the with all maner of golde, and syluer, and cattel also and with many yberall gyftes, and this did many one, whose minde was stered vp therto. * Kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornamentes, that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whyche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon had caried away from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to hys Idoll and pmage) and delyuered them to Mithridatus his treasurer, & by hym they were delyuered to Balmanasar the debite in Jewry And this was the nūbre of the: Two thou. saunde & iiii. C. syluer boules. xxx. syluer basens. xxx. basens of golde. ii. M. & iiii. C. vessels of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer were. v. M. viii. C and. lx. These were numbred vnto Balmanasar, & them that were come agayne with hym to Jerusalē out of the captyuite of Babylon. * Now in the tyme of kinge Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia, these men: Belemus & Mithridatus, Babellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius, the Scribe, & other that dwelt in Samaria & in other places vnder & dominion thereof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kinge of them in Jewry and Hierusalem. The letter was made after this maner.

i.Esd.i.c.

i.Esd.iii.b.

Syr, thy seruauntes Rathimus the storywritter, Babellius the Scribe, & other Judges of the courte in Celosyria & Phenices. C
We be knowen and manifest to our Lorde the kyng, that the Jewes which are come vp frō you vnto vs into the rebellious & wicked cytye, begynne to buylde it agayn, & the walles aboute it, and to set vp the temple of the new. Now if this cytye & the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shall not only refuse to geue tributes and taxes, but also rebell vtterly agaynste the kynge. And for so much as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thoughte it reason, too thynke no scorne of it, but to shew it vnto oure Lorde the kyng, and to certefye hym therefore: to the intent that if it please the kynge, he maye cause it be soughte in the bokes of olde: & thou shalt fynde suche warninge written, & shalt vnderstande, that this cytye hath allwaye bene rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges & cytyes, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue euer bene a rebellyous, obstynate, vnsayth ful, & fyghting people, for the which cause thys cytye is walted. Wherefore now we certefye our Lord the kynge, that if thys cytye be buylded & occupyed againe, and the walles therof set vp a new, thou canste haue no passage into Celosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge too Rathimus the D storywrytter, too Balthemus, too Babellius the Scribe, & to the other officers & dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after thys maner: I haue reade the epistle which thou sentest vnto me. & haue commaunded to make diligent search, & haue founde, that the cytye hath euer resisted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused muche warre, and that mighty kynges haue rayned in Hierusalem, whiche also haue rayed vp taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherefore I haue cōmaunded those people, that they shall not buylde the cytye, that they make no more in it, and that they proceade no further with the buyldynge: for so muche as it myght be the cause of warre, & displeasure vnto kynges.

Now when Rathymus and Babellius the Scribe, & the rulers in the lāde had reade the writinge of kynge Artaxerxes, they gatte them together, & came in all the haste to Hierusalem with an hoost of horsmen, and with much people of foote, & forbad the to buylde. And so they left of from buyldyng of the temple, vnto the second yeare of kynge Darius.

Darius maketh a feast. The.iii. knightes of the.iii. pongemen, of whom the first is beloued.

A KIng Darius made a great feast vnto his seruauntes, vnto all his coun, & to all the officers of Medea & Persia, yea, vnto all the debities, gouerns & were vnder him, frō Judia vnto Ethiopia, in.C.& xxvij. countries. And why they had eate & dronke, beyng satisfied, & were gone home again. Darius the kynge went into his chamber, layed him downe to slepe, and so awaked.

B Then the three youngemen, that kepte the kynges persone, and watched his body, spoke among them selues, and spake one too another: let euery one of vs saye some thynge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shall kynge Darius geue greate gyftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall geue him vessels of golde to drinke in, clothes of golde and coueringes: he shal make him a coltely chayre and a bridle of golde, he shall geue him a boner of white silke, and a chayne of golde about his neche: yea he shalbe the seconde and principal next vnto kynge Darius, and that because of his wysedom, and shalbe called the kynges kynsman.

C So euery one wrote his meaning, sealed it, and layed it vnder the kynges pillowe, and sayde: when the kynge arysith, we will geue him our writinge: and loke whose worde the kynge and his three lordes iudge too be the moost wisely spoken, the same shall haue the victory. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thynge. & the seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The third wrote: Women haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynges the truth beareth awaye the victory. Now when the kyng was risen vp, they toke their writinges and deliuered them vnto him, and so he read the. Then sent he forth to cal all his chiefe lordes all the debyties and rulers of the countres of Medea and Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsaill, the writinges were read before them. And he commaunded to call for the youngemen, that they myght declare their meanynges the selues by mouthe. So when they were come for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make vs too vnderstande, what the thynges are that ye haue written.

D Then began the first (which had spoke of the strength of wyne) and sayde: O ye men wyne is manifest strong, and ouercometh the that dyncke it: it deceyueth the mynde, & dimgreth both the poore man and the king to bondage & thrall. Thus doth it also with the bondman and with the free, with the poore & riche: it taketh alwaye their vnderstandyng, and maketh them carelesse and merry, so that none of them remembreth any heauynes, but all ioyfull. It causeth a man too thynke also that the kynge which he doth, to himself and good and remembreth not that he is a kyng, nor that he is maysthoute, & that he ought not to do such thynges. Moreouer, whē men are drinkyng, they forget all frendshippe, al brotherly loue, & lone: but as soone as they are dronke, they drawe out the sworde & wil fight: and whē they are layed downe frō the wyne, and so ryse vp again, they cā not tell what they dyd vnder ge nose, ye not wyne the strongest. For who wolde els take in hād to do suche thynges? And when he had spoken thus he held his tunge.

The testimonies of the .iij. last speakers of the thyrd man, gouerneth in the Chapter followyng where the text, that is, that wyne passeth the women in all thynges, is made euidently a storye. Betwene whose two sentences of the eldest sorte, that they shall syte beside Zorobabel in the buildynge of Jerusalem.

The.iiij. Chapter.

A THen the seconde (which had sayd that the kyng was strongest) began to speake, sayeng: O ye men, are not they the strongest & moste excellent, that rule ouer & lande & the sea, & all that is in the sea & in the earth? Now is the kyng lord of all these thynges, & hath dominiō of the: all ye he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende him forth a warfare, they go, & breake downe hyl tes, walles, & towres. They are slayne, and slaye (other men) the selues, neyther kepe not the kynges worde. If they get the victorye they bring the kyng all the spoyle. Likewise the other that medle not with warres & fyghting, but till the grounde: when they reape, they bring tribute vnto the kyng. And of the kyng alone do but cōmaunde to lyue, they liue: if he commaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: if he cōmaunde to smyte, they smyte: if he bid turne aboute, they turne aboute: if he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: if he commaunde too breake downe, they breake downe: if he commaunde to plante, they plante. The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him. And the kyng in the meane season sitteth him downe, eateth, & drinketh, & taketh his reste: then kepe they watch rounde about the kyng and not one of them darre get him out of the waye, to do his owne businesse, but must be obedient vnto the kyng at a worde. Iudge ye now, O ye men, how should not he go farre aboue, & be whome men are thus obedient? And when he had sayd, eben thus, he held his tunge. The third which was Zorobabel, which had spoke of women & of truth, began to saye after this maner: O ye men, is not the great kyng, is not the multitude of men, neither is wyne that excelleth. Who is it then that hath the lordshippe ouer them? Haue not women borne the kyng, & all the people that rule these thynges? Haue not women borne the, & brought the vp, that gaue the vp mē, wherein the wyne drinketh? They make garmētes for all me, they geue honour vnto all me, & without women can not me lyue. If they gather golde & siluer & all precious thynges, & se a fayre wel fauoured woman, they leaue altogether, & gape vpon her, & haue more respect vnto her, then vnto the siluer & golde, or Lyke maner of precious thing. A man leaueth hys father that brought hym vp, he leaueth his owne natural countre, & cleaueth vnto the woman: yee, he departeth his lyfe with the woman, and remembreth neyther, nor father mother, nor countrye. By this then ye muste nedes knowe, that women haue the dominiō ouer you.

In some copies is founde this sentence more. Do you not labor & studye and bringe al and geue it to woman?

* Doth it greue you? A man taketh hys swerde, & goeth hys waye to straye, to hyl, to murther, to sayle vpon the sea, & seeth a lyō, and goeth in the darkenes: and whē he hath stolen, bisecped and robbed, he bringeth it vnto hys loue. Agayne a mā loueth his wife better then father and mother: yea, many one there be, that renne out of their wittes, and become bondmē for their wiues sakes: many one also haue perished, and haue bene slayne and haue synned because of women.

And nowe beleue me, I knowe a kynge, whiche is great in hys power, and all landes stande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hande vpō him: yet did I se, that Apame (the daughter of the great kynge Bartacus) the kynges cōcubyne, sat beside the kyng vpon the right hande, & take his crowne from hys head, & set it vpon her owne head, & smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer, the kyng loked vpon her with open mouthed: she laughed vpon him, he laughed also: but if she tolde any displeasure with him, the kyng was fayne to flatter her, & to geue her good wordes, till he had gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, and hye is the heauē that do these thinges. Then the kyng & the paynters loked one vpon another. So he began to speake of the truth: O ye men are not womē stronger? Great is the earth, hye is the heauen, swyft is the course of the sunne, he compaseth the heauen rounde about, and fetcheth his course agayne too his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth thus? Yea great is the trueth, & stroger then al thinges. All the earth calleth vpon the trueth, the heauen prayseth it, all workes shake and trēble rupted. And wine is vnrighteous: the kynge is vnrighteous: women are vnrighteous: all the children of men are vnrighteous, yea, al their workes & thou haste are vnrighteous, & there is no trueth in thē, here vnrighteousle. in their vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroyed & perysh. As for the trueth, it endureth, & is alwaye strongest liueth & conquereth for euermore: it is alwaye without ende.

Or rather cō sider it, & with it is no * vnrighteous thynge.

The trueth accepteth no persons, it putteth no difference betwixte riche & poore, betwixte the mighty & symple, but doth right vnto euery man, whether they be euell or good, and all men are louingly dealt with al in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there is no vnrighteous thynge, but strēgth, kyngdom & power & maiesty for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth.

And with that he helde hys tonge, and all the people cried & sayde: Great is the trueth, & above all. Then sayde the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wilt, more then is appointed in the writtynge, & I shall geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then thy compaynōs: thou shalt syt next me, and be my kynsman. Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse & vowe, which thou haste vowed & promised (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Hierusalē, and to sende agayne all the vessels & Jewels, that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: whiche Cyrus separated, when he offred in Babilō, and wold sende them agayn. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the tēple, which the Edomites burnt, when Jerusalē was destroyed by the Chaldees. This only (O kyng) is the thynge that I requyre, this is the maiestye, which I desyre and aske of the: that thou performe the vowe, which thou with thine owne mouth haste made vnto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp, & kyssed hym, & wrote a letter vnto al the debpties and shaetes, to all the lordes and nobles, that they should conueye hym forth, & all the that wolde go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto all the shaetes that were in Celosyria & Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, that they should drawe Cedre trees frō Lybanus vnto Jerusalē, to buylde the citie withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone oute of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome, that no officer, no ruler, nor shaefe, shoulde come to their dores: & that all their lande which they had conquered, should be free & not tributary: And that the Edomites should geue ouer the cities & villages of the Jewes, which they had take in: yea, and that they shoulde yearly geue. xx. talentes too the buylding of the temple, tyll the time that it were finished: & to the daily halowing of the burntoffringes (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also: And that all they whyche come frō Babylon to buylde the cyte, should haue fre liberte, they and their children, and all the preestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also, & commaunded that the holy garment shoulde be geuen them, wherin they ministred: and wrote that commaundementes shoulde be geuen to the Leuytes, tyll the daye, that the house were finished & Hierusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that all they that watched the citie, shoulde haue their portions and wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cyrus had separated frō Babylon: & al that Cyrus had geue in cōmaundement, the same charged he also, that it should be done & sent vnto Hierusalē. Nowe when this youngeman was gone forth, he turned his face toward Hierusalem, & praysed the kyng of heauen, & sayde: Of the cōmeth the victory, of the cōmeth wisdome & cleanesse, & I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou, which hast geue me wisdom: the wil I praise, O lord, thou god of our fathers.

And

And so he toke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon: And when he came there, he tolde this vnto all his brethē that were at Babylon, & they praysed the God of their fathers, that he had geue them refreshynge & libertie to go vp, & to buylde Hierusalem & the cyte (whiche is there called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gladnesse seuen dayes longe.

They that returne to Ierusalē are numbred. They begynne to laye the foundacion of the temple, but are let by the mooyne of enemyes: so is the buyldynge vpryen of by the Quene of that prouce.

The.b.Chapter.

After thys were the principall men of all the vyllages chosen in the tribes & kynredes, that they shulde go vp with their wyues & children, with their seruauntes & maydens, with all their cattel and substaunce. And of the priestes: The children of Obdia, the children of Accos, the children of Jadus, which toke a wyfe of the doughters of Berzelli the Galaadite, & was called after their name. These sought their writynge among those that were reckened by the genealogie, but it was not found, therefore were they put from the priesthode as defyled. And Athersatha commaunded them, that they shulde not eate of the moste holy thynges, tyll there stode vp a preest with Urim and Thummim.

The whole congregacion together was xlii.thousande, besyde their seruauntes & maydens, whych were vij.thousande, iij.C.and xxxvii. Besyde their singers & syngynge women, whych were ij.C.and xlv. And the preestes & Leuites, & some of the people, & the singers, & porters, & Nethinims dwelte in their cyties, & all Israel in their cyties.

The.iiij.Chapter.

And when the seuenth moneth came, & the children of Israel were in their cyties, the people gathered themselues together as one man into the open stretes before the fore gate eastwarde, & stode vp to begynne the lawe of Moses the man of God, which was geuen vnto the Israelites in their writynge. And there was brought the aulter of God, & they set it vp in his place, for all the nacions of the londes were at one with them, & ordered it accordyng to the tymes, & offered vpon it burnt offrynges vnto the Lorde, euen burnt offrynges in the morninge & euenynge. They kepte also the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, & offered the offrynges appoynted for euery day, after their nombre & custome, as it was conuenient for euery day. And after that, the cōtinuall seruice, & the offrynges of the newe moones, & of all the feastes that were halowed, & of all them that offered a free offrynge vnto the Lorde. From the first day of the seuenth moneth they began to offer vnto the Lorde, but the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde was not yet layed. They gaue also money vnto the masons & carpenters, & meate, drynke, & oyle vnto them of Sidon & of Tyre, that they shulde bringe cedre trees from Libanus vnto the see of Joppe, after the commaundement of Cyrus kyng of Persia. In the seconde yeare also & seconde moneth after they were come vnto the house of God at Hierusalē, began Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, & Jesus the sonne of Josedec, & their brethren, & the preestes & Leuites, & all they that were come out of the captiuitie vnto Hierusalē, & layed the foundacion of the house of God vpon the new moone in the seconde yeare after they were come vnto the house of God at Hierusalē, & appoynted the Leuites from xx.yeares olde & aboue, ouer the worke of the house of the Lorde. Then stode Jesus with his children & brethren, Cedmiel & his children, the children of Juda, & the children of Enadad with their children & brethren Leuites, all with one accorde, & set forwarde to worke vpon the house of God. The children also of the buylders layed the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde. And the preestes stode there in their garmentes with trompettes, & the Leuites the children of Asaph with cymbales, to prayse the Lorde after the ordynaunce of Dauid the kyng of Israel. And they sange with prayse & confessyon vnto the Lorde, because he is good, & his mercy endureth for euer vpon all Israel. And all the people shouted with a great noyse, when they prayed vnto the Lorde, because the foundacion of the house of the Lorde was layed. But many of the preestes & Leuites & chefe fathers, which were auncient men, that had seene the first house, when the foundacion of this house was layed before their eyes, they wepte with a great voyce. And many with trompettes & ioye lyfted vp their voyce, so that the people could not discerne the noyse of the trompettes for the weepynge of the people: for the people sounded with a great noyse, so that it was heard farre off. When they therefore of Juda & Benjamin hearde that the aduersaries of the tribe of Juda & Benjamin were come, they came together vnto Hierusalē, that they might buylde vnto the Lorde God of Israel, & came vnto Zorobabell & Jesus, & vnto the chefe fathers, & vnto them that were auncient men, which had seene the buyldynge of this house, & sayde vnto them: We will buylde with you, for we seke your God as you do, & we haue offered vnto him euer since the dayes of Asaradon kyng of the Assirians, which brought vs hyther. Then Zorobabell & Jesus & the chefe fathers of Israel answered vnto them: You haue nothynge to do with vs to buylde an house vnto our God, for we alone will buylde vnto the Lorde God of Israel, as Cyrus the kyng of Persia hath commaunded vs. But the heathen of the londe troubled the people of Juda, & let them from buyldynge, & hyred counsellers against them, to hynder their purpose all the dayes of Cyrus kyng of Persia, & vnto the reygne of Darius kyng of Persia. And in the reygne of Assuerus, in the begynnynge of his reygne, wrote they an accusacion of the inhabitauntes of Juda & Hierusalē. And in the dayes of Artaxerxes wrote Beeltemus, Semellius the scribe, & the rest that were of their counsell, vnto Artaxerxes kyng of Persia, & the writynge of the letter was in the Syrian tonge, & interpreted in the Syrian tonge. Roboam the scribe & Semellius the scribe wrote a letter against Hierusalē vnto Artaxerxes the kyng in this maner: Roboam the scribe, & Semellius the scribe, & their counsellers, & the iudges that were in Celosyria & Phenice, vnto kyng Artaxerxes our lorde. Let it be knowen vnto the kyng our lorde, that the Jewes which came vp from you vnto vs, are come vnto Hierusalē, the rebellious & wicked cyte, & buylde the market places & walles of the cyte, & set vp the foundacion of the temple. Now therefore if this cyte be buylded, & the walles set vp, they will not geue tribute, custome, nor toll, & so shall the kynges reuenues be hynderd. Now because we haue pleasure in the kynges house, & it is not conuenient for vs to see the kynges dishonour, therefore haue we sent & certified the kyng our lorde, that he may loke in the bokes of his fathers, & he shall finde in the bokes of the cronicles, & shall perceyue & vnderstande, that this cyte is a rebellious cyte, & hurtfull vnto kynges & countreis, & that the Jewes which were caryed away, are rebellious in the middes of the same cyte, & that they haue bene euer since the begynnynge of the same cyte, for the which cause this cyte was destroyed. Now therefore we certifie the kyng our lorde, that if this cyte be buylded, & the walles set vp, thou shalt haue no passage by this meanes vnto Celosyria & Phenice. Then the kyng sent vnto Roboam the scribe, & vnto Semellius the scribe, & vnto their counsellers, that dwelte in Samaria & Syria & Phenice, after this maner: I haue redde the letter which you sent vnto me. Therefore I commaunded to make search, & it was found that this cyte of olde time hath made insurrection against kynges, & that rebellion & warre was made therein, & that mighty kynges & cruell haue bene in Hierusalē, which ruled ouer all Celosyria & Phenice, & to whom tribute, custome, & toll was geuen. Now therefore commaunde you that they cease from buyldynge of that cyte, & that no more be done therein, lest the euyll encrease, that is begon to be done vnto kynges. Then the kynges letter was red before Roboam the scribe, & before Semellius the scribe, & before their counsellers, & they went in haste vnto Hierusalē with horsmen & a great company, & began to let them from buyldynge, & the buyldynge of the temple of Hierusalē ceased vnto the seconde yeare of the reygne of Darius kyng of Persia.

The.v.Chapter.

Then the prophetes Aggeus & Zacharias the sonne of Addo prophesyed vnto the Jewes that were in Jewry & Hierusalē, in the name of the Lorde God of Israel, which was vpon them. Then stode vp Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, & Jesus the sonne of Josedec, & began to buylde the house of the Lorde at Hierusalē, & with them were the prophetes of the Lorde helpynge them. At the same tyme came vnto them Thathanai the gouernour of Celosyria & Phenice, & Sathrabuzanes & their counsellers, & sayde thus vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house & to set vp this walle? Also what be the names of the buylders that buylde this buyldynge? But the eyes of their God were vpon the auncient of the Jewes, that they coulde not let them from buyldynge, vntyll the matter came vnto Darius, & then they sent letters vnto him concernynge this matter. The copie of the letter which Thathanai the gouernour of Celosyria & Phenice, & Sathrabuzanes & their counsellers the iudges that were in Celosyria & Phenice, sent vnto Darius the kyng. Vnto kyng Darius all peace. Let it be knowen vnto the kyng our lorde, that we went into the countrey of Judea, & came vnto the house of the great God, which is buylded of hewen stone, & timber is layed in the walles, & this worke is done with diligence, & prospereth in their hādes, & is buylded with all glory & diligence, & they are busie about it, & the buyldynge of the walles goeth forwarde. Then asked we the auncient, & spake thus vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, & to set vp these walles? Also we asked them their names, to certifie thee, & to write the names of the men that are their rulers. Then they answered vs, & sayde thus: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen & earth, & buylde the house that was buylded many yeares agone, which a great kyng of Israel buylded & set vp. But when our fathers prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue them into the hādes of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon the Caldee, & he destroyed the house, & burnt it with fyre, & caryed the people away captiue vnto Babylon. But in the first yeare of Cyrus kyng of Babylon, Cyrus the kyng made a decree to buylde this house of God. And the golden & syluer vessell of the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple that was at Hierusalē, & had caryed them into the temple of Babylon, those same did Cyrus the kyng take out of the temple of Babylon, & they were geuen vnto Sanabassar, whom he made gouernour, & commaunded him, & sayde vnto him: Take these vessell, go, & carye them into the temple that is at Hierusalē, & let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Sanabassar, & layed the foundacion of the house of God at Hierusalē, & from that tyme vnto this houre hath it bene buylded, & yet is not fynished. Now therefore if it please the kyng our lorde, let it be searched in the kynges treasure house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that the buyldynge of the house of God at Hierusalē was done with the consent of Cyrus the kyng, & let the kyng our lorde certifie vs of his pleasure concernynge this matter. Then commaunded Darius the kyng to make search in Babylon, in the librarie where the treasure was layed vp there. And at Ecbatana the palace that is in the countrey of Media, there was found a roll, wherein was written thus: In the first yeare of Cyrus the kyng, Cyrus the kyng commaunded that the house of God at Hierusalē shulde be buylded, where they offer with fyre continually. The heyght thereof lxx.cubites, & the breadth lx.cubites, with three rowes of hewen stone, & one rowe of timber, & the charges shall be geuen out of the kynges house. Also the golden & syluer vessell of the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Hierusalē, & had caryed them vnto Babylon, shall be restored, & caryed vnto the temple that is at Hierusalē, euery one vnto his place, & thou shalt put them in the house of God. Then Darius the kyng wrote vnto Thathanai the gouernour of Celosyria & Phenice, & vnto Sathrabuzanes, & their counsellers, & vnto the iudges that were in Celosyria & Phenice, & vnto Sanabassar the gouernour of Judea, & vnto the rulers of Judea, that they shulde kepe them selues from that place, & let Sanabassar the gouernour of Judea, & the rulers of the Jewes buylde that house of God, that they may buylde the same house of God in his place. Moreouer I commaunde that of my reuenues, which are tributes beyonde the water, that the charges be geuen with diligence vnto these men, that they be not hynderd. And that which they haue nede of, both yonge bullocks, & rammes, & lambes for burnt offrynges vnto the God of heauen, wheate, salte, wyne, & oyle, as the preestes at Hierusalē shall appoynte, let it be geuen them euery day without fayle, that they may offer vnto the God of heauen, & pray for the kyng & his children, & that they may lyue vnder the power of the kyng. Moreouer I commaunde, that whosoeuer shall breake this commaundement, or shall make it of none effect, that a tree be taken out of his house, & he be hanged vpon it, & that all his goodes be confiscate vnto the kyng. The Lorde therefore, whose name is there called vpon, destroye all kynges & nacions that lay their hādes to hynder, or to destroye that house of God at Hierusalē. I Darius the kyng haue made a decree, that it be done with diligence, according vnto that which is written. Then Thathanai the gouernour of Celosyria & Phenice, & Sathrabuzanes, & their counsellers, according vnto that which kyng Darius had commaunded, did very diligently vnto the holy buyldynge, & helped the auncient of the Jewes, & the rulers of the buyldynge of the temple, & it prospered vnder the prophesyenge of Aggeus & Zacharias the sonne of Addo. And they buylded & set vp, after the commaundement of the God of Israel, & after the commaundement of Cyrus, & Darius, & Artaxerxes kynges of Persia. And this house was fynished vnto the thyrde yeare of the reygne of Darius kyng of Persia, in the moneth Adar, & the preestes & Leuites, & the other that were come out of the captiuitie, ordered the house of God with ioye, which they had buylded vpon the same maner, as Moses had written in the booke. And they offered at the dedicacion of this house of God an hundreth bullocks, two hundreth rammes, foure hundreth lambes, & for a sinne offrynge for all Israel twelue goates, after the nombre of the princes of the twelue tribes of Israel. And the preestes & Leuites stode in their apparell after their kynredes, ouer the seruice of the Lorde God of Israel, as it is written in the booke of Moses, & the porters at euery gate. And the children of Israel that were come out of the captiuitie, kepte the Passeouer vpon the fourteenth day of the first moneth, after that the preestes & Leuites were purified all together, & were all pure, & slewe the Passeouer for all the children of the captiuitie, & for their brethren the preestes, & for themselues. And the children of Israel that were come out of the captiuitie, ate of it, & all they that had separated themselues from the vnclennesse of the nacions of the londe vnto them, & sought the Lorde. And they kepte the feast of vnleuened breade seuen dayes, reioycynge before the Lorde, because he had turned the counsell of the kyng of Assiria vnto them, to make their hādes strong in the worke of the house of God, the God of Israel.
